SG defines roles political branch

by Robbi Moore
Staff Reporter

"Student Government" is one term which can be used in reference to two different organizations. Broadly speaking, "Student Government" defines four branches known as Student Government, Student Union, Hall President's Council, and Judicial Council. Narrowly speaking, "Student Government" is the branch whose political purpose is to represent the student body to the administration.

"We are the voice of the students, we represent, not mediators," said Bill Roche, this year's Student Body President. The goal of SG - the branch is to increase student input into all aspects of University life and administrative decisions.

In keeping daily contact with the students, the members of SG take the views of the student body to the members of the administration and, hopefully, influence policy decision-making. "We see ourselves as student advocates," said Bill Vita, SBVP, "and we try to be articulate spokesmen."

In the opinion of Roche, the SG really has no "power," in the sense that "power" means the ability to make decisions and to implement them. Hopefully, what the SG has is "influence." When the administration is making a decision, the SG leaders want to be there - to voice the views of the students and to make a good case.

Roche pointed out that the SG is not always immediately successful. It does not always get the decision it wants, but the results of its efforts may not always be measured in terms of short-term success. Often, they are matters of long-term consideration.

Helping Roche is the Board of Commissioners, of which he is the chairman. The nine-member board sets the broad policies for the SG, establishes the budgets, and selects the new SB treasurer and SU director each year. In the past this organization has been somewhat of a "rubber stamp," according to Roche, who intends to emphasize its role in SG more than usual this year.

The student's views are also heard through the eighteen cabinet members, each of whom is an expert in his or her area of expertise. Some of the more discussed issues include Housing, Academics, and Social Concerns, Social Life, etc.

Price pointed out several developments in male on-campus housing. No overcrowding is evident with the exception of a third floor in the student's dormitories. Due to both the cancellations of freshmen and the attrition of male upperclassmen, male students on the housing waiting list have been permitted to move on campus. Price said that he did not know why students from the waiting list were being allowed to move on campus since the dormitory roofs have not been removed in other dorms.

Furthermore, the women's housing situation in not under such control, according to Price. While temporary spaces have decreased in the Fairley residence hall, a new study space has been converted to offer the Saint Mary's student an ideal housing arrangement," Owens said. Yet, so far, no positive action has been taken.

According to the Housing Department, the temporary freshman housing problem exists in order to prove more "comfortable living arrangements." Issues also concern the number of students per room, some freshmen will be housed temporarily in McCandless Hall study lounges. Although fall enrollment has not always immediately been "settled comfortably." While Saint Mary's is experiencing a minor housing problem, there is no housing "crunch," according to Owens, yet the college faces two immediate problems: an overwhelming number of off-campus students are requesting rooms on campus, and some freshmen live in temporary make-shift rooms. Last year 140 students were off campus. This year the Housing Department foresaw only a handful boarding off campus.

"Students are satisfied with the Saint Mary's campus and the opportunities that it has to offer," says Owens.

Last spring the administration discussed the possibility of buying a large family house in South Bend and moving it on the college grounds. "Removals would have been geared to offer the Saint Mary's student an ideal housing arrangement," Owens said. Yet, so far, no positive action has been taken.

Committee Against Racism hopes to stop KKK march

MUNCIE, Ind. (AP) - An organization calling itself the Committee Against Racism says it will try to stop a Ku Klux Klan march today in this city known as "Middletown, U.S.A." The KKK obtained a parade permit for the six-block march through Muncie's downtown, starting at 2 p.m. Saturday.

Gas station operators call price estimates worthless

WASHINGTON (AP) - Spokesmen for gas station operators say the Energy Department's new listings of "estimated" gasoline ceiling prices are worthless and misleading and should be scrapped. The department has admitted the price ceiling figures it released Monday were inaccurate and dated back to Aug. 6 - prompting mistaken complaints by motorists and a wave of outrage from dealers. An updated list released Thursday did nothing to lessen the dealers' ire. In issuing its revised list Thursday, the Energy Department warned that its price estimates for eight major brands in 20 cities might be off by 10 cents or more per gallon and do not tell motorists how much any station can legally charge.

SU stands as self-regulating

Robbie Moore
Staff Reporter

The Notre Dame Student Union is a self-regulating body, one of the four branches of Student Government subject to approval of the Board of Commissioners. Its basic function is "to make life happier" for the students, according to Tom Hanel, this year's SU director.

