Democratic hopeful Jimmy Carter made a busy four-hour campaign swing through South Bend yesterday, with stops at Notre Dame to visit with the football team and address a capacity crowd at Stepan Center.

Carter also held a press conference at the Michigan Regional Airport, to hand-shaking tout through city hall and spoke with workers at Bendix Corporation before flying to Milwaukee to await the results of the Wisconsin and New York primaries held yesterday.

Arriving from Indianapolis at about 2 p.m., Carter held a half-hour news conference for members of the local and national press at the airport terminal.

The former governor of Georgia dealt at length with questions on the subject of breaking down racial or ethnic neighborhood barriers.

He was asked if he would even overcome housing segregation in the North, and that he was essentially insisting on "the right of people to live where they choose." Carter said he did.

The group of onlookers greeted the Democratic hopeful at the airport, although active Carter supporters were scarce.

Later in the afternoon, the Georgia Democrat stopped by Carter Field while the Notre Dame football team was having a practice session. "Pepper Rodgers sent me," Carter joked, referring to the coach of the Georgia Tech football team. Carter attended Georgia Tech as a student.

He was introduced to co-captains Willie Fry and Mark McLane and asked the players to "be easy on Georgia Tech" because "we need to even up the series." The team laughed good-naturedly at the gesture.

Coach Dan Devine introduced Carter as a "good young liberal," adding that "all like liberals on this campus." Carter also spoke with Athletic Director Ed "Moonie" Rodgers (continued on page 6).

Carter stated that he did not feel the choice of Humphrey as a compromise candidate by the Notre Dame Mock Political Convention a month ago was a reflection of the national situation.

"Things have changed in the past month," he said. "I've won three or four primaries and have recently moved ahead of Humphrey in the Gallup Poll. I think I will be nominated in New York."

On the subject of abortion, Carter said the government should not encourage it and should offer alternatives such as family planning. However, he emphasized that he would comply with court rulings on the matter, even though he is personally against abortion.

Carter named the May 4 Indiana primary could be an important one, especially if results from the Wisconsin and New York primaries are inconclusive. In this case, the April 27 Pennsylvania contest would become a major showdown between himself and Sen. Henry Jackson. Carter added.

A small crowd of onlookers greeted the Democratic hopeful at the airport, although active Carter supporters were scarce.

Carter added that he would minimize the need for abortion and that he opposes forced busing of school children to integrate schools in a speech yesterday at Stepan Center. An estimated 3,500 students warmly welcomed the Democratic presidential hopeful on his second campaign swing through Indiana.

"I think abortion is wrong," Carter said. "I don't think our government should ever do anything to encourage abortion."

Carter said he believes abortion is a sign of unwanted pregnancies and he would institute a nationwide program of sex education, family planning, improved adoption procedures, and access to contraceptives to every one who wants to use them. He emphasized that he does not favor a total prohibition of abortion and would abide by any court rulings concerning it.

Carter also promised to cut defense spending, keep close tabs on the Central Intelligence Agency, and to pursue a more vigorous foreign policy, reorganizes the Executive branch, televises sessions of Congress and push for the development of solar energy.

On the bus riding Carter declared that "integration suits me fine," but that he opposes mandatory busing. Mandatory busing did not work in Atlanta, Carter said, because only poor children were bused.

He proposed a four-point alternative to forced busing which was devised by the Atlanta School Board and members of the black community. The plan provides: 1) any children who want to be bused must be bused at public expense; 2) busing must contribute to integration; 3) black leaders must be represented in the school system; 4) no child can be bused against the wishes of the child and the parents.

Carter said he would encourage business to hire young people by increasing the money supply and lowering interest rates. He also proposed WPAS-style public works jobs for young people 18 to 21 years old to alleviate the 25 percent unemployment rate in that age group.

Carter said that unemployment among young people is a major cause of crime, citing the 45 percent unemployment rate for black youths.

