Committee to examine disciplinary procedures

by Phil Cackley
Senior Staff Reporter

At its first meeting of the year, the Student Senate's drafting subcommittee ap­proved a motion setting up a seven-member committee to re­view rules and regulations on disciplinary procedures and the student code of conduct. The committee will be presented to the Board of Trustees at its Nov. 21 meeting.

The motion, proposed by Student Body President Dave Bender, was accepted unanimously by the coun­cil after an earlier contrary motion, put forth by Dean of Students James Roemer, had been voted down.

Roemer proposed that a six­member committee act as an advisory group to a nine­member board, which would have actually drafted the proposal to be submit­ted to the SLC.

The approved motion adds one person to Bender's proposed six­member subcommittee, a three­member subcommittee, and states the actual task of drafting the proposal will be report­ed back to the committee before the final version is presented to the Senate.

Nearly one and one­half hours of debate followed, as the 12 members present at the meeting listened to arguments by Roemer and Bender on the ques­tion and weighty varying aspects of the motions.

Members on the newly created drafting subcommittee include: Vice President for Student Affairs Bro. Just Parnesky, Fr. Dave Burrell, chair­man of the theology department, Sarah Daugherty, assistant profes­sor of English, Frances McFate, South Bend Lawyer Tom Byrne, a senior Government major, Roemer and Bender.

Serving on the drafting sub­committee are Roemer, Bender and Daugherty.

The group will review proposals from the Trustees and Administra­tion, as well as from Student Government.

The accepted motion states that after three meetings of the entire committee, the subcommittee would meet and negotiate the actual language of the final proposal.

Then the proposal will be reviewed by the entire committee and sub­mitted to the SLC. This must be done before Oct. 13, so that the council can act on the proposal before the Oct. 21 trustees meet­ing.

The chief objections to Roemer's motion were that it narrowed the group considering proposals and would address only the matters of the University level disciplinary procedures. Bender wants to consider the entire disciplinary procedure at Notre Dame, at both the University and the University level.

Roemer objected that Bender's goals would be unattainable, but that the committee should have the opportunity to make the changes in the existing code, which was adopted in 1963.

He stated that he had no objection to Bender's original six­mem­ber committee (the same mem­bers as above, excluding Daugh­terty), appointed two weeks ago, even though it included a person from 'outside the (University) community,' and that it would not draft language with that committee, he stated, making reference to his experience in labor contract negotia­tions, where he said large groups improve processes.

Bender pointed out that the SLC has the power to approve the committee as a special SLC com­mittee. There are no stipulations in the SLC charter that members of special committees must be from within the University.

He further asserted that University trustee John Schneider, who suggested the committee first at an Oct. 8 meeting, gave Bender the freedom to change the committee.

"When it comes to drafting large groups, it is a "two­shot," he said. "But he wanted a broader committee to have final approval of a recommendation to the SLC.

Bender stressed the importance of the questions being dealt with. "What disturbs me is that through­out this whole mess everybody is getting hung up on little technicalities. It's easiest and quickest solution we want, three (committee members) just to come up with something more important than that," he said.

The student government pro­posal, he explained, addressed not only technicalities and procedures in discipline, but also other important areas, such as hall and parole issues.

Pazcinsky said that the mandate from the Trustees was to prepare for a quick response for the upcoming meeting. He said he did not think in which Bender referred to be in his presentation.

Gary Luchini, North squad SLC representa­tive, complained that dollar was always revised in a "piece meal" fashion and was not the reason the new committee was being set up, as he continued to miss the point.

Bender added that Schneider had told him that he was a "good idea to make a consistent revision of the disciplinary proce­dures from the hall judicial boards on up." He added that the Senate would be able to review procedures to make sure that there were no emitting offenses from dollar. Bender, explain­ing the Student Government pro­posal. "All we did was to delegate offenses at either a hall level or a University level." Hall judicial boards would be standardized, he continued. "We are talking about processes, not rules," he said.

These comments were echoed by Roemer. "We should zero in on that," Roemer said. "But if we change it by Oct. 15," he emphasized. When asked whether anyone would be possible to revise all rules before Oct. 15. Roemer com­mented that he had not yet received a written proposal from Student Government, but that he "don't know what I'll do without a written proposal," he said.

Pazcinsky added that if Student Government was planning to make changes, they might arrive at a hall level, "I'll fight you all the way to protect our university system," he added.

Bender responded that Roemer had not yet been given a written proposal, but that Student Government is not finished re­vising the proposal. He under­scored the amount of preparation Student Government has done on this matter.

Bogle analyzes black films in films

Claiming that "Black performers always answer to the age in which they appear," Donald Bogle, former Ebony magazine staff writer and film lecturer, presented his analysis of blacks in American film last night in the Library Auditorium.

