Carter speaks to college newspaper editors

by Marilyn Hogan Editor-in-Chief

President Jimmy Carter announced Friday that although the SALT talks with the Soviet Union have made "good and steady progress," he may have to meet with Soviet Premier Leonid Brezhnev to work out several differences.

In a conference with college newspaper editors, including the editor-in-chief of The Observer, differences involve "twelve highly technical issues, three or four of which are highly significant."

"My guess is that the negotiators will resolve most of the issues in Geneva and that it will probably require a direct meeting or communication between myself and Premier Brezhnev before we can reach a final agreement," he said.

Carter Administration appears to be working well, according to Walt Wurfel, deputy press secretary, and ex-night editor of the Stanford Daily.

"You give him questions which don't come from Washington reporters," Wurfel told the students, adding that Washington reporters can become isolated.

Before meeting with the President, the editors listened to and questioned Mary Berry, assistant secretary for Education, department of Health, Education, and Welfare (HEW); Dave Rubenstein, deputy assistant to the President for Domestic Affairs and Policy; Jill Schober, special assistant to the assistant secretary for public affairs, Department of State; and Mildred Cowles, assistant to the President for Public Liaison.

Secretary of Education, Eduard S. Jedy Powell could not attend the briefing because he was speaking in California at the time.

Questions and Answers

 Calling the tax credit proposal "liberated," Carter said that the proposal is very expensive and will only help affluent families. He explained that his proposal, however, is designed to aid middle-income families.

More work-study money would also be available through the President's proposal, Berry said. "The major focus is now to give money to the students," he said. In the case of private institutions, the Education Department can by-pass the institution and give money directly to the student.

Berry explained the current proposal to separate the Education Department from HEW, stating that the office of Management and Budget is looking into the possibility of dividing the departments. Berry stressed that the reason was not to centralize government, but "to provide more assistance and flexibility to both departments."

HEW now has the responsibility under the new dissection plan under existing regulation, "but we have no plans for moving the mandatory retirement age," Berry said.

The Education Department has received complaints that the cuts in expenditures would result in a cut of the workers, but "we are not concerned that the current levels of education expenditures should be cut," Berry said.

Carter termed 'success' Women's Alumnae Weekend held by Rosemary Mills Staff Reporter

Questions raised in the Report on Conduction provide the basis for discussion at the first Notre Dame Women's Alumnae Weekend held March 4th and 5th. Michele Kelly, coordinator of the weekend, termed it "a huge success," and commented that the enthusiasm expressed by both the alumnae and the students "was tremendous." The Advisory Council for Women under the direction of Assistant Provost, Sr. John Miriam Jones, has been planning the weekend all semester. The seminar and discussion held on Saturday in the Library Auditorium was the fulfillment of a five year dream, according to Sr. Jones.

Approximately 100 women listened as 13 alumnae, who graduated between the years of '74 and '76, responded candidly to such questions as "What do you think women had been either a benefit or detriment as you entered into your present occupation?"

Other questions centered upon women's experience and preparation at Notre Dame, such as how long it took to decide to become a teacher, how she helped them most in the transition into the corporate world.

Peggy Henderson, a Products of the 1976 Graduate, and Mary Gambling, the eighth woman along with 400 men on the second level. It was a real switch for a lot of women there," she noted, "but it was just an extension for me.

Ellen Syburg, assistant director of the Office of Alumni Relations, Lake Forest College, stated that the biggest help was having so many male friends. "I have to deal with men now, and having had so many male friends at Notre Dame, I can relate to them more easily."

A community organizer in Covington, Kentucky, Betty Dwyer found that the predominately male background of Notre Dame gave her problems. "Sometimes women don't understand that I have no interest in their husbands other than being a friend," Dwyer stated. "At first she was hurt and confused by this attitude, but now just tries to put herself in that situation.

According to Jones, the point of this particular question was to teach the administration at Notre Dame what they could do to better prepare women for the "real world," or if they were already doing an adequate job. After the session, Jones noted she was glad it had taken five years for the program to materialize. "These women have matured enough to be able to share some of their wisdom and beauty with us."

After some discussion on business experiences and the question of finding jobs, the talk turned to more personal matters such as marriage and the family. This portion of the afternoon was aimed at helping the students to realize how decisions were reached.