For starters, the Cultural Arts Commission (CAC) provides and organizes functions which appeal to the student's finer tastes. Three annual events are the Sophomore Literary Festival, the Collegiate Jazz Festival, and the Midwest Blues Festival. The CAC also takes charge of the Senior Arts Festival and the Student Players, a theater group.

The Social Commission heads the traditional Welcome Week. In addition, it operates The FRESHMEN - Are you interested studying in Ireland or Rome during your Sophomore year?

SMC Student Government sponsors used book sale

Saint Mary's Student Government will sponsor a used book sale next week as their first project of the year.

"This is a new project for Student Government and we hope to see it become a permanent one in the future," said Mary Beth Dohrback, vice president for Academic Affairs.

"It is a non-profit student service provided by Student Government."

The actual sale will begin Wednesday, continuing through at least Friday. Exact times for the sale will be posted next week.

Anyone wanting to sell used books should take them to the Student Government office in the basement of Regina. The books should be dropped off on Monday and Tuesday between 10 am and 4 pm, and between 6 pm and 9 pm Tuesday.

Students who sell their books will set their own prices. When the sale is completed, students will be able to collect their money and any books that were not sold.

Gift pushes ND past goal

The largest gift ever received from a living person—$7 million—has put the University of Notre Dame’s development campaign of $130 million over its goal more than two years ahead of schedule.

In announcing that a total of $130.3 million in gifts and commitments has been received since the five-year drive opened in April, 1977, Notre Dame’s president, Fr. Theodore M. Hesburgh, credited a $7 million gift from an anonymous donor with taking the effort over the top. The gift, Father Hesburgh said, will build the University’s 25th endowed chair, enabling it to add 100 women and 100 undergraduate student bodies from 6,800 to 7,300. The University now has 1,385 women undergraduates.

While the goal has been reached, James W. Fusk, vice president for Public Relations and Development, emphasized that the campaign will continue—"Inflation has eroded our ability to meet our institutional needs with the original cost estimates. We now have to raise more money to accomplish the same purposes."

The Campaign for Notre Dame grew out of the 1973 report of a Committee on University Priorities, which provided a blueprint for the academic development of Notre Dame. The major thrust of the campaign was to increase Notre Dame’s endowment, which currently stands at $127 million, in order to protect the quality of academic programs from the adverse effects of inflation. As an example, the program set out to fund 40 endowed chairs in order to underwrite permanently key full professorships across the University. Twenty-six of these professorships have been designated, at $800,000 each. Overall, about three-fourths of the $92 million goal for endowments has been reached.

du Lac sets rules

According to du Lac, Notre Dame's student handbook, the idea that "morality cannot be legislated is a dangerous simplification." With this in mind, rest assured that you will quickly encounter the ground rules of life at Notre Dame. Of perennial interest to incoming freshmen are University rules concerning drinking and parietals. Many times in the next four years you will hear the word parietals, usually preceded by an obscene modifier. The term is simply another way of saying visiting hours. Because coed dormitories do not exist at Notre Dame, each hall has specific hours during which members of the opposite sex may visit dorm rooms.

The reasoning behind parietals is outlined in du Lac: "Coeducation allows men and women to contribute to one another's education and to form genuine friendships. ... In the proper context visitation can facilitate personal and social development and enhance the quality of life on our campus."

The University limits parietals to between 11 a.m. and midnight on weekdays and extends the hours until 2 a.m. Friday and Saturday. Should you happen to get caught breaking parietals, you may choose to have your case heard by your rector with appeals to be heard by the Dean of Students, or to be heard by the judicial board in your hall, with appeals going to the rector. In especially serious cases, hall authorities or the Dean of Students may treat violations as though they were violations of University rules or regulations instead of hall infractions.

Notre Dame's rules concerning alcohol are consistent with the laws of Indiana, which means the legal drinking age is 21. Students are allowed to drink in their rooms, but may not have kegs on campus. Drinking in common rooms is also prohibited. The possession or consumption of alcoholic beverages is not allowed on the grounds of the campus or in nonresidential buildings without special permission from the Dean of Students.

Although these are University rules, each hall has its own guidelines for drinking and parties. The rector and hall staff can tell you your dorm's drinking policies.

A junior's perspective....