Bogle divided black movie roles into five categories: "Toms," "Coons," "Mammies," "Bucks," and "Littlees of the world," who served on the board last year, explained, "I was a gripe committee." He further stated that University trustee John Schneider, who suggested the committee first at an Oct. 8 meeting, gave Bender the freedom to change the committee.

Kennet considers Market future

Dr. Charles Rice, rm. 115 law building

Kennet has served on many councilS which have investigated many topics of concern to the European community. He was Director of the Commission in 1974 to recommend how trends in Euro-development during the next 30 years can be continuously monitored and forecast. The report of their project was published in November 1976 by the Cambridge University Press as The Futures of Europe.

After a short question and answer session, he concluded by responding that he still thinks that there are good odds taht both Britain and the Common Market will survive the next ten years without much drastic change from today.

People profiles Fr. Hesburgh

An article profiling Notre Dame President Fr. Theodore Hesburgh, appears in this week's "Bio" section of The Observer magazine. A title of the feature is "Notre Dame's most durable triple threat: president, priest, and activist."
The article, written by Linda Witt, highlights Hesburgh's clerical and international career. The People staff correspondent described the Notre Dame student body as "quiet." The women wear skirts and bras," Witt noted. "The men dress neatly and keep their hair short."

Pho-

su to sponsor free classic film showings by Don O'Sullivan

This semester students will have the opportunity to view foreign and American films classics at no charge. Student Union is sponsoring the films, which will be shown on Sunday evenings at the Engineering Auditorium.

Harold Lloyd's The Freshman, a comedy of college life and football games, will begin the season on Sat.

This double feature will be shown Oct. 2: H. G. Wells' Things to Come and Peter Watkins' The War Game. Both films depict the world after the Second World War:

Come, a British film made in 1936, covers the history of the Third Reich from 1940 to 2036. H. G. Wells wrote the screenplay to this science fiction film.

Watkins also looks into the future as he depicts the struggle of a small English town to survive after an atomic holocaust. This BFI television special was banned from airing because of its realism.

Oct. 16 - Last Chance's Theatricals of the Opera will appear.

Ophrahy, Jean Cocteau's depiction of a modern-times Orphys myth will be shown Nov. 6. In this film, a young poet falls in love with the Princess of Death and follows her into the Underworld.

Shown Nov. 13 will be The Seven Samurai, by Akira Kurosawa in which seven swamen protect a small village from a horde of bandits.

Finally, on Nov. 20, Modern Times, Charlie Chaplin's comedy of work, movement and automation, will appear.

The SCLU will meet next Thursday to consider appointments to an Interim University Judicial Board, that will be in effect until Oct. 25, the Appeals Board, the election of a permanent chairman, and a proposal for periodic review of SCLU services.

Professor Kennet discussed the British role in putting together the European Community.

Kennet and his wife, who was with him, were guests of the American Embassy.

Kennet is expected to remain in office for the next four years.

Concerning Britain

Kennet discusses Market trade

by Tony Pace
Staff Reporter

In a lecture entitled "The Future of Britain in the European Community," Lord Kennet, a noted British author and politician, expressed his belief that both Britain and her relation with the Common Market will endure for at least the next ten years. Kennet made his address last evening to a group of 60 persons on the twelfth floor of the Memorial Library.

Kennet has been a member of the House of Lords of British Parliament since 1960. Kennet began the lecture by highlighting Britain's differences with other Common Market members. Citing his recent study, he said that Britain does not naturally identify with France, Spain, Italy, Holland and Germany, the original Common Market countries. When Britain joined this group in 1972, it was because of her economic needs. He stated, "We British basically identify with the people of America, Australia, New Zealand and Canada, not those countries who belong to the Common Market. This is most likely due to the language barrier because the language barrier is the strongest."

He then pointed out the British's public's sentiment toward their place in the Market. Though Britain joined the Common Market in 1972, there was no true test of the public's sentiment until a 1974 referendum on the matter.

Lord Kennet stated, "By an almost two to one margin, the British people voted in favor of our membership in the Common Market. Though the people's feelings may have changed since, I still feel they are basically in favor of it."

He said that Britain's extreme right and extreme left, in an amnestic political union, were the only two factions which were dead against the Market. But this, he said, is still far short from the majority of the people. "However," he continued, "there is something strange about this sentiment. Normally, the prime minister's cabinet will be in agreement on all subjects, as a show of strength. On issues of the Common Market though, there is a constant split. Almost always, there will be four or five members voting against the Common Market interest."

Overall, Kennet assessed this relation as one that was good for both Europe and Britain. "Though some prices, such as food, are up in price," he said, "these prices are not as high as they would be had we remained outside of the Common Market. This can be judged simply by comparing today's non-market prices with the Common Market prices."

