Thornburgh may lift evacuation advisory

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) - Gov. Dick Thornburgh's advisory that pre-school children and pregnant women stay outside a five-mile radius of the damaged Three Mile Island nuclear reactor may be lifted today, the governor's spokesman said.

Thornburgh decided yesterday to continue the advisory for at least another day after meeting for about an hour and a half with Joseph Hendin, chairman of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, and NRC operations chief Harold Denton.

"He's hopeful he'll be able to announce some change today," said Thornburgh's press secretary, Paul Critchlow.

Thornburgh issued his directive last March 30 after several leaks of radiation from the nuclear power plant.

Critchlow said the decision to lift the advisory "will be based on the advice of such agencies (NRC officials) believe they can continue the cleanup without further signs of escapes of radioactive activity."

Earlier yesterday, significant improvements in the plant, including lower radiation levels, made "last rites for Three Mile Island" unnecessary, said Vastine, chairman of the Three Mile Alert.

But an environmental group fought Metcalf's efforts. Edward's fission folly,' said Vastine, "with such notables as Robert Kennedy and Moshe Dayan, Noel Coward, Thursday Al and Richard Nixon.

David Frost entertains local crowd

Interviewer, leudcr, author and producer David Frost entertained a receptive crowd of 200 at WUSB's Northside Hall Auditorium last night with anecdotes about the luminaries he has known, snappy one-liner retelling of name-changing, and sharp criticisms of subjects ranging from television to politics.

Forte related recollections of his most memorable interviews, including with John Lennon, Robert Kennedy, Martha Gellhorn, Robert Dayan, Noel Coward, Thursday Al and Richard Nixon.

Teamsters trucking lockout threatens to choke auto industry

DETROIT (AP) - A shortage of vital Parts normally supplied by truck threatens to choke the auto industry as a Teamsters trucking lockout and strike enters its second week.

As the Labor Department kept watch over the strike's effects, it was estimated yesterday that 200,000 auto workers - or a quarter of the hourly work force - would be laid off this week.

Elsewhere, the impact has been slight.

The industry - the five major U.S. manufac­turers - already had laid off 56,275 workers last Friday and had 74,200 on short-hour shifts.

Today, Chrysler Corporation, the No. 3 national automaker, will be virtually shut down.

Chrysler said yesterday that 85,000 workers would be laid off at about 40 plants until a settlement between the trucking industry and the Teamsters industry and the Teamsters union was reached.

"It couldn't have come at a worse time" Chrysler president Lee A. Iacocca said at a luncheon last week launching the automaker's new advertising campaign and extended warran­ty plan.

Iacocca said the shutdown caused by the strike would cost the automaker "plenty.

Chrysler is trying to recover from a $205 million loss last year.

Bargaining is scheduled to resume today in Washington between officials representing 50 major trucking firms and 235,000 Teamsters.

Two days of apparently fruitless negotiations broke off Friday. Both sides, divided largely over President Carter's anti-inflation wage guidelines, said they would not budge from bargaining positions that prompted the work stoppage.

Automakers depend on day-to-day shipments of supplies and parts for vehicle assembly plants do not have room to hold large steel inventories.

Companywide layoffs at General Motors Corp., the No. 1 automaker, totaled 30,100 last Friday.

Ford Motor Co., after announcing the layoff of 650 workers at the end of last week, said another 3,000 employees at an Indianapolis steering gear plant would be furloughed today.

The only American plant of Volkswagen Manufacturing Corporation at Westmoreland, PA, idled 4,000 workers when it shut down last week.

Workers at American Motors Corporation plants worked regular hours last week.

Automobiles and related products account for one-sixth of the nation's gross national product.

At the end of last week, there were no reported shortages of food or other key consumer goods and most industries reported that operation were near normal.

The union struck 73 major trucking firms March 31, when the old contract expired, and the industry responded by locking out workers.

Industry bargainers say their last offer would boost wages and benefits 30 percent over three years, just over Carter's guidelines.

The wage guideline technically puts a 7 percent ceiling on annual wage and fringe benefits increases, but it has been loosened to accommo­date a higher Teamsters settlement.

Small blaze destroys utility cart

by John McGrath

Senior Staff Reporter

A fire swept through the contents of a maid's utility cart yesterday morning in a service room on the fourth floor of Fisher Hall. The blaze destroyed the cart causing heavy smoke to fill the hallways forcing residents to flee the affected area.

The blaze was contained within the room which serves as a utility area for the floor, and which houses an elevator en­trance and electrical fuseboxes.

