N.J. Sen. Bradley favors Title IX

In an exclusive Observer interview last night New Jersey Senator Bill Bradley said that he favors Title IX, subject to recent campus controversy, and forces many women's sports programs as someday being revenue producing if they are not already. Bradley, a first term United States Senator and former Rhodes Scholar, spoke at a fund-raiser dinner for Indiana Sen. Birch Bayh last night at South Bend's Century Center.

"Title IX is a complex social and economic issue which has no immediate solution to it. However, an important goal that men and women should be given equal athletic opportunities," Bradley said. "I have a three-year-old daughter and I would like to think that she will have the same opportunities that I have in the same athletic [inequities]," he added. Bradley has been a four-year-old American while attending Princeton University, as well as a professional athlete with the New York Knickerbockers.

Bradley mentioned Montclair State in northern New Jersey as an example of a school that has adapted well to the Title IX guidelines. Montclair, where Bradley's wife teaches, was given "an excellent interpretation" of the law.

Leftists takeover bank

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) - Leftists occupied the Agricultural Development Bank in downtown San Salvador late yesterday, and local radio stations reported they were holding at least 50 hostages as part of a continuing drive to oust El Salvador's four-month-old Junta.

The leftists identified themselves as members of the Popular Revolutionary Bloc, the nation's largest leftist organization. They hung banners from the windows, demanding better loan rates for small farmers.

The bank takeover was peaceful. It was not known if the leftists were armed if how many there were. There also was no official confirmation of the number of hostages inside.

Members of the Bloc also held the city offices of the water and sewer administration for the second day, demanding better service to poor areas.

Meanwhile, leftist of a second major organization, the Popular Leagues of Feb. 28 ended a two-day occupation at the Panamanian Embassy peacefully, freeing Ambassador David Ramos and two other hostages unharmed.

They also released two more hostages unharmed from the Spanish Embassy, which they occupied 10 days ago and are continuing to hold.

Other leftists occupied the offices of an electric company in Ahusachapan, 30 miles west of the capital, on Thursday. Violence continued in the countryside.

Also, the concession booth has done well. Day went on to point out that costs were decreased this year in terms of materials for booth construction.

In Iran

Hostage situation improves

(AP) - A key negotiator said yesterday that, an agreement had been reached to end the 103-day hostage standoff in Tehran, but American officials cautioned against undue optimism.

Iran's president and again demanded U.S. acknowledgment and condemnation of crimes allegedly committed by the government.

MacBride, former foreign minister of Ireland, said yesterday that an agreement on the hostage crisis could be made if a U.N.-sponsored commission of inquiry would convene soon in Iran.

In Tehran, President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr told reporters late yesterday, "I don't know what MacBride said. Let me alone.

MacBride has been involved in efforts to free the approximated $3,000 hostages since the U.S. Embassy was seized Nov. 4, said officials.

Mardi Gras still goes strong

by Tim Veredolts
Staff Reporter

There was a feeling of optimism in the air at Mardi Gras last night. Contrary to earlier reports, the organizers reported that the annual carnival is doing as well as can be expected and that the upcoming weekend promises to be profitable.

According to Mardi Gras Chairman Bob Morin, returns are good when one takes into account the occurrence of two basketball games, the Olympics, and a wave of department stores all taking place during Mardi Gras week.

Friday and Saturday nights were exceptional, and, with one good night we can recoup our losses," Morin said.

Morin also cited the entertainment as one of Mardi Gras' best attractions. "We have had a good variety of music, both professional and amateur. A lot of the credit for this success going to Mary Ahern, who coordinated some of the entertainers,"

According to Mike Day, business manager for Mardi Gras, raffle ticket sales have steadily improved throughout the past two weeks.

Also, the concession booth has done well. Day went on to point out that costs were decreased this year in terms of materials for booth construction.

In spite of a twenty percent increase in the cost of wood, we managed to save some money this year," Day stated.

One of the problems that has plagued past Mardi Gras has been the use of counterfeit money.

According to both Morin and Day, this was taken care of this year. Morin explained that a different type of paper has been used for the Mardi Gras money this year. "The paper that we are using is of a special grade; it is almost impossible to photocopy, and it is difficult to find," Morin said.

In addition to sparse crowds, other problems have plagued Mardi Gras. One of them was the organizing committee's lack of experience.

According to Morin, the students that ran things last year were veterans. "Last year was an excellent year for the MacBride, and one of the reasons for this success was the seasoned crew. Our organization this year has a lot of new people, and we ran into some problems in inquiry would "investigate the extent to which the regime of the shah may have committed offenses under international law."" Tehran, President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr told reporters late yesterday, "I don't know what MacBride said. Let me alone.

