Somoza fights to save nation from invasion

MANagua, Nicaragua (AP) - President Anastasio Somoza used troops, tanks and warplanes to quell the latest and bloodiest uprising against his rule, but the fight to oust him appears far from over.

'This is only the beginning. I'm leaving for Costa Rica just as fast as I can,' said one rebellion resident of Esteli, a city whose heart was pounded to dust during a week-long assault by the national Sandinista guerrillas.

Somoza said he unleashed his military forces on Esteli and three other major cities to save the nation from communism, which he claims was in at least 10,000 leaving for Costa Rica just as fast as they were in rebel hands found the battle about two years ago.

There are still Marxists involved, but there is no doubt they can no longer control the movement,' said a foreign diplomat who agreed to give his views on the condition he not be identified. The Sandinista movement has been flooded with people from all walks of life who support the guerrillas in their attack on the hold Somoza and his family has had on this nation for 40 years. Somoza has kept the guard loyal through liberal fringe benefits, housing, medical care, and offering officers incentives that include lucrative business deals.

Businessmen accuse Somoza of being insatiably greedy, of manipulating the economy and of fostering a communist opposition merely by staying in office.

Journalists, seeking to balance reports on Somoza, were hard-pressed in recent weeks to find people on the street who had anything good to say about him. Many Nicaraguans say the United States is to blame for the situation and believe Washington still supports Somoza.

The U.S. Marines put Somoza's father, Anastasio Sr., in power in the 1930s after two decades of American intervention in Nicaragua affairs.

The subtitle of current American pressure on Somoza to improve his human rights record has been lost on most Nicaraguans. The United States has been reluctant to denounce Somoza publicly, saying that removing relations would remove what little leverage Washington has in the matter.

Vance completes Mideast tour

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) - Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance completed his five-day Middle East tour yesterday by meeting with Syrian President Hafez Assad and President Anwar Sadat in Egypt, gaining the Arab support he sought for the Camp David peace accord.

Vance's five-hour meeting with Assad had been "frank and exhaustive." He said he pressed with Assad that dialogue between Syria and the United States should continue because with the shared hope of accomplishing a just peace in the area.

Speaking privately, U.S. officials said Vance had hoped only to persuade Assad that his opposition to the Camp David agreements so often with government might find it easier to accept them. But senior Syrian sources said Assad told Vance it would be impossible for Syria to change its position.

The meeting originally had been set for Saturday, but was put off because a meeting of Assad with other Arab leaders would have made it impossible for Syria to change its position.

The meeting yesterday had been set for Saturday but was postponed because of the meeting of Assad with other Arab leaders, which were to include President Sadat of Egypt and President Assad of Syria.

Vance considered cancelling the trip but decided to come here rather than risk offending the Syrian leader, but the council has also been a delight to work with these five years," Jones commented.

Some of the past projects of the WAC have included an Alumni Weekend and a speaker series.

For the Alumni Weekend, women graduates of Notre Dame were invited back to discuss with the undergraduate women such problems as the conflicting demands of motherhood and career. The alumni were asked to give their insights and feelings about how to prepare for the modern roles of women today. Jones stated.

Jones added that the co-education of Notre Dame has gone slowly, but positively.

"The first years were really hard, because the women were made objects of curiosity by the national news media, but now the problems of the women are very similar to the men,' Jones explained.

WAC holds initial meeting; discusses new dormitory

by Don Schaud

Notre Dame's Women's Advisory Council (WAC) had its opening meeting of the year yesterday evening at the home of Associate Dean Sr. John Miriam Jones.

The WAC was set up five years ago to establish a liaison between the women of Notre Dame and Jones, coordinator of co-education at the University. The council has 14 members, consisting of two representatives from each dorm and two representatives from off-campus students.

The opening meeting served to acquaint the Council's six new members with the functions and procedures of the WAC. This year's co-chairs of the Council are Michelle Kelly, from Farley and Mary McCarthy, from Walt.

One of the major topics of discussion at the meeting was the women's dorm and the expansion of student social space. According to Jones, the new dorm, which was approved by the Board of Trustees last spring, would include a new student center for social activity.

Members of the Advisory Council suggested that the center include multipurpose rooms that could be used for "oversized television, dances, parties, and a snack bar," Jones stated.

Another problem discussed at yesterday's meeting was the lack of women faculty at the University. Jones noted that in recent years the number of women faculty has doubled, but she added that progress is slow because hiring is left up to individual departments, and sometimes the number of qualified women is small.

