Khomeini makes appeal urging national unity

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) - Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini urgedly appealed for national unity yesterday after two days of clashes between opponents and supporters of Iran's Islamic Constitution that was overwhelmingly approved by voters this week. He asked the nation to focus instead on the conflict with the United States.

At a news conference, Foreign Minister Sadegh Gharibabadi said he and Khomeini agreed the U.N. Security Council resolutions on the U.S.-Iran crisis was a "step forward" to negotiated settlement, the official Fars news agency reported. The crisis centers on demands that the ousted Shah be sent to Iran in return for the release of 10 American hostages held in the occupied U.S. Embassy since Nov. 4.

At the White House, meanwhile, spokesman Jody Powell denied President Carter had told Congressmen he was hoping a policy of economic denial - "turning the screws a little tighter" every few days - would induce Iran to free the hostages.

Speaking to a group of about 100 House members Wednesday night at the White House, Carter was reportedly by participants as having outlined a series of economic measures he is preparing to take to end the crisis.

But Powell said the president spoke mainly about actions already taken and "in process," rather than laying out prospective moves.

Powell said the administration found Gharibabadi's statement on the U.N. resolution "interesting." Powell said "we will have to see what, if anything, comes out of the statement."

Khomeini issued his unity call after meeting in the holy city of Qom with Ayatollah Mohammed Kazem Shariat-Madari, who has said the Islamic charter does not give adequate autonomy to Iran's minorities and vests too much power in Khomeini.

The demonstrations, members of Azerbaijan's predominant Turkish population, also said they opposed the Constitution.

The increase in food prices. The largest since a 4.2 percent rise in November of 1979, means consumers will be paying more for groceries in the near future, especially for meat items.

Poultry prices increased 21.5 percent, while beef, and veal and pork prices also rose sharply by after declining in October.

The overall increase in wholesale prices follows a 1 percent rise in October and a 1.4 percent jump in September.

Wholesale food prices increase

WASHINGTON (AP) - Led by sharply higher prices for poultry and beef, wholesale food prices increased by 2.6 percent in November, the worst monthly increase in five years and a clear warning that consumers face higher grocery bills in weeks ahead.

Overall wholesale prices increased 1.3 percent during the month and were up at an annual rate of 12.8 percent for the year, the Labor Department said yesterday.

The increase makes it virtually certain that 1979 will be the worst year for inflation at the wholesale level since 1974, when prices rose 18.3 percent.

Wholesale prices increased 9.1 percent last year.

Energy prices rose by 2.5 percent in November, the smallest amount since February, but were still 62.7 percent higher than a year earlier.

SOLEDAD Prison riot results in two deaths, injures 18

SOLEDAD, Calif. (AP) - Two Soledad Prison inmates were killed and 18 injured yesterday in a race riot that was quelled by guards who waded in among the prisoners firing birdshot, officials said.

"The fighting was among inmates," said Phil Guthrie, spokesman for the state Department of Corrections. "It was a serious riot, but it's under control now."

He said two men were killed and one was in very serious condition. The condition of the other injured men was not immediately known.

"It was tentatively learned that it was a riot in which blacks and whites were aligned against the blacks," Guthrie said. "We don't know which, if any, group was the aggressor or if it was a spontaneous thing."

He said it was necessary for guards to "go in on the ground and separate people. There were a few rounds of birdshot fired, but not many. But the occasional observers of the people coming off the yard saw only one guy who had been struck with birdshot," Guthrie said.

The cause of the outbreak, and the identities of the dead and injured were not immediately disclosed.

Guthrie said the fighting, was limited to a section of the medium-security prison housing about 500 of the prison's 3,000 inmates. He said he did not know how many were involved in the fighting.

Guthrie said the birdshot, a type of granular-like pellet used in firearms, "was the light-weight, non-lethal stuff."

"It was in a section of the prison that had been under lockdown since August. The lockdown had just been lifted this week," Guthrie said.

"We haven't had any riot this serious - with two dead - in more than a year. We've had at least two race riots there this year," Guthrie said.

Pasquerilla donates $7 million

The son of an immigrant Pennsylvania coal miner who now heads a $100 million real estate development firm, Pasquerilla, revealed today as the anonymous donor of $7 million to Notre Dame.

Frank J. Pasquerilla, president and chairman of the board of Crown American Corporation, 4 Johnstown, Pa., a company that ranks 15th in size among the country's development firms, was introduced to the press conference on campus by Dr. Theodore M. Hesburgh, Notre Dame's president.

Hesburgh said the donor, a 67-year-old man who knows the obligation of wealth is service.

The largest fund, he explained, was announced last June when the University of Notre Dame's history, was announced last June when the University was committed itself to building a new student-housing facility on the campus for almost a year.

Pasquerilla said the money would be used to help students on January 18, 1980, in the ability to receive and to receive the education.

The donor, he explained, is to feed the movement.

The movement's money is to be given to the March for Peace, the largest group of workers in the country.

The donor, who is known to be a man of integrity, has reaffirmed his commitment to building on-campus housing for 500 additional undergraduates so that more women students could be enrolled.

One of the most interesting aspects of the donor's gift is that housing contracts will be ready in February 2 as soon as the university has received on-campus housing for 500 additional undergraduates so that more women students could be enrolled.

‘Star Trek’ movie warps out

HOLLYWOOD (AP) - "Star Trek - The Motion Picture" blasts off in 900 U.S. and Canada theaters today climaxing the biggest gamble in Hollywood history.