Upon returning to school my Junior year I have mixed emotions; some sad, but mostly happy. I am living in Dorm 3 at St. Mary's College. When I arrived on campus this week I was not sure I would like it. My first two years at St. Mary's, I felt there was an alien when I arrived at school. There were none of these anxieties upon returning this year. It seemed as though I fit right in with the scheme of things. I feel as though I belonged and had a special place for myself.

There is one major reason why I have found a special place on campus which is the close friends I have made during the last two years and I'm sure it will be the same for the last two years of my college career.

As far as my academics at St. Mary's are concerned, I'm really looking forward to this year. As a Junior, I start working at the hospitals in South Bend and the surrounding communities. This summer I worked as a nurse's aid in a hospital in my home town and really enjoyed it. It is a very rewarding job, and I'm sure it will make school much more enjoyable for my last two years.

So, I'm half way through my college career. I have a lot of memories--good and bad--of my freshman year, but I'm really looking forward to the next two years and get through them. The time will fly by and I won't be there long enough to regret it. There's no one to tell me I can't. I can't just stay in bed the next morning because I don't feel like going to class. I have to accept responsibility for my own actions. I hope I'm ready for this freedom. I hope I can use it to my advantage and not abuse it. Actually I'm looking forward to starting school. I'm thinking and praying I'll prove equal or even better than equal to the test.

Betsy Wilson
Junior

A senior's perspective....

Well here it is, the beginning of my senior year. I've waited a long time for this moment and now that it's here I'm not sure I'm so excited about it.

It's a scary feeling to wonder what the future will hold. I will be leaving the circle of people I have known for the last two years and will enter the unknown. I think I was ready for this, I think I was prepared. The toughest part will probably be leaving my friends behind. Since coming here as a freshman I have made many friends from all over the United States. I have made friends with people from home for the first time and to encourage them to go back to being a nobody and I'm sure they will.

Diane Wilson
Senior

A freshman's perspective....

I'm a little scared. I'll be in a world which will mainly be made up of strangers. And then shorty I'll have to go back to being a nobody and I'll have to do so with free minds.

The pride of graduation is fading, leaving only memories of high school, the kids, the teachers, even the lockers that never worked when I was in a hurry.

Along with the increased responsibility comes increased freedom. The freedom to do pretty much what I want. I can stay up as late I want. I don't have to worry about being up in time for my classes. I can underwrite the new edition, "as we walked by."

Everyone seemed to be having a good time, but in the noisy, laughing crowd I felt isolated, lonely and terribly out of place.

I stayed long enough to drink one beer, then I found my roommate (in the dark I wasn't even sure I'd recognize her) and told her I was walking back to campus. When I got back to my room, I wore my HTH on an eight-page letter and went to bed.

Before I came to Notre Dame, someone told me that my freshman year would be one of the best but hardest years of my life. My friends could not have spoken truer words.

Adjusting to college life is difficult for everyone. Some people have problems with the adaptation period more seriously than others, but every freshman at one time or another feels the pang of missing home and friends. When I arrived at Notre Dame, I was devastated by the distance which I thought I felt from home. When I got closer I realized, with disappointment, that I was mistaken. The only cure for the freshman syndrome--and a sure one at that--is to take things easy.

So, after the first few weeks of school my freshman year was con- sistent of seeing people from a distance who I thought I knew from high school. When I got closer, I realized, with appointment, that I was mistaken. The only cure for the freshman syndrome--and a sure one at that--is to take things easy.

Slowly but surely, you'll get to know your roommate and other students on campus while the walk to the dining hall won't seem so long, and over Christ- mas break you'll find yourself missing people from home for friends from school.

I can't remember exactly how the weekend went, but everyone had a beer in their hand.

I've heard some guy who looked like seniors down something about "checking out the new shipment," "as we walked by."

And yet right now, I'm basically very excited. It's the beginning of a year that everyone classifies as the best. We've been through the roughest and have made it. Now we just have a good times left to enjoy and happy memories to accumulate. And I'm going to pray that when May comes we will be ready for whatever the future holds.

Donoosnry

by Garry Trudeau

I'll never forget my first night at Notre Dame. When I arrived, I despaired of Lewis Hall before dinner. The only room was out with her parents, so I bravely ventured out to the Dining Hall alone. I think I finally found it about a half hour after the meal started.

My first meal in the dining hall was quite an experience. I couldn't believe what a zoo that place was. I was a little nervous about what to order and what to eat, but everyone else was just as new and I managed to fit right in with the rest. And I was able to eat a whole new world (at least to me) for the first time.