Another issue raised at the meeting was that of the Homecoming King and Queen election.

Jones emphasized that the majority of the dorm members feel this aspect of Homecoming was immatute and ''high-schoolish.

Jones stated that as the number of women has grown at Notre Dame, it has become increasingly difficult for her to maintain personal relationships with all the women, and this made the Advisory Council necessary.

"The Council is an extension of my eyes and ears, and it keeps me aware of the progress of co-education at Notre Dame. It has been really valuable for me in finding out where the students stand, but the Council has also been a delight to work with these five years," Jones commented.

New York’s striking pressmen negotiate in Washington, DC

NEW YORK (AP) - Negotiators aimed at ending a pressmen’s strike that has closed New York’s three major newspapers for 46 days move to Washington today.

Kenneth E. Moffett, a federal mediator, requested that the talks be moved and the publishers, after first rejecting the idea, agreed yesterday. Jonathan Thompson, a spokesman for the Daily News said the publishers were ready to engage in meaningful negotiations.

THEO DO W. KOEHL, advisor to the 800-member Newspaper Guild union idled by the strike called by 1500 pressmen, tried to talk to publishers on two sides yesterday to reach an accord that would get the papers back in print. Times, Daily News, and New York Post went on strike.

In a statement issued from his summer home in East Hampton, N.Y., Koehl said that the Allied Printing Trades Council, representing nine unions idled by the pressmen’s strike, had hired him to make a report on whether the publishers or the pressmen were to blame for the lack of progress in negotiations.

Koehl said yesterday he cannot delay his report until the strategy of either side. "I must therefore give an immediate report," he said.

The presses struck Aug. 9, 46 days after most contracts expired here March 30. Following a general charge that strike prices by the publishers, the changes were aimed at preserving "featherbedding" that the publishers said were destroying their ability to compete with suburban papers.

Psychology Club to hold meeting

The Notre Dame Psychology Club, open to all psychology majors, will hold its first meeting of the year tomorrow at 7 p.m. in room 119 of Haggar Hall.

Activities for the year will be discussed. Numerous career change job talks will be sought for club officers as well as another undergraduate representative to the psychology department.

All interested psychology majors are invited to attend. For further information, call Sheila Triplett at 6794.

Costa Rica calls on civil guard

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) - Costa Rica, the only Latin American country without a standing army, had to call on its civil guard, whose main weapons are World War 1 vintage rifles, to protect its borders last week as hostilities in neighboring Nicaragua raged close by.

The civil guard, which at most can muster a full strength of about 7500 men, is better prepared to direct traffic in this nation of two million than to fight a war.

The civil guard handles police functions in Costa Rica’s cities and is barely called upon for military duty.

Ramon Umana, director-general of the civil guard, said the force has 3000 man-personnel, plus a 3000-man rural assistance guard that helps out in the countryside.

He estimated that if all security personnel, public order police and soldiers were called out, in this country’s airspace in pursuit of Nicaraguan rebels, Guatemala and Panama at the same time sent not only military aircraft but also temporarily as a show of support for Costa Rica and a warning to Nicaragua.

Brzezinski urges leaders to work for lasting peace

WASHINGTON - (AP) - Zbigniev Brzezinski, national security advisor to President Carter, said on Sunday "no one would object" if the Soviet Union took part in the Mideast peace negotiations and urged leaders of moderate Arab countries to work toward peace "in their own best interest."

"We certainly don’t exclude from the peace process any concerned parties," he said.

Brzezinski spoke to ABC’s "Issues and Answers" tele- vision program. The Carter admin- istration hoped the Arabs would take part in peace talks "at as early a date as possible, if that will help bring the peace process closer to the goal," he said.

He declined to say if talks would continue if other Arab leaders refused to take part in peace efforts.

Kissing talk on Mideast

WASHINGTON - Former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said yesterday he is optimistic about Jordan and possibly Syria will join in Mideast peace negotiations, despite their public denunciations of the Camp David Accords. Upon questioning by reporters yesterday, Kissinger said he interprets criticism of the pact by Arab leaders as meant largely to build support among their people and other Arab leaders, not indicative of the final outcome. He also said he expects Israel "very painstakingly" to make concessions on settlements that might stand in the way of a final peace agreement.

Heard to seek clemency

SAN FRANCISCO - Patricia Hearst, who unsuccessfully appealed her bail request at her bank robbery conviction to the U.S. Court of Appeals, will be referred to it for possible legal action. Four of those cases have been paid.