Consider the hazards:

-Production costs set an all-time record, reportedly at $42 million.

-The movie is based on a television series that failed in its first run, though its reruns attracted a legion of followers.

-The stars are not exactly box-office names: Leonard Nimoy, William Shatner, DeForest Kelly from the series plus India-born Pernell Kahan­bust as the bold leader from Planet Delta Four.

-Despite these drawbacks, Paramount Pictures executives say they are jubilant over the finished film and confident that the gamble will produce heavy rewards.

-The man most responsible for sending “Star Trek” aloft is white-haired director Robert Wise. The producer was Gene Roddenberry, creator of the TV series. At the end of 23 months of intensive work, Wise ("West Side Story"). "The Sound of Music") seemed both relieved and exhilarated.

"I'm generally pleased with how the picture turned out," he remarked in his modest office at the western end of the Paramount lot (once RKO where he started as a cutter in 1933).

"Considering the goals and risks that we started out to accomplish, I think we succeeded. The look and feel of the picture is good, the characters are well developed, and the story held up well. As I think so. We won't really know until the picture opens. We had no sneak previews. This is my 38th film and never before have I released one without a sneak.

WHC holds pre-concert dinner

To reflect upon the issue of world hunger, Student Government and the World Hunger Coalition invited all students from ND and SMC to a Pre­Harry Chapin Benefit Concert. Meal took at 5:30 p.m. in the South Dining Hall Faculty room.

The simple meal will be attended by guest speakers Penny Van Esterik of the Anthropology Department and Denis Goudot, spokesman on Third World Development. The meal is free to all who attend.

Logan sponsors party

This Saturday, Dec. 8, from 9:00 to 11:30 the Logan volunteers of their annual Christmas party for all the kids. Activities include Charlie Chris­mas carol singing, a reindeer shuffle, and a visit from Santa Claus. Lots of help is needed and anyone wishing to volunteer should call ahead to reserve a spot.

Get into the Christ­mas holiday festivities. Call Ed at 3470 or Walzer at 3005 if you have any questions.

Iranian crisis recalls Pearl Harbor

DALLAS (AP) - For thousands of Japanese-Americans, the bombs that burst Pearl Harbor into a funeral pyre 38 years ago today signaled no change in American mood. Some see that mood rising again in the anti-Iranian demonstrations sweeping the United States.

The naval base in Hawaii was obliterated on Dec. 7, 1941, and the United States declared war on Japan.

Within a few days of Pearl Harbor, "people became very aggressive," said japanese student in a new paper, "like a Jap," recalled Hiroko Fukuyama, who was 20 in 1941.

The only difference between that and the Iranian students now is that the anti-Japanese (feeling) involved American citizens.

"Like the iranian students, suddenly we realized what was happening. It happened so fast. Suddenly we were at war," he said.

Fukuyama and his brother, mother and father, who owned a hardware store in San Pedro, Calif., were among 110,000 Japanese living in the United States who were forced to auction their homes and possessions for "relocation" at U.S. internment camps. Of them, 66,000 were naturalized or native-born american citizens.

The Fukuyamas were bade into the Amache Relocation Center at Granada, Colo., in the spring of 1942. They didn't call it a concentration camp, but that's what it was. There was no brutality as such, but the humiliation was terrible. It was a terrifying experience," said Fukuyama, now executive Vice president of U.S. Aerial Inc., a u.s.-japanese television and film making company.

Fukuyama said he was ac­ counted several times on the street, then was forced out of the California State Nautical School, where he worked as a machinist.

"One day when everyone was in formation at the armory, they called my name out. They said, 'You're a Jap. We don't want you here. You're out of the guard.'"

When he sought work at the city water works, "they just kept me waiting and I was looking at all the drawings of the water works. First thing he said was, 'Are you Chinese?' I said, 'No, i'm Japanese.' so he said, 'What the hell are you doing in this place?' he got very upset that I had been looking at the drawings of the water works.

Why did the Germans react with such prejudice?

"I think it's a fear that they have because the nation was a very young nation" and had not strong, solid culture of its own, Fukuyama said, adding that he believes that fear has returned with the iranian crisis.

But he said iranian students should be allowed to stay in the country.

Pearl Harbor
Routine alarm screams attack

by Kathryn Casey
Staff Reporter

Thirty-eight years ago today, two young men were washing dishes just after seven on a Sunday morning when the naval battle alarm screamed through the air. Thinking that the alarm signaled a routine drill, they were hugging to their assigned stations when the clarion voice of the PA system announced that the Japanese had attacked Pearl Harbor.

"Only one of the men made it to his compartment. Jack Gordon reached the third deck below the water line of the USS Oklahoma to find that a torpedo had ruptured the oil tanks, leaving the whole place a slippery mess. The ship soon capsized.

Gordon estimated that anywhere from 500 to 800 of the Oklahoma's 1300 men died in the attack. Those who survived when the ship turned over climbed aboard the California, a neighboring ship which had been bombarded and refused to sink. The USS Arizona, now the national shrine at Pearl Harbor, had been anchored at the stern of the Oklahoma.

Gordon said that all of the men on that ship had gone down with it. When the Japanese first ap­ peared, Gordon recalled, they were flying low in waves in order to drop torpedoes, and later climbed higher to release the bombs. "They were bombarding the devil out of the air base so that the planes couldn't get off," he said. Gordon remembered that the noise of the planes was intensified by the screams of men who were trapped inside the ships. He noted that many others had simply drowned after being forced to abandon their stations.

