WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, in a drive to wrap up his second term here before flying to Egypt and Israel this week to try and clear away remaining roadblocks to a settlement, Egyptian Prime Minister Menahem Begin told members of the U.S. Congress in Washington, "Now there is a ray of hope." Noting that Israel has accepted U.S. proposals for wrapping up a treaty, he added: "For hope, Egypt will join the effort. Then if this happens in a short period of time, we may have the ceremony of signing.

Begin told the Associated Press in a telephone interview: "When it actually puts down all its stakes, it is natural that it has to have a positive result."

White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said Monday that Carter will arrive in Egypt on Thursday afternoon for talks with President Anwar Sadat and then go to Israel on Saturday, meeting with Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

At this point, Powell said, there are no plans for a three-way meeting among the leaders. The spokesman said he did not know when Carter would return to the United States.

Carter's wife, Rosalynn, will accompany him.

Begin said he would fly home on Wednesday to prepare for "the memorable visit."

While expressing optimism, the Israeli prime minister noted in an appearance before members of the U.S. House of Representatives that a Middle East peace seemed at hand several times previously but was not achieved. "The world was happy and then came the disappointment," Begin said.

He stressed that Israel's concern has been that it must be able to defend itself against other Arab countries if the peace does not last.

The White House announcement marked another upturn in peace prospects after a long siege of gloom.

Egypt and Israel have been sealed in a stalemate since over the Palestinian Arabs and other issues surrounding the treaty.

After a series of meetings between Carter and Begin last Thursday, the U.S. mediation effort appeared to be headed toward defeat. But last Sunday, after their fourth session, there was a sudden reverse.

Carter gave Begin new U.S. proposals for breaking the deadlock. They were submitted to the Israeli cabinet, which voted yesterday to accept them.

Begin then reported the action to Carter at a 10-minute White House meeting after Powell's announcement of the presidential trip followed. The recommendations were not disclosed publicly.

The Israeli cabinet voted 9-3 with four abstentions was a sign of considerable opposition within the cabinet, indicating Israel made some hard concessions in accepting the proposals.

The principal sticking point has been Sadat's demand, backed by the Carter administration, that a timetable be included in the treaty package for establishing Palestinian self-rule on the West Bank of the Jordan River and in Gaza.

An informed source in Jerusalem said Israel made some movement on that demand. Another problem which the U.S. proposals also reportedly dealt with was the clause saying the treaty supersedes all previous conflicting agreements.

Sadat, backed by the United States, has insisted that the treaty not take precedence over Egypt's commitment to assist other Arab countries in wars of self-defense against Israel.

The impact of the new U.S. proposals on these issues was not clear. However, American officials have stressed that not all the remaining differences are covered by the suggestions.

Hilda Morley delivers unscheduled reading

by Kathleen Connolly

Senior Staff Writer

Poet Hilda Morley gave an unscheduled reading last night in the Library Auditorium when due to an error in travel arrangements, playwright David Mamet was unable to participate in the Sophomore Literary Festival.

Mamet began writing at the age of nine but his first volume of poetry, A Beetling Outside Us, was just recently published in 1976. She attended the Walden School, the Hafid Realschule, Hebrew University, University College London, and post-graduate work at Wellesley, Ohio State and New York University.

It was while teaching at Black Mountain College that she worked with such poets as Robert Creeley, Denise Levertov and Charles Olson, who later urged her to publish her poetry.

Mamet wrote a poem dedicated to Olson after traveling to Gooster, Scotland to attend his funeral. She said that she had been at odds with Olson, but that they had made peace just hours before his death. He augmented his impact of his death is illustrated in the lines, "The night I heard that you're dead & I just beginning to see you alive."

The poem "The Olson" is characteristic of the appeal to sensory experience common to the poems read by Mamet.

She paints a picture of cold winter using visual images and words to evoke a sense of physical distance, appropriate to the immediate experience of death in the poem.

FWillingsworth speaks on unemployment rate

by Ann Galet

News Editor

Charles Killingsworth, professor of economics at Michigan State University, told an audience of approximately 150 last Monday in Assembly Auditorium that the national unemployment rate continues to rise. "In the past twelve percent a year from now, although he admitted this was not precise figure."