"When a young person is forced out of the home and goes on the street for weeks and weeks and can't get a job, there is a powerful pressure on that young person to start shoplifting or selling drugs or becomes a prostitute or some other illegal activity," Carter stated.

A strong intelligence agency is needed for foreign policy and defense. Carter said. Intelligence agencies, however, must obey the law, Carter said, condemning activities such as assassination plots, attempts to overthrow foreign governments and domestic spying. (continued on page 6)
Wells Fargo robbed
NEW YORK - Three armed men wearing ski masks escaped with $5,000 to $10,000 after a 20-minute standoff in the basement of The Daily News building. The trio handcuffed the guards and two building workers to a stairwell railing and made off with three bags of money.

Kidneys kill Hughes
HOUSTON - A 21/2-hour autopsy revealed yesterday that billionaire recluse Howard Hughes died Monday of kidney failure. It was also disclosed that agents of IRS and Customs Service re-checking the finger prints on the body with those in government files for positive identification. Speculation continues regarding distribution of Hughes' fortune, although it is widely believed it will go to medical research.

Lowenstein to discuss conspiracies involving Kennedy assassinations Former New York Congressman Allard K. Lowenstein will speak tonight on alleged conspiracies surrounding the assassinations of John and Robert Kennedy.

Lowenstein, a close personal friend of Robert Kennedy and leader of the "people's movement" in 1968, has recently been involved in efforts to re-open the investigation of the Robert Kennedy assassination. He is currently working with Vincent Bugliosi, the prosecutor in the Charlie Manson case and author of the best-seller Helter-Skelter, in his role as district attorney in Los Angeles. Bugliosi is campaigning to re-open the Kennedy assassination case.

Lowenstein's speech is entitled "The Kennedy Assassinations and the Abuse of Power in America". He will speak at 7:30 p.m. in the LaFortune Ballroom.

Management club plans seminar
by Mary P. Egan
Contributing Editor
Note Dame's Women's Management Club has planned a seminar, "Womanizing in Society to be held in the College of Business, C.C. from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. and will include a noon luncheon.
Graduate students Ginger Con-lisk and Mary M. Hayes planned the seminar, which is open to the public, in conjunction with the College of Business Administration.

"Our main objective is to provide information to women regarding the opportunities and challenges that they might face upon entering a professional environment," Con-lisk explained.

There is a $5 fee for the seminar. Those attending a part of the seminar, but not the luncheon, need not pay this fee.

For this seminar, a group of professional women in the executive levels of business and technology will present information and guidelines regarding women's role in today's society.

Dorothy C. Cogan, director of public relations for Middles Laboratory will speak on the "Outlook for Women". Mary Claire McCabe, director of student development at Notre Dame will discuss, "Marriage and Career: Need One Choose Between The Two".

Jean Jasiens, corporate representive for Cummins Engine Co., will explain, "Assessing Yourself: Who Are You". And IBM's large Systems Product Marketing Manager, Ursula O. Farrell, will discuss "Changing Perspective on a Career".

Hayes said the seminar was planned because "there's nothing being offered at the Notre Dame campus in terms of women learning techniques of developing their own style of management." Such courses are problems because "the whole University's business college is male-oriented," Hayes continued.

"Women have special problems in professional careers and have to deal with discrimination," Learning to assert themselves, and trying to trade-off between their personal life and a career," Hayes explana-ed.

Anyone interested in attending this seminar may contact the following editors: Con-lisk, 283-8017; Hayes, 283-6929;或者Boussard, 283-8125; or call the C.C. at 283-6214.

Casey, new Student Body vice-president, said he was the Student Government representative to the Student Life Council (SLC) this year, if approved at the next SLC meeting in the fall. Casey will be the Student Body president (SBP) Mike Gassman's "permanent delegate, representative," a position made possible by a change in SLC by-laws passed by the Council yesterday.

Preceding the Student Government representative post was filled by the SBP. Mike Gassman, elected to the Student Senate books, was to get the vice-president more involved next year, Casey said. "But for this year, I'll be the Student Government representative. There's no difference there."