Gordon had not been injured except for a few scrapes on his lips. He chuckled when he explained that he had been a bit heavy in those days and had run into difficulties when forced to hurry through the 21-inch port holes.

Gordon estimated that 80 ships of all types, including submarines, had been in the water at the time of the attack. When the battle ended at nine that morning, the harbor was full of debris. "Then you knew you were in war," he remarked. But naval life carried on almost as if nothing had hap­ pened. Gordon and his shipmates received clothing from the California until new sup­ plies were issued. The men were reassigned to other ships. Gordon ended up in Australia aboard a destroyer tender, a mother ship which carried ammunition for the three des­ troyers surrounding her.

Gordon said that discussing the attack no longer upsets him. He shook his head and smiled. "It was too long ago."
WASHINGTON (AP) - Two of President Carter's most important legislative proposals, the SALT II treaty and the energy plan, will be delayed in Congress until next year, Senate leaders disclosed yesterday.

The postponements will mean congressional consideration during a presidential election year, historically a bad time for pushing controversial legislation through either the House or Senate. Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd had previously said he hoped to at least begin debate on the strategic arms limitation treaty with the Soviet Union by year's end.

There had been earlier forecasts that the debate would begin in October with a final vote on ratification by early December.

But yesterday, Byrd noted the slow pace of Senate consideration of the "windfall profits" tax on the oil industry, and said: "I'd like to see how it (SALT II) could conceivably be brought up this year. Our time is running out."

Asked if the delay into the election year will jeopardize approval of the arms pact, which requires a two-thirds Senate vote, Byrd said, "If it goes over to January, I would see no harm in that."

Meanwhile, Henry Jackson, D-Wash., chairman of the Senate Energy Committee, said in an interview that there is no chance the president's multibillion-dollar energy plan will clear Congress before both Houses quit work for the year just before Christmas.

The House and Senate have approved competing versions of two separate energy measures urged by Carter, a synthetic fuels development bill and creation of a powerful Energy Mobilization Board to speed construction of energy projects.

Differences must be resolved by congressional conference committees which Jackson said will meet for the first time, probably beginning today.

In addition, the House and Senate are also being asked to give federal financial aid to the Chrysler Corp. There is considerable opposition to the rescue effort.

Campus prepares for break

by Tim Verzelstien
Staff Reporter

During Christmas break the bustling campus will turn into a ghost town. The sights and sounds of students playing football in the North Quad, or stereo blaring from people’s rooms will be noticeably absent.

The time of relative peace and quiet are when burglaries are most likely to occur. With this in mind Notre Dame Security is making careful preparations. Glenn Terry, director of Notre Dame Security, cited the constant surveillance of the dorms as the major concern of security during semester break.

"The dorms will be divided into six different groups, each group being patrolled several times during each shift. The men will be making sure that the doors are locked securely and checking for possible fires," said Terry.

In past years the dorms were separated into larger groups, this giving the security guard more area to cover. According to Terry, the addition of more men and the decrease in dorm space that each man is responsible for will give each guard more time to check on particular buildings.

Terry went on to say that students who wish to leave their cars here over break should park their vehicles in D-1 lot. "If all of the cars are in one area, there is less chance of any vandalism," stated Terry.

Terry also offered some advice regarding students’ valuable possessions.

"Students should, of course, lock their rooms securely. Also, if they feel it is necessary, they should leave such items as televisions and stereos at the Registrar experimented with a new system of preregistration requiring fewer checkmarked courses than usual, thus helping eliminate paper work and to help alleviate some of the perpetual lines.

The new method provides for on mass registration for many courses with a priority given to majors for placement in those courses and then to non-majors by order of class.

In the event of an over registration of any students to any particular class, the Registrar intends to notify the student of his inability to take that class and offer him placement in another.

"The line situation was minimal in comparison to last year," Kil said. "Hardly any students needed to wait outside Stepau, and we didn’t have to use the Kithall," he added.

Kil admitted that he was not aware of the line situation on the third floor of O’Shaughnessy Hall, where the lines reportedly were the longest. These lines sparked an Observer editorial on the subject. No complaints from any department heads have been reported as yet. Kil said he had received favorable reaction to the new system after the department heads thought that the new system would make the process less efficient.

NOT WHAT YOU EARN.

You don't have to prove need to earn a Naval ROTC Scholarship.
If your son or daughter is an outstanding student, particularly in science and math, with high SAT or ACT scores and involved in extracurricular activities, he or she can qualify for this $26,000 four-year scholarship.

Naval ROTC Scholarships are good at over fifty leading colleges. They pay tuition, books, fees, plus $100 a month living expenses. And lead to a challenging four years as a Navy Officer after graduation.

Ask your son or daughter to check with their guidance counselor or local Navy recruiter. Naval ROTC Scholarships. They're awarded on merit, not on need.

Ghotbzadeh disclosed the apparent softening of Khomeini's stance in the U.S.-Iranian crisis after conferring with him in Qom, Pan said. Khomeini had rejected in advance any steps taken by the Security Council, alleging it was under U.S. control.

"Regarding the U.N. Security Council decision, we of course have noticed that this is not a resolution condemning us . . . This resolution is a step forward," Ghotbzadeh was quoted as saying. He did not mention the resolutions request that Iran immediately give the hostages safe passage out of the country.

He expressed some reservations over the resolution, adopted unanimously Tuesday by the 15-member council.

"We are not very satisfied with it because they have not condemned the shah. Altogether this is a step forward and a better decision than the previous one," he said, referring to a Nov. 9 statement issued with the unanimous consent of the Security Council calling for release of the hostages.

