Mock Convention adopts anti-abortion plank

by Phil Cackley
Senior Staff Reporter

An anti-abortion plank was adopted last night in a vote of 2 to 1 by the Platform Committee of the Mock Democratic Convention. The decision came as the climb to an emotional one and a half hour consideration of the issue, which included a dramatic roll call and speeches by members of ND Right to Life, the ND-SMC Women's Caucus and the Black Caucus.

A second proposal, described by its supporters as a "Pro-Choice" bill, was later adopted as a minority plank.

The committee also approved an addendum to its list of the Notre Dame surveillance, to support financing of private, elementary and secondary schools and against the use of busking to achieve racial balance in schools. A minority plank was also accepted in support of busking.

The planks will be presented to the Mock Convention as part of the entire committee report. The delegates will then vote on whether to accept the planks for the Democratic platform.

The abortion issue was the final plank decided on at the meeting last night. Two hours were spent discussing and voting on the matter, three times as much time needed for any other plank.

Ellen Faccenda addressed the committee in favor of the anti-abortion plank and seven spoke for the other bill during a one hour period of debate.

Anti-abortion speakers emphasized that live begins at conception, because of the human genetic make-up of the cells and that abortion only has consequences of "immediate death for the unborn child," but also poses danger to the mother.

Maternal deaths due to abortion have increased in the last 15 years, one speaker said.

Pro-abortion speakers contended the matter is one of personal choice for the individual, that mothers should not have to be subjected to social pressures.

Ellen Faccenda said the committee in favor of the anti-abortion bill George Bary, a member of the Black Caucus, said that Minter had informed him that only eight persons were present at the meeting at which the Women's Caucus decided their position. He asked how the Caucus could claim to represent the 4,000 women of the ND-SMC community.

Joe Corpolla addressed the committee in favor of the anti-abortion bill, although the delegates were somewhat surprised as he spoke.

There was a period of open debate after the speakers were finished.

The vote came after a short recess during which the delegates were given time to make their decision. The room was silent as the suspenseful roll call vote was taken.

When the decision was announced 26 to 13 in favor of the anti-abortion bill the crowd broke into sustained applause.

Alcohol issue highlights 'Meeting'

Fr. Hesburgh would welcome the idea of having a bierstube or winecellar in the Rathskellar if there were a drinking law in Indiana allowing eighteen-year-olds to drink.

Speaking at the town meeting, held last night in LaFortune ballroom, Hesburgh said that if an eighteen-year-old drinking bill passed, he would look forward to having a "great bierstube in the Rathskellar." "If people drink, moderating them, then it's good and I'm all for it," he added.

Hesburgh's comments followed University Counsel Dr. Phillip Faccenda's remarks that the University could have the Huddle provide a liquor license if the Indiana drinking age were lowered. Faccenda said the committee could apply for a liquor license for the campus bierstube, which would be passed because "the majority of students on campus are underage and many Indiana legislators would think a eighteen-year-old would be able to have a bierstube any way," he added.

Hesburgh's remarks followed University Counsel Dr. Phillip Faccenda's remarks that the University could have the Huddle provide a liquor license if the Indiana drinking age were lowered. Faccenda said the committee could apply for a liquor license for the campus bierstube, which would be passed because "the majority of students on campus are underage and many Indiana legislators would think a eighteen-year-old would be able to have a bierstube any way," he added.

A student raised the drinking issue in the first part of the question and answer period, which was the second part of the town meeting's agenda. The first part consisted mainly of three minute statements given by members of the Notre Dame faculty, student body and administrators. The statement dealt with how the Notre Dame community could be bettered. The affair, which was moderated by Faccenda, was then turned over to the 90-person audience for the question and answer period.

Fr. Just Pacesney, Vice-President for Student Affairs, answered the original questions and turned to University Counsel Faccenda to explain the legal ramifications of drinking on campus. He said that the committee was "completely wrong." We were lucky nothing happened because of the time for trying to have students using the campus bounds would have gotten us into trouble," he pointed out.

Faccenda said the efforts made last year in Indianapolis to push for a lower drinking age had gotten "our foot in the door." However, since nothing happened, the University had to watch itself because the "state had shown its serious about enforcing the present statutes.

