Bender explains SLC reorganization

by Tom Byrne
Campus Editor

In an effort to fulfill one of his principal campaign pledges, Student Body President Dave Bender will propose a major reorganization of the Student Life Council (SLC) to the Student Affairs Committee of the University Board of Trustees.

According to Bender, the objective of the change is to narrow the council's focus, enable more concentration on issues related to hall life. The two-page proposal was written after a discussion between students, faculty, and campus unrest of the late sixties, for the creation of a representative assembly. Instead, the proposal calls for the creation of a new body named the Student Life House in and around the dormitories.

In the view of Bender, the present SLC has been ineffective because of its failure to produce definite proposals concerning campus issues, such as reform of the present alcohol policy. A major advantage of a restructured council, said Bender, would be "public proposals," which could be considered by the community, instead of confined to the SLC.

If the board of trustees approves the measure, the SLC will be replaced by a new body named the Student Life Council, consisting of six rectors, four hall vice-presidents, and a representative from Student Government, the Hall Presidents Council, and Student Union. In addition, one out of every three meetings would be attended by the dean of students, the vice-president for Student Affairs, and a representative from the Faculty Senate.

The SLC was created by the executive council of the Student Life Council, and was empowered to legislate only in matters pertaining to University rules and regulations. Bender indicated that he intends for the Campus Life Council to assume a legislative role, drafting proposals on issues such as this year's laundry problem. One of the first points to be considered by the new council, according to Bender, would be the passage of a set of uniform guidelines for the operation of hall judicial boards.

The most significant structural change in the proposed bill involves the removal of five faculty members and the addition of six rectors. The proposal describes the rectors as a "logical and necessary change" for a council dealing primarily with hall life. Bender explained that the reduction of the number of faculty members to one attending each meeting would also reflect the narrowed focus he proposes.

"Faculty don't live in the halls and don't really understand hall problems," remarked Bender, adding that their unfamiliarity with hall life weakened their credibility when dealing with hall problems. He noted that faculty members might be better placed to speak at meetings of the proposed council. Academic matters, added Bender, are the domain of Academic Council.

Another major alteration stated in the proposal concerns the selection of student representatives for the council. Instead of electing one representative from each quad and one from off-campus, Bender aims to seat four hall vice-presidents on the council. Hall presidents would not be suitable to serve on the board because of their job's heavy workload. Bender described the hall vice-presidents as "actively involved in hall life," and added that they would have sufficient time to participate on the council.

Although the affairs of off-campus students would not be a concern of the Campus Life Council, Bender Commented that the SLC dealt with matters involving off-campus students. He remarked that the problems of off-campus students are most efficiently handled by the Student Government Off-Campus Commission, rather than by a council. Bender reported that rectors contacted yesterday about the proposal had expressed their support. Each SLC member will also be asked to review the proposal and submit a written evaluation to be presented to the trustees committee.

President for Student Affairs Dave Bender has not received a copy of the proposal, but did declare his support for the content until the members of the trustees committee had an opportunity to read the proposal.

Mitchell calls for end of black containment

by Patrick Cole
Special Projects Editor

The theme of the occasion was "Job, Dollars, Race, Government." Almost 300 persons from the South Bend community and other nearby cities attended the dinner held in the ACC Monogram Room. An awards ceremony was also held to honor local members of the Urban League who had given service. Also making an appearance was South Bend Mayor Peter Nemeth who delivered the greeting remarks.

It was Mitchell, however, who brought the occasion to its climax with his brief message about the true status of black America. He thanked the audience for being in or supporting the cause of the Urban League and said that only 45 blacks have served in Congress so far, and that this feat was attained by 53 years of struggle.

Mitchell forcefully attacked the idea that most blacks in America today do not have many problems. "Some people have even made it, that they receive preferential treatment and people go and join organizations like the KKK," Mitchell stated.

To prevent distortions about the true status of black society, Mitchell specifically urged the blacks in the audience to use their cognitive processes to analyze and find the truth. "If you have so many problems, what have you got to be happy about?" he asked.