The Board of Trustees of the Harry S. Truman Scholarship Foundation has approved an expansion of the Truman Scholarship Program by 26 scholars to a total of 79 scholars on a trial-basis for the 1980-81 academic year only, according to the Honorable John W. Snyder, chairman of the Board of Trustees.

He said the Board of Trustees approved this trial expansion "after careful study of the Foundation's available reserves." Under the expansion plan, 26 scholars-at-large will be recommended to the Board by the Foundation's 13 Regional Review Panels. Each review panel will recommend two scholars-at-large and name two alternates, Snyder explained.

Thus, the total program for 1980-81 will be 79 scholars, he added, stressing that the expansion is currently being conducted on a trial-basis and that the Board of Trustees will discuss and review the possibility of permanently expanding the number of scholars during its scheduled meeting in April. Snyder added he believes the expansion of the program will be particularly helpful in generating more awareness of and participation in the Truman Scholarship Program.

Foundation Executive Secretary Malcolm McCormack said that the Foundation's endorsement, which was established by Congress, is currently generating sufficient funds to permit this one-time expansion. "Simply speaking," he added, "at this time we have the funds available to support this trial-basis expansion of the Foundation's scholarships.

Since it began operations three years ago, the Truman Scholarship Foundation annually has awarded 53 scholars.

Scholarships--one to a resident nominee in each of the 50 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, and, considered as a single entity, Guam, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, and the Pacific Trust Territories. The Board of Trustees of the Truman Scholarship Foundation, established by Act of Congress as a living memorial to the nation's 33rd President, provides the Truman Scholar a maximum of $5,000 per year for up to four years of college, covering their two years of undergraduate and two years of graduate study. The scholars are selected through nationwide competition and must be at the end of their junior year when they are nominated. In addition, by being outstanding students, candidates are required to demonstrate a desire to serve to the nation's potential for government service.

Olympic Committee meets on President's proposal

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) - The United States Olympic Committee said yesterday that its House of Delegates will meet April 11-13 to act on President Carter's request that the American team not compete in the Moscow Summer Games. Carter, repeatedly and as recently as Wednesday night, urged the USOC to refrain from sending a team to the Summer Games if Soviet troops are not withdrawn from Afghanistan by Feb. 20. Robert Kane, president of the USOC, said the White House had given no indication to him that a decision must be made immediately. "We will abide by the president's decision," Kane said.

Chrysler Corp. files for loan despite sales increase

DETROIT (AP) - There's a possibility Chrysler Corp. may not have to borrow money at all under its $1.5 billion federal loan guarantee, but it is more likely it will use about $200 million, a top Chrysler financial executive said yesterday. But Chrysler still plans to qualify for the guarantees by March 31, said Executive Vice President Gerald Greenwald, because "We need that insurance policy." Any borrowing under the guarantee probably would come in the second quarter of this year, because that is when demands of the company's investment program will be heaviest. How much money is borrowed, if any, will depend on sales, so far better than expected for 1980, Greenwald said.

U.S. reaches tentative agreement with Iran

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Carter administration dismisses reports yesterday that American hostages in Iran could be released by the weekend and called on Iranian authorities to clarify their demands.

"We are going to have to see some more definition" of what the Iranians want in exchange for the hostages, said Hodding Carter, the State Department spokesman.

Reports circulated Wednesday in Washington that U.S. and Iranian negotiators had reached a tentative agreement that could lead to freedom for the 52 Persons who have been held hostage since the U.S. Embassy in Teheran was seized Nov. 4.

But a senior State Department official told reporters yesterday that "you would die several times over if you held your breath" for the hostages' imminent release.

These remarks were not meant to reverse President Carter's announcement Wednesday night of "positive signs" in the negotiations to end the crisis.

"Everybody is considerably ahead of the process," said Jody Powell, the White House press secretary, after a meeting with President Carter.

He said the news media "are running a little rapidly" in their optimistic forecasts of a breakthrough in the 103-day stalemate.

The reports were based on an interview Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr had with Italian RAI television in Teheran. In the interview, Bani-Sadr indicated that Islamic revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhul-lah Khomeini had accepted a plan that could lead to freeing the hostages.

However, this left open the possibility that the United States could make some carefully worded statement about U.S. support for the Shah during his 37-year reign.

Soviets napalm rebels

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) - Soviet ranks and at least one Moscow-backed President Babrak Karmal, who has not been seen in public for more than a week, remained obscure.