"Thank God it wasn't in an enclosed area," Bro. Joe McTaggart, assistant rector of Fisher, said. "It could have been much worse because the electrical supply was right there near the fire."

Tentative agreement ends brief walkout at Pan Am

WASHINGTON (AP) - Negotiations for Pan American World Airways and its flight attendants' union reached a tentative labor agreement yesterday, ending a brief walkout that disrupted some flights in Europe, airline officials said. Pan Am reported that all airports in the United States after the two sides failed to reach an agreement by midday Monday by the last of several deadlines set by the National Mediation Board. "We're very pleased with it (the agreement)," said Richard Drake, the union's chief negotiator, "It's a good contract." The terms of the proposed contract were not disclosed.

Garwood comes home after 13 years away in Vietnam

ADAMS, Ind. (AP) - Marine Pfc. Robert R. Garwood came home at last after more than 13 years in Vietnam and joyously declared yesterday, "You can take the country from the boy, but you can't take the country out of the boy." Garwood, 33, relaxed with family and friends away from the public glare aimed at him since he left Vietnam last month. He said he wants to go fishing, drink a few beers, and rediscover the down-home lifestyle of his native, rural southeastern Indiana. "The roads are still there. People are still the same," Garwood said. "I was glad my hometown hasn't changed. There's no place like home."

PAXTON, Ill. (AP) - Authorities have a minimal search yesterday for an armed and wounded man who escaped a gun battle in which two of his brothers and two police officers were among four persons killed. Some 20 police trekked and drove through farmland while daylight remained in east-central Illinois looking for Monroe Lampkin, sought on a murder warrant.

The gunfire continued Saturday night after a state trooper stopped four vehicles on southbound Interstate 57 for alleged speeding violations.

Police, who discovered a two-mile trail of blood leading generally east-southeast through farmland from the scene of the gun battle, said Lampkin allegedly killed State Trooper Michael McCarter, 32, with a high-powered rifle.

Also killed were Paxton patrolman William Caisse, 32; McCarter's brother-in-law, Donald Vire, 45, who was riding with McCarter; and Lampkin's brothers, Cleveland, 46, of Harvey, Ill., and Davis, 32.

Cleveland Lampkin reportedly were free on appeal of a federal conviction of possessing firearms after conviction of a felony. Illinois State Police investigator Clay Boyer, who is heading the investigation, said Cleveland Lampkin had a record of felony convictions but that there were no outstanding warrants against any of the brothers.

He also said three 357 magnum pistols had been discovered at the scene, two in a pickup truck and one in a Ford Thunderbird that were among four autos McCarter hailed to the roadside.

Illinois state police said they found both spent and unused .38-caliber cartridges just off the freeway, but found no .38-caliber weapon at the scene, leading them to believe Monroe Lampkin is armed.

Ginter said more than 50 shots were fired Saturday night after McCarter and Caisse stopped four speeding vehicles on Interstate 57 about two miles south of Paxton. There reportedly were numerous bullet holes in the trooper's squad car.

Paxton police officer Larry Hale, 27, of Paxton, was wounded and listed in stable condition after undergoing surgery yesterday to remove a bullet from his right leg at Burgham Hospital in Champaign. Ginter said Hale apparently merrily mortally wounded Cleveland and Davis Lampkin.

Ginter said both Caisse and McCarter were shot and killed at close range. McCarter had been wounded in the leg and was in Caisse's squad car when a bullet from his right leg hit in the road back in the truck. Cleveland Lampkin was opened and he was shot, Ginter said. McCarter and Hale fired their service revolvers, Ginter said but Caisse's gun or -er was used.

The case of Professor James P. Danehy versus Notre Dame comes to trial at 10 a.m. today in Starke County Circuit Court in Knox, IN.

Danehy originally filed suit Feb. 28, 1977, in St. Joseph Superior Court. According to University regulations, he would automatically become Professor Emeritus at age 65. He reached 65 in June of that year.

Danehy has alleged that the University has "... no rational retirement standards fairly applied to all faculty members." He further maintains that a significant number of faculty members are allowed to continue in full-time positions after reaching age 65.

Notre Dame contends that their policy, at that time, was that all professors automatically reached Emeritus status at age 65. University policy further stipulates that, after reaching Emeritus status, the professor's position as a tenured faculty member would be reevaluated on a yearly basis.

Danehy was allowed to teach a summer school course in 1977, but was dropped from the University payroll in Aug 11, 1977. He still occupies office and laboratory space in the Chemistry building. He was a professor of chemistry here for 26 years.

