Bowen announces start of re-election campaign

BY MARTI HOGAN
Staff Reporter

The Indiana Student Association (ISA) held its first annual fall legislative conference in Indianapolis last weekend to discuss its common concerns. Changing the state's drinking age is 18 to 20 is the ISA's first priority. The ISA, a student lobby organization designed to represent and advocate the interests of students attending both public and private colleges in the state, organized the first legislative proposals that were introduced in the state legislature. The proposals are designed to further the school's goals and ambitions and to bring about a more informed and politically activated student electorate.

Students to lobby for lower drinking age

BY JOHN STANLEY
Staff Reporter

As a member of the Academic Council, I again stated that St. Mary's courses do not depend on a specific number of days. The administration has stated that there is a possibility of the two school systems having separate calendars. That would result in the co-exchange of courses.

Although the administrations have not yet decided, "I don't think there is a possibility of the two school systems having separate calendars. That would result in the co-exchange of courses."

The Indiana Student Association's (ISA) first annual fall legislative conference in Indianapolis last weekend to discuss its common concerns. Changing the state's drinking age is 18 to 20 is the ISA's first priority. The ISA, a student lobby organization designed to represent and advocate the interests of students attending both public and private colleges in the state, organized the first legislative proposals that were introduced in the state legislature. The proposals are designed to further the school's goals and ambitions and to bring about a more informed and politically activated student electorate.

Both Bodine and Kruse specifically cited the Notre Dame student lobby for its efforts in attempting to change the legal drinking age from 21 to 18. Black and Jerry Klingenberg are the major players in the Notre Dame lobby. Black is also considered a central figure in the ISA and its concerns over the issue, according to several ISA members.

In attempting to achieve a lowered drinking age, according to Kruse, the ISA will use its Student Legislative Involvement Project (SLIP) and its grassroots lobbying network that was established to generate a more informed and politically activated student electorate. Kruse said.

The network involves contacting other participants in the project, communicating with legislators and exercising the right to vote. The network was expanded when the fact that a lowered drinking age is the top priority, not one workshop at the ISA's conference was directly established to discuss the issue. Most of the work and research has been formulated by state scholarship funds. Many of these areas deal solely with public colleges. Noticing this factor, Randy Brice, ISA vice-president for private schools, stated that the private school students most gain a stronger influence in the organization's affairs.

If we represent a proportionately smaller party of the college students than do the public colleges, we have a greater demand for government in the direction it is in the hands of the public colleges. The public colleges do not have a large enough voice to influence the direction of the government.

Most of these areas deal solely with public colleges. Noticing this factor, Randy Brice, ISA vice-president for private schools, stated that the private school students most gain a stronger influence in the organization's affairs.

If we represent a proportionately smaller party of the college students than do the public colleges, we have a greater demand for government in the direction it is in the hands of the public colleges. The public colleges do not have a large enough voice to influence the direction of the government.
The Nassau County medical examiner ruled that the death of 16-year-old Mary Jane Dahl, who was terminally ill, was the result of an order placed by someone who turned the plug on her life-sustaining respirator.

Dr. Leslie Lushak's report made no attempt to single out a suspect in the apparent mercy-killing Nov. 2 of Mary Jane, who was suffering from meningitis and Hodgkin's disease with kidney failure. She went into a coma after entering Nassau Hospital Oct. 25.

The Academic Affairs Council, at St. Mary's, has announced a special session to discuss options for minor requirements. St. Mary's is taking the initiative in the curriculum review, and the Academic Affairs Council described a recent meeting as "productive."

"Many of the departments are still in committees to determine curriculum requirements," said Mandell.

"There's nothing definite yet, although about 10 departments have turned their recommendations and guidelines in to the curriculum council," she added.

After the departments determine their minor requirements, the curriculum council will review them and turn them over to the Academic Affairs Council.

The council is the final decision-making body in all academic matters.

Those Famous College Paintings
...a List of 1500 to Choose From!

The county-wide zoning ordinance proposed by the St. Joseph County Plan Commission will be one of the topics on the agenda of a five session conference on Zoning and Constitutional Rights. The conference, planned by the Center for Civil Rights of the University of Notre Dame and the South Bend League of Women Voters will run from Wed., Nov. 19 through March 10 in the Center for Continuing Education.

"Zoning and the Right to Privacy" is the subject for the 7:30 p.m. meeting in Seminar Room 150.

"Many of the departments are still in committees to determine curriculum requirements," said Mandell.

"There's nothing definite yet, although about 10 departments have turned their recommendations and guidelines in to the curriculum council," she added.

After the departments determine their minor requirements, the curriculum council will review them and turn them over to the Academic Affairs Council.