"Man has the cognitive process of having awareness and making judgements," Mitchell continued.

"Some ask how can there be a containment of blacks with all the black mayors. But money was withdrawn from federal housing projects. Don't tell us how far we’ve come! There's a policy of containment of blacks right now," Mitchell further stated that a policy of containment is reflected in the low number of elected black government officials in recent years and in the statistics of income.

Congressman Mitchell is currently serving his fourth term in Congress. He received his B.A. in sociology from Morgan State in Maryland and his M.S. from the University of Maryland. Besides his activities in the Black Political Caucus, he is on the Housing Minority Enterprises and Economic Development Committee, the Congressional Budget Committee, the chairman of the Task Force on Human Resources, the Bank, Finance and Urban Affairs Committees and is chairman of that committee's Democratic Monetary Policy Subcommittee.

Mitchell further discussed the need for people to use more cognition when considering the inflation problem. Mitchell said that one of the big problems today is inflation, but some people have said that the problem can be remedied by having a high unemployment rate. "But isn't it strange that blacks have to be sacrificed," he said, indicating that blacks would get put out of a job to fulfill this goal. "He, again, urged the audience not to accept things unquestionably. "Like the death penalty," he pointed out. "From 1923 to 1965 when they had it in my state, and of the 70 people executed, 62 of them were black."

Mitchell also warned of the threat of cutting off communications with black African nations. Mitchell considered the appointment of Andrew Young, the former Georgia legislator and civil rights leader, to the post of United Nations ambassador, an achievement in the fight against the containment of blacks. But there are blacks who are "still ill-housed and ill-fed," he assured.

The blacks who hold power are the minority, he commented and "no man, woman or child attains opportunity until the minority helps the majority, the masses of people."

To cure the problems, Mitchell said a lesson must be taught to blacks. "We need to know how to survive in this society," he said. "Blacks need to learn how to strive in this economy."

In conclusion, the congressman said that the problem of the new containment will not be solved without a lot of effort on one another.

After his 20-minute speech, there was a small reception for Mitchell in the ACC Monogram Room, where he met informally with local members of the Urban League.

ND students organize seminar on environmental education

The first session of a student-organized "Environmental Educa to attend the seminar, which is sponsored by the campus chapter of LEPRG (Indiana Public Interest Research Group). The program was arranged, however, by a small group or architecture, biology and geology students whose bond is their conviction that environmental education must be a part of the high school curriculum. They believe the way to teach students is through their teaching, so they designed this five-session seminar especially for college education majors and current teachers.

Do animals have free choice? Most scientists say no, animals do what they must to survive. Animals learn to do what they must to survive. This is sometimes called instinct. Gradually technology has allowed animals to take control of their environment and survive.

1. One is the example of the free-blown blight that took over forest. The technology has allowed us to see the pattern of the blight.

2. An example of another is the use of throw them away, many materials do not break down in nature. The technology has given us the option of acting in a manner harmful to our existence as a species.

3. An example of the use of technology to our advantage is our ability to keep track of the blight. The technology has allowed us to see the pattern of the blight.

4. Another example is the use of technology to our advantage is our ability to keep track of the blight. The technology has allowed us to see the pattern of the blight.

Opinion: Changing the SLC
dave mander

There is one aspect of Notre Dame which sets it uniquely and distinctly apart from almost all other colleges and universities in this country. This one difference is the Notre Dame chapel, an institution and living and the fact that at Notre Dame is centered around the SLC. In fact, it is very different that Notre Dame is proud of and boasts of its administration. Moreover, the famous Notre Dame "spirit" is not the result of the product of our close community living and in and around the SLC. Therefore, it is important that hall life be here maintained and expanded.

If we allow a deterioration or stagnation of this life then we are in danger of losing one of the most fundamental aspects of Notre Dame, indeed that which makes this place "Notre Dame."

Hall life, like any other kind of life, changes with the times. Therefore it is essential that we have a group responsible for a high level of community living within the dormitories. The sad fact is that there already exists such a group, but for the most part it has been ineffective in dealing with this area.