"The idea we had," Gassman said, "is that this year the Student Government was centered in the president, and the vice-president was left out. By putting the vice-president on the SLC, there will be a better division of time and he will be able to spend more time on the SLC than the SBP might," he continued.

Gassman will retain speaking privileges on the floor and will attend the SLC meetings. "It could be better for both our views to have both of us," Casey said.

"The wording of the change in the by-laws provides for either the SLP or the SBP to serve as the representative," Ed Byrne, SLC chairman and former SBP, stated. "But in any conflict in future years, they can work that out between themselves."

The possibility of making such a change was discussed first by Gassman and Casey, according to Byrne, and was then brought to the President and Secretary, "It was mostly a matter of personalities," Casey said. "I moved up through the Hall Presidents' Council (HPC) and we felt the SLC was more centered toward the work I have been doing. Gassman, as Academic Council representative, is more centered toward administrative goals," he explained.

"This will be a better division of tasks," Gassman said. "They have the office of vice-president and then let it fall away. I don't want to do that."

The Council also received a report from the Lynch, off-campus representative, stating a definition of the SLC's origin. "The SLC originated from the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees," Lynch explained, "to consider matters of student affairs, with all decisions "subject to the president" of the University."

"It shows that the council has a direct line to the president," Lynch stated. "We don't have to go through all the others. Our decisions could go directly to the president's desk."

"This just says that if the vice-president for Student Affairs wouldn't listen or cooperate," St. Jean Lenz, Theology professor, explained, "we could take it up in the line. Practically, it gets worked out in another way, but, legally, we could bypass the Student Affairs Office.

In other action, Byrne also reported that the HPC has begun selections of a sophomore representative, who will be one of two sophomore to serve two-year terms on the Council. New representatives will be chosen alternate-ly from the north and south quads every other year.

Byrne also delegated responsibility of committee reports, which will be presented at the meeting next week.

The two top vote-getters in the Senior Class election yesterday were voted and Flynn thanked his supporters. "The content and tone of the election was more centered toward the Business Majors: The Navy Supply Corps is responsible for all staff phases of naval logistics. As a Navy Supply Corps officer, you'll develop and practice modern management techniques while serving in a challenging and exciting environment. Why Is Henry Angry?

WASHINGTON--A great deal has been said in the papers about Henry's temper. Every day you pick up the paper you find the secretary of state is angry about something.

Last week I was reading the front page at breakfast and my wife asked me if I knew anything about it.

"Henry Kissinger is angry at the people on his staff for allowing a magazine writer access to the sensitive parts of his talks with Arab and Israeli leaders," she said.

"It's too bad," I said. "I heard on television that Henry was angry because the Soviets had angry because his car was parked in a no parking zone."

"I don't think we should be too disturbed about Kissinger's anger," my wife told me. "I'm not a secretary of state. Now is he was secretary of defense we'd have something to worry about."

"Joseph Kraft says Henry is angry at the secretary of defense because he has no more influence with the President," my wife's sister said.

"Evans and Novak said the reason he is angry is he can't get Kissinger fired in his race for the presidency," I said.

My daughter said, "Last night on the news it said that Henry was angry because the Soviets had an accident that killed five people."

"Sure," I said, "I didn't really care about that."

"He's angry because of the election," my wife said. "He said he would have to answer for it at a press conference."
A campaign comes to town

Tim O'Reiley

photos by Chris Smith

Not too long ago, the political world knew him as "Jimmy Whoo." Now President as a native from George Wallace country, most analysts figured he would suffer the same fate from the Alabaman as his Georgia ancestors did at the hands of General Sherman. The Democrats would have many candidates to choose from in 1976, but Jimmy Carter wouldn't be one of them.

As he brought his campaign to town yesterday, he cleared their path. All the list of candidates has thinned considerably: Wallace has not won yet, even in the South. Meanwhile, the former Georgia governor possesses the big organization, gets the big crowds, and wears the "front-runner" label. Now others speak of him as "Jimmy, who's going to spit him.