Kennet saw the interrelation of the futures of European countries as the main benefit of the Common Market. "The rich countries would come to the aid of the poor countries," he said. "This," he noted, "will tend to have a steady- ing effect on the whole of Europe. The rate of decline of those such as Britain would be decreased by this association."

Though the decline of England, or at least the end of its economic expansion, was hinted at by Ken­ net, he remained basically optimis­ tic about its future. He said, "I'm not sure that the people were any happier during the so-called greatness of Britain. Now, at least, the poorer people have decent medi­ cine, housing and food. We're getting poor and learning to like it. We're taking this with dignity and grace."

For the future, Kennet looks for the addition of more countries to the European Community. He said, "It will tend to have a stabilizing effect on the whole of Europe."

There was the death of a ninety-two-year-old woman on Christopher Street this morning. During a heat wave when the temperature soaring on the clock on Manufacturers' Bank on Sixth Avenue was 106 degrees. She lived on the sixth floor of a building without an elevator. I've always remembered the last call in New York in an apartment house where the elevators are running. That can be a nuisance if you're not too swift at climbing stairs.

I called on the duty public guard told me the number of the apartment.

He was waiting for the medical examiner to show up and release the body. He said that the coroner had been called in three-thirty or four o'clock it was only one-thirty now. I murmured sympathy for the household. the policeman shrugged. 'It's been chasing Son of Satan, for years.'

Upstairs in the apartment, the old lady lay on a cot where death dealt her ungraciously. Flights of angels may have been singing her to sleep but all I could see, she had simply worn out from the heat. I suspect if she had known that was the reason, she would have simply flipped back on the couch with her hands in her lap. She had an air of being interrupted, as though maybe she had dropped in for a visit. I signed her with the rituals promulgating resurrection, then sat down next to her at a simply-flopped kitchen table with her son and daughter-in-law. She shrugged.

"Do you mind if I smoke?" I said. It sounded like a courteous inquiry in the presence of a dead woman only six feet away, but had nothing else except prayer in its favor. I rolled up a joint for her in an ashtray at 2:00 o'clock in a little room. Prayer is, I think, a sign that all else has failed. There was no problem, because they wanted to smoke too, but hadn't dared to the risk of endangering the dead.

"We were in Brooklyn," the daughter-in-law said, and the son corrected her. "We're in the presence of a living saint on earth." the daughter-in-law said. "The priest brought her communion by my ministry with oils."

"I was able to talk to my mother, and I could feel the doubt forming in his slow mind. I would feel obsessed with words to him as a tranquilizer. I could have mentioned Father, Christ, Spirit: names that would have comforted him. But what did he have to do with this shabby room where the slow-witted man was trying to gather into his arms the ancient body of the woman he knew as his mother? I wasn't about to pronounce with her that she cared again. I wasn't about to explain to him and me that I was a priest."

"When I rose to go, the woman said, 'You're going to call the priest who has come,'

"I wish I had time to explain how I will take you to walk in the street." Outside the apartment, his final words were, 'Do you think an air-conditioned church will help?'"

"If she was a saint, I said, 'what does it matter?' I didn't want to make him feel guilty, but I felt he needed to be nudged into an understanding of the ways in which death is a mystery.

"Downstairs, the policeman was still waiting for the medical examiner. 'Could you bring me a bottle of beer?' I asked him.

"He grinned a smile that had traces of black. 'It could be our little secret, Father.'"

"Certainly," I said. "Like in the bible?"

"No, Father, he said, 'it wouldn't be polite to do that."

"I was sorry he said no. I wanted to do something for somebody where faith wasn't needed to be shown.'

"The fears were real, Dad. God seems so sentient to be on Christmas Street."

Art gallery shows ‘amnesty’ posters
“Artists for Amnesty,” a series of art posters created by internationally-known artists to mark “Prisoners of Conscience Year 1977,” is on exhibit at the Notre Dame Art Gallery in O’Shaughnessy Hall.

Many renowned artists have contributed their talents for the benefit of Amnesty International, the human rights group working in more than 100 countries to protect and free prisoners of conscience jailed for their race, religion, or beliefs.

Mark Hommes and Gil Loecher, local representatives of Amnesty International, have coordinated the display. Orders for the works on exhibit are now being taken through the Notre Dame Art Gallery attendant. All proceeds go to the organization.

A number of leading museums and art galleries throughout the world have participated in the “Artists for Amnesty” program, including the Stedelik in Amsterdam, the Centre Beaubourg in Paris, the Institute of Contemporary Art in London, and the Bosan Institute of Contemporary Art.

The Notre Dame Gallery has purchased a set of the works for its private collection.