The council is the final decision-making body in all academic matters.

Those Famous College Paintings
...a List of 1500 to Choose From!

The county-wide zoning ordinance proposed by the St. Joseph County Plan Commission will be one of the topics on the agenda of a five session conference on Zoning and Constitutional Rights. The conference, planned by the Center for Civil Rights of the University of Notre Dame and the South Bend League of Women Voters will run from Wed., Nov. 19 through March 10 in the Center for Continuing Education.

"Zoning and the Right to Privacy" is the subject for the 7:30 p.m. meeting in Seminar Room 150.

"Many of the departments are still in committees to determine curriculum requirements," said Mandell.

"There's nothing definite yet, although about 10 departments have turned their recommendations and guidelines in to the curriculum council," she added.

After the departments determine their minor requirements, the curriculum council will review them and turn them over to the Academic Affairs Council.

The council is the final decision-making body in all academic matters.
Senior trip features spring break in Bahamas

by Jan Commy

Students to lobby for lower drinking age

---

The senior class officers announced last Thursday this year's class trip will be to the Bahamas. The trip is scheduled for spring break, March 12-20.

"We chose the area," treasurer, Pat Dore, explained, "because the Bahamas offers something for everyone to do." This year we do not have the opportunity to go to California for the USA games," he added.

The timing was poor for the other two games that week; any great distance away, he said. "The Air Force game was too early and the Miami game this weekend is too close to Thanksgiving," he noted. "We wanted something different," he explained, "something more than a weekend and a football game.

Currently the price of the trip is $290. Dore pointed out the price is not fixed and may go down.

"I don't see the offering a better deal than last year's class," Dore said. "The length of the trip is eight days and seven nights rather than an extended weekend. All costs except meals are included in the trip price.

"Vice-President Sue Caranci called the trip "the best around.""

"I don't see the offering a better deal than last year's class," Dore said.

"Although the $85 may mean now we are offering a better deal than last year's class," Dore said. "The length of the trip is eight days and seven nights rather than an extended weekend. All costs except meals are included in the price.

"If the price is lowered, the officers will decide what will be done with the extra funds."

"The possibilities of rebates or offering more parties during the week's stay have already been discussed."

"Although the $85 may mean now we are offering a better deal than last year's class," Dore said.

Lowering the drinking age is the only one of these priorities which has not been achieved. Last year, the ISA lobby successfully for a bill which added a voting member to each of the Indiana, Ball State, Indiana State and Purdue Universities' boards of trustees. The ISA has also received a commitment from the legislature that tuition for state schools' students would not be increased. In April 1975, the ISA established a General Assembly under the leadership of Kurt Flock, ISA president. The Assembly consists of two representatives from each member campus. In this same month, the ISA constitution was amended to provide for two vice-presidents instead of one, making a separate vice-president individually responsible to both public and private schools.

The ISA has also received a commitment from the legislature that tuition for state schools' students would not be increased. In April 1975, the ISA established a General Assembly under the leadership of Kurt Flock, ISA president. The Assembly consists of two representatives from each member campus. In this same month, the ISA constitution was amended to provide for two vice-presidents instead of one, making a separate vice-president individually responsible to both public and private schools.

ISA successes

The ISA was formed in August, 1974, by several state-supported universities that wanted to coordinate their student governments' lobbying efforts. At that time, its legislative priorities were also established. They included opposing tuition increases at state universities, securing student representation on state university boards of trustees and lowering the drinking age.

The Student Government fee stated. Other colleges would like the ceiling of the landlord-tenant legislation for the present set-up, he said. At that time, its legislative priorities were also established. They included opposing tuition increases at state universities, securing student representation on state university boards of trustees and lowering the drinking age.

"The possibilities of rebates or offering more parties during the week's stay have already been discussed."

"Although the $85 may mean now we are offering a better deal than last year's class," Dore said.

Lowering the drinking age is the only one of these priorities which has not been achieved. Last year, the ISA lobby successfully for a bill which added a voting member to each of the Indiana, Ball State, Indiana State and Purdue Universities' boards of trustees. The ISA has also received a commitment from the legislature that tuition for state schools' students would not be increased. In April 1975, the ISA established a General Assembly under the leadership of Kurt Flock, ISA president. The Assembly consists of two representatives from each member campus. In this same month, the ISA constitution was amended to provide for two vice-presidents instead of one, making a separate vice-president individually responsible to both public and private schools.