Both the students and the alumnae showed great interest in listening to one another. Topics centered around marriage and if a person was ready to marry, if they wanted children, and how to balance these with other aspects of a career. Of the 13 alumnae, four are married and one is engaged to be married soon. None of the other four have children.

Basically, the women agreed that marriage is a decision to be made by every individual. They said there is no set standard for deciding when one is ready to be married, that "you have to decide for yourself if you are ready."

Other factors the alumnae mentioned were the man's willingness to accept the woman's fulfillment of her career objectives, and the woman's decision as to how much she wanted to pursue her goals. The emphasis was placed on compromise, between the husband and wife.

Martha Vazquez Mathew, a third year student at Notre Dame, is married to another law student. "You don't have time to be a typical married woman," she stated. Mathew said that in job interviews she had to convince people that after marriage she did intend to practice. "Even though questions about children are illegal in interviews," she warned. "They do get asked."

Henderson was impressed by the turnout and the success of the afternoon, calling it "the best thing she ever saw."

Both Kelly and Jones found it a more personal and relaxed atmosphere of the discussion than in a large group of people, and were pleased with being so willing to share their experiences.

John Miriam Jones was the chairman of the Advisory Council for Women, also attending. Jones finds that there was a real connection between the women in the audience and the alumnae. "I was pleased. I had counted on there being no "superficial" questions. I was pleased with the answers, making it a "valuable educational experience.""

Miners reject contract Carter to take action

WASHINGTON (AP) - Striking miners voted overwhelmingly against a proposed contract yesterday and President Carter made plans to step in swiftly to try to force miners back to work in the 90-day-old strike.

Sources said the president was likely to invoke the striking work provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act today, setting in motion a sequence of events that could lead to a back-to-work court order within a few days.

White House Press Secretary Jody Powell told reporters: "It's clear from the trend in the voting that the president will have to act no later than tomorrow. It will be the primary topic of the Cabinet meeting tomorrow to be followed by a bipartisan meeting of the congressional leadership."

With 487 of the United Mine Workers' (UMW) 794 locals or about 60 percent reporting, there were 44,666 votes against the contract and 19,885 in favor of it. "It was negotiated by the administration officials at the White House when he returned from a weekend stay at the state capital," an administration official said.

"The result of the 14-year negotiations was defeated by close to a two-to-three vote. Fifty more amendments have been introduced, but not yet voted upon."

Carter would invoke the Taft-Hartley Act tonight, appointing a three-member board of inquiry required under the law to make a report.

It was learned that its members were likely to be Carl Warns, a law professor at the University of Louisville, Eva Robins, a labor arbitrator from New York, and Jack Gentry, a Washington lawyer.

Officials said the administration probably would be ready to go to court within a few days to seek a back-to-work order against the miners.

The administration earlier had been considering asking Congress for special legislation to authorize: a federal seizure of the miners or to impose binding arbitration in the case.

The Taft-Hartley Act would permit the federal government to step in more swiftly, however. One official estimated that the government could be seeking an order by Wednesday.

It is widely believed that thousands of miners would ignore such an order, complicating efforts to impose at least a temporary end to the strike. Miners have ignored such court injunctions in the past.

Wyrough commented that he was not surprised at the opposition that the treaties would have among some U.S. Congressmen. "We have appreciated from the beginning that the treaties would have to be acceptable not only to Panama, but also to at least two-thirds of those considering them in the Senate, and we believed that they would be," he stated.

Wyrough noted that "opponents of the treaties are pursuing the stategy of killing them with amend­ments." The danger here, he said, is the introduction of a "killer amendment" -- an amendment so attractive that it would be difficult not to vote for, that would change the treaties so as to make them unacceptable to Panama.

Commenting that he did not think it would be to the U.S. advantage to return to the negoti­ating table, Wyrough expressed the hope that the treaties will not have to be amended.

"What we have achieved through almost 14 years of negotia­tions is to strike a balance, he stated. "Neither side got all that it wanted."

Grindstone School Park seeks summer applicants

The Grindstone School for Peace Research, Education and Action is now accepting applications for their third annual summer school program.

Thursday and Friday evening at 6 p.m. in the Hayes-Healy Auditorium.

