SBP Candidates express views

by Phil Cackley

Forty students were present last night at Grace Pit as the six candidates for SBP and SLC participated in a forum on issues and answered questions from the audience.

Candidates Tim Boyle and Peter Gaa, Mr. Mike Sweigart and Bill Walsh, and Mike Gassman and Mike Casey largely restated their re-election campaign this year for their fourth term in the Student Council.

Gassman, speaking to that his re-election campaign this year for his fourth term, said that his re-election campaign this year for his fourth term was not as crucial as some candidates were claiming.

Boyle pointed out that the past three SBP and SLC administrations were experienced but left "a lot of students disappointed," whereas Student Council Director Tom Bisic and Comptroller Jim Hummer, who had little experience, have "done a fantastic job this year."

"Experience isn't the actual issue in the campaign. It's more a matter of keeping the present administration and the policies to be followed," Sweigart added.

Gassman expounded on his previous statement that he would try to eliminate the overcrowding in the College of Business Administration. He said that the Administration and the Academic Council should act on the matter and that this should be continued.

SLC candidates express views

Candidates for Student Life Council representative from the North and South Quad appeared last night to present their positions on the various issues. Despite small crowds, all five candidates discussed their future plans for the SLC.

At the hastily organized South Quad forum at 7:30 a.m., a handful of spectators attended the discussion between contemporaries Jeff Simnick, Peter Haley and Pat Russell.

The trio addressed themselves in particular to problems of student apathy and the proper functioning of the SLC.

Simnick emphasized the importance of improving communication between the students and the SLC. He said that we can get to the heart of the SLC from an elite group to something that's more representative of the students. This can be done best by going to the individual halls, and finding out what's going on through the hall government.

Russell plans to facilitate communication with the halls in particular by an "associates" program, which entails the utilization of his personal contacts in the halls as a method of gathering student opinions more efficiently. He also noted that the administration will "respond better" to a group they recognize as genuinely representative.

Hartke is afraid that the Republicans may take advantage of the Court decision and oust his campaign by using large contributions from few contributors.

Kunitz and Kinnell conclude festival

by Phil Cackley and Maureen Flynn

Poets Stanley Kunitz and Galway Kinnell concluded the 1976 Sophomore Literary Festival Friday and Saturday nights with presentations of their poetry and prose. Kunitz, who spoke Friday, opened his reading with a short prose piece about his sister, whose death was a close friend of his. The piece was a private remembrance of en by his governness to nickelodeons to see movies instead of going to the beach. Kunitz commented that this is one of the reasons he gives and the other is becoming. The piece was entitled "The Magic Curtain."

Kunitz closed with a piece praising women poets who he said were creating the good art of the "60s and 1970s just as their husbands were doing the bad professional art." The poem was inspired by an American folk artist evident emotion behind Neruda's reading. The conclusion to the poem was greeted with thoughtful silence, broken only by a few sighs.

Other highlights of the evening included a poem dedicated to "Kinnell and Eileen and Evelyn Sandeen." Sandeen is a member of the English department and advisor to the Sophomore Literary Festival Committee. His daughter served as Kinnell's escort and his wife held a reception for the poet the preceding evening.

Kinnell said he had written the poem that very morning and warned, "For a few hours after one's written a poem, there remains a conviction that it's okay."

Later in the program, Kinnell recited a poem by a former convict-poet Etheridge Knight. "When Etheridge was released from prison," Kinnell said, "I heard that he was back on heroin and I wrote a poem reproving him. It turned out it wasn't true at all."

The poet explained, "But Etheridge told me it could happen any time, and I should keep it around."

Kinnell read the poem addressed to Knight entitled "Send Me a Line."

The audience listened intensely to the poet's explanation, "How can a poem do so much?"

"It's a statement, a device, a magic spell," he admitted.

"There's no tactful way to say as much as a poem."

The audience burst into laughter as he read the last line: "Somebody Roman picked my pocket."

Another work described his childhood experience of being taken

Kunitz presented a number of poems, beginning with his older poems and progressing to more recent ones.

One poem which amused the audience, entitled "The Thief," was written after Kunitz was pickpocketed on a streetcar in Rome. The incident upset Kunitz very much and he admitted, "I was a deprived man of the Spanish language."

On Saturday night poet Galway Kinnell departed several times from the readings of his own works.

The high point of Kinnell's presentation was the playing of a taped reading by the late Chilean poet, Pablo Neruda. Kinnell prefaced the tape of "Let Me Explain" by reading his English translation of the poem.

"My theory of translation," the poet explained, "is to try to say as exactly as you can what the original poem said. This translation is not very good. I don't know that much Spanish."