We began together by the river.....

by K. Connelly

The history of Notre Dame begins almost 150 years ago, when Fr. Stephen Theodore Badin established a mission on the present University grounds for a tribe of the Portawawin Indians. It was located near a community which came to be known as South Bend, but which had also been called Big Bend, then a young riverside settlement, was a prime site for milling and lumber industries which developed in the area. The development of Notre Dame paralleled the growth in population and industry in the neighboring towns.

In 1832 Badin purchased 534 acres of land surrounding St. Joseph's and St. Mary's lakes where he built an orphanage and a log chapel. The orphanage was closed down, but the log chapel remained, serving the area as a mission station. When the seat of the Holy Cross in LeMans, France, requested teaching brothers from the Congregation of the Holy Cross in LeMans, France, Conception Superior Basil Moreau responded in 1842 by sending six brothers to help educate the Catholic youth of South Bend and the emerging Mishawaka communities. The brothers were succeeded by a young priest named Edward Frederick Sorin who founded the university in that same year. The bishop of Indiana had promised to import Sorin the property badin deeded to Vincennes if the energetic Frenchman could build a college in the site within two years, and continue the instruction of brothers to teach in diocesan schools.

In 1844 the University of Notre Dame du Lac, although it consisted of only a few buildings, 25 students and a small faculty of priests, brothers and sisters, was granted a charter by the Indiana legislature.

During the near 150 years the University operated a Manual Labor school (1844), a "prep" school, a Minn department for elementary students, a department for the Deaf and Dumb (1868), and a law school (1869). The University also offered programs in graduate and undergraduate studies, and in military training during the first and second world wars and summer sessions beginning in 1918.

The University continued to grow as the surrounding community prospered, relying on the neighboring towns for students and for support despite continuous financial difficulties and an outbreak of cholera in 1854.

In 1852 the Studenbaker brothers arrived in the South Bend area and established what was to become an internationally famous motor company, drawing thousands of new residents to the South Bend area, and hundreds of students to Notre Dame.

When the Studenbaker plant closed in the 1960s, South Bend and Mishawaka became the major employers in the area.

In recent years South Bend and Mishawaka have engaged in impressive programs to revitalize the economy of the area and renovate residential areas. The New University Park Mall and the 100 Center in Mishawaka and the Scotsdale Mall, the Century Center and Riverbend Plaza in South Bend are all promising indicators of new prosperity for the area. In South Bend neighborhood organizations and volunteer groups are not uncommon, and the area has served as a test site for various national neighborhood and residence renovation programs.

The neighborhood has gone through many changes as well. It has gone from the industrial era, of over 8,012 from every state and 69 countries today. Tuition has risen from $300 to $4,150 and acreage has increased from 342 to 1,250 in the past 110 years.

Notre Dame's growth is directly linked to the surrounding community and the history of our community cannot properly be considered without the university in that same year. The bishop of Indiana, the Rev. Joseph, and the Rev. John Joseph, served the area.

This statement may alienate any friend I may have among those who are in the grounds of extreme mental abler­bility, but I like South Bend, and what is more, in general I find it a source of enrichment experiences and entertain­ment. I hope that freshmen will discover for themselves that there is more to the land beyond our borders than "student bars." I wouldn't want you to take my word for granted more than I would want you to listen to the complaints of those who have never ventured beyond the bars. Find out for yourselves.

In the future, it will be a challenge, and in these Features pages I hope to be of some assistance, but an afternoon in an Amish community, fishing, skiing or discovering a new restaurant worth the time, the bus fare and missing a 1 p.m. to midnight "Happy Hour."
Who's who at Notre Dame?

James A. Roemer, a South Bend native, has been dean of students at Notre Dame since July, 1973. He is basically charged with enforcing the rules and regulations of the University.

Roemer earned a B.A. in economics from Notre Dame in 1951, and graduated from the Notre Dame Law School in 1955. He has served in a part-time position as city attorney of South Bend, and has also held legal positions in the St. Joseph County Prosecutor's office, the South Bend Redevelopment Department and the St. Joseph County Board of Zoning Appeals.

He is a member of the Urban League, the United Negro College Fund and Neighborhood Study Help, Inc.

Dr. Timothy O'Meara has served as Notre Dame's provost since last September. He has responsibility under Hesburgh for the administration, coordination, and development of all academic activities and functions of the University.