Witnesses in Afghanistan said the Soviets fought a, short, hour-long battle Monday in the village of Vargha, 12 miles north of Kabul.

Western diplomats in the vicinity saw Soviet infantry and tanks moving into action against an army barracks in the village of the Soviet-trained Afghan army.

The MIg was seen dropping a cluster of small bombs, followed by a cloud of black smoke rising from the ground.

The witnesses said they believed the bombs were incendiary devices made of napalm, chemicals added to gasoline or oil to form a jelIylike substance used in bombs.

Ambulances here seen removing unknown number of casualties, some to the military hospital in Kabul. Afghan police prevented the diplomats approaching close enough to the scene to get a clear view.

All resistance apparently was crushed in within an hour.

Corruption inquiry begins

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - An FBI informant bought $10,000 in tickets for a campaign function for an unsuccessful candidate for Louisiana governor, the candidate's attorney said yesterday as a federal grand jury investigating campaign contributions and funds was also to testify before the grand jury investigating Brilab-a covert government probe into suspected public and labor corruption.

The grand juries are apparently considering overlapping allegations.

Cammile Gravel, the attorney for Public Service Commission Chairman and former gubernatorial candidate Louis Lambert, said the $10,000 "was a campaign contribution for the purchase of tickets to some kind of an affair."

Gravel was called to testify before the Brilab grand jury, but Gravel said he had been told the panel was running late and would not need Lambert until next Thursday.

At an impromptu news conference, Gravel said he did not know how many tickets were involved, saying the event was "some kind of testimonial" held last November when Lambert was unsuccessfully campaigning against Republican David Treen. Treen won the runoff and the election the following month.

Gravel said the tickets were bought by Joseph Hauser, an FBI informant who repeatedly posed as an insurance company agent in the undercover Brilab probe.

Lambert was with his attorney, but declined any wrongdoing.

Meanwhile, other witnesses waited to testify before the grand juries at the federal courthouse. Harmon Roy, campaign treasurer for the losing gubernatorial campaign of state Sen. Edgar "Sonny" Mouton, hired a hotel bellhop to carry in seven boxes of records. Others carried more than a dozen boxes.

In the Brilab operation, FBI agents allegedly paid bribes to officials and others in Louisiana, Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas. In Louisiana, the payoffs allegedly were made in an effort to win a company identified as Prudential Insurance Company-a public employers health insurance contract.

Among those due to testify was Jeff David, campaign treasurer for the unsuccessful gubernatorial campaign for Lambert. He had more than a dozen boxes on his desk.

said conditions include the panel and U.S. acknowledgement that America committed "crimes" in Iran over the past 25 years.

President Carter has ruled out accepting blame for a U.S. role in exiling Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi to the throne in 1953. But this left open the possibility for some, careful statement in the future that the United States supported the deposed Shah in his 37-year reign.

Iran’s Foreign Minister Sa’ed Ghorbadeh, meanwhile, said at a news conference in Rome, where he is currently visiting, "I would say as soon as the process (setting up the commission) takes place that the problem of the hostages can be resolved." He expressed hope it would be set up within three days.

Chicago’s firefighters refuse fire calls

CHICAGO (AP) - Most of Chicago’s 4,350 firefighters walked out of station houses in defiance of a court order yesterday and refused to answer fire calls, hiring the city with its third major public employees’ strike in two months.

Mayor Jane Byrne called it "a sad and sick day" for the nation’s second-largest city as the city firefighters left fire protection for 3.5 million people up to some non-strikers, supervisory personnel, fire Academy cadets and other city workers. The only help from suburban departments was渺 early afternoon no major fires had been reported.

The main issue in the dispute was the city’s refusal to grant firefighters a written contract instead of the traditional handshake agreement unless the union agreed to a no-strike clause and binding arbitration.

The strike came three days after public school teachers ended a two-week walkout to demand pay raises.

The strikers violated a remandary order to order out of station houses in defiance of a court order yesterday and refused to answer fire calls, hiring the city with its third major public employees’ strike in two months.

The strikers apparently were not moved. "It doesn’t mean anything," said one. "Whether we obey a court order or not depends only on what our union president says.

And from the White House spokesman Jody Powell: "Everybody is considerably ahead of the process." He added that the media are "running a little rapidly.

Iranian officials said they hoped the inquiry would lead to freedom for the Americans held for 103 days by Islamic militants at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr said he hoped the hostages could be freed in "a matter of 48 hours" if Washington accepted conditions set by his government, and asked for a preliminary in-the early going that could have been avoided by a more experienced staff," Morin explained.