During the past three months, and especially in the last few weeks, we have been hearing from the Student Life Council (SLC) to determine first, if it has been dealing with a destructive and constructive and change issues in the dormitories and, secondly, to find out if the SLC has in fact been effective.

Our findings are to be presented to the board of trustees on Thursday. We reflected after the last five years of existence, the SLC has done little, if nothing, to influence the student life at Notre Dame. As a result, the Student Life Council no longer deals with student life.

However, once having discovered that the Student Life Council has not dealt effectively and concurrently with student life, we are faced with three options. First, we can keep the SLC as it is, hoping that somehow from somewhere a spark will ignite some type of appeal and involvement in dormitory living. Second, we could abolish the body, admit that its time is finished and give it a quick and efficient burial. Either option is unacceptable, however. Who is to say that someday in the next five years to do something constructive will not emerge? This would be another position to make. More importantly, should we abandon on the SLC. The SLC is a group on campus that is primarily responsible for maintaining good community life.

We cannot promise that our SLC will solve all the problems that currently exist in dormitory living at Notre Dame. We do not feel that the restructured SLC will find a lasting solution and will provide us with all the answers, etc. What we do feel will happen however, is that a serious lack (for the first time in ages) will be put in the SLC. In addition, there will be some concrete proposals as to how to improve that life to the administration. Whether or not the administration chooses to accept and implement these ideas is anyone's guess. The important thing is that suggestions are being made and the SLC is in the best position to make them. Neither one of them holds the right answer and we would like to change that.

Our goal is to maintain strong community living and in and around the SLC. The campus Life Council will be the place to initiate strong community living and in and around the SLC. We ask for your support in achieving this goal.
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP)—Two years ago today war exploded in Lebanon, the opening act of a bloody tragedy that the country's leaders and people are trying desperately to forget.

Government censorship forbids any mention in the Beirut press of the artillery battles still sputtering along the southern border with Israel between Palestinian guerrillas and Christian militias.

From conversations with a broad range of Lebanese it appears most people would rather not know about the continuing fighting anyway. That would intrude on efforts people would rather not know way. That would intrude on efforts

The events began April 13, 1975, with a Christian ambush on a busload of Palestinian refugees. They ended, at least for the time being, when Syrian troops occupied most of the country last November.

In the meantime, about 40,000 persons were killed, most of them civilians, and the city center that once made Beirut the hub of oil-based Middle East commerce was reduced to rubble. The battles also created a chasm of hatred between Moslems and Christians, despite frequent protests from both sides that sectarianism was not behind the war.

The director of the Information Ministry, Rams Khazen, is still unable to get to his office because he is a Maronite Christian who helped with Christian war propaganda and his ministry is in Muslim territory.

A head accountant in the same ministry, George Abu Rizq, also stays in Christian territory and confers with his office by telephone from temporary headquarters Christian-held east Beirut.

"It's too bad," one of his colleagues says. "We were the only ministry split apart that way." Reminded that the Army and Defense Ministry split into Moslem and Christian forces, and that the foreign ministry at one point had competing Moslem and Christian ministers, she replied, "Oh, yes, of course, but that was during the events."

A Christian leftist party official who ran into a correspondent near the southern battle zone launched into a speech designed to prove that participation of his party alongside Moslims "tends to demonstrate that sectarianism had nothing to do with the war."

He said nothing of the Christian militias thugs who kidnapped several hundred Moslems on the outskirts of their religious and killing other Moslems on Dec. 6, 1975, the "Black Saturday." But sparked a new round of the war, one of many streets among numerous fleeing truces.

Also conveniently forgotten were the 39-week state unemployment benefits which regularly stopped cars just entering the Moslem area after a dangerous sprint across no-man's land. Dozens of Christians who had made it safely that far were shot and their bodies thrown under a nearby bridge, minus money and valuables.

Most Moslems are still afraid to go into Christian territory. The same is true for Christians keeping out of Moslem areas, but to a lesser degree.