Shaking hands and spreading his message wherever he could for the past 15 months, Carter's schedule has not slowed down since his surge in popularity. Yesterday's schedule, which he followed precisely: read 3 a.m., wake up (the started the day in Indianapolis): 6 a.m., shake hands at factory; 8-15 a.m. do TV interview; 7:30 a.m.: eat breakfast; 8:30 a.m. meet with the publisher of a local paper; 9 a.m.: conduct a half-hour news conference; 9:50 a.m.: shake hands and inspect the, last International Harvester; 11 a.m.: hold reception at the Hilton Hotel; 1 p.m.: phone call from President; 12:15 p.m.: phone call from Jack Roosevelt's; 2:30 p.m.: have a private lunch; 1:30 p.m.: take off for South Bend. Now Carter was in the air.

Plans allowed only a four-hour visit to South Bend over the past seven weeks in advance. The actual planning began last Wednesday with the Carter advance people contacting student representatives. Fit-in there, press releases had to be written. press credentials had to be assigned, the use of Stepan Center had to be arranged. University officials had to be contacted.

The Secret Service arrived on Saturday, drawing up seating arrangements and checking all security contingencies. That whole door processing Carter enter? Would he be too tired to shake hands or after the speech? Where should the press sit? How many people should sit in the podium?

As a final detail, starting time had been advertised as 4:30 p.m. earlier in the week. On Saturday, it turned out Carter would not arrive for the speech until 5 p.m. So rather than lose students who wanted to go to dinner, it was decided the time would remain the same, and Carter would just be "late."

With all the details arranged, their execution carried before Carter left Indianapolis. A podium and curtain backdrop were hastily set up for the press conference, which would be held in the baggage- claim area of the Bendix Corporation, where Carter will make a quick hand-shaking tour.

On the press bus, the photographers sit in front and relax, while the reporters listen to tapes of the press conference to obtain the questions. There is an extra攻克 about the local yokel who ruined their effort to forced Carter's position on a major issue, while others assess the candidates' performance.

At Bendix, one pool reporter and the local media are allowed to stand outside the exit gate, while Carter is inside.

Meanwhile, the reporters in the bus continue preparing their stories, while the reporters outside speculate on the campaign. The photographers move into position over the objections of the security people, who eventually win.

His half-hour visit to the factory concluded, Carter finds a few hand shakes at the gate, then retired into the Hall.

At 4:30 p.m.: The motorcade arrives at City Hall, where a small crowd has gathered to greet the candidate. After a quick hand-shaking session with a young man wearing a Carter button to try to follow him inside, but is quickly ushered away by Secret Service agents. The governor moves through more hand-shakers, then rides the motorcade to the 14th floor for a short, closed-door meeting with Mayor Peter Nemeth.

A few minutes later, the local press is invited in for a picture taking and questions session. Next Carter holds a quick, formal meeting with the city council, where the discussion topics range from football to fund-raising to revenue-sharing. Moving on his press bus, Carter does some hand-shaking with city employees, stopping at most of the 14 faxes as he descends the whole way by the stairs. Most of the photographers have jumped on the elevator by the 11th floor.

Many workers, particularly the women, have to call a taxi to get into town. Now Carter charters a United Airlines 727, and is accompanied by a contingent of Secret Service men and a local army bomb squad wherever he goes.

Because Ft. Hood is out of town, the advance people decided to visit the football practice, somewhere around the 15th floor. After shaking every hand he could find and kissing one baby, Carter is off to the practice field.

At 4:30 p.m.: The Carter entourage arrives at the practice. Coach Dan Devine walks away from calesthenics to greet the politician, while many players are heard to ask. "What the (expletive deleted) is going on here?" As the whole troop of security and press people walks through practice, the players continue around them as best they can. With the exercises finished, the players gather around Carter and Devine for a short talk and more hand-shaking.

Some samples of the dialogue: Devine, "We think you (Carter) are a fine young liberal. This campus has always been receptive to liberals."