The first lecture, "The Primordial Images," will deal with the Pythagorean and Platonic tradition of cosmology. "Memory on Past and Future," the second, will focus on recovery systems and the image of the theater, and the third, "The Transformatory Power," will deal with the literary imagination and the figure of Circe.

The faculty member received her footnotes from Cambridge University. The author of three novels and three volumes of poetry, she has also published numerous works of criticism, including "The Structure of Poetry," 1951; "The Orphic Voice, Poetry and Natural History," 1960, and "The Human Metaphor," 1964.

COMMERCIAL

WASHINGTON (AP) - Two liberal economists, urging local strategies for full employment joined Commerce Secretary James B. V. Robinson yesterday in calling for efforts to develop "economic self-sufficiency" in the nation's troubled cities.

"It is solution to the problems of cities with high concentrations of poor to hand out bus tickets and hope for the best," Kreps told the National League of Cities. Instead, she argued, "let's bring jobs to the unemployed."

The secretary said the business environment is improving in many cities. And she stressed job-creation programs that would stimulate private investment.

Noting that five of six jobs are in the private sector, she said, "better economic opportunities for the urban poor will never emerge unless the number of private jobs is growing. Government programs are necessary to ease the pain, but they can't cure the problem."

She said the goal of federal urban programs is "to help communities achieve, ultimately, economic self-sufficiency.

Several Commerce Department proposals, likely to be part of the president's upcoming urban policy, are designed to help. These include a $1 billion public works program to pay for labor-intensive projects geared to local public needs.

In their speeches to 1,700 visiting city officials, economists Gary A. Alperovitz and Norton Long urged federal aid to help cities develop job opportunities.

Alperovitz, an economist who heads the Exploratory Project for Economic Alternatives, told the audience, "I suggest we apply the Humphrey-Hawkins goal of four percent unemployment by 1983 to specific towns and cities of the nation."

While endorsing the national goals of the Humphrey-Hawkins bill, he added, "The thing is we live locally. The fatal illusmus test is where local communities must be stabilized.

Alperovitz is working on a federal proposal to help the sagging economy of Youngstown, Ohio, a city that is losing thousands of steel industry jobs. He has developed a plan that could involve community ownership of a steel firm.

Long, a University of Missouri economist working at the Woodrow Wilson International Center in Washington, told the city officials, "I couldn't agree more with the view that we need local full employment policies."

"Everything you do in the cities is easier if you have an effective full employment policy," he said.

Long lambasted the notion of "national economic policies with­ out knowing what the local impact will be."

Major undecided? SMC holds program

Saint Mary's freshmen and soph­ omores who are undecided about their majors will have an opportu­ nity to speak with representatives of the different departments to­ night from 6 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. in the Regina Auditorium. The informal program entitled "A Major Decision" is sponsored by the Student Academic Council and the Office of Freshmen. Refresh­ ments will be served.

Other members of the council derived satisfaction from the outcome. Theresa Fair, representative of Badin Hall, stated, "Women at Notre Dame need a role model and people who took the steps we are taking now are really beneficial." Sunday brunch allowed the students and alumnae to continue their discussion in a more informal atmosphere. About 85 students gathered in the faculty dining room at South Dining Hall to talk with the alumnae.

At the close of the weekend, Kelly stated, "I think the weekend has been a huge success and a valuable experience for both the students and the alumnae. Hopefully, the weekend will become an annual event with more people benefiting from it."

Canal solutions wants. But to ament the problems we've been trying to avoid.

American objectives to the treaties stem fundamentally from a psychological problem, according to Wyrough. "Not of pride is involved," he said.

Wyrough pointed out that most opposition to the treaties comes from older Americans, and that "most young people wonder what the fuss is all about."

He commented that Ronald Reagan's statement "We bought it, we built it, we paid for it. It's our company" represents the sentiments of many Americans. "Somehow the treaties seem to go against the American sense of property value," he remarked.

However, the canal will be most secure if the host country is happy with the conditions under which the canal is operated, he stated, adding that the treatment in the Canal Zone would "create doubt in the minds of the 12 to 13 thousand users of the canal, possibly causing them to look for alternative shipping routes."

"We think it would be useful for the Senate to end the debate and approve the treaties as soon as possible," he concluded.