The ISA has also received a commitment from the legislature that tuition for state schools' students would not be increased. In April 1975, the ISA established a General Assembly under the leadership of Kurt Flock, ISA president. The Assembly consists of two representatives from each member campus. In this same month, the ISA constitution was amended to provide for two vice-presidents instead of one, making a separate vice-president individually responsible to both public and private schools.
Never Again

Dear Editor:

In keeping with the principles of humanism, liberalism, and understanding upon which this University justifies its existence, I urge The Observer to reconsider its policy of publishing editorials anonymously. This policy undermines the integrity of the voice of the United Nations which wrongly associates and equates organizations, including the World Organization of Students, with individual editors. To disguise your opinions with anonymity ruins the credibility of The Observer.

While we at Notre Dame may feel that this is an external problem, divorced from the band and the cheerleading squad, I find Mr. Grady's statements vicious and unfounded. First of all, I believe that it is an external problem. For years of experience—and I call upon the students by editorial, by proclamation, by letter, or by any other appropriate means to join the many followers a second chance.

Moreover, what more joy could an alumna of the band have than to hear the same three songs she played decades ago? To abandon the high school routine would lead to a schizophrene student body. How could we cope with the inconsistencies of a creative and stimulating cheerleading squad and band with a structured and regimented school? To arouse a fervor would be inconsistent with the boredom that is an integral part of N.D. and South Bend. After all, this is not a liberated state, nor are we a part of a "flashback-school!" To give the alumni the idea that it is otherwise would be most disturbing.

Michael J. Grossman

Band Defended

Dear Editor:

In defense of the Notre Dame Band and the cheerleading squad, I find Mr. Grady's statements vicious and unfounded. First of all, our cheerleaders are not inadequate, they are probably the most photogenic group on campus. Moreover, our marching band has years of experience—and I call upon the students by editorial, by proclamation, by letter, or by any other appropriate means to join the many followers a second chance.

It seems that your letter is more of an attack on N.D. as an institution than on the "side-show" provided. It should be stressed that Notre Dame is taught to us and to break this tradition is to destroy the essence of Notre Dame. Obviously our cheerleaders cannot change their cheer. To bring about change would be a determining factor in the lead display of sexually oriented antics. If all you want is the arousal of your sex drive you can take a trip to Vegas. You have obviously forgotten that the alumni in the stands came to see cheers of every variety.

Furthermore, a more joy could an alumna of the band have than to hear the same three songs she played decades ago? To abandon the high school routine would lead to a schizophrene student body. How could we cope with the inconsistencies of a creative and stimulating cheerleading squad and band with a structured and regimented school? To arouse a fervor would be inconsistent with the boredom that is an integral part of N.D. and South Bend. After all, this is not a liberated state, nor are we a part of a "flashback-school!" To give the alumni the idea that it is otherwise would be most disturbing.

Stan Walker

Medic's Ethics

Dear Editor:

For years all I've wanted was to become a good, Catholic doctor. I came to N.D. seeking an education that would prepare me both scientifically and morally for that goal. Because of recent articles about unethical tactics on the part of some premeds, I have become discouraged from medicing and dispatched in N.D.

I seem to have two alternatives: 1. take what grades I can honestly earn (while others cheat and get higher grades) and then take my chances with medical school admissions or; 2. cheat myself (which would probably get away with it) and thus insure my admission to medical school. Which a choice? I had hoped (in vain?) that all of N.D. ND would offer me a better choice. What happened to our nationally famous Catholic education? Am I to assume we have our Catholic ethics in Sacred Heart church and lock them out of our classrooms and laboratories?

N.D. is a nationally recognized medical school. We definitely have a good program scientifically, but does produce good future doctors? It's time to take a stand and put more emphasis on ethics than grades. Maybe the other schools will follow our example, maybe not. So what? Being Catholic has almost always meant being different from the crowd. Why should it be different now?

Joseph G. Viviano; Class of 79

Food Co-op Apologia

The success of any student service venture is determined by the extent to which the students support the service offered. The failure of Student Government to start a food coop is a result of a number of factors, one of them being a lack of student interest. Certainly, there were other factors; timing problems, poor organization and a lack of publicity helped foster the lack of student interest.

The problems started when Steve Shankel proposed his original plan. Steve had hoped for 200 membership, unfortunately, even at this early point, student response was weak and only 300 students signed up.

This initial problem was compounded when Steve could not stay at work on his plan over the summer because of a commitment to the Air Force which had to be honored. At this point, I talked to Ed Eyre and told him that I would try to put together the pieces that Steve left behind. Stan O'Neil and I proceeded to acquire as much information as we could concerning coops. The first problem; we discovered was that the coop that Steve planned would result in insufficient capital. To the average person this sounds inconsequential, but to anyone who has a knowledge of coops, adequate capital is absolutely necessary for a successful coop. Steve's plan of "five dollars in the spring or ten dollars in the fall" would not have supplied the capital needed for his coop. Also, this marketing approach, should not be used to start a coop. The first members of a coop should not be offered a better deal than subsequent members.