Hearst, who unsuccessfully appealed her seven-year sentence stemming from the 1974 robbery to the U.S. Supreme Court, was ordered to report Monday.

President Ford commuted Hearst’s sentence, which was imposed by judge during his campaign.

San Francisco police arrested her last fall as she was trying to induce both sides yesterday to reach a final accord that would get the papers back in print. Times, Daily News, and New York Post went on strike.

Sign policy goes ‘well’ at Michigan game

by Mike Frailey

Despite some last minute confusion regarding University of Michigan for the showing of student banners at some football games, the policy was "well" for the Michigan game this past weekend, according to Special Projects Commissioner Frank Guilfoyle. After the Notre Dame Marching Band finishes its halftime show, to the lack of time we had for me with their banners; and this was meet with Dean Roemer to evaluate the showing of student banners at in exchange for his sign. Students are decide upon last Thursday by Guilfoyle said. The students are television," past weekend, according to Special sign at Gate 15 of the stadium. signs. However, on Saturday morning home games.

Guilfoyle explained that the tentative policy was to ensure "good taste" in the banners shown at the Michigan game. "Students like to display their signs at halftime and appear on national television," Guilfoyle noted. "My job is to make sure that the banners are in taste.

Tentative policy decided upon by Guilfoyle and Roemer was outlined by the Special Projects Commissioner.

Students wishing to display signs at halftime are to bring the banner to the Student Government offices on the Friday before the game from 1-5 p.m., or on Saturday morning.

Vance meets with Assad

In a speech ending the meeting of the Arab "reactionists" Saturday, Assad called Camp David "the summit of surrender" and urged all Arab nations "not to adopt this treacherous line.

Vance was greeted here by Foreign Minister Abd al Hadi Khaddam, and they drove immediately to the presidential palace. Leaders of the hard-line Arab states were leaving Damascus when Vance arrived, and his plane was shouted at by a remote section of the airport to avoid the ceremonial departures of the Arab officials. Security was tight, and Syrian soldiers lined both sides of the 12-mile route from the airport.

Carter relaxes after campaigning

WASHINGTON, [AP] - President Carter has a first day off since the Middle East peace summit, rested yesterday at the White House after five hectic days of campaigning. The president, in his new role as peacemaker, won a standing ovation from his audience at the First Baptist Church before he taught the weekly lesson. At a White House service afterward, the Rev. Charles A. Trentham praised Carter for putting his "career on the line" in negotiating the peace agreement for Middle East peace with Egypt's President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin during the 13-day Camp David summit. As he campaigned for Democrats in Pennsylvania, Ohio and the Carolinas over the past six days and Saturday, Carter heard similar, lavish praise for his peace efforts. He told his audiences he was "still tired" from the summit talks.

After answering questions from local citizens at a town meeting in the steel mill town of Aliquippa, Pa., on Saturday, the president appeared at a fundraiser for Demo- cratic congressional candidate Eugene Atkinson. Carter also used the occasion to endorse Peter Flaherty, former deputy attorney general, for governor.

Then he traveled to Columbus, Ohio, to dedicate a black-owned shopping and residential plaza and to bolster the party coffers at a fundraiser for the Steelworkers Union & smc.

At the Pennsylvania town meeting, his fourth, Carter acknowledged that "many issues still remain to be resolved" in the Middle East, and that progress would be limited as long as other Arab countries agree to negotiate. One questioner demanded to know why the United States would permit the Palestine Liberation Organization to open an information office in the nation's capital. "There are many groups like that that cause us concern," Carter said. "The Ku Klux Klan, for instance, the Communist Party, the Nazis. It would be nice if they could join together. It is part of our system of government to let them have a right to speak."

He said: "I believe that as long as the American people are educated and knowledgeable about the threat of these organizations, that is the best way to stamp them out."

He said that he has a commitment to Israel, "not to negotiate with, nor to have private meetings with the PLO until that organization recognizes Israel's right to exist."

The PLO is recognized by most Arab governments as the sole representative of the Palestinian people.

"It is important that the students understand that I am working with them in their efforts, not against them," Guilfoyle emphasized. Although he labeled the program "innovative," Guilfoyle was optimis- tic about its continuance for future home games.