While this figure is much higher than the government Administration's prediction of approximately 6.2 percent unemployment by next year, Killingsworth said that "the fact that we are entering a recession makes a higher prosperity-level unemployment than ever before renders a rate as high as twelve percent possible."

Killingsworth, who has worked as an economic arbitrator and has also held points on several government economic boards, is noted for his contributions to the field of structuralist economic theory. In last year's book, he wrote "The Development of Employment Policy in the OS over the past 50 years, passing the proposal that "structural change in our economy" had been an important factor in raising unemployment in this country."

"For the first 150 years of our national history, we did not have an unemployment policy," Killingsworth noted, attributing this fact to the belief that at that time that "having an unemployment policy would make about as much sense as having a weather policy."

Killingsworth commented that the understanding of unemployment precedents in the 1950's was summed up well when President Eisenhower said, "When a great many people are unable to find jobs, unemployment policy makes no sense at all." The program had been unable to reduce the estimated 25 percent of unemployment rate using the conventional method of cutting wages, he said.

"John Maynard Keynes rebuts those theories," argued that "government expenditure could be used to reduce the growing unemployment level."

He added that while Keynes was bitterly criticized by others in the economic field, "there were some economists, particularly in Washington, who were persuaded by Keynes."

"Consequently, some of the ideas Keynes put forward have been translated into government policy in the late 1930's," H. Wemer Killingsworth continued, it was World War II, and not Keynesian theory, that finally solved the unemployment problem of the 30's.

Economists had predicted a return to mass unemployment but their anticipated problem never materialized, Killingsworth said. Instead, the U.S. faced an inflation problem "which was the number one economic priority until the 1960's."
Iranian oil flows again; executions continue

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) - Iran started supplying the world's biggest customers for the first time in 10 weeks yesterday with a shipment of crude oil bound for Japan. The shipping policy of Ruhollah Khomeini's revolutionary government, meanwhile, hung oil market for the eight more members of Shah's regime. The executed eight members of the shah's secret Islamic opposition to a treaty opposing a growth in labor participation. According to a Tampa Tribune editorial, the U.S. embargo of Iran is not only a failure, but a setback in the struggle for freedom in Iran. The embargo has also emboldened the Shah's regime, making it more likely to continue its human rights abuses.

Killingsworth pointed out that during the 1960s and early 1970s, the oil embargo had a minimal impact on the world's oil market. European countries had other sources of oil and the embargo was not significant in terms of supply. However, the embargo caused political tensions and increased the costs of alternative sources of oil. The embargo also resulted in higher prices and a reduction in the demand for oil in the U.S. and other countries.

Liberal attacks on Carter's SALT II policy

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter, already facing stiff opposition to a U.S.-Soviet arms limitation treaty from conservatives, is now hearings complaints from liberals. Senator Edward Kennedy, of Massachusetts, has warned against the treaty, saying it could "substantially" cut the arms race. The senators said the proposed SALT II treaty - expected to be ready for submission to the Senate late this year - may be only a "dangerous illusion of security" that will spur, rather than control, the arms race. The warning could prefigure serious troubles for the treaty, which needs a two-thirds Senate approval. However, the statement could also be seen as an attempt to offer conservative pressure on Carter.

Jimmy Connors marries Playmate

ST. LOUIS (AP) - The secret wedding of tennis star Jimmy Connors to former Playmate Pattie Mcguire was consummated this week, sources said today, but the usual outspoken Connors was not available for direct comment on it. Connors, whose on-court comments and gestures often get him into trouble, was "away for a rest" after his $40,000 National Indoor Tennis Championship victory over Arthur Ashe Sunday in Memphis, Tenn., a spokesman said. McGuire has often been seen at Connors' matches around the country recently. Observers at the Memphis tournament said she obviously was several months pregnant. The announcement, according to sources, was made in Memphis, Tenn., where she lives, and McGuire said she was planning to move to New York City.