In a 25-minute question and answer period following the lecture, Wyrough fielded questions about the cost of the treaties for U.S. taxpayers, military rights of the U.S. in the Canal Zone and the attitude of Panamanians toward the treaties.

Quotations encompass a wider range of interests than any of the other candidates’ do. The McKenna-Roohan ticket have been accused of being off-campus students, development of leadership workshops, and furthering the ideals of coeducation. In addition, our platform promotes "A Good Student Government Requires A Student Government by Students for Students". Therefore, The University of Notre Dame; hereby, the candidates organization.

Our experiences in hall and campus government show that we are hard workers. Mike Fisher and I, as members of the Student Government, have been continually active in Student Government and the University. We are a member of the Student Committee on the Groundskeepers’ Rights Coalition, the ad-hoc Faculty Senate Committee on Faculty-Student Relations, and the Neighborhoods Organization. We also have worked on the Delta La晚期 and have fought to amend the new Student Government Constitution.

Our platform, encompassing the broadest range of issues of the three tickets, shows that our ideas are original and our propositions unique. Of the sixteen points in our platform, the following eleven are unique to the Blanco-Ewing ticket.

1. We promote the development of leadership workshops and activities, including a “sit-up or shut-up” challenge to a sit-up marathon, in order to strengthen the student’s capacity to handle the problems of leadership. We feel our team is first in the nation. Even our neighbors, Alabama fell 21-18.

2. The University of Notre Dame needs a new activities complex to provide for a direct line of communication between students and University administrators. We are working with the Bureau of Public Relations to obtain the necessary funding and facilities. We also plan to provide a social space for residence halls and to promote campus-wide activities. We will promote awareness in world social problems with the Center for Environmental Learning to organize workshops and seminars. We feel our team is first in the nation and Barna number two. But.

3. The Linda and the “even the score” with anyone. We feel our team is first in the nation and Barna number two. But.

4. We have been asked to post a platform that promises only what we can deliver. We have not been asked to post a platform that promises only what we can deliver. We have also come to the realization that our ideas are original and our propositions unique.

5. We see the present situation, the HPC is many times the size of any other student group. We feel our team is first in the nation and Barna number two. But.

In The Observer’s words, “We feel that McKenna-Roohan’s proposals in all areas lead indicate they can implement successful programs.” However, the wide range of proposals brought forth by the McKenna-Roohan ticket are well-defined, well-researched, and well within the capabilities of a student body president and vice-president whose dedication, intensity, and experience will result in the development of a Student Government that is attentive to the needs of the individual.

The following groups have endorsed the McKenna-Roohan ticket by majority votes of their memberships:

Howard Hall Council
Officer of Sigma Alpha, the honor student group
Junior Advisory Council
Officers of the ND Ski Team
Officers of the ND Rugby Football Club

(2) 1973 Notre Dame slipped past Alabama 24-21.
(3) 1975 Notre Dame edged Bama 13-11.
(4) 1976 Alabama won 11-8 during the regular season; how­ever, Notre Dame was awarding the national championship.

The Candidates’ Say:

Blanco - Ewing

McKenna - Roohan

Schlageter - Rizzo

Though you are free to choose, we believe that our platform, more so than any other, specifies the means by which Notre Dame students will be able to express their will. It would be wrong, however, to assume that the entire range of our ticket’s plans and ideas have been represented on the single type-written page we are forced to present for the campaign form. At the risk of establishing a somewhat less ambitious, less radical platform, the Schlageter-Rizzo ticket has outlined only those proposals for which it has concrete methods of implementation.

As we have stressed throughout our campaign, the goal of the Schlageter-Rizzo ticket is an increased student participation in Student Government. It is our belief that SG should go directly to the students; it should seek out and involve student response. Consequently, we believe in the necessity of monthly forums held in alternate north south quad Goals. By holding each session in accessible location and organizing each according to a specific theme (e.g., the “Stu" should not sit, it should be well-attended and informative. The opportunity for students to question such forums speakers or director of security or the dean of students might allow for the possibility of change as well as a mutual understanding between students and administration. In further effort to increase student input, our administration would encourage students to call us at any time and read our personal reply within 48 hours.