Another problem that was cited by Morin was the lack of deals at some booths. "This absence of dealers is unfortunate, because the past evenings have indicated that those booths with the most help have made the most money," Morin pointed out.

Another disappointment, according to Morin, was WSBN’s cancellation of its live broadcasts. Jim O’Brien, WSBN manager, could not be reached for comment.

In spite of these problems, Day expressed a hopeful outlook for the upcoming weekend.

In "Evening News"
Rather to succeed Cronkite

NEW YORK (AP) — Dan Rather, the "60 Minutes" correspondent who gained national attention by his questioning of Richard Nixon during the Watergate scandal, will succeed Walter Cronkite early next year as anchorman of the "CBS Evening News," the network announced yesterday.

CBS News President Bill Leonard said Rather, 48, would take over for Cronkite. The series' best-known journalist, an anchorman and managing editor of the "Evening News." He said Rather had signed a long-term contract for the job on the top-rated nightly news show. There had been speculation that Rather would sign with another network and one report said he had received an $8 million offer from ABC. Leonard would not discuss terms of Rather's new contract, which he said had been signed late that afternoon. Rather acknowledged "very serious" consideration of offers from other networks.

Rather said he found the rapid development of events "a little unbelievable," and said he was humbled by the appointment. "I'm a line reporter," he said. "That's what I always wanted to be, that's what I have been, and that's what I will continue to be."

"I want to be in the Walter Cronkite mold, in the Edward R. Murrow mold. In the past; I want to be the best at bringing these news to the people."

Cronkite, 65, will continue in his present position, probably through the presidential inauguration next January.

"And I'm going to continue to be very active with CBS after that," he said in an interview several hours before the announcement.

Cronkite is a former foreign correspondent for United Press International. He joined CBS News in July 1950 and has anchored the "Evening News" since 1962.

Millions associate his presence with the top stories of the past two decades, including America's space program and the political conventions.

Cronkite said he "Very probably," would pick up the option on his contract in November 1981, and continue to report for CBS News. "I would like very much to have the opportunity, mostly on my discretion, to go out on the big stories, to do sort of first-person sidebars," he said.

Rather had been considered for at least the last four or five years a prime candidate for the job. The only other name mentioned as frequently was that of CBS colleague Roger Mudd, who still sits in for Cronkite when the anchorman is on vacation or on assignment.

Mudd's future, however, generally fated to be very unlikely for Rather's rising star, which began its ascent in the early '70s, when the Texas-born newscaster covered the White House for CBS.

Shanabruch wins award

Dr. Charles H. Shanabruch, economic development coordinator for the Beverly Area Planning Association in Chicago, has been named winner of the 1979 competition for the best manuscript in American Catholic studies. The award goes to the Beverly Area Planning Association in Illinois, which has been named winner of the best manuscript in American Catholic studies.

Shanabruch, an economist at LaSalle Bank in Chicago, wrote a book titled "Toward an American Catholic Identity," which traces the development of the Roman Catholic Church in the United States. The book examines the struggle of the Roman Catholic Church in the United States, and undersea structures, worldwide. Crane a strong anti-abortion candidate

Dear Editor:

In response to Monday's letter to the editor, we feel we must introduce an additional viewpoint. Ronald Reagan's supporter that Reagan is the only Republican presidential candidate who is anti-abortion. While the action Reagan has taken on this issue is clear, Rep. Phyllis Crane, who has co-sponsored a bill calling for a constitutional amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

Crane, 40, an acknowledged leader in the House of Representatives and the first man in either party to declare his candidacy, is a devout Christian and has always been staunchly anti-abortion. In the Congress, his own words, "I have given it much thought."

"I believe," he said, "that the proposal to be considered is that which is in the best interest of the human life that is about to be born."

Accusation of 'blatant sexism' unbelievable

Dear Editor:

Pity the fate of poor Diane Fuchkach, an abused graduate student who recently committed suicide under the oppression of Notre Dame's Institute for the Study of Development. Diane was forced to stop her work, which appeared to be a major obsession to her.

"We just wish we could have done something," Diane's mother said. "But there was nothing we could do."

Blues Festival relaxing and enjoyable

Dear Editor:

This letter is written in response to the Observer article in which exiting student Union officials and Student Body President Bill Rocher, voiced their opinions on the continuation of the Midwest Blues Festival.

"The Blues Festival is a good idea," said Rocher. "It attracts a lot of people to Notre Dame."