Carter: "I really came here today to ask you to take it easy on Georgia Tech and me. As you may know, I'm playing for the biggest prize of them all, the Presidency. So far, I've played thirteen games, winning 10 and coming in second three times, a pretty good record."

Players: "Nice to meet you, sir," 4:50 p.m.: Carter arrives at a packed, stuffy hot Stepan Center. Before entering, he cannot resist shaking hands with the secretary and launmne team, who are scrambling on the fields.

Following short introductions, Carter launched into his standard 10-15 minute speech, and then asked himself to questions from the audience. While local reporters paid close attention to his remarks, the national media relaxed for the most part. One NBC cameraman even fell asleep. The entire performance much resembled those in many other parts of the country.

The crowd thinned considerably as the speaking went on, and as students grew hungrier. After promising thank yous to the final questions, a reply which lasted up to five minutes, Carter leapt off the stage to press some more flesh and exchange a few words with students. With Secret Service agents again leading the way, he headed for the back door of Stepanas, for one final round of hand-shaking.

6:03 p.m.: The motorcade heads toward the airport, to catch the flight that will take Carter to Milwaukee. The press is rather tired by now, with the prospect of a long night ahead of them. For the most part they consider this an unscheduled, and hope for better in the future. They also continue to haras Carter for his performance at the press conference, because they feel he becomes defensive when they closely question his positions, and they become increasingly angry with the lack of actual substantive views from the candidate.
Carter proposes more media coverage

"If the CIA should make a mistake, which it is likely to do, I as president, would call a press conference and I would tell the American people what happened," Carter said.

had not as president been present, would have had said, "I think when we've dealt with or negotiated with the Soviet Union in recent years under Mr. Kissinger or Mr. Reagan, who is at fault, what punishment I would give to the military or to the military on the CIA as accurately as possible the people of our great country," he concluded.

Carter said he favored detente, but not as it now exists. He said he interpreted detente to mean a lessening of tension between the United States and the Soviet Union, cultural exchange, and intellectual exchange. "I think we've dealt with or negotiated with the Soviet Union in recent years under Mr. Kissinger or Mr. Reagan, who is at fault, what punishment I would give to the military or to the military on the CIA..." he said.

Carter proposed a "sunshine" law for Washington to allow free media coverage of events in the executive and legislative branches.

"I think that it would make available all joint sessions of Congress, television coverage," he said. "I think Mr. Kissinger does not treat adequately in the judgement of the American people. I think he has exploited us in the process of evoking and consummating foreign policy," Carter said.

The former governor called the Pentagon the most wasteful bureaucracy in Washington and said private sector. He said he would save $6 million by cutting back overseas military installations and eliminating duplications of effort by the military and the private sector.

"Our people are hungry for a decent government, a truthful government, and open government. We have a government that exemplifies in the finest possible way and as accurately as possible the people of our great country," he concluded.

Carter said "I hope that in the future we can have a government that exemplifies in the finest possible way and as accurately as possible the people of our great country," he concluded.

The Colleges of Business, Science, and Engineering, offer a two-part series featuring new courses to be offered next fall. Today's article focuses on new course offerings in Business, Science, and Engineering.

Business, offers a two-part series featuring new courses to be offered next fall. "We are excited about these new courses as they provide much-needed variety for students in those areas," said Professor Robert Williamson, chairman-elect in Accounting.

A significant change in the curriculum in Electrical Engineering is EE 224, Introduction to Electrical Networks. While the sequence of all supported courses in the college, this is the first time a separate section of the EE 224 course will be available for electrical engineers alone.

Significant changes have also taken place in the course, Man and His Environment, CE 213. Although the title remains the same, the content and approach has changed dramatically, according to Professor Thomas Thiet.

"Ideally we would like to expand our tax courses even more," said Williamson, "but we are working to include tax courses for non-business majors, a separate course for business students who aren't majoring in Accounting, and courses comprised solely of Accounting maps.