In the same vein, Student Body President Ed Byne outlined a new plan for "all-hall convocation dinners over a public room in each hall to use at their own discretion. This would allow students to throw hall parties but force them to accept total responsibility for all damages," he said.

Earlier in the meeting during his statement, Pacesney announced two new items regarding the Mock Convention as part of the Platform Committee of the Mock Convention. The first item was that during March Break, an ice cream counter stocked with "the thirty-two flavors of Baskin Robbins" would be set up within the confines of the present Huddle. The second item dealt with the future of the Huddle. Pacesney said that the Huddle would be extended out over the pool room and that a restaurant serving full plate dinners would be set up.

Pacesney then held up an artist's conception of what the completed project would look like.

Fr. Hesburgh would welcome the idea of having a bierstube or winecellar in the Rathskellar if there was a drinking rule in Indiana which would allow 18 year-olds to drink.

Another news item brought up during the meeting was that of Dean of Students James Roemer's policy of handling instigators and participants of food fights. "I find it obvious that two hundred students in celebration of a basketball victory have to pitch food at one another," said Roemer. "The Notre Dame student body is not a lawless mob. If we wanted a lawless mob, we would have been fighting on the field in '71. We don't want a lawless mob on this campus." Another issue discussed was the promotion of the Mock Convention as part of the Mock Democratic Convention. Tear gas added

VATICAN CITY - The Vatican has added tear gas bombs to the arsenal of tools it uses to defend, the colorful 90-man force that is the last of the papal armies.

Their arsenal already includes submachine guns, rifles with bayonets and helmets, a combination spear and batteau with which they stand guard at the Bronze Door, the Vatican’s main gateway.

Co-ed Hockey League is begun

Paul Main, a graduate student at Indiana University, and an employee at St. Mary's cafeteria, along with other interested faculty and graduate students, recently formed a coed ice hockey team among St. Mary's cafeteria employees.

Main undertook this project to enable his fellow employees to participate in an extra-curricular activity which their work hours otherwise prohibited.

Main posted a sign-up sheet in St. Mary's cafeteria and was surprised at the number of enthusiastic responses. He said at last count there were 48 interested, including 26 girls. While all the women attend St. Mary's, the men attend both Notre Dame and U.S.B.

From the 48 participants, Main has drawn up four 12-person teams, captained by Laurie Costanzo, Paul Main, Nora McGrath and David Putnam. These teams plan to hold one practice on February 25 from 9:15 p.m. to 10:15 p.m. and then stage a three week tournament amongst themselves.

Abortion highlights mock convention

The committee spent another hour debating on the final form of the plank.

The plank called for the adoption of a right to life amendment to the constitution as a last resort if all other legal methods of changing the present law fail, and the passage of legislation by Congress declaring the unborn child a person from conception on under the protection of the 14th Amendment.

Forced busing to achieve racial balance in schools, redoubled efforts to improve education in poorer schools, and several other actions.

A special session of the student body was called to deliberate on the submission and the student body will vote on the plank at its meeting the following week, February 22.

Off-campus burglaries show marked decrease

by Deb Brink
Staff Reporter

Only two off-campus burglaries occurred this year during the semester, far less than the 24 break-ins reported in 1974-75, according to information gathered by Davlene Palma, student director of off-campus living.

This number shows a marked decrease from the statistics on campus crimes which occurred over the 1974-75 semester break. Last year during the Christmas break approximately 20 off-campus houses were robbed.

Minter defends pro-abortion plank

by Tom Byrne
Staff Reporter

Ellis Minter, head of the ND-SMC Women’s Pro-Life Committee, stated yesterday that the issue of abortion was "not very important" to the group and asserted that their proposed platform.

"This process of evaluation is quite interesting, " she added. "The community, for example, is divided on this issue. The community, in my opinion, is divided on the pro-life issue. The community, in my opinion, is divided on this issue. The community, in my opinion, is divided on this issue.

The society also offers women the opportunity of becoming aware of the advantages and disadvantages. Women who have never considered the reasons for participating in certain pro-life activities are encouraged to participate in their proposed platform.