"I agree," said an unidentified Observer who was quoted in the article. "I think it's a great idea."

"And," he continued, "that's what freedom is all about."

"Freedom is the right to continue your decision on your part. Whether you do or do not is up to you."
Title IX
Do we have something to hide?

Renee Leuchten

Institutions may be found in compliance if disparities between men's and women's athletic participation can be explained by legitimate, nondiscriminatory factors.

Many of these factors, outlined in detail, apply to Notre Dame. In fact, in our interviews, the regulations appeared to have placed Notre Dame in mind. The reason for this is simple: the school's intercollegiate football is unique among sports. Indeed, the rules require intercollegiate football to be a matter of the most complete and cost-efficient program to be taken into account in developing a Policy Interpretation.

What are we afraid of, Notre Dame? If we can't come up with any non-discriminatory factors (as we already assert) then we should not be afraid to admit them to the rest of the country, to the extent of complying with the law. It is only the defensive position our administrators take that makes me wonder if, in fact, we have something to hide.

Presidential politics

Campaign system at fault

John Ferroli

A few weeks ago, Jimmy Carter was criticized by the National Press Club for leading a "rose garden" campaign. In 1976, Tomoyee had promised to campaign "as honest and decent as the American people." In 1980, he is playing these same same arguments as "fair and balanced."

Wednesday evening, Carter himself dispelled the criticisms of his campaign effort by emphasizing the amount of money he had for the present state of American foreign affairs demands. It is important to note that even if Carter could afford to devote some time to debating his Democratic opponents, it is imperative for the Iranian students and the Soviet leaders to believe that a crisis situation exists. That is how Carter must present, at the very least, the image of a crisis. If the students and the Russians learned that Carter was campaigning, they would certainly take stern messages a lot less seriously, inasmuch as Carter has been giving foreign issues merely secondary consideration.

More importantly, are we afraid that our president is fighting a losing battle? One of the prime reasons that Carter has had so much trouble passing his legislation--for which we criticize him so much--is that he has been unfamiliar with the political ins and outs of dealing with Congress. We elected Carter as an outsider, a political virgin, but can we realistically expect him to ignore all the helpful "tricks of the trade" which come to him in three years as President?

Campaigning is an unfortunate part of our political system. Out of fairness, however, we must let Carter fight fire with fire. He's learning that appearances count for much more than reality in politics, and that he now understands that if Kennedy can vault his way to the presidency on sheer image, then he must play the game and brighten his image in order to retain his job.

Carter is thus only doing what he needs to do to win the presidential race in 1980. The American people have learned with such a degrading and excessive campaign system that they are merely reacting rationally to the requirements of the system. Of course, Carter did criticize the "rose garden" campaigns of Ford, but that criticism was spoken by an outsider, a man who had not yet been exposed to the demands of the system. Carter has gone through an essential process of learning since 1976, and we should not upbraid him for it. The president's "inside" politics--he's got to get elected.

Carter has inherited the presidential privilege of waging a "rose garden" campaign. The emphasis on the symbolic "real and balanced" atmosphere of Kennedy or Brown at all. After participating in his own campaign, Kennedy--how could Carter really need to engage in debate in order to "clarify the issues"? It seems that Carter wants to avoid not a more "open" government, but a more divided government, an administration that has been publicly spanked with criticisms which are obvious to all sides at the outset anyway. Teddy and Jimmy aren't going to reveal anything new to us of Jimmy Carter in a debate. They will act to subvert Carter's attempts to engender serious foreign and domestic policy by unifying the U.S. behind his administration.

The crucial issue is not whether we should indict Jimmy Carter for his savvy campaign tactics, but whether greater limits would be imposed on campaign spending, whether the media should be forced into some coverage of political candidates, and whether the onerous electoral filters, i.e., the polls, the debates, and the primaries, are necessary. If Kennedy had had his way, he would have been campaigning a lot less seriously.

It appears that it is the campaign system which makes government "closed" or "dishonest" politics. If Carter is playing the game the way it should be played, and we should all be happy to know it.

Nikki Giovanni: Prophetic Poetess

Beth Healy

On Tuesday night, I sat in a crowded library auditorium and was delightfully surprised at the presentation of Nikki Giovanni, whose humanity embodied in her words was so apparent. Nikki Giovanni, a prominent poet and author, spoke of the need for understanding and love in our world today. In her poem, "Liberation," she wrote, "Life is not living. If we want to live out the dream we should set others the same example." She carried the thought throughout her lecture as she spoke to touch many controversial and sensitive subjects facing Americans today.