In March 1977, Danehy was granted a change of venue to the Starke County Circuit Court.

Despositions from the Chemistry Department's Committee on Appointments and Promotions state that the decision to terminate Danehy's employment was based solely on his age.

In pre-trial hearings, the University has agreed that Danehy's age was the sole factor in the decision to terminate his employment.

Danehy decided to file suit after his personal attempts to gain continuation of his position at the University were unsuccessful.

Iranian revolutionaries kill six more men before firing squads

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Revolutionary authorities, rejecting U.S. and other criticism of their execution yesterday, Tehran newspapers reported.

New violence flared in the streets of Tehran in the aftermath of Saturday’s execution of six men, who served as prime minister under the now-exiled shah for 13 years.

In the capital’s eastern section, women fired from a passing car at a group of militia guards of the Islamic revolutionary government, wounding several of them, news reports said. The women were reported to have escaped.

In northern Tehran, five militiamen were killed and four others injured in an explosion late Saturday. The cause was not officially announced, but news reports speculated the militiamen were trying to defuse a bomb or hand grenade when it exploded.

Yesterday’s six executions took place before dawn in four cities, the newspapers said. Those executed included two pro-shah army men, three of the shah’s policemen and a landlord who was charged with illegally seizing land and raping several women.

State radio reports confirmed that three of the executions had taken place.

The official execution toll stands at 76 since revolutionary tribunals began their work after the Feb. 12 fall of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi’s last government. They included 15 military and police officials who worked for the deposed monarch.

Meanwhile, revolutionary officials said 26 prisoners were put on trial in Tehran, reportedly including Gen Amir Hossein Rabii, former chief of the air force, and Manuchehr Azmun, who served as Hovaida’s labor minister.

Class of ’80 sponsors baseball trip

Activities for next year’s Senior Class will be getting under way this April. A trip to Chicago is scheduled to see the Cubs face the Montreal Expos on Saturday, April 21.

Due to scheduling problems, only 50 seats will be available. Sign-up will be on a first-come, first-serve basis. The trip includes round-trip transportation (to leave at 11 a.m.) with beer and a ticket to the game for $10.

All those interested should sign up at the Junior Class office in the basement of LaFortune today and tomorrow from 1-3 p.m.

The class officers are also putting together the Advisory Council for next year. All those interested in being members should contact (1691), Mary (8037), or Tom (1768).
WOW series stresses artists' struggle

by Margie Brazsil
Assistant Saint Mary's Editor

Women's struggle for expression in the arts became the theme of last week's series of presentations on Women and the Arts as part of Saint Mary's Women's Opportunity Week (WOW). WOW is presented annually to give students a chance to see what opportunities are open to them outside of college. The week's activities focused upon literature, music, art and theatre.

The idea that it is more difficult for women to break into fields related to the arts was stressed in most of the presentations. Many of the speakers warned that a woman must work harder than a man to be considered good. "A girl must be five times better than a man to be considered," Brisco, who was the key-note speaker, was instrumental in opening the orchestra field to women. She began the New York Women's Symphony in 1934.

Many myths have been built up about the woman that it takes women themselves, with their own particular style of humor, to separate the truths from the fairy tales, according to Gloria Kaufman, professor at IUSB. Feminist humor became necessary to break down the taboos and extricate the truths, Kaufman said.

"Comedy is the preserver of truth," Kaufman emphasized. She read several selections from contemporary writers who have used this style effectively to stress their ideas.

The arts were represented in both contemporary and ancient times in the works of Margo Hoffman. Hoffman, who showed slides of her work as a contemporary artist, spoke of the living artist as forming, expanding and developing.

Michele Fricke, SMC professor of art, showed slides of women portrayed by ancient artists, emphasizing the honor and respect that was shown to women in the sculptures and paintings. Primitive cultures, involved in a constant struggle for existence, could not afford to place barriers on the roles women played in society.

Davis Lampkin was found dead on the ground near the pickup truck, the high-powered rifle lying next to him. Cleveland Lampkin was found wounded inside McCarter's car and died later at the Community Hospital, police said.

Also arrested at the scene was a fourth brother, Clyde Lampkin, 48, of Gary, IN, whom Ginter said was charged yesterday with unlawful possession of an automatic rifle and possessing a rifle without a proper identification card.