Annesty International, founded in 1961 by Peter Benenson, a London attorney, has helped secure the release of more than 8,500 prisoners of conscience since its formation.

Logan needs students due to state budget cutback
by Jerry Perez

Jack Greeley, administrative assistant of Logan Center for the Retarded, said yesterday that the Center will rely even more heavily on volunteers to run its programs as a result of Monday’s announcement by the governor’s Budget Committee of a cutback of funds for Logan and similar state-run institutions.

The consequences of such a cutback will include the laying-off of 35 to 350 staff members and the cutting-down of preschool, after-school and weekend programs.

The Saturday morning ND-SMC volunteer sessions, part of the recreational program, will also suffer from the cutback of several Logan staff members.

When asked exactly how the cutback would affect the Saturday morning sessions, Greeley foresaw an even greater reliance on student participation and support.

“The volunteers have always been a tremendous strength to the center,” he said. “They are a tremendous group of people.”

Greeley explained that the Saturday General Assembly’s actual appropriation of $1.4 million of state and federal funds to Logan Center, expected to continue into next June, will be cut in half.

Logan Center serves 300 to 400 area handicapped daily. The 14 member Monday’s Program’s support, according to Greeley, would be the cutting off of services to about 30 of those people. “We’ve simply have to send them home,” explained Greeley.

Logan officials are hoping that other communities will aid them efforts to reverse the decision.

Their wish is that the General Assembly reimburse all of the funds originally allocated. “All we’re asking for is what we were promised in the beginning,” Greeley stated.

Greeley commented that South Bend is already responding to Logan’s appeal. He expressed the support of the Chamber of Commerce and many concerned parents and citizens.

Jeanne Cowboy, co-chairman for the ND-SMC Council for the Retarded, remarked that the cutback “is going to set us back years.”

According to her, other Logan sponsored volunteer activities such as basketball, bowling and classroom work are also jeopardized by the Budget Committee’s decision.

Cowboy expressed the Council’s intention to conduct a massive letter writing campaign in an effort to recover Logan’s funds. Students will be asked to write Gov. Bowen and Indiana state representatives expressing their dissatisfaction with the Governor’s move.

FCA gathering

The Notre Dame and St. Mary's chapter of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes (FCA) have scheduled a meeting for Wednesday, September 27, 1977. The meeting will be held in Room 124 of Haverford Hall at 7:30 p.m.

The FCA is a non-denominational organization which has enjoyed much success in helping athletes achieve a desire to live richer and fuller Christian lives. Mark Wark, Notre Dame's FCA director, says the chapter is no different than any other chapter, including the Mary's group. Officers are to be elected at an October meeting.

FCA is made up of Notre Dame students seeking members, and, especially, Notre Dame students who are presently enrolled and operating at Notre Dame, and those so enrolled and operating at St. Mary's campus.

Anybody who is interested in joining FCA or seeking more information about the organization is invited to attend the September 28 meeting.

Bulldozer quarterback, has completed 43 of 68 passes so far this season for 621 yards. That yardage exceeds that of the entire Notre Dame offense.

end Tim Eubank. Already this season, Arnold has caught 13 passes and Smith has latched on to 11, Eubank, a 6-7, 340-pounder who blocks, has caught four.

The Bulldozer running game has lost the loss of Scott Deeley, who is now a New York Jet. For this week's game, Young will have a "two-fallback" backfield with: "We had a backup and his backup, Mike Brown, alternating between the tailback and fullback roles. Purdue has limited his production to 225 yards in 81 carries this season. That is a paltry 2.8 yards per carry.

Purdue employs a 5-2-4 defense, led by linebackers Fred Arrington and Ken Stewart. Arrington, a 6-2, 220-pounder, leads with 33 solo tackles and ten assists. He is looking forward to tomorrow's struggle.

Do we think of Notre Dame, he said, "we think of aggressive football. We're ready for them. I think we're capable of containing them."

Motors, a 6-5, 223 sophomore, is second on the team in tackles with 18 solo and ten tackles. He is also a South Bend native. He attended Marian High School and is their all-time leading tackler. For him this game has special significance. "I'm a big fan of Notre Dame, " said Motors. "I think this is a very special game for me. I grew up wanting to play against Notre Dame. It's not a question of getting ready for this game, it's just a question of being ready for this game.

Hermann prepares for ND battle

"He gives the impression that he is a very poised young man. He is one of the requisites a young man must have to be a great leader."

Hermann, the only Indian high school player to be named first team All-state quarterback two years in a roll, said he would be happy to play for the Fighting Irish.

Georgia vs. South Carolina: The Gamecocks were downed by Georgia last year by a 30-12 mark. This year, the tale could be different. The defense of the Gamecocks will contain them. "We think of Notre Dame, " said Motors. "We've been doing that for 20 years."