To solicit input from the studentable number of students living throughout the South Bend area, we propose establishing a Student Government post office at the various locations from Campus View, Notre Dame Apartments, Turtle Creek and Northside Neighborhood Organization. We will hold a monthly cooperation with the Northend Neighborhood Organization. In addition, we intend to appoint at least one off-campus student to our proposed Security Advisory Board.

Through such measures as monthly forums and the Security Advisory Board, the Schlageter-Rizzo platform provides for a direct line of communication between students and University administrators. We are working with the Bureau of Public Relations to obtain the necessary funding and facilities.

We feel our team is first in the nation and Barna number two. But.

We also have confronted the issues with which all the candidates in this election are concerned. We will provide more social space in residence halls and to promote campus-wide activities. We will promote awareness in world social problems with the CCE and the Center for Environmental Learning to organize workshops and seminars. We feel our team is first in the nation and Barna number two. But.

The following groups have endorsed the Schlageter-Rizzo ticket by majority votes of their memberships:

Monsignor Ellis to receive award

The University of Notre Dame announced last Friday that Monsignor John Tracy Ellis, the dean of historians of American Catholicism, will receive the University's Lactare Medal for 1979.

Fr. Theodore M. Hesburgh commented, "For almost a century, the Lactare Medal has been given to those American Catholics who have contributed outstanding contributions to the life of our nation. We honor today an elder statesman of American Catholicism, an historian who has spent his life chronicling the achievements of many who preceded him in this distinction, a teacher, scholar and author who has exemplified the best in the intellectual tradition of the church."

Msgr. Ellis, currently teaching on a post-retirement appointment at the Catholic University of America in Washington, D.C., in only the second cleric to receive the Lactare Medal. It was not until 1967 that the Lactare ceremony for the traditionally lay honor was opened to clergy and religious, and Fr. John A. O'Brien, a well-known author, received it in 1973.

The teaching career of the 72-year-old church historian began in 1946, and after two years at the College of St. Mary, Winona, Minn., Msgr. Ellis joined the faculty of Catholic University, where he has had a major influence in three decades of graduate students. He also taught at the National University of Notre Dame and Brown University in the country, and the Gregorian University in Rome.

Msgr. Ellis has also been recognized widely for his research scholarship. His most esteemed work is probably his two-volume "The Life of James Cardinal Gibbons, Archbishop of Baltimore," published in 1952 and a basic work for anyone studying late 19th or early 20th-century Catholics. His Walgreen lectures at the University of Chicago published by that University's press in 1956 as "American "American," and a Guide to American Catholic Bureaus," published in 1959, is the standard work on the topic.

His landmark 1935 essay, "American Catholics and the Intellectual Life," is credited with spurring Catholic colleges and seminaries across the country to higher educational standards.

If you're a junior or a senior majoring in math, physics or engineering, the Navy has a program you should know about.

It's called the Nuclear Propulsion Officer Candidate-Collegiate Program (NUPOC-C for short) and if you qualify, you can earn as much as $650 a month right through your senior year. Then after 16 weeks of Officer Candidate School, you'll receive an additional year of advanced technical education. This would cost you thousands in a civilian school, but in the Navy, we pay you. And at the end of the year of training, you'll receive a $3,000 cash bonus.

It isn't easy. There are fewer than 400 openings and only one of every six applicants will be selected. But if you make it, you'll have qualified for an elite engineering training program. With unequalled hands-on responsibility, a $24,000 salary in four years, and gilt-edged qualifications for jobs in private industry should you decide to leave the Navy later. (But we don't think you'll want to.)

Crossword puzzlers gather

STAMFORD CONN AP What would you call an expert bookie when he's wrong The Wizard of Odds you probably share a passion with his racing followers gathered here over the weekend to solve crossword puzzles.

For two days of pencil-bending competition against the clock, the major event was the New England solitaire tournament.

In the final, a full-blank square had been filled in, the female constituent. In the solitaire tournaments by about 3 to 2, had scored a clean sweep.

Dr. Stone Quenstrom of Quincy, N.Y., captured the first prize of $125.

The competition consisted of four puzzles Saturday afternoon and another yesterday. The contestants seated at partitioned tables in a hotel meeting room. Over them loomed a large clock borrowed from a local high school's swimming pool.

They worked in almost oppressive silence, filling the room with cigarette smoke.