"I was surprised by the low number of students who were interested in politics," she added. "The low number of students who were interested in politics, the low number of students who were interested in politics, the low number of students who were interested in politics, the low number of students who were interested in politics.

Bender participates in workshop

Mike Villani
Student Reporter

Dr. Harvey A. Bender, Notre Dame geneticist and professor of bioethics, participated in a workshop on "Ethics and Human Value: Implications of Science and Technology" last month at Lake Placid, New York.

The meeting was organized by the Tissue Culture Associations W. Walton Jones Cell Science Center for scientists and administrators who are concerned about the use of human tissue for research.

Bender, who has a strong interest in biomedical ethics, joined other leading members of the philosophic, legal, and scientific communities to analyze the scientist's responsibilities in obtaining and using human tissue for research.

The topics discussed and ideas shared concerned fetal research, informed-consent, and were attempted to bring the cross-disciplinary thinking of these three professions together on these ongoing issues.

On the subject of fetal research, Bender referred back one year to increased sensitivity to what's going on in fetal research, the moral issues that need laws governing their methods and purposes. According to Marshall S. Shapiro, an attorney present at the workshop, "there is very little in the way of what attorneys would call law on the subject." The professionals at the workshop grappled with this question and came to the conclusion that because there is no real definition exists. Is it self-decision? Is it a person's approval to have his body exploited?

According to the Nuremberg Code, adopted in the German War Crimes trials, the subject of experimentation must be obtained and for what purpose. The ethicist faction felt an attorney present at the workshop all agreed with Bender that it is critical to do experiments and use fetal materials for the benefit of superior results in medical research. The ethicists felt an increased sensitivity to what's going on in fetal research, the moral issues involved, and the question of who decides what research is justified.

Faculty speak at meeting

He would also have a student's academic requirement undergo a drastic revision. "I would have one quarter of the student's degree in seminars and tutorials," he explained.

"A student would also take four courses of four credits each instead of five courses of three credits because the present system makes the student carry a very heavy burden," he added.

In the question and answer session, Walsh explained that by having a better faculty-student relationship, the series of issues raised at the meeting could be better dealt with.

Carole Moore, vice-chairperson of the SLC and Asst. Professor of History, thought "Notre Dame has to remember why it's here. We should not be antagonistic towards each other. Instead we should work to be a community," she commented.

She said that group's "are always confronting each other, whether it's faculty-administration, administration-student or boy-girl." Examples given by Moore of the boy-girl confrontation were the way in which dormitories have been allotted and the way women's and men's athletics seem to be at odds.

Diane Merten, a member of the COSC committee, also concerned her statement with co-education. She thought the focus of education should be explained to affect both men and women. Merten thought there were too many barriers separating men and women at Notre Dame and suggested many of the formal and informal stopgaps be broken down. One suggestion given by the Walsh RA was a loosening of security in residence halls "to make it easier for people to drop in and visit.

The subject of parietals was mentioned as one of the barriers that could be broken down. Byrne said that students wanted "the experience of enforcing a timetable of our (students') own". Hesburgh doubted that the parietal issue would be looked at favorably if brought before the Board of Trustees again. "The hours have changed four times in the last six years. I doubt they'll be changed again for awhile," he commented.

Hesburgh, the last to make a statement at the first phase of the program, thought he'd like to see the University to be a "caring place."

Hesburgh had only one bad recollection of the present year. "I was disappointed that the most exciting argument a student could give me was about the calendar issue. I should hope we can care more about other things in the world," he commented.

I'm not Mary or Chris

The following is recounted with the permission of the villain:

Last year my date for the ball was selected for the prom committee and the following year, the same date was given to him. So, when I tried to ask him to the junior prom with me, he didn't think it was a good idea. Instead, he insisted on asking a girl from his high school, which made me feel like I wasn't good enough.

I decided to go to the prom myself and enjoy the night. I arrived at the dance, alone, and decided to enjoy the music and the people who were there. I remember thinking, "I wish I had a date to share this night with, but I'll make the most of it anyway."