Staz, Ed and myself decided not to run a registration drive that was doomed to failure from the start. We started out on a realistic plan that would be successful if students really wanted a coop.

Our first problem was to decide on a membership fee that was both adequate and equitable. We needed to find the correct type of coop for the Notre Dame Community. We decided on a per household fee of $20.00 which we felt would insure the needed capital while remaining equitable.

One point that I don't believe The Observer gave adequate attention to was that the membership fee was reasonable as the student graduated; this was a major factor that led to apathy on the part of students. Some people thought that price was too high, even! The Observer editorial laid we failed to present an inexpensive coop. Steve Shankel's Coop would have cost a 4 member household $20.96 at the rate reduced. A regular membership fee of $10.00 would have resulted in a $40.00 fee per household but 300 students attempted to circumvent this cost last spring by purchasing one membership per household.

Another question put to me several times was, "How about a price list for your coop?" The correct way to run a coop is to ask the membership what products they desire. We have their collective buying power to make bulk purchases of these goods at reduced rates. The member should understand that in the long run, the coop will save him/her money.

We believe that the direct charge coop would be the best coop for the Notre Dame Community, it would sell items at cost and meet its expenses through a weekly service charge. This type of coop would insure the same quality of products but at the lowest prices possible for the food.

The Coop will be resurrected when students, faculty and administrators get together long enough to organize one. The Coop need not be large, a small coop (sometimes referred to as a "clubbing coop") can begin operations with as few as 100 members. Arlene Narowski has started four such coops and believes the plan feasible for Notre Dame. Unfortunately, nobody knows about Arlene's expertise because The Observer never mentioned it. If you are interested in having such a coop, please ask us know. We think we've learned from our mistakes, and we'd like to try again.

P.O. Box Q

Crime Wave

Dear Editor:

John, Janet Shaw's recent talk on Sherlock Holmes may have scared some people as amusing. To many minds it was singularly out of place at a time when the high level of crime deserves full coverage and discussion. Let it be understood that not all of us share the current widespread enthusiasm for Holmes.

Prof. James Murlarkey

DOONESBURY

by Garry Trudeau

"This Saturday evening's event that the homecoming football game will be held in conjunction with the current of our football band and the "cheering squad."

"I believe that the direct charge coop would be the best coop for the Notre Dame Community."

"How about a price list for your coop?"

"The Coop will be resurrected when students, faculty and administrators get together long enough to organize one. The Coop need not be large, a small coop (sometimes referred to as a "clubbing coop") can begin operations with as few as 100 members."

"Arlene Narowski has started four such coops and believes the plan feasible for Notre Dame. Unfortunately, nobody knows about Arlene's expertise because The Observer never mentioned it. If you are interested in having such a coop, please ask us know. We think we've learned from our mistakes, and we'd like to try again."
festivities. The great guitarist added a tinge of the contemporary to the evening. He had a greater structure and deliberation than the other performers; my refusal to take coherent notes; my total out-of-control condition by the mid-point of each evening; and by just being buried alive, basking in the beauty that is the blues. However, rather than leave a gaping white hole in the features page:

The festival in a word: fantastic? Excellent? Mind and body blowing? (d) all of the above. Yes. Entertaining versatile, oh, yes! Not only your standard 12-bar bluesmen, but superstars such as Albert King, an old-time boogie-woogie piano player, and the last of the great black string bands. And all for a paltry sum of five dollars.

Blind John Davis opened Friday’s festivities. He played boogie-woogie piano. sang a little bit, and was surely the finest commentator to be found furing the whole affair. He possesses the meanest, most low-down, and most engaging laugh I’ve ever heard.

He performed about ten tunes and punctuated each with a devious cackle: “I’m gonna tell you a little story, heh, heh, yes!” and “wish I couldhtml, ha, ha, like my sister Kate.” His attitude toward potential critics was magnificent. “If you like this, tell me; if you don’t, forget it, huh?”

His music was mostly basic piano boogie but he also played a bit of the 12-bar blues and a few standards such as “Summertime,” which featured alternately subdued piano with a few trilled fills. Although John played the blues it was never a daweer, due to the optimistic ring of his voice and his piano. In short, he was superb.

Fenton Robinson was next, making a successful return engagement from his appearance here last year. Stumbling into the stage right after intermission, I could not help but behold how his guitar riffs rippled through the entire auditorium, bathing the building in his blues splendor. He stuck to the basic blues music, such as “Somebody Loan Me a Time” and one of the many variations of “Every Day I Have the Blues.” Perhaps the most striking thing I remember about Fenton was a comment made by one of the festival’s coordinators, trying to name the best performer of the night: “Otis Rush was great, but Fenton’s voice!”