President Carter has refused to return Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi to Iran to stand trial for alleged crimes against the people, and approved the transfer of the deposed monarch to Lackland Air Force Base in Texas from a New York hospital he entered Oct. 22 for cancer and gallbladder treatment.

A spokesman for U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim called Ghotbzadeh's remarks an "important." However, spokesman Rudolf Strothuhar declined further comment pending Iran's official reply to Waldheim, who said he was in telephone contact with Ghotbzadeh.

In other developments: The Pentagon announced that three more Soviet ships had been sighted in the Indian Ocean, raising Russian naval strength there to 18 ships.

This was the second such increase in two weeks. U.S. naval strength in the Indian Ocean-Arab Sea area rose to 21 ships this week as the carrier Kitty Hawk led a task force into waters south of the Persian Gulf.

Professor lectures about women

A group of concerned women from the Elkhart area are posing a "Teach-in" on Women and Religion in the wake of recent papal and episcopal actions and pronouncements on women.

Madonna Kolbenschlag, assistant professor of American Studies, will comment on the implications of her recently published book Kiss Sleeping Beauty: Goodbye to "Pentagon Church." Copies of her book will be available.

Apathy: Students in the '70s

Michael Onufak

The decade of the '60s saw the most significant changes in student life and consciousness in this nation's history. The 1970s, less inspiring in changing these was not the group in political power, but the group in the front lines of American youth—especially college students. This attitude has all but died out among young people in this decade. In 1969 there was virtually no better place to find them than at the University of Notre Dame. In 1979 there is no better example of the great distances—from political and social leadership, from the informing spectrum of society—than a comparison between the group of students at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's during the '60s-70s school year and our own student body.

Ten years ago there were, of course, no undergraduate women enrolled at du Lac. Co-ed education was a dream that would take several more years to implement. There were signs of co-ed education in discussions in classes with Saint Mary's, the first women cheerleaders (from SMC) cheering at basketball games, and pre-cordial (by allowing women into the arena) facilities in the gym which were put to effective purposes on weekday afternoons. And the Observer on the future of co-ed education in general (most stories were anecdotal)

Ten years ago Notre Dame saw its first home game at Notre Dame Stadium, Notre Dame's Cotton Bowl, the first bowl game for ND since 1920. This decade has seen the rise in civil rights movements, the Vietnam War, a massive and posed death of Bealit Paul MacLean, the shooting at Logan Circle, and the body's mind. There was a large demonstration in front of the Michigan State capital on Vietnam Moratorium Day, and in Washington, D.C., where members of the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's community were arrested while demonstrating against the Pentagon. Notre Dame's own campus had included the placement of white crosses with the names of ND alumni who had been killed in Vietnam on the lawn in front of the ROTC building, and a brawl that erupted between students over the broadcasting of interview arranged by the Placement Bureau for Dow Chemical (manufacturers of napalm.

Ten of the students were suspended for participating in the fall semester Album reviews in The Observer in the March 1970 issue contained the following segment, and of me. I accomplished nothing. I sat and went over to the library, and realizing this, I decided to apply for the top. But before Mary could

During this hectic time before final exams, it is nice to know that men's hearts will still fondly turn to love. We found in the library the following letter scribbled in a notebook.

"I know I'm just a freshman, and have been at school for only four months, but I love in the library the following letter scribbled in a notebook."

"I know I'm just a freshman, and have been at school for only four months, but I love you."

"I wasn't coming back from class, thinking about N.D.'s great win and the happy-go-lucky put-upon dreams. I hadn't been so happy in a long, long time, and I'm looking in my doubleEmail. She had written me that distance, radiant, sun shining through her golden hair. For a moment I closed my eyes, and feeling her in my heart, but she looked right past me. She was so distant, so much above me, that I could not approach her, and I returned to my studies."

That evening I took out the first letter I had received from her, and I found her list, and none of my friends knew about it, either. Still, I could not forget about her, and even the good news of our super win over Iowa State would not wipe me up. After a great Veal Parmesan dinner, I packed up my books and went over to the library, hoping to meet her on the second floor. Still, try as I did, I accomplished nothing. I sat with my Calculus book in front of me, but solved only two problems over a four hour period."

Imagine my disappointment! With all the things I had to get done before finals, the object of my existence was to forget about it and go up to study. Despairing, I gave up on her as a spoiled rich girl after a May Fair dance, and made a decision to put that golden dress only to rear?" she screamed, and realizing that I had forgotten all about me, I returned to my studies with a heavy heart."

I do not know where she was as I passed the Administration building. As I passed the Administration building, I looked up from the ground, "Hey Mary, what's up?"

"So Mary," I began, "What's your major?"

"Marketing," she replied."

"Why's that?" I asked. "Do you really think you want a business career?"

"I've been in millions as the symbol of N.D., and it is only fair that I use some of my talents for personal fulfillment."

"Well, ah, where are you from, Mary, anyway?"

"I was so bored out of trying to change the world.

But before Mary could answer, I asked her about a security guard called out from the men's room. "Hey, you, up on the dome, it's after four, you'd better leave." I told her, I left when I wanted."

I asked Mary if she could see her again, and to my astonishment she agreed. She said, "With luck and the Hall Formal with me, and who knows where it might go from there.

Well, Ma, it is getting late, and I have some Calm in great shape, and we have not even started yet. I'll keep you posted on how things work out, and I really look forward to introducing you to future dates."