Motegioer is arrested for taking cookie into theatre

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) - Still carrying a chocolate cookie in a soggy paper bag, Kenneth Harsh entered General Douglas MacArthur's house yesterday to face charges of refusing to surrender the snack to a theater manager. A theater usher, enforcing a posted rule against taking in food or drink, caught him with the cookie and shouted: "If you get into a theater, you have to be able to come out." Harsh refused, saying he was saving the cookie for his wife to eat later. So the theater manager had him arrested. Harsh also said he had been traded well by a substitute pitcher, who assured him and released him on a $100 bond Saturday night.

In class elections

Candidates reveal platforms

by Diane Wilson
News Editor

Undergraduates will have the opportunity to vote for class officers today in the first day of elections. Balloting will take place from 11:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. on campus, respectively in halls and from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the Huddle for off-campus residents.

For classes where there are more that 50 tickets running, a run-off will be held Thursday to determine the winner from the top two.

The class of 1980 has two tickets running. The ticket of Mark Carney, Mike Mitchell, Beth Jones, and Tara Hegley views the responsibilities of class officers as being three-fold: "The officers have a commitment to uphold all those traditions unique to the senior year. Secondly, the officers are responsible for seeing that college parties have a proper outlet through which to express ideas, and to discuss grievances. Finally the officers must go out and open to realistic additions to the senior year." Through these ideas the Carney platform promises to expand upon traditional events, improve the quality of off-campus life, and make new additions to the senior year.

The second ticket for the class of '80 includes Nick Schneeman, Mary Reppa, Bob Carey, and Tom Crotty. Their platform consists of proposals to make the class' senior year "a great year." Some of their ideas include developing a Senior Advisory Council and strengthening ties with an effects fund. The Council is both to be done immediately.

Next fall's plans include many social events as well as increasing the use of Notre Dame's Legal Council. Winter and spring plans include more social events and a storage program for off-campus stereo and television sets over break and graduation.

The class of '81 is being represented by five tickets. Due to an oversight of The Observer the ticket of Bob Mangino, Anne Fink, Jim Castellini, and Bob Hennekes was omitted from yesterday's article. In their platform they plan to "push for full participation in many innovative functions that are proposed." They also propose many social activities, fund raising ideas, and ideas to increase communication between the officers and the class through the "improved use of the advisory council, bi-monthly news letters and informational posters," as well as surveys, office hours of each officer and an "open door policy."

The ticket of Tom Behney, Kevin Lovejoy, Jean Menori and Mary Pat Ziolkowski is a wildcard ticket for the class of '81. Their plans include work­ ing to "prevent any kind of arbitrary lottery for rooming or working closely with O.C. housing to help students moving off campus make the necessary adjustments." They also plan to "try to help the seniors by adding at least one representative, each hall is elected by the members of the junior class."

Ed Callahan, Joe Gianii, Debbie Romo and Jane Anderson are candidates for the next year's junior class. Their platform consists of both senior and junior proposals. Running under the slogan of "Go for it," the Callahan ticket has proposed "to abolish rampant incompetency on the student government level at Notre Dame du Lac."

They also propose the formation of a junior volunteer army for those who wish to avoid the draft yet wish to do their part for our "own."

A fourth ticket for the class of '81 is composed of Mark Kelley, Michael McNally, Ann Marie Pierson and Mike Oufutik. Their platform is based on "a liberal policy for constructive change based on realistic goals, not absurd promises." They plan to "clarify old avenues of ap­ proach while simultaneously exploring new ones; keeping abreast of the housing situation, developing our relationship with off-campus and transfer classmates."

They also have many plans to utilize the snow months at Notre Dame for social activities.

The ticket of Jim Riedman, Brian Murphy, Kelly Callahan and Janice McCormack round out the candidates for junior class officers. They believe that "specific promises would be too confusing and unrealistic at this time. We are enthusiastic to work to make our junior year a very special one." Their pro­ posals include responding to "the need for more social and better social activities and ideas to increase communication."

Officers for the class of 1982 are being sought by three tickets. The ticket of Steve Bremmer, Timothy Emnitt, Dages, Karen Alog and Gregory Dez, is planning to propose "an increase in numbers of sopho­ mores moving off-campus at the conclusion of sophomore year." They also have plans for both social and service events.