More-old-time music was provided by the Big Walter Horton Band. His show was basically Walter wailing away on his harp complemented by Big Guitar Ray, m.c. and electric six-string extraordinaire. Again, standard blues was the motif: “Blueberry Hill,” “You Know I Love You.” "Don’t Get Around Much Anymore.” Perhaps the most important thing about this band, and this applies to Fenton Robinson to some extent, is that 20 years ago, they were probably playing the same songs, same licks, same style. It is these men who are the real bearers of the blues tradition.

Otis Rush wrapped up Friday night’s festivities. The great guitarist added a little of the contemporary to the evening. He and his band played with a little more structure and deliberation than the other groups without sacrificing one iota of feeling. Otis, even the showman, even dabbled in some back-of-the-neck guitar needling without missing a note. Even as the clock moved toward one the band had people dancing in the wings, as worn as everyone was. He closed his set and the evening with Muddy Water’s “Got My Mojo Working” and that he did.

Saturday night’s show, even following the Friday performances, was climactic.

The evening opened with Martin, Bogan, and the Armstrongs, the self-proclaimed “last of the great string bands, thank goodness,” but perhaps the highlight of this year’s festival.

The songs were mostly standard folk tunes, ideally suited for their bluegrass-influenced lineup of electric rhythm guitar, mandolin, fiddle, and upright bass. Tunes from their repertoire included “The Story of Love,” “John Henry,” “Sweet Georgia Brown,” and “The Girl of My Dreams.”

The most incredible thing about these aging gentlemen was their ability as instrumentalists. At one point the band was chugging away when, without warning, the fiddle player leaped to his feet and ripped off some unbelievable violin licks, attacking his instrument with such precise dexterity, and bringing the crowd to a spontaneous ovation.

The only bummer of the evening was the band’s exit from stage after only one encore with the audience begging for more. Son Seals was a solid band, who brought out the best in blues-based music today. Blessed with a fine sax player and guitarist, the band rocked and shuffled through their set. Basically, everything you’d want in a band, and extremely impressive considering they have not been together for a long time.

Albert King closed the night and the festival. His recollections are fond but few and the Armstrongs, the self-proclaimed “last of the great string bands, thank goodness,” but perhaps the highlight of this year’s festival.

Any mention of Fenton Robinson to some extent, is that 20 years ago, they were probably playing the same songs, same licks, same style. It is these men who are the real bearers of the blues tradition.

Otis Rush wrapped up Friday night’s festivities. The great guitarist added a little of the contemporary to the evening. He and his band played with a little more structure and deliberation than the other groups without sacrificing one iota of feeling. Otis, even the showman, even dabbled in some back-of-the-neck guitar needling without missing a note. Even as the clock moved toward one the band had people dancing in the wings, as worn as everyone was. He closed his set and the evening with Muddy Water’s “Got My Mojo Working” and that he did.

There is probably nothing I care or dare to say about the Midwest Blues Festival IV that could do it justice. Any attempt to evaluate the going on of Friday and Saturday nights’ performances is marred by my lack of familiarity with most of the performers; my refusal to take coherent notes; my total out-of-control condition by the mid-point of each evening; and by just being buried alive, basking in the beauty that is the blues. However, rather than leave a gaping white hole in the features page:

The festival in a word: fantastic? Excellent? Mind and body blowing? (d) all of the above. Yes. Entertaining versatile, oh, yes! Not only your standard 12-bar bluesmen, but superstars such as Albert King, an old-time boogie-woogie piano player, and the last of the great black string bands. And all for a paltry sum of five dollars.

Blind John Davis opened Friday’s festivities. He played boogie-woogie piano. sang a little bit, and was surely the finest commentator to be found furing the whole affair. He possesses the meanest, most low-down, and most engaging laugh I’ve ever heard.

He performed about ten tunes and punctuated each with a devious cackle: “I’m gonna tell you a little story, heh, heh, yes!” and “wish I couldhtml, ha, ha, like my sister Kate.” His attitude toward potential critics was magnificent. “If you like this, tell me; if you don’t, forget it, huh?”

His music was mostly basic piano boogie but he also played a bit of the 12-bar blues and a few standards such as “Summertime,” which featured alternately subdued piano with a few trilled fills. Although John played the blues it was never a daweer, due to the optimistic ring of his voice and his piano. In short, he was superb.