Letters to a lonely mother

M. Hyemie Heaney, S.J. Kott

Happy in Santa Claus?

Bill McGunn

As the baby of the family, she still believes in Santa, so I can just "happen" to sit in the room where the gift sack is. By the time the special comes on the T.V., and I can play out the scene of Santa's visit. The special, "Visit of Santa", is a popular tradition at Saint Mary's. Likewise, my other siblings can be brought candy canes and store up the electric trains for Annie.

Annie, wise beyond her years to the ways of the world that the influence of her elders, has a more cynical and realistic view of things than most others. Perhaps the baby of the family grew up the fastest. Sooner or later, the truth will emerge.

Maybe she will find some present under the tree, and have the time of her life. I will discover all her letters to "Mr. Kris Kringle of 0."

I've been told that Santa isn't real, and will take all in stride, but I'm the one whose Christmas is going to be stolen, because of the trouble she was in.

I've had three years to think about all the worst things that could happen. But when she gets to college, I suppose that being that she probably screws up her life, I won't ever have the milk again this Christmas Ever. Like's said, not only are adults the only ones who believe in Santa, adults are the only ones that have the traits.

"Merry Christmas, Annie."
Theatrical art is a means to an end. Benold Brecht viewed Theatre as a means to an end. His play "Mother Courage" is a vivid example of this approach. The plot revolves around the protagonist, Mother Courage, who manages a wagon carrying goods during the Thirty Years' War. The play is a critique of the war and the human cost of conflict.

"Mother Courage" is a challenging work, not for the faint of heart. It deals with the harsh realities of war and the human suffering that it causes. The play is divided into three acts, each focusing on a different aspect of the war and its impact on the characters. The first act is set in the town of Saalfeld, where Mother Courage's wagon is ambushed. The second act takes place in Prague, where the wagon is captured by the Swedish army. The third act is set in the town of Aust, where Mother Courage is forced to make a fateful decision.

The play is a powerful critique of war and its effects on individuals and society. It is a call to action, urging people to resist the forces of war and to work for peace. The play is a reminder that the human cost of war cannot be ignored, and that it is the responsibility of all of us to work towards a more just and peaceful world.
If There's a War On, Don't Fight It

All of us were innocent those days, and all of us were guilty. It was wartime. The Fleet was in, and thirty thousand sailors from Admiral Halsey's navy overflowed the quiet streets of my peaceful little city by the sea in Maine. Some of the girls from my high school class dated sailors, and were considered cheap. Some of the women who went out with sailors were married ladies with husbands overseas: local gossip, while giving them, disapproved of their being unfaithful to their G.I. Joes. I worked after school in a Walgreen's drug store in the heart of downtown, with an air of grave displeasure, I sold contraceptives to lonely service kids, under an exotic variety of trade names. I think I understand now that these purchases, that represented sin to me, represented mostly, for the lads thoughtful about lust at a Walgreen's counter, the triumph of hope over experience, because there could not have been that many women available to them. Anyway, as a drugstore clerk, I thought I had a ringside seat for watching the town go to hell. I really felt sad for guys not much older than myself, who had to spend their shore leaves in a city that didn't trust them to leave its women virtuous; and the virtuous women wouldn't talk to them at all because it was wartime, and strangers. A uniform couldn't be trusted. Back home, at a time of war, the guilty and the innocent seem to sin against each other; that's how collapsible virtue and vice become in the years of national distress. Everybody's excuse for making a multitude of mistakes was: "Don't you know there's a war on?"

In 1944, two days before Christmas, I waited on a young swabbie who bought postcards and stamps, and then expressed his delight in finding a Walgreen's drug store, of all places, in Portland, Maine. "Back home," he said, "we got a Walgreen's, too." I forget where "back home" was for him; but I remember thinking: "Any town that has a Walgreen's sounds to me like the kind of town I wouldn't want to live in."

"Most of the stuff they're selling in here now," I said, "is pretty lousy, because there's a war on." He grinned at me. "I know there's a war on," he said. "I'm fighting it. How about you?"

The conversation glittered between us until the store's closing. "Has anybody," he asked, "been over to a war zone?" I waited on a young swabbie who bought chocolate; he had to spend his shore leave in a city that didn't trust him to leave its women virtuous, and the virtuous women wouldn't talk to him at all because it was wartime, and strangers. A uniform couldn't be trusted. Back home, at a time of war, the guilty and the innocent seem to sin against each other. That's how collapsible virtue and vice become in the years of national distress. Everybody's excuse for making a multitude of mistakes was: "Don't you know there's a war on?"

"I don't know how your life has turned out, but my life and Jane's has been filled with happiness, and we feel we owe it to you to tell you of the blessed effects of drinking hot chocolate. We have had six children, all of them girls, all of them beautiful. We've wanted only boys, so we bought Jane's a baby girl; but Christmas, named our last child Roberta."

"Christmas," for a conversation during the war, can be a lonely time, in a strange port where everybody treats you as though you were dirty. "The night I met you, one of my good buddies tried to kill himself. The fear and the loneliness got too much for him. It could have happened to any of us; we always hoped you never thought I stole your girl, but I thought I needed Jane more than you needed her."

The employers seeking liberal art majors

Two percent of the employerscoming to campus this year are interviewing liberal arts majors which is about five to ten percent increase over last year, according to Richard Willemin, director of the Notre Dame placement bureau.

"More companies than ever before are looking for students with an arts and letters degree," Willemin said.