"There's one line: I'm not even sure I know what it means, but it's accurate!"

The poet was written just after the outbreak of the Spanish Civil War, when Neruda was a diplomat in Spain. The tape of Neruda reading the poem in its original Spanish was made 35 years later.

"Despite the lack of familiarity with the Spanish language, the audience listened intently to the poet's explanation of the poem," he said, and read the entire conclusion to The Book of Nightmares.

Following Kinnell's closing presentation, Michelle Quain, chairman of the SLF committee, commented on the success of this year's festival. "The authors gave their all, and the audience realized their own. We saw, at least for one week, something beautiful," she said.

Management-oriented Sales Trainees

Ed Fanning Chevrolet, located in Aurora, Illinois (soon to be the second largest city in the state of Illinois), will be on campus Tuesday, March 9, 1976 to recruit management-oriented sales personnel who will have the knowledge and ability to grow with the future plans of the company, who will be able to move on in to management positions and become leaders of men.

The personnel we are seeking should have the desire for an ambitious career which would lead them to dealership management ownership.

SBP: Gassman

Today the student body votes for its next president and vice president. After extended interviews with all the candidates, the Observer Editorial Board believes that Mike Gassman and Mike Casey should be our next president and vice president because of their experience, their solid proposals, and because they are the best qualified team to carry out such proposals.

Mike Gassman has had three years of experience in student government, including this year's tour of duty as Student Government Academic Commissioner. Of all the candidates, Mike Gassman's experience is not everything, but it does give one a chance to get one's basic mistakes out of the way. Mike Gassman has already given Gassman a thorough understanding of the workings of student government and a knowledge of many of the people he will have to work with among the students, faculty and administrators.

Gassman's record of service includes the notable victory of getting the Academic Council to pass a reasonable and acceptable calendar. Even for a second try this is a rare accomplishment in the history of the calendar feud.

Mike Casey, Gassman's running mate, has also had experience in student government as president of Pangborn Hall and as a member of the Hall President's Council.

The platform put forward by Gassman and Casey included several sound proposals: Their Student Body Congress would coordinate the activities of the SBR, SBYT, HPC, SLC and Student Union. Representatives from Student Government and Student Union at the HPC meetings would improve communication between these groups. A student government press secretary would help to improve the currently poor relations between Student Faculty and the media. Gassman and Casey plan to continue the work that has been done towards lowering the drinking age, developing the hall judicial boards, investigating the serious overcrowding in the Business College, and pushing through the proposals in the COUL report.

Joint action by students and faculty to get their proposals accepted is one of Gassman's best ideas. Both faculty and students must learn to find their proposals neglected or rejected by the Administration, yet working together they would form potentially powerful majorities in bodies like the SLC and Academic Council.

Gassman has already started work on closer-faculty-student relations in the Academic Council. The student-supported calendar could not have passed without faculty votes and student votes were crucial in passing the Faculty's proposals on hiring and promotions.

Two men cannot run student government by themselves but Gassman and Casey have gained the support of many other active student leaders from the halls, Student government and Student body. Gassman's success as Academic Commissioner has shown that he knows how to work with others and direct a coherent staff effort.

Overall, the Gassman-Casey ticket stands out in this year's field as by far the best.

For the SLC races the Observer Editorial Board has conducted interviews with the candidates and has rated them as "above average," "average" or "below average" in terms of the whole field of candidates for SLC seats. Then for each seat we have endeavored to give you the best possible results for that particular office.

North quad
We endorse Mary Charchut.

It is unfortunate that these two people are running against each other since they are the best qualified of the whole field. Although Van Tassel has inexperience running for a re-election, and was chairman of the committee which put together the social life survey, experience is not everything. Since this year the SLC did not really get moving until November, the difference in experience is not great in any case. Van Tassel has failed to keep in personal contact with constituents outside his own hall, thus weakening the student support the SLC needs.

Charchut, on the other hand, has done her homework before running for the office. If she keeps her promise to stay in touch through the hall councils she will provide an excellent combination of competence and communication.

South quad
Jeff Simnick: Average
Pat Russett: Average
We endorse Jeff Simnick.

On the South Quad no candidate stands out as particularly well-qualified. Of the three Simnick seems most informed about the issues the SLC may face and puts particularly intelligent stress on cultivating a good working relationship with the rectors who will be enacting the SLC's proposals on the hall level.

Off-campus
Len Moty: Average
John Kinney: Average
John Steinman: Did not come for interview
We endorse Len Moty.