The ticket of Chip Gerhardt, Tim Sweeney, Tara Kenney and Terry Dunn forms the final ticket for next year's sophomore class. They are proposing that while acting as social commit­ tioners is an important function of class officers, the class should also be represented on campus issues. They would like to see the sophomore class president added to the Campus Life Council. They also propose the establishment of a class council that will assist the officers in planning activities for the class.

College loan default rates throw program into deficit

WASHINGTON (AP) - The government yesterday made public estimated default rates that have thrown the nation's direct student loan program into a deficit of more than $700 million.

At more than 200 colleges, the default rate as of June 30 was 50 percent or more. The national rate was 17.4 percent, compared with a 10 percent default rate in the federally subsidized guaranteed student loan program, which is run through banks and other lenders.

The 20-year-old national direct student loan program is operated by colleges and uni­ versities using 90 percent fed­ eral funds.

Many of the colleges with the worst default rates are beauty schools, business schools, and two-year colleges. Robert Conlon, an HEW official said the default rate at proprietary institutions was 35 percent and at community colleges was 33 percent.

Health Education and Wel­ fare Secretary Joseph A. Colli­ fa has approved several new plans to step up pressure on colleges to improve operation of the loan program, and to take more collection of loans that have been in default the long­ er.

Califano is planning to issue new regulations, to be effective by the 1981-82 school year, which would cut off federal loan funds unless colleges meet perfor­ mance standards to reduce their default rates.

While the guaranteed student loan rate was dropping from 14 percent to less than 10 percent in the past year, the national direct student loan rate declined from 16.9 percent to 17.4 percent.

More than 800,000 of these loans are in default for $702 million, as well as $150,000 guaranteed student loans for $407 million.

Although it is the worst-run program from the federal view­ point, the national direct stu­ dent loan program is the best deal for students, with an interest rate of only 8 percent.

The guaranteed student loan program offers 3 percent. These loans are not repaid until a year after the graduation of students or leaves college.

The precipitation has changed from snow to rain as a weekend storm cause some minor flooding along Notre Dame Ave.

Politics, Protest and Freedom

Editor's Note: This is the second installment of a two-part column dealing with "Politics, Protests and Freedom" in terms of boycotts.

The organizations which ban, have clearly decided on a "good" punishment of immoral behavior. The banning of beer, privacy on the ability to eat tomato salads and drink cups of hot chocolate. But this certainly would be an odd list; for it is the banning organizations themselves that have turned these activities into political acts. And it is this curious alchemy that suggests the most serious ramifications for politics itself. For we live in a time in which all political behavior is recognized as the chief danger of democracy, finds little justification in the principle of necessity. The banning organizations may insist that the opposition is making a great fuss over the right to eat tomato salads and drink cups of hot chocolate. This may be true; but it is not the point. The point is that Nestle and Libby corporations are engaged in thirsty endeavors. And this is the point that the banning organizations are afraid of: that Nestle and Libby corporations are engaged in thirsty endeavors.

The problem of the exclusion of the opposition becomes more pertinent when one views politics as an independent movement. Simply put, it is necessary to deal with the banning organizations as the only real obstacle to their imposition on a minority: that alcoholic beverages are, in and of themselves, a good. This is, not the good of the majority's ban and the good of the majority's will, but the good of the majority's will. The mere democracy position basically becomes more pertinent when one views politics as an independent movement. Simply put, it is necessary to deal with the banning organizations as the only real obstacle to their imposition on a minority: that alcoholic beverages are, in and of themselves, a good. This is, not the good of the majority's ban and the good of the majority's will, but the good of the majority's will.

ND introduces new major
by Pat O'Neill

The College of Arts and Letters is planning to offer a new major to be known as Computer Applications. This major is available to all students at the University of Notre Dame and is designed as a second major only. Dr. C. Lincoln Johnson, chairman of the Computer Science Department, Training and Research Laboratory, is the coordinator of this major and believes that this new major has the need that some field of study is needed.

"Last year, we realized that Arts and Letters students needed a major like this because most students had no awareness of the impact that computers have on everyday life," Johnon said.