Fenton Robinson was next, making a successful return engagement from his appearance here last year. Stumbling into the stage right after intermission, I could not help but behold how his guitar riffs rippled through the entire auditorium, bathing the building in his blues splendor. He stuck to the basic blues music, such as “Somebody Loan Me a Time” and one of the many variations of “Every Day I Have the Blues.” Perhaps the most striking thing I remember about Fenton was a comment made by one of the festival’s coordinators, trying to name the best performer of the night: “Otis Rush was great, but Fenton’s voice!”

More-old-time music was provided by the Big Walter Horton Band. His show was basically Walter wailing away on his harp complemented by Big Guitar Ray, m.c. and electric six-string extraordinaire. Again, standard blues was the motif: “Blueberry Hill,” “You Know I Love You.” “Don’t Get Around Much Anymore.” Perhaps the most important thing about this band, and this applies to Fenton Robinson to some extent, is that 20 years ago, they were probably playing the same songs, same licks, same style. It is these men who are the real bearers of the blues tradition.

Otis Rush wrapped up Friday night’s festivities. The great guitarist added a little of the contemporary to the evening. He and his band played with a little more structure and deliberation than the other groups without sacrificing one iota of feeling. Otis, even the showman, even dabbled in some back-of-the-neck guitar needling without missing a note. Even as the clock moved toward one the band had people dancing in the wings, as worn as everyone was. He closed his set and the evening with Muddy Water’s “Got My Mojo Working” and that he did.
Would a Two-Year Scholarship Worth Up to $10,000 Interest You?

An Opportunity for 450 Highly Qualified Sophomores

If you’re the kind of person we’re looking for, you’ve already started to think about what you’d like to do after graduation.

If a scholarship leading to a career as an Officer in the U.S. Navy appeals to you, you’ll find this message well worth reading.

Two-Year Full Scholarships

The opportunity is very attractive. If you’re selected, we’ll provide full tuition during your Junior and Senior years, pay for your books and educational fees, and give you $100 a month for 10 months each year to help cover your living expenses.

There are two programs you can apply for: The first is the Nuclear Propulsion Candidate Scholarship Program (NPCS). To qualify, you must have one semester each of calculus and physics (or two semesters of calculus) and have a B-minus average or better. It is open to men only.

The other program is the Two-year NROTC Scholarship Program. The only difference in the qualifications is that you must have a C average (2.3 out of 4.0) or better. It is open to men and women.

For both programs, you’ll need to pass Navy qualification tests. And, quite frankly, it will help if your major is math, physical science, or engineering.

The Curriculum

After you’re accepted, you begin with six weeks of training next summer at the Naval Science Institute at Newport, R.I. During your final two years of college, you take several required courses in math, physics, and Naval Science. You also go on a summer cruise prior to your Senior year. (Of course, you’re paid for all your summer duty.)

A Challenging Job

Upon graduation, you are commissioned as an Officer in the U.S. Navy. And from then on your career can take you anywhere in the world, in a variety of fulfilling jobs.

Those who apply for the NPCS Program have a particular challenge ahead of them: The Navy’s Nuclear Power Program. Not everyone who applies makes it: the men in charge of more than two thirds of our country’s nuclear reactors must be a very special breed. Final acceptance into the Navy’s Nuclear Power Program is determined during your Senior year after an interview in Washington with the Director, Division of Naval Reactors.

A two-year scholarship worth up to $10,000. A unique opportunity to serve as an Officer in the U.S. Navy. You’ll want to act now. The deadline for acceptance is May 1, 1976—and once the quotas are filled, you’ll have lost your chance to earn yourself a scholarship.

If you think you’ve got what it takes to qualify, fill out and mail the coupon below, contact either your local Naval Recruiting District or the Professor of Naval Science on your campus, or call 800-841-8000, toll-free, anytime.

The Navy

MAIL TO: Capt. H.C. Atwood, Jr., U.S. Navy
NAVY OPPORTUNITY INFORMATION CENTER
P.O. Box 2000
Pelham Manor, N.Y. 10803

Dear Sir:
I am a College Sophomore. Please send me more information on the two-year scholarships available. I am interested primarily in:
□ Two-year NROTC Scholarship Programs
(including nuclear option). (OK)
□ General NROTC information. (OT)

NAME (Print) ___________________________ ____________
______________________________ ____________
STREET ____________________________________________ ____________
CITY ____________________________________________ STATE
ZIP ____________ DATE OF BIRTH ____________
PHONE (________) __________________________
[ ] COLLEGE ____________________________ [ ] GRAD. DATE
[ ] ACADEMIC AVERAGE _______ [ ] MAJOR

[ ] I don’t want to wait. Call me at the number above. (OK)
If you prefer, you can call us toll-free at 800-841-8000. In Georgia, call 800-342-5855. In Alaska, call collect—272-9133.
Dorm papers give new perspective on hall life

Extra Points

Sunday afternoon the players voted the bid down, a thing that has not happened since the 1971 Notre Dame football team snuffed a Gator Bowl bid.

