WASHINGTON (AP) - The Libyan government has offered "profuse apologies" for the attack Sunday on the U.S. embassy in Tripoli and has increased the guard there, but the response to a U.S. protest was inadequate, State Department officials said yesterday.

"We will be satisfied only when we have satisfactory assurances for the security both of our embassy and our people in Libya," department spokesman David Passage said.

Fourteen embassy dependents left Libya yesterday some flying to Paris and the others to Rome.

Libya's response came from Ali Turayki, the foreign minister, to William Eagleton, the top U.S. diplomat in Libya.

But the State Department wants Libya's leader, Col. Muammar Khadafi, to acknowledge the attack as a way of reassuring that the Libyan people understand the embassy is not to be a target of violent demonstrations.

Only one policeman was outside the embassy when some 2,000 people, carrying pro-Libyan banners and spurred on by a sound truck, assembled outside. The attack in Libya by demonstrators proclaiming solidarity with Iran has prompted the United States to reassess security problems faced by its diplomatic personnel in Islamic countries.

State Department spokesman Hudding Carter said Sunday the reassessment will focus on the situation in Libya.

The attack in Libya followed by six days the U.S. decision to withdraw non-essential diplomatic personnel and dependents from American missions in 11 Moslem countries.

Some demonstrators clambered up the wall to the second floor and others set fire to the building. There were no injuries and all 14 American employees inside escaped unharmed.

A U.S. request last week that the guard be increased was ignored, according to State Department officials.

Trouble in Middle East causes silver and gold rush

The hostage situation in Iran and reports of anti-United States violence in the Middle East yesterday pushed silver futures over $20 an ounce and sent gold to within a few dollars tonight and a chance for rain tomorrow. "It seems clear that the increasing uncertainty over the Middle East is causing a rush on gold," said an analyst. "I think this thing is just going to keep expanding until something is done to turn the situation around."

Carter's mom mum on Khomeini; yells for help

CHICAGO (AP) - President Carter's mother is staying mum now on the subject of Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini. And at a Polish-American Congress banquet here Sunday, Jimmy Carter called for help when a reporter asked her if she regretted her remark last week on the religious leader. "No, no, no, no--Help!" she said, waving her arms and looking around and for security agents. At a New Hampshire meeting last week. Mrs. Carter said of Khomeini, "If I had a million dollars to spare, I'd look for someone to kill him!"

Low-key because of Iran

Carter to announce campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter plans to keep his re-election announcement to-day a low-key affair because of the Iran crisis, but campaign aides are pushing hard to raise $2.5 million this week in a coast-to-coast series of fundraisers.

Carter plans to make the announcement sometime during the day, probably at the White House. He will then attend a fundraising dinner tonight at a Washington hotel. He already has recorded a five-minute television announcement to be broadcast at 8:55 p.m. EST Tuesday on the CBS network. The campaign paid for the air time.

Campainge aides say they have organized nearly 2,600 "grassroots" receptions around the country to coincide with the announcement. The parties, mostly in private homes, are intended to raise money, distribute campaign material and get volunteer workers moving.

Also keyed to the announcement are large fundraising dinners during the week in Washington and 11 other cities.

Carter originally had planned to make a six-state campaign swing starting tomorrow, including appearances at fundraiser dinners in New York, Chicago, Atlanta, Austin, Texas. But he cancelled those travel plans because of the Iran crisis.

The fundraising efforts themselves, however, are going ahead full steam even without Carter's personal presence.

The committee discusses rape

by Rosemary Mills
Editor-in-Chief

A committee on rape awareness last night discussed expanding the Rape Awareness program presented to the Notre Dame women resident assistants two weeks ago. Susan Tamborini, director of Holy Cross Hall, and Katie Kearney, director of Student Life Aid and assistant rector of Farley Hall, related that a representative from student government had approached her. According to Kearney, student government wishes to expand the program with a 20 minute to half-hour presentation on rape, possibly in each section of the ND dormitories.

Another option discussed included using the Hall Presidents Council as a core group to bring programs into the halls. Sr. John Miriam Jones, associate provost, noted that "the sensitivity of the person who relates the information is essential."

James Roemer, dean of students, added that he would like to consult such people as Pat Crosst, director of Psychological Services and Fr. Greg Green, assistant vice-president for Student Affairs. After a discussion of these and other options, a subcommittee was appointed to present specific ideas on the make-up of a program and who should relate the information. The group will include Green, Crosst, HFC chairperson Ellen Dorney, and Bill Roche, student body president.

Roche asked about the inclusion of a rape awareness program in the RA training. Roemer said he would relay the question to Green, who is in charge of all RAs. Kearney then noted that while present RA's need to be informed about rape, the program will be presented after the appointment of RA's for 1980-81 and that both groups can benefit from the presentation.