Management Department Chair-
Boulac faced with rebuilding line

by Chip Scaslon

The late Van Patrick, voice of Notre Dame football, used to say, "You could have driven a truck through that hole," and hopefully Patrick's successor, Don Criqui, will be able to explain the same thing when Irish football opens up next fall.

Presently the grumbling ground-honk that will open those holes for Irish has been shuffled as spring practice proceeds. If nothing else spring practice enables players to gain experience as they attempt to fill voids left by graduating players. A well-oiled offensive line coach, can be happy about that.

Boulac is respectively faced with the enormous chore of rebuilding an offensive line. The Irish have departed seniors Quehl, Wojcik, Bazer and Polholt. But in lieu Boulac tabs, by the opener against Pittsburgh he'll have the line bearing holes that will have Healy and Hunter grinning from ear to ear.

"Right now we've an experienced offensive line," said the former Irish tight end, "but there are several individuals who are going to be very, very improved when you see them next fall."

One of those individuals is Ernie Hughes, started out his Notre Dame career as a fullback but was switched to the offensive line last season leading the entire line in time played. According to Boulac, "experience is the greatest asset this season will have to offer." And Hughes gratefully discovered that playing with honorable mention All-American Al Wojcik last season.

Another lineman of experience, three-year letter winner Elon Moore, is hoping from previous battles in what is sometimes termed "the trenches." Moore has seen a lot of back-up action over his first three years... but he may find himself in the starting role next season.

Moore, a Sporting News honorable mention freshman All-American, is currently running as a first stringer at the tackle position so in his previous game time will reap rewards for him. "Ernie Hughes and Moore are going to be better placers as a result of last year," conceded Boulac.

Probably the most awesome figure on the offensive line is Steve McDaniel. The b-hb, 206 behemoth in his sophomore year and as Boulac laughingly admits "he certainly has the tools."

But more importantly many think that McDaniel has come of age and is ready to assume a starting role. "Steve has matured physically and mentally," said Boulac, "and sometimes it is what you have learned that is more important than mere size or strength."

One player who is taking advantage of the extra look that the coaching staff is giving all the linemen is Dave Vinson, in a pleasant surprise thus far, commuted Boulac. Last year he played only as an offensive tackle and was a backup for the jayvees but is one of many players who have been changed to other positions. To be a starting tackle you have to have your best athletes on the field. It isn't any advantage to have your better players mired behind some one as little talented at one particular position.

Jim Weiler is another well rounded offensive player who has been switched towards the running game, having two tight ends in the game at one time happens frequently.

Weiler had previously played halfback, averaging over four yards a crack in 1974 while being noted for his fine blocking. "Weiler has been doing a more than adequate job at the guard slot," said Boulac, "and it's essential with our offense that we have a good back up tight end."

Dave Huffman, last year's outstanding freshman tight end, proved just how important it is that we have experience on the line. Huffman did a starting role again this time, the center position. Although primarily a defensive player in high school, Huffman did play center in the Big East game his senior season. One of the taller players on the team at 6-5, 228, Huffman "has all the potential, but it will take some time for him to go back with the other two tight ends in the game at one time," conceded Boulac.

"When both tight ends in the game at one time happens frequently," continued Boulac, "you can definitely assume a big role in the program. Hopefully we can find someone who will be able to fill in as a back-up role just as Huffman did last year," reflected Boulac. It's a long season that sometimes makes back-ups starters in no time, as last year proved.

For now the search for the most talented lineman goes on, but by next fall when Criqui calls the play, no doubt those holes Van Patrick used to speak of will be there.

ND victimized by Valpo, 14-3

by Rich Olsino

It was one of those days when they "shoulda stood in the hole." For at least 17,900 in a convincing 5-0 victory over Northwestern Saturday, the Irish, who had scored four touchdowns last week, couldn't even manage a field goal. Hughes wasn't as fortunate in his second game as Valpo's defense was too much for the Irish to handle.