Many of the coaches thought it was bad etiquette on the players' part. The coaching staff felt it would be an honor for Notre Dame to go to the Bowl in 1971.

Leighton at 2912 Marine St., South Bend.

Rev. Edmund P. Joyce, C.S.C., executive vice president of the University, said the transfer of the property to the University involved a "substantial benefit" on the part of the Leighhans, who have moved to a townhouse in the North Shore area of South Bend.

Leighton is chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Woodward-Clydesdale Inc. He is president of Benezee, Calif., a director of Gulf & Western Inc., and a director of the National Bank and Trust Company of South Bend.

Leighlani is a graduate, Mary Lou, have been active in South Bend civic, charitable, and cultural affairs for several years.

Leighlani has for the past decade been president and a member of the board of the Board of the South Bend Symphony Orchestra Association.

Leighton was appointed to Notre Dame's Advisory Council for the College of Business Administration in 1962. His wife was appointed to the Board of the Notre Dame Art Gallery in 1973.

Father Joyce said the University has several uses of the property under consideration.serious and humorous sides of hall life.

The publication comes out every three or four weeks. It features a number of columns and is open to articles from anyone.

McCarthy, who prints the paper himself, emphasized that he and his staff are still learning about the operation, and are planning to add photographs in the next issue.

I'm in a precarious situation, because 've had to edit a lot of the material, 've lost the area of reaction thus far has been really good.' Among the other student newspapers are Farley's and Breen-Phillips' Provocative...
Bear, Big Eight feud over bowl games...

By Herschel Nissenson
AP Sports Writer

The Associated Press was looking forward to the Sugar Bowl match-up, reported by The Associated Press Saturday night, was confirmed Monday night, with Alabama Coach Bear Bryant, admitting he hand-picked Penn State to be an Eight runner-up and bowl officials denying it.

And without mentioning them by name, Bryant leveled a black eye at Pitt's Tony Osborne and Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer, who criticized him for bypassing their teams, both ranked above Penn State.

With the Alabama-Penn State pairing set for New Orleans' new Superdome and West Virginia State scheduled for the Orange Bowl, all that was left was South Carolina State in the Peach Bowl, which was determined open in the 11 major postseason bowl games. The Tangerine Bowl needs an opponent for Oklahoma. The bowl lineup looks like this:

• Rose Bowl, Jan. 1: Big Ten champion vs. Pacific-8 champion (UCLA, California vs. Stanford).
• Orange Bowl, Jan. 1: Nebraska-Oklahoma winner vs. Ohio State-Michigan loser.
• Cotton Bowl, Jan. 1: Southwest Conference champion (Texas A&M, Texas or Arkansas) vs. Georgia Sugar Bowl, Dec. 31: Alabama vs. Florida.
• Gator Bowl, Dec. 29: Florida vs. Georgia.
• Fiesta Bowl, Dec. 36: Western Athletic Conference champion (Arizona State or Arizona) vs. Nebraska-Oklahoma loser, although the Nebraska team still must vote on it.

• Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl, Dec. 27: Colorado or Texas left.

• Liberty Bowl, Dec. 22: Southern California vs. Texas A&M or Arkansas.
• Sun Bowl, Dec. 26: Pitt vs. Kansas-Missouri winner, Tangerine Bowl, Dec. 20, Miami of Ohio vs. opponent to be selected.

The bowl lineup was heightened by a verbal exchange between Bryant and spokesmen from the Big Eight Conference after the veteran coach said he recommended the Alabama-Penn State pairing.

"I recommended it and I wanted those young coaches out there to know it," Bryant replied to charges that fifth-ranked Alabama, 9-1, ducked second-ranked Nebraska, 10-0, and sixth-ranked Oklahoma, 9-1, in favor of the likes of which people thought could never happen.

Tony Dorsett's record performance did nothing to make the Irish believe they could contain him. "Moose" Krause, the big Nebraska running back and Dorsett twice all have bathed in the billboard success that comes with a major college football career.

The Pitt game was more than just a loss. As in previous games against Notre Dame, the Panthers were no match for the Irish, a team that can run or pass, can win the punt and field goal at will, the turnover battle, can out-tempo the Irish. "They were the best team we've ever faced," Pitt Coach Johnny Majors said after Saturday's 34-20 loss.