"Also, many students began to leave Arts and Letters because they felt they were not marketable for a job with a B.A. degree."

"Training and Research Laboratory has the need for a field in which to study how computer science major is comparable with the computer science major. The students will be able to meet both of these needs."

"This major will teach not only applications of the computer science major but will also make them more marketable for their present major as well as more marketable for alternative jobs."

"Also, many students have said that they want to make Art and Letters students more competitive for graduate school."

William Davisson, who has also been instrumental in the institution of Computer Applications, is a professor of economics who will also teach courses in this field.

Professor Davisson differentiates the distinction between the Computer Applications and the Computer Science major. He pointed out that computer science deals only with the operating system of the computer. However, Johnson said that the Computer Applications major will deal with the operating system only to the extent that the students will be able to apply their own programming skills in this area of interest.

"The Computer Applications major is comparable with the goals of a liberal arts education while the computer skills will help the student to get a better job," Davisson commented.

Schlafly contributes to ND

Hubert J. Schlafly, vice chairman of American TransCommunications, Inc., and former president of Telprompter Corporation, has contributed $35,000 to Notre Dame's current fund-raising effort. The gift will be held in a University fund until the details of its use are determined.

In making the announcement, Dr. TheoHilde Hesburgh, president of the University, said: "I am encouraged, indeed, to have dedicated and generous friends, such as Mr. Schlafly, whose benefactions insure its future academic distinction."

Schlafly, born in St. Louis, Missouri, received his bachelor's degree in electrical engineering from Notre Dame in 1941. Mr. Schlafly and the former Leon Martin, he and his wife now live in Greenwich, Conn., headquarters of American TransCommunications.

Dr. Lawrence Marsh, who is also a professor of economics, noted that benefits of establishing this major. "Computer science major can only be capable of extending his own thought processes. In addition, the capabilities of individuals in the country are shared with Notre Dame," Marsh explained. These "capabilities" are in the form of shared computer programming with institutions like MIT, Yale, Stanford, Rice and Dartmouth.

Besides the strengths of the computer facilities at Notre Dame, Marsh also noted that many of these strengths in this major will provide to the students. "Those who understand theory, have common sense, experience, analytical skills and also have computer ability will be those who command high salaries."

Marsh's opinion is supported by PATCH magazine articles on the Notre Dame Computing Center. The PATCH articles stressed the need for a new major. Professor Davisson also noted that these skills will enhance job opportunities for student reaction before deciding on any changes, however.

According to Frost, one of the bus drivers has been asked to resign because of student complaints about his service. Other complaints about the schedule have resulted from students forgetting about the 11:45 off-campus trip.

The final choice of speakers for Women's Week has not been decided but the theme has been chosen and possible speakers are still being contacted. The theme, "Women and the Arts," will focus on literature, dance, music and entertainment.

The Saint Mary's Student Government and Women's Association is sponsoring a Spring Fashion Show this Sunday from 11:00 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. The fashions are provided by Paul Davis in conjunction and will be modeled by Saint Mary's students.

Registration for Big Sister/Little Sister Weekend has been extended until next weekend. The registration fee of $15 includes meals at the dining hall from Friday dinner through Saturday's banquet dinner, plus tickets for a movie shown on campus that night and other events planned for both days.

Chairmen to meet at SMC

The final meeting for the 1979 Mardi Gras booth chairmen, arts, raffle chairman and committee members will be held tomorrow at 8:30 p.m. in the Saint Mary's Clubhouse.

All checks for prizes and awards will be issued at that time, and attendance is mandatory.

The major will require twenty-four credit hours of courses taught by existent faculty drawn from all departments across the Arts and Letters College. Requirements will include Technological Philosophy, Computer Language, and Elementary and Advanced Applications.

The three professors are in accord about the overwhelming benefits of the program. Dr. Johnson noted that one of the greatest benefits of the Computer Applications major is that "the students receive the good clean air." Dr. Marsh noted that benefits of the program is "that Notre Dame is so renowned for in addition to skills that help them to apply their liberal arts education."

"We are now in a position to provide an opportunity for students to augment a fine liberal arts education," Marsh added.