There are several reasons for the increase, the main one being that employers are realizing the value of a liberal arts major. Students with a liberal arts background are well-trained in writing and speaking skills, analysis abilities, and are very adaptable, explained Willemin. Since the job market is so competitive, Willemin urges arts and letters majors to make liberal art majors available for any liberal art major are advertising, pursuing, and management or administration, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics. Because many businesses need liberal art majors, the placement bureau formed a business society strictly for arts and letters majors. According to Willemin, this is another way to make arts and letters majors aware of the job opportunities open to them. There are also several lectures, panel discussions, and individual counseling accessible to arts and letters majors throughout the year sponsored by the placement bureau.

Despite more and more companies are employing liberal arts majors, the fact remains that many more hire business and engineering graduates. "By far it's the business and engineering majors that companies want to hire," according to Jean Shell, a staff worker for the placement bureau. Willemin blamed this trend on the economy. "Businesses are becoming more and more specialized and so need people trained like that. Schools everywhere are having more trouble placing their liberal arts major than their engineering or business one. It is not just a problem at Notre Dame," Willemin emphasized.

Neither newspapers or publishing companies recruit at Notre Dame. "They go to the journalism schools," Willemin said. "Businesses are becoming more and more specialized and so need people trained like that. Schools everywhere are having more trouble placing their liberal arts major than their engineering or business one. It is not just a problem at Notre Dame," Willemin emphasized.

The placement bureau also aids students applying for graduate schools. Many graduate schools send representatives to the placement bureau to give informational interviews to interested students, Willemin noted.

University schedules final exams

Final examinations for the Fall Semester, 1979-80 will be held at the University from 8 a.m. Saturday, December 15, through 6:15 p.m. Thursday, December 20. Friday, December 14, is a study day and no examinations are scheduled; no examinations are scheduled for Sunday morning, December 16.

At Walsh, Flanner Board meets students
by Mary Fran Callihan
Staff Reporter

On Thursday, January 17, at 7:30 p.m., students will have the opportunity to meet with members of the University Alumni Board in Walsh and Flanner Halls. The Hall Presidents’ Council is publicizing the meeting in order to generate a large student turnout.

Madelene Darrouzets, President of Farley Hall noted that, “Alumni have quite a bit of influence in the University’s affairs. They do present proposals.” She commented, “The HPC hopes that students will voice their opinions on campus issues and policies, air their gripes, and question the alumni.

According to Maureen Murphy, project chairperson, the thirteen-member board enjoys meeting the students. The students learned quite a bit by talking to the alumni last year, and the alumni enjoy the chance to rap with the students,” Murphy explained. HPC considers the meeting to be an excellent opportunity for students to discuss their views with an influential governing body.

Members of the alumni board meet only three times annually, and its agenda is always packed with events. This is the one time that alumni have free time scheduled to listen to and meet with the students,” Murphy said. The HPC will publicize the meeting in all the dorms. Murphy added that refreshments will be served at the meetings.

The thirteen-member committee will include three representatives from each of the dorms. In order to generate a larger student turnout, the HPC hopes to encourage larger audiences.

A basketball game coupled with a winter storm resulted in a lower than expected turn out for last year’s meetings. However, HPC hopes the publicity campaign will encourage more students to attend.

Comedian Steve Martin visits ‘Nowhere City’

TERRIE HAUTE, IND. (AP)- Comedian Steve Martin, that wild and crazy guy, has agreed to come for a visit to the western Indiana city he proclaims to be the most nowhere place in America.

Vicki Weger, an aide to Mayor William Bright, said Martin will arrive today at Hulman Field, where he will be greeted with a bouquet of wildflowers.

“They’ll probably forget me, too,” she said. “Maybe a few snapdragons. We’re having the flower show this week, too.”

Weger said Martin will make some remarks at the airport before driving into town.

“We are not encouraging the public to show up at the airport. But we’re going to have the official welcoming on the city hall steps, where the public will be welcome,” she said.

Martin will be taken into town in a 1957 Chevy that he can rent for $7 a day with unlimited mileage. “The driver’s door doesn’t open, but he can conductors come get the other side,” Weger added.

The next stop is the Shufflin’ Inn, where a chef imported from Maxim’s of Paris will prepare a luncheon of lobster and other assorted treats for Martin and the mayor.

“Playboy is picking up the tab for that,” Weger said. “The Lunch will be served by bunnies.”

After lunch, Martin will go to city hall where he will get a key to the city and be presented with a summa cum laude from IU Bloomington and a Master of Music degree in piano from Catholic University.

Ticket prizes for the concert are $4 for adults and $3 for students and senior citizens. Special rates for groups of 20 or more are available. For more information, call the Symphony office at 293-1087.

At Walsh, Flanner Board meets students

“These alumni are illustrious members of their respective communities and really want to help the students,” Murphy concluded.

Pianist performs on Sunday

Pianist Robert Hamilton will return to the Michiana area to join Dr. Michael Esselstrom and Eckhart Symphony Orchestra at 3:30 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 9, at Concord Performing Arts Center. He will perform Prokofiev’s “Piano Concerto #1.”

Hamilton is a native of South Bend, and was associate professor and pianist in residence at USI (1979-86), and is a graduate summa cum laude from IU Bloomington and the Eastman School of Music.

Ticket prices for the concert are $7 for adults and $4 for students and senior citizens. Special rates for groups of 20 or more are available. For more information, call the Symphony office at 293-1087.

The final equipment return for interhall football will be on the evening of Wednesday December 12. Any equipment returned after this date will be added to bills sent home for next season. Exact time for the return will be announced later.