The Tangerine Bowl needs an opponent for Oklahoma. The bowl lineup looks like this:

• Rose Bowl, Jan. 1: Big Ten champion vs. Pacific-8 champion (UCLA, California vs. Stanford).
• Orange Bowl, Jan. 1: Nebraska-Oklahoma winner vs. Ohio State-Michigan loser.
• Cotton Bowl, Jan. 1: Southwest Conference champion (Texas A&M, Texas or Arkansas) vs. Georgia Sugar Bowl, Dec. 31: Alabama vs. Florida.
• Gator Bowl, Dec. 29: Florida vs. Georgia.
• Fiesta Bowl, Dec. 36: Western Athletic Conference champion (Arizona State or Arizona) vs. Nebraska-Oklahoma loser, although the Nebraska team still must vote on it.

---

Ernie Torriero
Extra Points

No bowl defense

For those of us who forgot what it was, it is known as defense. According to sportswriters, the best defense means the act of defending something from being lost, harmed or destroyed. The act of defending something that is truly important, such as our right to speak, to believe, to love, to worship, to write, to think, to act.

Wherever the Notre Dame defense was, it certainly was not in Pitt-Stan Vol's game Saturday afternoon. Their defense was nothing more than a word in Webster's vocabulary.

The Notre Dame defense voted Sunday afternoon, their third loss of the season.

If you wanted to be one of those who know what it was, you would have to make the trip to the Panther's 34-20 performance, the likes of which people thought could never happen.

"Moose" Krause, the big Nebraska running back and Dorsett twice all have bathed in the billboard success that comes with a major college football career.

The Pitt game was more than just a loss. As in previous games against Notre Dame, the Panthers were no match for the Irish, a team that can run or pass, can win the punt and field goal at will, the turnover battle, can out-tempo the Irish. "They were the best team we've ever faced," Pitt Coach Johnny Majors said after Saturday's 34-20 loss.

The Tangerine Bowl needs an opponent for Oklahoma. The bowl lineup looks like this:

• Rose Bowl, Jan. 1: Big Ten champion vs. Pacific-8 champion (UCLA, California vs. Stanford).
• Orange Bowl, Jan. 1: Nebraska-Oklahoma winner vs. Ohio State-Michigan loser.
• Cotton Bowl, Jan. 1: Southwest Conference champion (Texas A&M, Texas or Arkansas) vs. Georgia Sugar Bowl, Dec. 31: Alabama vs. Florida.
• Gator Bowl, Dec. 29: Florida vs. Georgia.
• Fiesta Bowl, Dec. 36: Western Athletic Conference champion (Arizona State or Arizona) vs. Nebraska-Oklahoma loser, although the Nebraska team still must vote on it.

It is totally inconceivable that a team which shut out Navy on the same field three weeks earlier, can rack up 34 points against the likes of Notre Dame.

"You could manage an anemic total of nine tackles the entire afternoon. Dorsett continually got mumty opponents' onslaught. The same team that could shut-off the leading centers in the South Bend Commercial, could not stop the same man in a Tangerine Bowl.

"If we won, we would have gone to the Orange Bowl," Krause said. "Since we lost the game, we felt we were not representative.

"Georgia was subsequently offered the Cotton Bowl bid, which they accepted. They will meet either Texas A&M, Texas or Arkansas on New Year's Day.

ND basketball team to scrimmage Sunday

The 1975 Fighting Irish Basketball Team will compete in an intra-squad scrimmage for charity money, November 23 at 7:30 p.m. in the Athletic and Convocation Center.

The admission to the charity game will be 50 cents, and the proceeds will go to the Neighborhood Youth Help Tutoring Program. This program is the largest volunteer service in the University of Notre Dame-Saint Mary's community. The program offers tutor help to elementary school students in the Saint Mary's Community.

The game will give everyone a preview of the 1975-76 Fighting Irish as they have a chance to make a meaningful contribution to a worthy charity and also give the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students, as well as all Irish fans, a chance to demonstrate their support for this year's basketball team.

Ticket exchange being sponsored

Since a large number of Notre Dame-Saint Mary's students are leaving, the University's Thanksgiving vacation, the Neighborhood Youth Help Tutoring Program, with the support of head coach Digger Phelps and ticket manager Michael Blunt, will sponsor a ticket exchange for the home game November 26th, against Kent State.

The tickets will be distributed to students from the schools and centers in the South Bend Community involved in the volunteer tutoring effort, as well as others interested in support of Notre Dame-Saint Mary's volunteer services.

The tickets will be distributed to students from the schools and centers in the South Bend Community involved in the volunteer tutoring effort, as well as others interested in support of Notre Dame-Saint Mary's volunteer services.

Ticket exchange will be set up outside of the Convocation Center, at the second floor of the ACC.

Tony Dorsett's record performance did preclude an Irish invitation to the Cotton Bowl. But Notre Dame players rejected the bid a vote Sunday afternoon.