Occasionally the soft voice of the chief referee, puzzle expert Will Shortz of the New York Times, would sound the withdrawal with admonishments such as "Five minutes to go.

Aptitudes and middle days such as "to gather salary intelligence" - 10 across in the second puzzle turned out to be "Nose Through the Fay," a clue at an Aepyprym word, "Thousands of Casts." of course.

Yesterday morning's puzzle had a setup leading through a that came out this way: "When a studio head in Belair was told by a vamp to take a seat in the office, he speedily gave her the dandy, he quickly told her the whole story.

When they received their blank forms at the start of the hour, there was a short message at the top: "A clever five line verse waits here. The. You had time to save it."

The Stamford Marriott Hotel, which sponsored the event, said it had time to savor the contest's success with about 50 American word crossworkers at least occasionally.

"It's great," said the youngest entrant, 15-year-old Mike Miller of New York City, a puzzle-quoting sort, who teaches a course in the subject at New York's New School.

"I mean, we get the chance to get together, and there're so many of us."

Ethiopia claims Ogaden victory; Somalis say Soviet troops used

[AP] Ethiopia claimed yesterday its forces recaptured the strategic town of Jijiga from Soviet-backed rebels in the embattled Ogaden desert. The Somali government denied that Soviet troops had joined Cuban units in the push.

In Washington, Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, who believed the Soviet-Cuban intervention was a move by Moscow to test the will of the United States, said it was time for Carter to "draw the line." and make it clear that such actions are not acceptable.

West Lafayette IN 47906

The rebels captured most of the city and base 40 miles west of Jijiga.

"Fifteen thousand Cubans, Russians and other forces are reportedly involved in the fighting, using Soviet-supplied long-range artillery pieces and missiles. Soviet T-55 and T-62 tanks, MIG-21 and MIG-23 aircraft and other sophisticated armaments. The Ethiopian role is limited to auxiliary forces and camp followers because the Soviets have not had time to train the Ethiopians to use these weapons," the Somali ambassador said.

Both the Ethiopian and Somali reports appeared to indicate a renewed Soviet-Cuban-Ottoman counteroffensive to reclaim the Ogaden region of southeastern Ethiopia from the rebels, ethical officials who want to annex it to Sudan.

The rebels captured most of the Ogaden, including Jijiga, in a drive that started last summer. Most Western observers believe Somalia has Soviet troops on the ground to help the rebel WSLF. Somalia denies having such troops, while acknowledging a willingness to do so if necessary.

Bengal opening sees few upsets

David O'Keefe
Sports Writer

Long months of training and finetuning finally came to fruition Sunday afternoon for the participants in the 49th Annual Bengal Bouts. The first round saw no knockouts and few upsets, but plenty of action nonetheless.

J.P. Holbrook won the year's first fight, scoring a unanimous decision over Mike Rowe in the 132-pound weight class. Doug Bossart, runner-up last year in the 132-pound division, had little trouble dispatching Jaime Sheiret in the same division.

In the 132-pound quarterfinals, all four fights ended in unanimous decisions. Freshman Bob Rivera showed fine style in his victory over veteran Dave Tezza, gliding in and away from Tezza and scoring almost at will.

Last year's winner, Brian Roretz used his reach advantage to win a unanimous decision over B.J. McCaffrey. Pat O'Connell, a Bouts champ two years ago, took care of Dave McNichol in a thorough drubbing of Bill Roe. The third round saw little of his championship form, coming up with a couple of headlocks and footlocks to keep Roe off balance.

Bill Talbot, John Stephens, Walt Strasser and Paul DeCelles notched identical 15-4 records in the 135-pound class, all by unanimous decisions. Paul DeCelles was the only fighter to his opponent, sophomore Joe Miller, and maintained his final decision advantage. Stephens scored a knockdown after a furious first round to earn the decision.

"Flyy" Stephens scored a knockdown after a furious first round to earn the decision.

B.J. Lavins, the year's three-time champion, was runner-up last year in the WCHA, which qualifies them for the playoffs. The Irish will travel to Maryland on March 16. In addition, Head Coach Ray Sepeta was named Midwest Coach of the Year.

The Irish battled back and when Giddings was called for a technical foul, the game was a fierce struggle.