Amin plans drive against Tanzanian invaders

The Ugandan broadcast, monitored here, called on all citizens in the occupied areas to help the Tanzanians. Monday's broadcast told fishermen to keep off Lake Victoria at night because of "measures to keep off Lake Victoria," and called on Amin's men to keep off Lake Victoria by Uganda, Tanzania and Kenya. Steve Welch will run the half-mile, Ken Lynch will run the mile, and Coach Paine thinks that they should be able to get into the finals and do well there.

"The most important race will be the prelims, because if they don't do well, it is all over," Paine said. "But if they get all the breaks and run what they are capable of running, there's no telling how well they can go." Paine also pointed out that Villanova is the top-rated team in the country, and the Irish only lost to Villanova by one-quarter of a second at the Knights of Columbus meet in Cleveland.

The distance medley team will also compete in Detroit, and Paine thinks they have a chance to make the finals if they run well. Slattery will run the half-mile, Ken Lynch will run the quarter-mile, Tony Hatcher will run the 440, and Steve Welch will run the mile in this race. Aragon also qualified in the 880-yard run, but it was decided that he should compete on the two-mile relay.

In season finale
Tracksters cruise to victory by Mark Perry Assistant Sports Editor

In its final meet of the indoor season, the Notre Dame track team cruised to victory over Illinois-Chicago Circle, 102-29, at a dual meet last Saturday at the Assembly Hall.

"We can learn something from the loss," said Irish Coach Joe Slate. "Four years ago we had a great finish in that dual meet against a good team, so we can see that we have some room to improve our depth.

"We're having some problems, but we have improved," Slate added.

Teams that we have "no excuse" tourney loss most common ones. But ND had just cut the lead to 82-13, but we're still not being taken for granted.

"The team has played about as well as could be expected. The dual players we've forced 35 Franklin turnovers.

The offense moved the ball effectively throughout the game, resulting in a number of open shots in the lane. That's where, however, is where the problems occurred. The Notre Dame was just not able to get a hoop.

Despite the Irish luck, or lack of such, was a point late in the game when the girls were attempting to pull away from the lead. A 13 point-second-half deficit, ND had cut to 8 to 6, 58-56, to eight when Carola Cummings stole the ensuing in-bound pass, and her fast break lay-up. She put the ball up softly, and it rolled around the rim and fell to the floor.

Numerous Franklin turnovers resulted from the Irish inability to turn over the team, which resulted in a 13 point-second-half deficit.

Women cagers end season with no excuse' tourney loss by Mark Hannakins Sports Writer

Many times, after losing a big game, a coach or a player will allow some excuse for the loss. "The refs were bad," or "So-and-so hurt our chances." But nobody could find an excuse for the Irish in the loss to Franklin University, the dual meet that resulted in the first round of the state tournament on Thursday.

DePaul just a little too thin by Paul Mulaney

Ray Meyer was so jubilant Friday night after his DePaul cagers stopped Notre Dame's second-ranked Irish, that he seemed to have a little difficulty letting all of his thoughts known.

But he did make a point of the progress his quitter made from November to March. Said the 37th-year coach, who is not often given to hyperbole, "I will have told you at the beginning of the season that he would be a gentleman to get in the boat, he's not a coach who's afraid to get in the boat.

What Meyer was told instead, was that he belonged out West, with the ball club, of course, to participate in the NCAA West Regional, which starts tonight.

All good and well for a team that was virtually forgotten last fall when the pollsters attempted to rate the season, DePaul with a start of DePau1l's season, has helped Gary Cunningham's national team hopes look much better.

In the field events, Perry won the two-mile run in 9:14.84. Stan Broussard, a 4:11.07 in the 800. And Mark Perry won the long jump at 21 feet, 6 inches, which would have broken his own record, set last week.

Also Ahmad Kazemi paced an Irish sweep in the triple jump, as he won the event with a leap of 47 feet, 1/4 inches.

Finally, in the last event of the day, Jim Christian held off a furious charge by Circle's Herb Simms to take the mile relay.

For the game, DePaul carried 22-5 record into second-round action for the Irish, for instance, a 102-29, by John Mauer)