Icers stand at 8-5 in midseason

by Brian Benigno
Sports Writer

With half its Western Collegiate Ice Hockey Association schedule left, the Notre Dame hockey team finishes up the first half of its regular season during this weekend against Central Collegiate Hockey Association teams, the Michigan State University and Western Michigan University. The Irish will play three games against Bowling Green: Friday night at the BGSU Ice Arena at 7:30 EST. Notre Dame then will return to the Athletic and Convocation Center to host Western Michigan Sunday afternoon at 2:00 EST.

The Irish completed the first half of their WCHA schedule last weekend with a split at Wisconsin. The Badgers won the series 5-2, with Notre Dame coming back Saturday for a 4-3 victory. The split puts Notre Dame's overall record at 8-5 and its league mark at 5-5. The Irish sit sixth in the WCHA with Wisconsin and Colorado College in a dead heat.

“Your team never happy when you lose one,” said Notre Dame coach Leif Smith. “But when you consider the misfortune we`ve got we`ve been pleased with our performance Saturday.”

Icers can`t get out of their slump as they head into the Michigan weekend.

ND women renew Michigan rivalry

by Mark Hannukel
Sports Writer

Long before any of us were born, the University of Notre Dame and the University of Michigan got together on an athletic field somewhere, and a rivalry was born. On Saturday, this rivalry will be renewed by a cast of characters whose names are not too well known around these campuses, when the Wolverines invade the ACC for a women's basketball contest with the Fighting Irish. Game time is set for 2:00 p.m.

For those people who are not regular followers of women's basketball, this is just another game. But, for head coach Sharon Petro, assistant coach Bob Scott, and their team, tomorrow's game stops just short of being their season.

"Michigan is home for me," stated Petro before Thursday's practice session. "I live there, I used to work there, and I have coached there (along with Saturday's opposing mentor, Gloria Soluk of Michigan). It would be very nice to go home for the Christmas holidays and be able to say that I beat Michigan.

Petro then continued, "we`ve got a little incentive to beat them, especially after what they did to us last year (the Wolves set a record for most points ever scored by an opponent in thrashing the Irish 93-66 at Crisler Arena). We`ve also got nothing to lose, Michigan being a Division I school, would mean that we get back at them. I think that we can do the job, and I`m anxious to show them and everyone else that we can.

"Saturday's game is going to answer a very big question for us," said Petro. "that is, Are we good enough to stay in the WCHA and win most of our games?" Petro added size to an already quick team, and will be the key to their success. Petro added size to an already quick team, and will be the key to their success.

Finished goods - level, when goods are ready for sale to the final user, the intermediate level, where they have received some processing, and the crude level, where goods have not yet received any processing.

The Producer Price Index for finished goods stood in November at 225.9, meaning that goods priced at $100 in 1967 had risen to $225.90 last month.

Prices of finished goods other than food rose 0.8 percent in November, down from a 1.4 percent increase in October. Prices of intermediate goods rose 0.7 percent in one-month, half the October increase of 1.8 percent, and prices of crude goods rose 2 percent, up from the October rise of 1.5 percent.

Price changes at the wholesale level usually show up at the retail level in a month or two. Retail prices increased at a 3.3 percent annual rate during the first half of the year, the fastest rate since 1946 when the government lifted World War II price controls.

Title IX: leap backwards for athletics

APPLAUSE, APPLAUSE: Women's sports are finally going to get some much needed funds. Well, you'll get no objection, stance or otherwise, from me. HEW's ruling on that infamous segment of the Education Act of 1972 known as Title IX won't do a whole lot for women's sports, but it will for the men's—if it create a whole lot of havoc. Patricia Harris, secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, announced her department's interpretation of Title IX on Tuesday after seven years of debate. The Harris version is a modification of the one the predecessor, Joseph Califano, rejected. The new act requires all schools that appropriate scholarships for athletic activities proportionately divide those scholarships on the basis of sex.

Notre Dame has approximately a 6:1 ratio of male scholarship athletes to female athletes. The women athletes are now eligible for 27 scholarships with that ratio. Where it is that those scholarships will come from is any guess. To present all the scholarships available are distributed among the male athletes, and no funds remain. It is improbable that an influx of alumni contributions will finance the additional money for scholarships. What alumni, especially one who toiled on the gridiron, wants his donation going to women's field hockey? Not many, I'm willing to bet.

One proposed solution is to cut the number of scholarships for men, but from what sport? The football team presently operates with 98 scholarships. This year 22 of these players were sidelined for all of the season, and with other team members out for just one or two games, the Irish survived with about 70 players. A squad can not expect to make it through the season with less than 60 members—can you slice 10 scholarships here, leaving no buffer? I don't think so.

What would Digger's team do without that famous bench strength so back them up? Make it to the final four again? Very doubtful. Cutting back on the basketball and football scholarships will hamper the quality of athletes who would play for the Irish. The entire program of the two sports, which have been called the foundation for numerous years at Notre Dame, will suffer. Without quality teams, how can the university hope to draw capacity crowds? Even with the loyal fans the Irish have, revenues would fall. If they do, all sports at Notre Dame will suffer. Basketball and football account for the majority of all the funds available to athletic teams. As women's sports, but men's minor sports. When asked about men's sports, like soccer, hockey, baseball, fencing, and wrestling? Soccer and hockey are currently in a transitional stage, developing from minor sports into possible revenue-producing sports. Hockey controls 20 scholarships and has quickly become the number-three interest sport at Notre Dame. Digger has developed his team without the aid of any scholarships, and is the major contender for national revenues. These two groups are becoming increasingly self-supporting and deserve to retain all that they have earned.