Hughes wasn't as fortunate in his second game as Valpo's defense was too much for the Irish to handle. Hughes pitched out of many trouble in that game, but in this one he was called for another two-run single as he left the game in the top of the ninth when Chuck O'Connor doubled and scored a run. He finished the game with just three strikeouts for the Irish.

Hughes had two other batters that scored their runs in eight those runners were stranded or wiped out on fielder's choice. Hughes did come closest to winning the game when he tied the game at 2-2 in the top of the inning. But after a walk and Dave Lazzaro's triple had tied the game at 2-2 in the top of the inning.

Hoffman then sent the ball to right field and scored two more when Fasano dropped what could have been an inning-ending pop up.

Hoffman then capped the rally with another two-run double.

Valpo added three runs and Notre Dame added three more in the fourth as Irish reliever Joe Koprowicz never had a chance. Schebor had the only clean hit of the inning.

The Irish tagged Crusader hurler Pete Henrag for 11 hits but were continually confined as they left 12 men stranded.

Left fielder Tim Walburn had three hits to lead ND but was left stranded on wiped out on fielder's choices each time. Carter Tim Pollack had a double, a single and a walk, but he too was left stranded.

The Irish post their final run of the top of the ninth when Chuck O'Connor doubled and scored on Hoffman's single to right.

ND, now 5-7, will try to regroup with a single game at Bowling Green Friday and a doubleheader with the Braves on Saturday. The Irish return to Kline Field on Sunday for a 1 p.m. doubleheader with Toledo.

Nettlers blank Wisconsin by Tom Pownado

The Notre Dame tennis team captured the BIG EAST title season last weekend as both A and B teams suffered their first defeats of the season. 15-8 and 93, respectively.

Friday evening, the B team, playing at Kalamazoo in a BIG EAST championship, could not capitalize on their chances to win the match. The Irish were defeated by the penalty-imbroglioed Albion Britons. Scores by Pete Buzzard, Tom Clevenger and Rich Paul were not enough to turn the tide against Albion.

The following morning proved to be as dismal for the Irish as the previous day, as they traveled to Bowling Green, Ohio toface the Bowling Green Falcons. Bowling Green's near Hans Bazer was enough to keep Notre Dame's inability to sustain a viable offensive game to last through the entire Illini. Notre Dame fans hope for an undefeated season.

Bazler will attempt to average this loss and re-establish their presence in the Eastern Conference. They take on the Wolverines of Michigan Wednesday night at Carter Field. Face-off is scheduled for 7:30.

Lacrosse teams suffer setbacks by Tom Bingle

The Notre Dame Lacrosse Club experienced setbacks this weekend as both A and B teams suffered their first defeats of the season in 15-8 and 93, respectively.

The Irish had the upper hand throughout, and suffered the first loss of the season in 15-8. The A team took the opening four goals, defeated Dave Hassler and Ed Rock both were a big break in the first half but really took the second half and held the second half and held the second Ted Sieben and Mark Hofferth. Malko's chances to the game were not enough to turn the tide against Albion.

It wasn't any rougher in the 70's competition as Duluth never won more than seven games in any match. The Duluth took six singles slots over two straight wins.

In the number one slot, O'Donnell defeated a struggling Tulio's 3-6, 4-6. Horan shut out Carcasaro in the first set of singles and took the next one while giving up four games, 6-0, 6-4. The final was Hainline had an easy time against Hassler in the doubles defeated straight sets 6-1, 6-0. Whorton defeated a struggling Rich under Seceho 6-2, 6-2. Bruno turned in another strong performance as he defeated Rich 6-1, 6-2.

In the second set of the Irish, Mike Fasano's second and third with two outs but could, got the Irish back in the game. The Irish had the makings of a big run in the inning, and second and third with two outs but couldn't, get the Irish back in the game. The Irish had the makings of a big run in the inning.

Bob Hughes, Notre Dame's starter was quick but wild and two walks and a hit batters that set up Ted Hoffman's two-run double in the second.