All men have dreams and the right to see these dreams come true. Giovanni commented that blacks are especially sensitive to dreams as they wanted so long to see dreams come true. The poet illustrated the point with Rosa Parks' dream to ride the bus in Montgomery, Alabama. Young men and women should not have dreams shattered. It is a cross-fire. Giovanni recognized that it is old men who send young men, to war and prevent them from competing in the Olympic Games. Giovanni stated that to prevent man's dreams from becoming realities is to destroy mankind's spirit.

But beyond the dreams, Giovanni went further to state that "Life is a function of the image we carry in our heads. It is... to say that in 1980 to even be considering war. That if the world has been taught nothing, then those people don't like to get killed... and most of us really don't want to kill anybody and we come back just a little washed up, those of us who do come back... It has not been that long ago that young men, black and white, came back shot up or crazy from Vietnam that all of the sudden we can start this adventurism again."

Giovanni apparently sees that by this time, the world should be able to reason difficulties in terms of rationality. In looking at the world, Giovanni noted that separation according to sex, religion and even background is "...and the poet reasserted that "Man is not a solitary animal."

Mankind must and should be capable of pulling together and poetry is a catalyst in the reaching out needed. Today, man needs to reexamine life's foundational questions. How is man to respond to man? our earth? sp? ce? himself? Giovanni stated that mankind suffers from a misunderstanding of himself. Strangely, every corner of the universe man has conquered and yet he still remains ignorant of himself. Illustrating her point, Giovanni spoke of the atrocities of hunger, cold, loneliness and fear. Today mankind needs to realize that he does love, can touch and relate. Man should be able to be himself without the inadequacies of role playing. Life and mankind are journeys and must, at this point, reach a more humanistic level. Giovanni sees poetry as an aid for the journey.

Nikki Giovanni's poetry displays the sensitivity with which she views the world. In the recitals, the poet read about childhood, a time for unlisted, raped bliss, motherhood, age and love. Her verses cry out with passion, a hallmark of living and loving. In her poem, "This Life I Love," Giovanni speaks of the concernment found in growing old. The poet claims that America has no appreciation for age and fails to see the beauty in "earned" wrinkles. At age thirty-six, Giovanni hopes to reach a mature age and gain some wisdom, knowledge and truth. The last line of "This Life I Love" reveals the wisdom and understanding the young poet has presently achieved. "...i hope the light i try to live...

In her poems on love, Giovanni echoes her continuous need for love. Love is not a one shot gamble and man must continue to reach out and love over and over again. Good love and bad love will all equal out in the end, but no love is devastating.

In her poem, "Make-up," Giovanni examines the continual man's看重 behind and claims that in love, everything is bare...

I make up with you because you are strong enough to say "Come home, I need you."

Nikki Giovanni has attained a level of understanding and sensitivity desperately needed and underscored in the world today. If poetry and love are to save the world, then it is probable that Nikki Giovanni and her art will activate these energies.

What's All This, Then?

Breaking Away, Through Holy Cross Associates

Last year Diane Butterfield sang in Chapel Choir; this year she is delivering babies in Nairobi, Kenya. Last year Mat Feeny of Howard Hall performed at the NAAC, this year Diane Shillingbury coached swimming and played tennis; this year she is working with campus ministry at the University of Portland, Oregon. Last year Tom Gorman made himself local director, this year he is working as inspector-disciplinarian in Colegio Andacollo, a grade school-high school in Santiago's inner city barrio. We are forge climbing, teaching, exploring, and explaining the gospel from the Holy Cross Associates program.

The Holy Cross Associates program builds on those involvements. What the Associates do is build community. If you imagine a time when traditional religious experience and traditional religious institutions and the roles that have been attached to them have run their course, the Associates are making a new way of being present in the local church.

During Lent
Sacred Heart offers special series
by Tom O'Toole
Eileen Hunter, a representative of Sacred Heart Parish, announced a special lecture series beginning Feb. 24 at 8 p.m. in Sacred Heart Crypt.

In addition to the parish's usual Lenten services, Hunter said the series will focus on contemplative prayer, based on the spirituality of Thomas Merton. The series will be held on the first five Sundays of Lent.

The program, entitled "Intimacy with God in Prayer," will be conducted by James Finley, a former Trappist monk.

Symposium held in Lafortune
Tomorrow from 1-3 p.m. the Notre Dame Sociology Club will hold its annual research symposium for both Notre Dame and Saint Mary's undergraduate and graduate students. The symposium will be held on second floor of the LaFortune Student Center.