The university is forced to stabilize the gap between the number of male and female athletes, and it has an abundance of courses to follow. The women's swimming, volleyball, and track clubs may never have a chance to achieve varsity status. Merely by letting any more women's teams the ability to achieve varsity ranks and by elevating a men's sport, the university could increase the ratio of men to women, reducing the number of scholarships available to women.

The Title IX verdict is faulty in many respects, but the failure to provide for the funding of better facilities for women headline the list. Few top women athletes will be attracted to Notre Dame, regardless of any scholarships, if the present program is not upgraded. The Irish face teams with mediocre degrees of talent—even some with high-school level programs. Will the nation's best athletes elect to compete for a spot at Notre Dame, or will they take similar scholarships at already established programs like Ohio State, Old Dominion, or UCLA? It will be a long time before Notre Dame sees a woman who would be a Nancy Lieberman or an Ann Meyers.

After a gradual upgrading of the women's athletic programs at Notre Dame, an effort can then be made to attract top women's players. College freshmen are entering college with more finesse, sharpened skills, well-rounded fundamentals and knowledge of the game than the previous class. Women today are being trained in athletic endeavors. Once a respected program is established, one that Notre Dame is capable of competing with, not only will then these super athletes consider a career at Notre Dame. This cannot happen overnight. The reputation of Irish athletics has not suffered. The proposed solution is to cut the number of scholarships at the present program is not upgraded. The Irish face teams with mediocre degrees of talent—even some with high-school level programs. Will the nation's best athletes elect to compete for a spot at Notre Dame, or will they take similar scholarships at already established programs like Ohio State, Old Dominion, or UCLA? It will be a long time before Notre Dame sees a woman who would be a Nancy Lieberman or an Ann Meyers.

The notion of aiding women's sports is, of course, a noble one. But this effort should not coincide with the downfall of established men's programs. It is totally unfair to deprive stages of the present position they have nurtured and earned.
Students start fund for Evans

A collection is now being taken for the Joseph Evans Memorial Fund, in memory of the late Notre Dame professor. Evans passed away late August this year. The collection, under university approval, is being undertaken by students to raise money for a plaque to be erected to Evan’s memory. Donations may be mailed to “Joseph Evans Memorial Fund,” Box 443, Notre Dame, IN 46556. Questions may be directed to Barb Budde or to Tom Hamel at 1420/7672.

Irish face tough contest against SLU Billikens

by Matt Huffman

The St. Louis University Billikens come to town, boasting four returning starters and a hot junior college transfer to fill the Irish. The Bills, under second year coach Ron Ekker, are coming off a 10-17 record last year and sporting a 1-1 mark in the 1979-80 campaign.

Digger Phelps realizes that SLU can't be taken lightly. "St. Louis has plenty of experience and talent on hand. They're an excellent shooting team. They're well coached and the two junior college transfers—Whittenburg and Burns—have helped them a lot."

The two transfers from Navarre Junior College are Willie Whittenburg, a 6-foot 6-inch middle forward, and David Burns, a 6-foot 4-inch guard. Whittenburg is averaging 6.3 points per game and helping out tremendously on the boards, while Burns is scoring at 17.0 clip.

The best match up of the day should be between 6-foot 9-inch Irish center Orlando Woolridge and the Billikens' 10-inch, 6-foot 7-inch Kelvin Henderson. Henderson, an All-划分 conference pick at center, is the team's leading scorer and rebounder. Both players are small for the position and both maintain a great deal of basketball savviness on the court.

Rounding out the Billikens' starting five are 6-foot 6-inch forward Mark Rhode (10.5 ppg.) and 6-foot 2-inch guard Tim Glass (9.5 ppg.). The Bill's best shooter Craig Shaffer (6-foot 4-inch) will be providing strong bench support.

The 5-0 Irish will tip off after an impressive win over Northern Western. Leading Notre Dame's scoring attack are forwards Tracy Jackson and Kelly Tripuka. Tripuka is scoring at a rate of 19.3 points per game while Jackson is contributing 10.6 ppg. Other double digit-scorers highlight the Notre Dame roster: senior co-captain Rich Brannan (16.0 ppg.), freshman center Tim Andere (13.5 ppg.) and junior center Orlando Woolridge (10.5 ppg.).

Coach Ekker is trying to rejuvenate a once great basketball program that has sagged in recent years. Ekker, also the school's athletic director, has had success in this area at West Texas State before coming to the Gateway City.

The St. Louis student body enthusiasm has increased as the Billiken's chances for a successful season have grown. Bruce Keegan, the sports director of KBLI (the student radio station at SLU), has observed this on a first hand basis. "The students are really high on basketball this year. This spirit and support for the basketball team have grown tremendously in the last two years," notes Keegan.

Notre Dame and St. Louis are resuming an old rivalry as a six-year absence. The last meeting was won by the Irish 94-65 on December 8, 1973 with the Billikens holding a 14-13 series edge.

Coach Phelps is looking forward to playing St. Louis again. "We're excited about having St. Louis back on the schedule. It's a traditional rivalry. There have been plenty of good games in this series, and all the ingredients are there for a norther exciting contest."

GAME NOTES:

by the way, a Billiken is a small stature representing an Indian Moon God. St. Louis University is the only institution to possess this unique mascot.