Jones then asked if a regular system could be instituted which would alert the women residents if a rape occurred. Roemer suggested that Rex Rakow, assistant director of ND security, take this responsibility. Rakow will be working the 4 p.m. to midnight shift.

Glenn Terry, director of ND security, reported that security personnel could voluntarily attend a Sex-Offense-Staff (S-O-S) presentation on rape. Missy Hennesberger, an ND senior who works with S-O-S, protested, "I think it is important that all Security people be made sensitive about rape."

Terry agreed, but stated that there were problems with scheduling and that Security personnel would attend the presentations on their own time, for which they would be paid overtime. Roemer then suggested that a record be kept of all security employees who attend the program and that all others be encouraged to attend future training sessions.

The problem is real

Dear Editor:

A security problem has unquestionably arisen at the University of Notre Dame. The problem in question is a matter of funds. It may be a matter of funds then the University should have no problem, especially when one considers the gravity of the situation at hand and the financial solvency of the institution.

The problem is real. The solution is not. The solution is at hand. One can only pray to God that some action is taken before a student is killed. I can only pray that this letter does not become another echo in the Editorials Tuesday, December 4, 1979 - page 4

Two die in Puerto Rican attack

TOA BAJA, Puerto Rico (AP) - Unidentified gunmen ambush- ed a busload of U.S. Navy personnel yesterday morning in a barrage of pistol and shotgun fire, killing two servicemen and wounding 10 other persons, authorities reported.

The wounded included three women. One of the women and two or three of the men were hospitalized in serious condition.

No one claimed immediate responsibility for the attack, the first fatal assault against the U.S. military in Puerto Rico in almost a decade. Violence by underground pro-independence groups generally has been limited to attacks on property.

Rear Adm. Arthur K. Knowlton, senior U.S. naval officer in the Caribbean, called it a "heinous crime we cannot tolerate." The Navy said names of the victims were being withheld until next-of-kin could be notified.

But local authorities said the two dead men were the bus driver and a radar technician. The yellow bus was taking 18 Navy communications technicians - all enlisted personnel - from the Sabana Seca Navy base in this town 10 miles west of San Juan to work at a transmitting tower about a mile away, across non-Navy land.

At a spot where a narrow two-lane asphalt highway passes a factory and a drive-way, police said, a van blocked the path of the bus and terrorists opened fire, apparently with a shotgun and pistols. One survivor, who did not give his name, said the driver was killed instantly by a shot under the right eye, and a passenger took the wheel and drove the bus back to Sabana Seca. Survivors told police the terrorists' van sped away after the attack.

The windshield and front side windows of the bus were riddled with bullet holes - police counted 41 - and shards of glass lay in a pool of blood beneath the first passenger seat to the left of the aisle.

The critically wounded were taken to the Veterans Administration hospital in San Juan, and those in serious condition were hospitalized at the Roosevelt Roads Navy Base.

Jackson scores in victory

by Mark Perry
Sports Editor

Strong inside play by Tracy Jackson in the first half and a fast break help Notre Dame hold off a strong Iowa State team 87-77, in basketball action as the ACC last night. Jackson scored 11 of his game-high 20 points in the first half and four of nine free throws generated by his play as Notre Dame passed the ball to him.

The Irish built up a 43-36 intermediate lead that was never challenged in the second half. Kelly Tripucka added points for Notre Dame, and the twos followed combined for 12 points in the first seven minutes to build up a 20-10 lead. Iowa State rallied to within four at 13-17, but a 12-6 Outreach, led by six points from Jackson, put the Irish out of reach.

"Tracy had a lot of confidence going when he scored," Notre Dame coach Digger Phelps. "He really needed a game like this. He did a good job of hitting the boards, hustled throughout the game and shot very well."

"We played well because we did an excellent job of forcing them into our transition game," Phelps added. "We gave up too many fast breaks, especially (with) Hanchlik out. We gave up too many easy points, but you have to gamble with the lead."

Iowa State coach, Tripucka, and the rest of the Irish forgot about the Irish, Phelps got more than he expected from his younger players that enabled Notre Dame to keep it.

"I hope we can continue to hold the ball, play good ball games thus far," Phelps observed. "He has given us 13 points in three games in both games, and really goes to the basket strong. Both Paxson and Andree have been doing well in pressure situations.

"You have to play with high intensity the whole game if you want to be a good team," Nance noted. "We need just a couple of minutes of intensity, not just a couple of minutes where we got knocked out. Notre Dame played very well for this time of year, he added. "They are deserving of their hopes, have excellent chemistry." [continued on page 7]"