The topics of papers to be presented include sexuality and law, the family, service professions, and identity. A paper will be chosen from each section to be presented in late April at the Midwestern Inter-collegiate Research Convention, which will be held at Notre Dame. The symposium is open to all persons.

Each session will also include question and answer periods.

Finley - who spent five years at Gethsemani Monastery with Merton - now lives in South Bend tradition with his wife and two children. He is the author of Merton's Palace of Nowhere, which along with Merton's own New Seeds of Contemplation, Disposed Questions, and Thoughts in Solitude, and Higgin's Thomas Merton on Prayer will constitute the basis of the lecures. These volumes are all available in the parish office.

Merton, mystic of the modern church, lived the life of scholar/layperson as a youth, and actually learned to speak French fluently from going to bed with New York's Hungarian prostitutes, according to Hunter.

Merton was convicted by chance after wandering into St. Patrick's Cathedral one day and hearing a sermon on "The Lady thing everyone," and then decided to become a monk.

Instead of taking the vow of silence as he had planned, he was persuaded by his teachers to use his oratory abilities. After spending time in the far east, he returned to the States, and preached his new ideas of meditative prayer, which combined traditional Christian teachings with Eastern mysticism.

Hunter stressed the potential of the numerous opportunities in the parish.

All Big Brothers/Big Sisters who are interested in riding the South Shore train to Chicago with their "little" are asked to meet at the main circle no later than 10:45 a.m. tomorrow. The campus group will visit the Shedd Aquarium and the Adler Planetarium. The campus group will pick up all costs. The return train will arrive at 7:10 p.m. Call one of the officers for further details.

SMC elevator
Springer questions safety
by Laurie Sparrow
"I know it's no good, that's all I know," commented one main campus resident to a staff member on Thursday afternoon at Saint Mary's. The safety of the elevator in Holy Cross Hall is questionable according to signs posted outside the elevator. The signs warn that the elevator is in unstable condition and to ensure safety should not be overloaded with people or heavy luggage.

The old-fashioned freight elevator was probably constructed at the same time that Holy Cross was built and even though it did pass inspection, it is no longer efficient in serving the needs of the 16th century student.

Frank Springer, head of maintenance, said that if overloaded, the elevator would get stuck between floors.

According to Lowe Barber, executive assistant to the President for Physical Plans, plans are being laid down for the construction of a new elevator. Barber also said that the old elevator was more of a size problem than a safety problem. Yes, people are going to get stuck, yes, it will be bigger and have more room, yes, it will be more safe. Tentatively, construction of the new elevator is to begin May 26 with the agreement that the contractors have it in operation by the beginning of the fall term.

women's basketball program." He said it is revenue-producing and that it is "quite conceivable that other women's sports programs can follow suit."

With respect to Notre Dame's current problems with Title IX, Bradley said that there were two options which the University could pursue. First, he suggested they could challenge the regulation in the courts, and second he said the ND could "deal with the regulations." He added: "I would like to see Notre Dame adopt to Title IX because I feel a strong commitment to that regulation," he added.

In his speech, before a crowd of approximately 900 Hoosier Democrats who paid between $10 and $21 a plate to attend the fund-raiser, Bradley concentrated on Sen. Bayh's record on energy. Bradley is a member of the Senate's committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

This country is at a perilous time in its history due primarily to dependence on foreign oil. At present we spend $65 billion dollars on imported oil—enough money to run the state of New Jersey for 15 years," he told the crowd.

"That not only means we're spending that much money out of the country, it also means that we don't have that cash to spend on exploration and energy development at home," he said.

"We are reeling on the brink of disaster, and what's worse the foreign oil we're dependent on isn't securing for us the recess events in Afghanistan and Iran prove," Bradley added.

"Concerted action needed by government and the American people to amend this situation. We must fill our petroleum reserves and get serious about energy conservation," he said.

Bradley added that Sen. Bayh has been a supporter of alternative domestic energy programs such as geothermal, and that he supports Bayh in that respect. "Also the recent events in South America also in attendance at last night's meeting the transition to foreign oil support for Bayh was Indiana Congressman John Brademas and Hoosier Senator Richard Lugar.

Following Spring break, freshmen will be required to declare their college programs, but now is the time to start thinking about such decisions. Under the direction of Freshman Dean Emil Hofman, programs have been initiated to help freshmen make the transition into the sophomore year.

The Spotlight Program, consisting of lectures from each of the deans of the four college programs (Engineering, Science, Arts and Letters, and Business Administration), information about each program in the Learning Resource Center; and visits to the departments of the different colleges if desired, has already begun its campaign.