The right wing of Lebanon's Christ leadership, particularly Camille Chamoun and his National Liberal party, are making plans for a permanent partition, even if it remains only the de facto split left by the war.

One evidence of this is the building in the Christian heartland north of Beirut of an unсанctioned $2.5 million airport, named Pierre Gemayel International Airport after the Phalange party leader who is Chamoun's main ally. The reason the Christians are building the airport is that Beirut's international airport lies in Moslem territory.

President Elias Sarkis, himself a Maronite Christian, is hailed by Lebanon's politicians as the political cement to keep the country together. But Sarkis, installed by Syria during the war, has yet to make his authority accepted without question.

The most dangerous problem facing Lebanon—the fighting in the south—is being run on decisions by Chamoun, Gemayel, guerrill leader Yasser Arafat and Syrian President Hafez Assad. Sarkis has little to say about it.

For members of Congress
Payraise procedure altered

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Carter signed a law today that ensures federal workers get a $100,000 grant he Frank Freimann Charitable Trust has offered $100,000 to St. Mary's Notre Dame College, South Bend, for the benefit of the long-term unemployed.

The new pay raise law will retain the special commission to make recommendations to the President on pay raises for Congress and other top officials and the President will still have the decision on whether to submit the recommendation to Congress.

But both the House and Senate that will make the pay raises approval by a roll call vote before it can go into effect. Under old law, the bike quickly went into effect unless either house vetoed it.

The new law is a result of the public outcry that occurred when a 25 percent pay raise for Congress, federal judges and other top officials took effect in February without a record vote by the House or Senate.

The February raise increased top congressional salaries to $57,500 a year. The increase, recommended by President Gerald Ford before he left office, took effect after the Senate tabled a motion to kill it and the House failed to vote on a similar measure.

The new law also will provide unemployment benefits for persons who have exhausted the 39 weeks of aid under regular state and extended federal state compensation laws. This will cost taxpayers $528 million this budget year ending Sept. 30 and $215 million next year. Benefits will be denied to those who are not actively seeking work or who refuse suitable work offers.

Under the law, unemployment benefits will continue Oct. 31.

US increases 'nonlethal' aid to Zaire

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) - Moroccan troops sent to help repel an invasion by Angola were digging yesterday around the mining center of Kikwit, as United States announced it was increasing aid to Zaire's embattled pro-Western government.

Government and diplomatic sources asserted the 1,500 Moroccans, who arrived in southern Shaba province over the weekend, were taking advantage of a week-long lull in fighting to consolidate supply lines.

In Washington, the Carter administration was stepping up aid to the government of President Mobutu Sese Seko, giving it a total of about $13 million in 'nonlethal aid,' including a cargo plane.

At the White house, there was no elaboration on the considerations that led to the decision. However, spokesman Ron Graham said: 'We do not consider the situation as an East-West confrontation.'

The State Department said it turned down a request for emergency military help, but 'willing' in a C130 cargo plane worth $9 million and a 'very' air including radio equipment and spare parts for aircraft and vehicles.

How carrying out Equal Rights law may affect you

Who could quarrel with the right of every individual in America to an equal chance for a job? No one we know. But when you look for a job, you should understand some things about the equal rights regulations that could affect your chances.

Most large companies are deeply involved in affirmative action programs. These are plans and actions designed to overcome discrimination. Statistics are the only evidence that counts. If a company's statistics don't measure up, the company is presumed to discriminate.

Some people think affirmative action programs discriminate against the majority of Americans. But that kind of talk doesn't solve any problems. Affirmative action is the law. And it's here.

So if you're a woman or a member of a recognized minority group, you stand a better chance than other people of equal ability. Companies are working to catch up, and that's good for you.

But when you look at a potential employer, you think you ought to discriminate a little, yourself. Ask some tough questions. Such as how a company promotes people. Or how many higher-level positions and minority members they have? Chances are there won't be too many. statistically you should demand some straightforward answers about what a company is trying to do about that.