Retirement policy discriminatory

The two-year-old case of Prof. James Danehy vs. the University of Notre Dame came to trial this morning in the Circuit Court of St. Joseph County, Indiana. Danehy, a former professor of chemistry at Notre Dame, has charged that the university's present retirement policy is arbitrary and discriminatory and unjust," and that Notre Dame lacks "...rational retirement standards fairly applied to all faculty members." The Observer concurs with Danehy that the University's present retirement policy is arbitrary and discriminatory.

According to University policy, a professor automatically becomes a professor emeritus at the age of 65. The employment status of professors emeriti is reevaluated on a yearly basis. Thus, some professors are allowed to continue in full-time employment for one to ten years after they reach retirement age, while others are not. Danehy cites as evidence of discrimination the fact that of 81 faculty members who turned 65 between July, 1967 and July, 1976, 34 had their employment terminated, while 27 were allowed to continue in full-time employment for one to six years. Yet, in Danehy's case, the University has given him age as the sole reason for termination of employment.

The Administration cannot be allowed to continue arbitrarily applying its policy of "mandatory" retirement. We question whether this practice is merely a convenient method of phasing out unwanted professors. If this were the case, the University would be acting illegally as well as unethically.

The University needs a clear, rational retirement policy, applied equally and fairly to all faculty members. In our opinion, such a policy would be based not on age, but on evaluations by students and faculty peers.

Notre Dame graduate students considered second class citizens

Just before Christmas break the CLC voted unanimously to request the ASC to give preference to undergraduate juniors applying for the position of campus manager. As the outgoing city council is scheduled to leave office next week, this is a timely issue to present. The City Council, if they give the undergraduates preference they will be returning to the public the decision of which has bound all N.D. students to the "college class" status on this campus. Having been both an undergraduate and a graduate student here at N.D., I know from whence I speak. Only as an undergrad, I was really oblivious to the situation. Do you want other examples? A graduate student applying for the $1,000 per semester federal loan entitled: "National Direct Student Loans." The loan financial aid office, was told that undergraduates are given preference for this loan, and there are no more monies available for graduate students. Or take the funding of some of the graduate programs, including the law school. When the American Bar Association Accreditation Committee was here last year, they made certain suggestions as to how the law school could become a better law school. They suggested that there should be more books in the law library and that more personnel be hired so that faculty members could have more time available to continue their research and publications.

These are good recommendations, only the law school needs money to do these things. But the funds generated by the various graduate programs and the law school are drained out of these programs by the university and put into a general fund, and then used in other areas. And so if it is possible for these students to receive the excellent education that they are paying for, it is not only a more difficult situation for graduate students to study, they leave the University in the middle of their studies and go to the University of Notre Dame, where there are no monies available for graduate students. The solution is obvious: build another grad dorm. But in the meantime, one of the other graduate dorms situated closer to the main portion of campus should be converted to a dorm for both grads and undergrads, if not for graduates totally.

The Notre Dame Family

Noire Dame students are told many times that we are being prepared for life. What exactly is this life that we are being prepared for? Is there indeed life after Notre Dame?

In order to answer these questions, I set out to find the typical Notre Dame graduate. After poring over pages and pages of alumni profiles, a name caught my eye. I called him to arrange an interview, and drove to his suburban house, hoping to find a family that exemplifies everything Notre Dame stands for. As I heard the doorbell ring, the N.D. bongos. I knew this must be the place.

TH: Hi, I'm here for the Observer interview. Mr. and Mrs. Dulac.
Mr. Yes, come on in. Leave your driver's license at the door. You can stay about 15 minutes.
TH: You've got a beautiful house. It's very well kept.
Mrs. That's true. We've got a housekeeper who comes in during the week to pick up after us.
TH: Does she do the laundry too?
Mrs. Only for my husband and the boys.

Mrs. How many youngsters do you have?
Mr. How many youngsters do you have?
Mr.: Three: boys and one girl.
TH: That's a nice ratio. But wouldn't it be a more balanced distribution if she were healthier?
Mr.: A few years ago, we had no girls at all. As soon as we build another girl's bedroom though, we plan to have another daughter, and when you consider the girls across the street who are over here all the time, the ratio's almost 50-50.
TH: Those must be your children's pictures in the hall.
Mrs.: Yes, there's Lewis, Howard, B. P. and into the附加值.
TH: But I thought you only had four children.
Mr.: What happened to the fifth?
Mrs.: We'd threaten to kick the oldest one out of the house because there wasn't enough room. We were only kidding, but he took us seriously and moved out on his own.
TH: Your children are very attractive. What are their interests?
Mr.: During the week I make them stay in and study. On weekends, I let them go outside and play football.