"Later on this week I am going to meet with Dean Roemer to evaluate the policy," Guilfoyle said. "I am very optimistic that it will meet with his approval and be continued as the normal operating procedure."
College education begins early for Simon's Rock students

GREAT BARRINGTON, MA

(AP) - When Andre Beaman became bored with high school at the age of 16, he dropped out. But he didn’t get a job or hang around street corners. He went to college.

Beaman, of Jackson, Mich., is like hundreds of students who enter college after their sophomore year of high school instead of waiting until they finish their senior year. Last year, over 1 million students took Advanced Placement Examinations for college entry.

But unlike a growing number of young students who have gone on to college without completing their high school years, Beaman went to a four-year college specifically designed for this type of student: Simon’s Rock Early College.

“Only 10 percent of our students have completed high school before entering,” said Dr. Samuel H. Magill, president of the small liberal arts college in Great Barrington, Mass. “Students who come here are usually good solid B or better students in high school. Like Beaman, most are inquisitive and eager to accelerate the educational process. That’s why they want to begin college early.”

“I was feeling stifled,” recalls Beaman. “I was at a large school and the classes were too big. It just wasn’t academically challenging. I wanted to get into an area that would be stimulating and to meet interesting people.”

Beaman’s complaints are similar to those of other students, Magill says. “Some bright children find themselves out of sync with their classmates and their school’s curriculum. Other students are good ’A’ and ’B’ students who just find classes are too large and stifling.”

At Simon’s Rock the classes are small, usually numbering four to 12 students and sometimes as few as three. All the classes are seminars. There appears to be mounting evidence that high school students are seeking alternatives to the lock-step educational process that requires four years of high school and four years of college, educators agree.

“It’s no surprise that students are looking for alternatives,” Dr. Janet Lieberman of LeGrande Community College in New York City recently told educators attending the annual meeting of the American Association of Higher Education.

Quoting a Carnegie Foundation study, she said, “The report found that 30 percent or more of the academic content of the senior year in high school is repeated in the freshman year in college.”

Second City: ‘Prime Rib’ at Its Best

Monday, September 25, 1978

Ladies and gentlemen, Second City has just left the building. The audience filed out, laughing: sardonic wit, keeping in fine tradition with our greatest faults and failings. We relive the hilarity of our weaker moments.

Tonight’s production is a departure from the usual jazz and innovative group. The man who started it all, the late “Father Murray,” is present directing the major production. Marty Fries, a Walter Mitty character, does his best to moderate the discussion, while Councilman Russ Levine, construction worker Giannetti, and the ob-so-devout Mrs. O’Goody says, “Relax the teachers’ time. I will not waste the teacher’s time....”

Fortunately, Second City has finally compiled an almost all-new revue. Although their old scripts were excellent, they became pastiches of bad taste and cheap laughs. The new revue is a departure from their old style, but still retains the unique schedule of theatrical art at Second City.

Tonight’s performance will mark the eighth by the Tribune reviewer’s column, and the second by the Tribune cabaret theatre. And the second by Mrs. O’Goody, whose appearances are always a delight. Yamaha uses womenpower

TOKYO, Japan - An experiment begun last year by Yamaha Motor Co. to operate a motorbike factory with women workers has proved a roaring success. With some degree of apprehension their male counterparts. According to everything they had heard, because of the CIA and FBI had a hand in this program.

The program showed Zorin, the project was in an open warehouse in downtown Dallas, from which Oswald was reputed to have fired shots. "The report that from this place Oswald fired, Zorin managed to safely avoid shots at a moving target, or putting up in the verge of fantasy, or putting up more, better than that, he believed to tell the viewers.

Zorin said: "The first bullet hit the president in the thorax. Such a trajectory from the window - located, perhaps, was impossible."

"The other shots which hit the president were obviously made not from a distance, but from close range," Zorin said according to different versions. "I believe they have been hiding behind a fence or on top of a railway overpass."

Correspondent reports conspiracy in JFK case

MOSCOW, Czechoslovakia, South Africa, Egypt, Italy, and Argentina had previously lived for several years in the Soviet Union and later tried to visit Cuba.

Soviet television correspondent Valentin Zorin, discussing the admiration of their male colleagues operated the factory. Their fears produced 25,000 with some degree of apprehension their male counterparts.

By the time the experiment was launched in January 1977, the company management feared productivitv would drop if only women operated the factory. Their fears proved groundless and there are now plans to increase the number of female workers, Ishida said.

The factory started with 70 women, 500 workers were making 100,000 units and 2,500 units this year.