Moty has several good ideas about the key off-campus problem: extremely poor communications among off-campus students and between O-C students and the rest of the University community. He proposes having regular noon office hours in LaFortune to keep in contact with off-campus students.

VOTE!

The fact of the matter is that there are a great many things about life around this place that need improving. None of those things are going to be improved by students who just sit around and spend all their time on a relentless four-year effort to become alumni. Student leaders who are ignored by the students are certainly going to be ignored by the Administration. So if you want anything done around here, get off your toosh and vote.
Experience Counts

gassman-casey

Student interest and involvement are the keys. Strong leadership and experience are the tools that must be used to shape the student government. Allow for a stronger and effective Student Body. We have the opportunity to work with that experience and leadership to develop a student government that can work for students. By improving communications and cooperation between the bodies of student government, with the people it works for, and with the faculty and administration it deals with, the students will be given a stronger voice.

Having all branches of student government working together, efficiently and effectively, is the key to successful action and cooperation. To establish a united, effective government, we propose to:

1) Have a representative of student government and student union present at each hall councils and cooperation between the bodies of student government, with the people it works for, and with the faculty and administration it deals with, the students will be given a stronger voice.

2) Develop a student body congress where representatives will be there to represent the most representative body of student government. Student representatives will be there to ensure accurate and complete reporting. The reports should not end, but be continued, revised, until all plans are realized.

3) Prepare to work closely with the Indiana Student Lobby to reduce the drinking age. This was an election year, making voting on such a controversial issue difficult. Next year, things will be better, and with more voting efforts, they will have a good chance of passing the legislature.

4) Increase services offered by student government and student union. With good people involved, we can do even more for the students.

5) Pursue further involvement with the Board of Trustees, speaking to them at every opportunity. By doing so, we will keep them aware of the students feelings and problems.

6) Further develop our Judicial Board System. By having the J-Boards recognized as capable and efficient, more responsibilities can be given to them, and possible solutions to parties and parties may stem from their work.

First and most important, is improving student-faculty relationships. The improvement of this was seen in the calendar struggles this year. The key to our success was the working closely with the Faculty Senate and the faculty members of the Academic Council. The faculty tends to see things in much the same way as does the students. By working closely with the Senate and the Academic Council, we will have input and a better chance of success.

These are our proposals to improve an effective government for the students. They are feasible, practical goals that we can and will achieve. But most important, our government is the interest and backing of the student body. We urge students to show their interest and involvement by voting today.

3) Revitalize, S.M.A.M.D., the committee to improve relations between St. Mary's and Notre Dame.

4) Improve the athletic program for women.

5) Advocate a more aggressive student government, especially concerning an improvement of communications with the student body.

6) Include a security rating in the annual student evaluations. In order to achieve these goals, we must make a concerted effort to get the support of the students, whether during home football weekends or via the Alumni Association. With their backing we will be in a better position to deal with the administration, which will cause the administration to be more attentive to our ideas and goals. We may be insane but we are not ignorant.

issues and Answers

sweigart-walsh

It seems the major issue of the student body election has become experience. With all due respect, the past three student body administrations have been the product of experience, generation from within, and yet the student body has been dissatisfied.

It might be interesting to note the work of two "relatively" inexperienced people this year. Everyone has acclaimed the work of Jim Hummer and Tom Birsic. Together, these two have been the main driving force in reorganizing and administrating the now financially successful student union.

It's true Jim Hummer's student union chairman was assistant comptroller last year. However, last year assistant comptroller's job has been nothing more than "running a fee center" and the administration had to have paychecks drawn up on Friday afternoons.

Tom Birsic has only one semester of strong experience as assistant commissioner for the Social Security Commission before taking the responsibility of student union director this year.

These two most notably and certainly among others had little experience in our student government. The reason lies within these people and not in student organization experience. Their competence and inner qualities are the differentiating factors of their administrative ability. Sweigart and Walsh have exhibited these qualities in their past endeavors.

Sweigart-Walsh feel the real issue of the student body elections is the policy of administration. There must be a concerted effort by both the SBP and SBVP to bring student government closer to the students. Efforts must be made to make the SBP more visible, more available and to get more students involved in student government and student union.

This is where the Sweigart-Walsh concept of an "open" administration may be seen to be more of a political cliché. Not only must the doors of student government be open, but more importantly, the SBP and SBVP must be open to interaction with the students in such areas as observations, complaints, and criticisms. We feel this kind of informative exchange will lead to the desired "positive resolutions".

To implement this type of exchange, the SBP and SBVP must be integrally involved with the SLC, HPC, and the Student Senate. The Student Senate, for these are the basis of student representation. At this level, communication and effort coordination are of supreme importance. However, the SBP and SBVP and their representatives must move to attend hall meetings. It is here the roots of student opinion are formed.