"Houston was the biggest challenge we and I faced in places of work, mothering the children and teaching," says Rita. "Some children in schools don't have mothers. In an unsettled situation they need a mother's touch, a woman's touch." It is the women who know children and understand education.

Before starting to teach, the group decided that the first thing was to make the children feel wanted and loved. The next step would be to build up their self-esteem as individuals. "These children have had a really rough life," Tom explains. "They are from Mexico, don't know our language and aren't documented. They can't communicate with others in society so they are lost wherever they go. We knew from the beginning that the main thing was to try and develop dignity on their own, to realize that they are no different from other people, to have a sense of self-worth."

In Houston they were joined by make the children feel welcome and loved. The next step would be to build up their self-esteem as individuals. "These children have had a really rough life," Tom explains. "They are from Mexico, don't know our language and aren't documented. They can't communicate with others in society so they are lost wherever they go. We knew from the beginning that the main thing was to try and develop dignity on their own, to realize that they are no different from other people, to have a sense of self-worth."

Mrs.: Can I get you something to drink?
Mr.: Nothing. We just don't want our children drinking in the hallways.
TH: It seems your marriage will end up in divorce.
Mr.: We don't want our marriage to end up in divorce, below the national average. Would you agree that your marriage is stable?
Mr.: We didn't have a horse around, in that's what I mean. My wife and I have gotten along fine, even since she adjusted to my sleeping habits.
TH: What do you mean?
Mr.: Well, at first she didn't like the way I get out of bed at midnight (2 on weekends) and into the附加值.

Ricky Flores wrote a piece about the school and undocumented children. "The broken people." All share his feeling.

"Sometimes when I am reaching and looking around, I see the broken, jogs windows," says Jay Brandenberg.

"I am standing there, wearing my coat because of the cold, but I feel as though I am almost a child. I am standing there, wearing my coat because of the cold, but I feel as though I am almost a child."

Without any help, the children feel "like love."

We need more people for next year to help teach and administrate at the school. There are only five of us at the school full time, and there are many faces to the operation of the school that requires more people than we have now. Most of all, we need teachers, bilingual and experienced (for someone who wants experience in teaching Mexican children English/Spanish and other skills.)

Four graduates in pursuit of Christian ideals

Features

Far removed from their old campus, four Notre Dame students are telling many Notre Dame's class of 1978 are looking forward to the end of another school year. While advancing from the role of students to teachers and administra­ tors, they have worked with many handicaps, both in the presence of ethnic diversity and the need to understand the community living and service to others. They have given us much support, and we are grateful for it.

The four—Tom Basile, Jay Brandenberg, Ricky Flores and Tom Basile—have lived together off-campus at Notre Dame for life. What exactly is that life that they have lived together off-campus at Notre Dame? The students agreed to teachers and administra­ tors, they also descended from the university to the elementary level.

They worked with many handicaps, including the need to understand the community living and service to others. They have given us much support, and we are grateful for it.
SMC students to attend mock UN conference in New York

by Pam Degnan
Staff Reporter

Seven Saint Mary's students plan to participate in a collegiate United Nations conference this week in New York City. The conference allows students to assimilate the complex operations of the United Nations and to explore various world problems.

Craig Hartzer, a government professor will accompany the students as their faculty advisor. Hartzer views the UN project as a valuable opportunity for students to appreciate the difficulties that arise in solving international crises.

Hartzer explained that each delegate was responsible for collecting research that later would be utilized in formulating committee strategies.

"Saint Mary's has been assigned to represent the government of Tanzania. The girls using their individual background studies, must try to solve Tanzania's overwhelming crises," Hartzer said.

Assigned to a specific committee, each delegate holds the responsibility of accurately representing the views of each country. A daily agenda is presented to each committee listing the day's activities.

According to Hartzer, the representatives were chosen on a voluntary basis and must pay for their traveling expenses.

"This is the first time Saint Mary's has participated in this program. I hope that in the future, a campus organization can allocate funds for student participation in a worthwhile project like this."

"I was awakened by the sound of several individuals trying to awaken another member of my section," said Ryan Berkenmoe, a resident of the 'B' section of the Fisher fourth floor. "This seemed to culminate when I heard a firecracker go off. I then heard screams, and the voice of Bro. Joe (McTaggart) yelling, 'Try to put it out.'"

Another hall resident, Tim Tripp, reported that when he entered the room, flames were waist-high and smoke was pouring out of the area.

"I have an idea who did it," said McTaggart, "and I'm convinced it was not someone from the hall who is responsible. I'm also sure that there was no malicious intent involved—it was just a silly, stupid trick that led to a very serious incident."