According to another version, he said, "snipers were hidden in a covered waterway hallway along the railway overpass, the nearly point-blank shots at the president, the killer closed the hallway and escaped along an underground passageway."

"Oswald was assigned to play the role of the fall guy," Zorin continued. "He said, 'the sublimity of the preparation of the murder and the fact that each small detail was taken into account demonstrates not only the existence of a plot to get rid of the 35th president of the United States, but also the power of the forces which stood behind him.'"

He hinted that the reason for LBJ's alleged involvement may have been an "inexplicable wartime" between old monetized interests in the Northeast and newly rich 'old barrelons' of the Southwest."
Scott Zettick, playing for the first time since knee surgery, recovered the ball at the 15 yard line setting up the first scoring opportunity of the afternoon.

The second half saw Notre Dame score their first points of the game. With Michigan tied 19-19, Zettick intercepted Dennis Grindler, who was overmatched in his first career start. The interception was good for six points.

For Michigan, it was a half they need to forget. Joe Harasymiak fumbled and with the help of a well placed Joe Restic punt kept Michigan deep in their own territory. However, Notre Dame was assessed with five minutes left in the third quarter. Three personal fouls were mistakes unfailingly come at the worst times. But more importantly someone like Joe Montana is going to have to lend to having to summon these extras (for years the home crowd was enough)

The Turning Point

Anytime a team comes from behind and wins the Michigan did Saturday, the press looks for a crucial situation that may have been the turning point of the game. In a meeting of titans one of two teams physically dominates the other, but when two teams of the caliber of Michigan and Notre Dame get together, there is bound to be some strategy or game situation that turns the tide. There was one Saturday.

Notre Dame is playing UCLA in the ACC and they run off ten straight points to go up by 14. The last thing Bigger Phelps wants his team to do is call a time out. The same thing is true in football, although it's not as obvious. But Dan Devine knew that his quarterback had made a big mistake when he called a timeout with the Irish in the third quarter.

Notre Dame takes a seven point lead into the lockerroom at halftime and subsequently moves the ball from their own 3 yard line to Michigan's 25 yard line as the second half begins. They have the ball one yard out and a touchdown here can clinch it (remember the Cotton Bowl Game). This worst thing Joe Montana could have done was call a timeout thus squelching the offensive momentum. The timeout was called because Montana wasn't sure about a play sent in. Those kind of mental errors can make a difference and did as Ferguson and Montana botched the next handoff and the Wolverines recovered. However, the Irish never recovered as the fumble marked the beginning to an end for Devine's squad.

One this play typified the kind of mistakes the defending national champions had been making on the road this year. They were called against ND Saturday and they proved to be pivotal in the outcome. Notre Dame was assessed with 80 yards in penalties (18 for Michigan) on the afternoon when hurt their cause. Cheap shots have never been part of a Notre Dame game plan and more importantly these stupid mistakes unfailingly come at the worst times.

The Irish have a lot of talent that hasn't been shown. But the simple fact is Notre Dame hasn't been good enough in the past two years. The Studs (Browner, Fry, MacAfee, Hughes and co.) are gone on both sides of the ball. The coaches have not been mediocre at best and continues to be very inconsistent. The outspoken Dave Huffman could never be accused of lack of effort but the program is not run with the same intensity. It is Montana that

The Irish and the Wolverines split the weekend athletic series.
The Irish squad (led by Joe Montana) scored again late in the first quarter as Kris Hianes dropped a pass and the Irish offense capitalized with a blocked field goal from 32 yards out.

Huckleby, who was to total a game high 96 yards on the day, took things into his own hands midway through the second quarter as he led a running drive to the ND four yard line before Leach dove in to knot the score at 7-7. Leach had no time to celebrate as Montana effectively muted the pass ways constructed running by Jerome Heavens and Vagas Ferguson to mount the Michigan's most successful drive of the short season. Ferguson did the honors following Dave Huffman up the middle to cap the 75 yard drive that game ND a 12-7 halftime advantage.

As all things must come to an end, so did Leach's slump as the Notre Dame candidate proceeded to be as effective in the second half as he was inaccurate in the opening two quarters.

The lights went out on the Irish offensive transmission. Montana's handoff after an inopportune time-out that halted a 56-yard drive deep into Michigan's territory. On this key situation Coach Dan Devine later commented, "It was a bad time to call a timeout. Montana wasn't sure about the play that was called and felt he had to call it. It was a mistake that seemed to hurt our momentum."