O'Meara joined the faculty in 1962, serving as Kenmy Professor of mathematics, and twice as chairman of the mathematics department. He also was a member of several University committees, including the Committee on University Priorities and the Trustees' Faculty Affairs Committee.

He has asked that his term as provost be limited to four years, so he may return to full-time teaching and research.

First educated by the Christian Brothers of Ireland in Cape Town, South Africa, O'Meara earned his doctorate in 1953 at Princeton University. He has held teaching positions in New Zealand, Canada and Germany, as well as the California Institute of Technology.

Fr. Edmund Joyce has been serving as executive vice president and treasurer of the University since 1952. In addition to those executive responsibilities, he is also chairman of the Faculty Board in Control of Athletics and the University Building Committee.

Born in Honduras on January 26, 1917, Joyce earned a B.S. in accounting in 1937. He became a certified public accountant in 1939. He was ordained to the priesthood in Notre Dame's Sacred Heart Church. After ordination, Joyce was named assistant vice president for Business Affairs at the University. He became acting vice president in 1974.

...Campus overcrowding

Price said that he believes Lewis did not lose social space in this conversion; rather he thinks that the existing space is better utilized. The old bike storage area has been converted into a new study lounge and into storage space for the new residents.

While housing in both Farley basements and Lewis is permanent for this year, Price disclosed that there are eight girls in temporary quarters in both the Breen-Phillips and Walsh basements. Apparently, the students living in these accommodations are not freshmen but upperclassmen who moved on campus last January, but who were not guaranteed housing this year amidst the rumors of a lottery. Housing was eventually provided for these students in both BF and Walsh.

Irish of 79-80 hope to follow tradition

Notre Dame. The name means many things to many people. But when you talk about sports it means one thing—winning. In 1976, the Irish began with Rockne and the Gipper. It continued under Leahy and Parseghian, and the tradition lives on today. Although they have faltered at times, the Irish usually come out on top, and one of the most important things they have to do is to compete against each other in fall drill.

I worked with Dave all summer and he was very helpful to me. He helped me learn a lot of the positions and was kind enough to surprise me a little, since I'll be competing against him."

The competition at Notre Dame is going to be a new twist for Hunter, and he realizes that. "It's an adjustment that(22,31),(991,977)

perhaps the best example of the rookie role was seen this past January, when Notre Dame freshman were responsible for a series of winning plays that returned a punt for a touchdown, saving fourth-and-inches tackles...all of which helped the Irish score the last 2 points in a 33-34 team win over Purdue.

And the growing trend should continue with the Notre Dame football team this year. After all, most collegiate football programs are proud to return ten starters from last year's squad, All-American Digger Phelps and returning backer Dave Deane. Notre Dame's football team in the past three seasons, as the Irish squad won three national championships in 1979 and 1978 and finished second in the NCAA

The tradition began with football, but over the years it has extended to the other varsity sports on campus, and even the various club sports are proud to carry the name Notre Dame. All of which helped the players into Notre Dame, and one of the wide outs, Hunter, will have to compete against each other in fall drill.

The competition at Notre Dame is going to be a new twist for Hunter, and he realizes that. "It's an adjustment that I'll have to make. But I have confidence in myself. How much I play depends on how I do in the fall drill."

Despite the saying reports on Hunter, who was also a basketball All-American, Notre Dame head coach Dan Devine intends to let him prove himself on the field, and not in the locker room. "I've seen other freshmen who have looked just as good," offered the low-key Irish mentor. "He's still going to have to beat out Condeni and the others.

"It's possible that this entire freshman class is better than we thought they were, though. Some of them are getting so arrogant that they'll break a team.

Other freshmen to keep an eye on are defensive backs Rod Bone and Dave Deane. Bone accumulated a perfect 4.0 grade point average at Mayfield High School at Las Cruces, New Mexico. The engineering hopeful lettered three times each in football, basketball, and track, and was named to the All-American squad in Schollieatched Coach Joe Gaffney, a Schollie Coach prep All-American selection, was tabbed the Most Valuable Player in this summer's Indiana North-South all-star game. A graduate of Muncie (Ind.) Northside High School, Duerrson punt and returned kicks in addition to playing offensive and defensive back for the same school that produced former Irish cornerback Luther Bradley. Devine said that we may have an eye on him as a punt returner.