Dame took their first win at the 112-2 mark of the period on a shot from the left side by Bill Laineau, making the score, 13-12. But, the Flyers would not be shut down. Daytona came back strong, and when Jim Paxson hit Fred Giddings with an excellent pass, the senior forward responded with a crowd-pleasing slam dunk, giving the Flyers a commanding 27-21 advantage.

In the second round, Daytona battled back and when Giddings was called for goaltending off a Tracy Jackson shot, Notre Dame had notched the score at 33. But, in the final two and one half minutes, Dayton added three free throws to take a 36-33 lead into the locker room.

In the opening period of play, the Irish shot 57 percent from the field, while the Flyers hit 18-38 off the field. Kelly Tripucka led Notre Dame with ten points followed by Rich Banning with seven and Jackson with six.

Giddings paced the Flyers with 15 points in the first 20 minutes. Paxson added nine and each added ten.

The Flyers kept their offense going after intermission, stretching their lead to as much as eight points in the final minutes. With only 10:30 left in the contest, Paxson hit on a back door and also drew a foul. Via the three-point play, Jackson, Notre Dame led for the first time in the second half.

Then, with 6:21 remaining, Tripucka hit from beyond the range to give Notre Dame their largest lead of the game, 55-50. Even though the Irish appeared to have the momentum, Dayton would not fold.

The Flyers, who finished the season 9-7 overall, over the Irish would secure them an NCAA berth.

In the second round, Notre Dame shot 30 percent from the field, lowering their day's percentage to 41. Meanwhile, the Flyers hit 39 percent in the second 20 minutes, 45 percent for the game.

Tripucka led Notre Dame with his 22 point performance, while Banning and Paxson were the freshest forward with ten markers.

Jackson added nine points and Dave Batton chipped in six.

Godleds all scorers with 23 points and teammate Paxson contributed 22. Zimmerman finished with 17.

"Emotionally, this game has got to be the end of the road," Digger Phelps commented. "We'll take this defeat to the NCAA playoff big time with a high state of motivation."

The final confrontation between the two schools was in the 1971 tournament. The Cougars tripped the Irish again, 119-106 in the regional consolation game.

Well, it's been seven years since these two schools met. In the past couple of years, the South Conference has been making its name for themselves in basketball. This opening round of the tournament the Irish will certainly be a continuation of a competitive series.

Irish to clash with Cougars in opening round of NCAA by Paul Stevenson Sports Editor

The speculation is over. The Fighting Irish basketball team has received and accepted an invitation to play in the NCAA tournament.

The bid, which was officially announced about 3 p.m. yesterday, placed Notre Dame in the Midwest Regional against the University of Houston in Tulsa, Oklahoma. That battle will be played on Sunday, March 18.

The Cougars, who finished the season with a 25-7 ledger, are the sixth highest scoring team in the country, averaging 91 points per game. Houston also ranks in the top ten in average scoring margin of victory.

The Cougars have scored 100 or more points in eight of their contests this season. In addition, the highest point total for Houston this year was 137 matches.

Four of Houston's losses came by one point. The Irish and the Cougars share only one common opponent, Baylor. While Notre Dame defeated the Bears, 96-57, in the second game of the season at the ACC, Houston lost to Baylor by one. However, Vince Johnson, Baylor's star guard who ranks among the top 10 scorers in the country, did not perform against the Irish. But, that same backcourt specialist did compete against Houston.

The Cougars have defeated some highly regarded teams throughout the 1977-1978 campaign, including Arkansas twice and Texas once.

This invitation marks the fourth straight year in which the Irish have been asked to the NCAA's. Notre Dame's 19-6 ledger has definitely earned them this goal.

Four of six Notre Dame losses came to NCAA tournament participants, Indiana, Kentucky, San Francisco and DePaul will all be attending this post-season competition.

The other two Irish defeats came to the hands of South Carolina and Dayton. Both the Gamecocks and the Flyers were extended invitations to participate in the NIT yesterday.

The Irish have met the Cougars on five previous occasions. Notre Dame holds a 2-3 record with Houston. The Saint Mary's Cougars began the rivalry with a 72-68 victory over the Irish in 1964.

The Irish defeated the Cougars in 1968, 1969 and 1971. In the final confrontation between the two schools was in the 1971 tournament. The Cougars tripped the Irish again, 119-106 in the regional consolation game.