Plain talk about EQUAL JOB RIGHTS

So far, there just aren't enough women, blacks or other minority members in some fields. That's where the real opportunities often are. But you're not likely to be hired as a chemical engineer if your major was black literature or feminist history. If you're looking for real opportunity, you should polish your talent in a discipline that is needed most by those who offer good jobs. We'll need to create 18,000,000 more jobs to take care of the young people joining the work force over the next ten years. So the competition for jobs will be fierce. Most of all, you should think about what companies that really try for the people they hire, develop and promote. Equal rights are one thing. Good jobs with tough standards and exciting futures are something else again.

Next time somebody gripes about job discrimination, you might ask: 'Have you ever thought about metalurgy?'

Notre Dame tracksters finish eleventh

Joe Piane and his Irish trackmen took the road to this weekend again for the Eastern Illinois Relays at Charleston, Illinois.

"We're expecting to do our best down at Charleston for we feel we can do rather well against some of the finer teams in the area," says Piane, whose Irish placed 11th in the Arkansas State Invitational this past weekend at Jonesboro. "The added maturity our runners have gained already this season should help us greatly at Charleston."

The Cinderellas finished strong at Jonesboro, with Perry Stow finishing sixth against Olympian Earl Bell from Arkansas State with a vault of 14-6. Ahmad Kasim's 45-2/5 effort in the triple jump for fifth-place; and Dennis Vankler Kraats' sixth-place finish in the 3000 meter steeplechase in 9:12.6. "We just need some additional help from the weight people and the athletic training staff to make it all right," admits Piane. "Sending 16 freshmen and sophomores down to Jonesboro really indicates the nucleus of our team. We will perform well," said Piane.

Following the Eastern Illinois Relays, the Irish travel to Columbus, Ohio for the April 23 Ohio State Relays.

Irish netters triumph over Cincy

by Tom Pownall

After starting the season on a somewhat disappointing note, Coach Fallen and the Notre Dame tennis team have come back with a revamped fine-up to win three out of their last four matches.

Over the weekend the Irish captured victory at home in West Virginia and at Kent State before suffering a loss at the hands of the Ohio State Buckeyes. Highlighting the weekend activity was senior captain Stanley Shelly, who was undefeated in his three singles matches while also combining with his doubles partner, freshman Carlton Harris to go unblemished through the first doubles slot.

Coming up with a strong showing in the singles competition the Irish again brought their record to the .500 mark with a 6-3 victory over the Bearcats of Cincinnati.

Starting off slow, the netters came away with one victory in the third singles spot as Shelly and Harris continued their winning streak which now stands at four. Taking three sets, the duo finally put away a tough Bearcat team winning 6-4, 6-2, 6-0.

The other doubles slots saw the Irish drop two as Cincinnati picked up two of its victories. Three sets were needed in both of the other two matches to secure the wins for the Bearcats.

Despite the come-from-behind competition Shelly continued his winning streak which now stands at four matches. After losing 7-6 in a tie-breaker in the first set, Shelly went on to win the next two sets scoring 6-3, 6-3. The win was his 14th straight singles victory which makes him the captain who leads the Irish in singles seasons.

After losing the second slot in three sets, the Irish rebounded in the mix as Harris gave the Irish its third victory of the afternoon with a two set win over his Bearcat counterpart. The score of the match was 7-6, 6-1.

In fourth singles spot Bob Koval dropped his first set before going on to win the second of his three matches to give the Bearcats another set victory for the netters. 26-7, 6-7, 6-1 was finally tallied.

Claiming the victory for Notre Dame in the fifth spot was sophomore Mark Trueblood. Losing just three games, Trueblood won 8-6, 6-2 and 6-1 in his third double.

Adding icing to the cake was Notre Dame's Tom Westphal. Playing in the sixth singles position Westphal came away with a two set victory over his opponent winning 6-2, 6-4.

The win eves the Irish record at a respectable 8-8 this season. With a more consistent coach Fallon hopes his netters can continue their winning streak and stay with the top teams as they host a triangular meet with Northern Illinois and Bowling Green.

On Friday the action begins at 3:00 p.m. at the Courthouse Tennis Center while resuming on Saturday at 9:00 a.m.