Hench said that he is requesting that students wait until this backlog and distribution are cleared to apply for refunds on albums that were not available.

Defective albums will be reordered during the week following the distribution of the final albums. Any faulty records that were not turned in previously can be replaced at that time, and students receiving albums from this last order will have a chance to assure their quality.

There are no definite plans for a sale of this type next semester, but Student Union is examining several possibilities, Hench said.
Neville becomes first OC commissioner
by Janet Rigaux

On April 1, junior Shannon Neville became the first off-campus commissioner, replacing John Fitzpatrick, who held the unofficial office of off-campus commissioner this year.

According to Neville, her main functions will be head of the off-campus council. "I see my most important job as representing the interests of the off-campus students," she said. Her other duties include being a voting member of both the Board of Commissioners and the Campus Life Council.

Neville stated that her most important goals were the organization of the off-campus council with the formulation of the by-laws for that council. Also, she plans to continue publishing the off-campus newspaper, Off the Record, and continue the shuttle bus service for off-campus students.

Neville is also concerned with the rezoning of the newly-designated off-campus room in LaFortune. "The room will be great when it is completely finished," Neville said. "It will serve as the communication center for off-campus students. Right now we're having trouble getting students to use the room, however."

Neville expects that more students will use the room after its grand opening in May. "The ceremony is still in the planning stages right now," Neville explained. "But it will be an official way to let off-campus students know that they have a meeting place on campus."

Another of Neville's present objectives is a meal plan, which will be an official way to let off-campus students know that they have a meal plan. "The meal plan is important if possible," Neville explained.

There are two types of off-campus students, according to Neville, and each has different needs. "There are those who moved off-campus after being

This is a get-beyond-Noire-Dame week. Pay special attention to social-service articles in the Observer. Put a real emphasis on the Hunger Coalition container before entering the dining hall.

Waste no food this week.

If you're not involved in some volunteer service project, think of this as a possibility for the rest of the semester. Check with your Community Service Director or the hunger coalition for on-campus opportunities.

That will allow us to include 64 more teams with little scheduling conflicts.

Marquard added that, what the increase really means is that there will be more games each night of first round com-

"The problems in scheduling a tournament like this are incredibly many," also added late. "Since we have the motion, which is considered illegal.

Director, Col. John Stevens, to submit an

"It's the view that the Bookstore Tournament technically violates several of the provisions set forth by the NCAA," notes Last. "But I believe the tournament, in its true purpose and meaning, really does not erode what the NCAA rule intends to prevent, such as extra practices or illegal tournament competition for varsity athletes.

In essence, the NCAA rule allows varsity athletes to only participate in intercollegiate events and NCAA-sanctioned events, such as summer leagues.

"The NCAA fears that Notre Dame's intentions regarding Bookstore Basketball may be honest," said Last, "other universities may use our tournament as a future loophole to circumvent NCAA rules.

"There is virtually no chance of the varsity basketball players playing this year. Our only hope for future years is that the rule might be changed to allow such pure athletic competition among students.

"Whether or not the tournament will remain as popular without the varsity basketball players is questionable. Fourth-year players, not affected by this ruling, so the 'big name' will still be present.

After yesterday's registration, however, there seems to be no doubt of the interest of the campus community. Out of a hypothetical 236 openings had been filled within two hours, Last expanded the field to 320 teams.

Wildcats freeze Irish nine as weather numbs players

By Mike Henry

The Notre Dame track team dropped an 8-3 decision to Northwestern State on Saturday afternoon. The Irish, who opened the season in better than expected form, were coming off a disappointing weekend in Texas where they were defeated by lopsided scores of 33-1, 35-0, and 16-0.

The Irish found themselves up against the cold wind and snowflakes that were falling in large amounts. The track was covered with snow and ice, making it difficult for the athletes to compete.

The teams faced off in various events, with the Irish and Wildcats vying for the top spots. In the 3000-meter run, Tony Lattig won for the Irish, while in the mile, Mike Hernandez took the victory. In the 800-meter run, Tim Twardzik took the lead for the Irish. In the 440-meter run, Ken Brainin of Northwestern State emerged victorious.

The Irish track team will have to make adjustments to their training and practice routines to prepare for the upcoming competitions. The cold weather conditions make it challenging for the athletes to maintain their fitness levels.

The next meet for the Irish will be at the NCAA championships in the near future. The team plans to continue preparing for the event, with a focus on improving their performance in the cold conditions.