This view of administrative policy is what differentiates the Sweigart-Walsh ticket from "the other guys". Once again we ask all students (including seniors) to express their opinion. Show the Administration, faculty and fellow students you care. Please vote!

Editor's Note

In the interests of encouraging a full discussion of the issues of this student body presidential and vice-president campaign the Observer editorial page has offered all three presidential-vice-presidential ticket returns space.

The candidates wrote whatever it was they wanted, regarding their platforms and the campaign. We have run their comments intact and as they were submitted in order to let them speak to the student body directly without having their remarks filtered through a third party.

The Bicentennial Conference, organized by the Notre Dame Bicentennial Commission, began at 8 p.m. in Washington Hall. Due to a schedule revision, a professor at the Harvard School of Divinity, Harvey Cox, opens the three day conference. Ginzeny now speaks on Wednesday at 1:15 p.m.

Cox entitles his speech, "Secularity and Seduction: The Ambiguous Role of American Religion in Social Change." Cox is especially interested in the ability of the religious community to criticize the U.S. and the world. He views religion as very important to the human experience, as well as in dealing with a variety of problems. Cox has written a number of books: The Sacred City, The Feast of Fools, God's Revolution and Man's Responsibility, and the Social Commission, was declared an over­

You really won't believe it...until you hear it.

The unpredictable South Bend weather cast a dark cloud over the events planned for Saturday after­noon. "We were hoping for good weather or snow, but there wasn't much we can do in the rain," said Smouse. Because of the rain all of those events planned for snow were cancelled.

The conference continues with a panel discussion at 10 a.m. and a lecture by Lester Thurow at 4:30 p.m., tomorrow in the Library Auditorium.

Rosemary Reuther speaks at 1:15 p.m. Wednesday. Friday Camp­

The Disco packed LaFortune's second floor ballrooms with students dancing to the music played by the WNDN D.J.'s. Tom Henning, representative from the Sound Root, which donated the equipment for the event, said the "Wab­bit's" whereabouts, McDancy said that the "4 and 3" clue, referring to the row of seven windows one way and three the other in Hoyne's College, was the deciding clue. A dance contest was also held at the Disco.

Smouse recalled hearing one onlooker say that Friday night was the first time in a long time that she felt a difference!!!

Now a Bose Direct/Reflecting bookshelf speaker and it's under $100.

If you thought it couldn't be done, you don't know BOSE. Because the new BOSE MODEL 301 speaker is just that. A bookshelf speaker that provides reflected and direct sound performance in the tradition of the internationally-famous BOSE 901® and 501 speakers. It provides such astounding performance for its size that, frankly, it's hard to believe that these speakers cost under $100. But it does. And, it's easy to place and can be adapted to all room environments. Come in this week and ask to hear a demonstration of the new BOSE MODEL 301 Direct/ Reflecting® bookshelf speaker system. You really won't believe it...until you hear it.

Women ministers discussed by Mary Rahlbun
Staff Reporter

In a lively panel discussion on Women in Ministry held last night in the library auditorium, panelists agreed on several issues. A consensus was found in the following: that there is no sound theological argument to excluding women from ordination, that it is unjust and discriminatory to exclude women from the priesthood, that women have been engaged in various ministries in the Church for centuries and that the language and symbols of the Church are in need of change to eliminate sexism.

As an audience of 100 heard panelists Msgr. John Egan, chairman of the Catholic Committee on Urban Ministry, Dr. Elizabeth Fiorenza, Dr. Josephine Ford and Dr. William Storey of the Notre Dame theology department. Sister Kathleen Hughes, Ph.D. candidate in the theology department, served as moderator.

The recent conference on the ordination of women held in Detroit last Thanksgiving was a spring-board for much of the discussion. Hughes pointed out that the conference attracted 1,250 participants and that several hundred men and women were turned away for lack of space.

Women's b-ball team wins twice

by Ellen O'Grady

Notre Dame took a doubleheader weekend of basketball, december over the weekend. The Irish women's basketball team was especially successful at block and steals setting it up for the victory over Penn State.

Notre Dame dominated the opening game against Penn State, holding the Nittany Lions to just 37 points. The Irish went on to win the game 76-37.

The second game was against the University of Kentucky, who were coming off a loss to the University of Tennessee. The Irish were able to take down the Wildcats 86-72.

The Irish improved to 16-2 on the season with these two victories, remaining in the hunt for the Big East Conference championship. The next game is at home against the University of North Carolina on Saturday, February 23.