Dr. Joseph Hogan and Dr. Francis Castellino, deans of the Colleges of Engineering and Science, respectively, have lectured in prospective majors' classrooms. Today is the final day for freshmen to take advantage of the Engineering display in the Learning Resource Center, and materials concerning the College of Science will be available during the week of Feb. 18.

Hofman emphasized, however, that all materials can still be utilized after their designated week.

The Colleges of Arts and Letters and Business Administration will be on display during the two following weeks, respectively. The displays contain scheduled video tapings, college bulletins, career pamphlets, and audio tapes providing an abundance of information on each college.

Supplementing the Spotlight Program will be the College Consulting Service, which will give current freshmen the opportunity to meet people affiliated with a specific program and discuss their personal situations.

The third effort facilitating the sophomore transition will be the Education Planning Program, enabling freshmen unfamiliar with their college programs to take tests designed to enlighten them as to their academic strengths and interests.

These programs were developed to make freshmen aware of the opportunities in the different colleges so that they may make the wisest choices come time to select their colleges in April.

Pre-Advance Registration Meeting will follow the selections, and freshmen are required to attend these meetings arranged to inform them about scheduling classes. The final stage will be Advance Registration, taking place in late April.

Dean Hofman expressed the importance of the informative programs, and urged all freshmen to fully take advantage of them.

Think of a ship as a corporation, and it's not farfetched at all. A destroyer may have fifteen officers, other ships even fewer. Even the most junior officer gets to share in running the show.

You become part of the management team when you get your commission as an ensign after just 16 weeks of leadership training at Officer Candidate School.

Choose to be a Navy officer and you'll learn about the oceanography to propulsion to systems analysis, from inventory to inventory management. In graduate school, this training would cost you thousands, but in the Navy, we pay you.

Ask your Navy representative about officer opportunities, or mail this coupon for more information. Or call toll-free 800-841-8000 (in GA call toll-free 800-342-5855). There's no obligation, and you'll learn about an excellent way to start a career in management. As a college graduate you can get management experience in any industry. But you'll get it sooner—and more of it—in the Navy.
Six stories, one plot:
The Romance of Our Age is Technology.

Rendezvous in Spain.
You're a software applications specialist. When you picked this career, you never dreamed that one day you'd rendezvous in Barcelona, Spain with two Navy destroyers. But when your company is Texas Instruments and one of your customers is the U.S. Sixth Fleet, you learn to expect the unexpected.
The destroyers are equipped with Ti computers and they need new software fast. You come aboard and sail with the Fleet until your job is completed.
Not a bad assignment for a software specialist named Sueie. You're glad you got into technology.

The Salesman's Dream.
You're a Ti sales engineer. You've got what is probably one of the most irresistible selling messages in the history of salesmanship.
It goes like this: Hold this Ti-59 Scientific Calculator in your hand. Now, let's compare it to the most popular computer of the 1950s - the IBM 650.
The 650 weighed almost three tons, required five to 10 tons of air conditioning and 45 square feet of floor space. And it cost $200,000.
Now look at the Ti-59. You're holding in the palm of your hand.
It has a primary memory capacity more than double that of the 650. It performs its principal functions five to 10 times faster.
And it retails for under $300.
With a story like this, the hardest part of your job is holding onto your sample. You're glad you got into technology.

The Incredible Talking Chip.
You're an integrated circuit designer at Ti. You've helped find a way to make a chip talk, something no integrated circuit has ever done before.
First application: an electronic aid that helps children learn to spell.
The world's first talking textbook.
And that's just the beginning.
The talking chip's potential is mind-bending. You're glad you got into technology.

The Joy Of Complication.
You're in semiconductor design at Ti. You love it when people at parties ask you what you do. You say, "I make tings complicated." (Pause.) "In fact, I got promoted recently for creating some major complications."
What you mean (but seldom explain) is this: the more active element groups (AEGs) you can put on a single chip of silicon, the more the average AEG cost goes down.
In short, you make things cheaper by making them more complicated.
Your work made it possible for a Ti consumer product that sold three years ago for about $70 to sell today for $14.95.
Your future looks wonderfully complicated. You're at about 100,000 AEGs per chip now and 1.000,000 is in sight.

You're glad you got into technology.

Outsmarting Smog.
You've always designed airborne radars for Ti customers.
Now, all of a sudden you know your next radar design is going to stay at the airport.
On the ground.
It's on the ground that traffic controllers at Los Angeles International Airport have a problem. They can 'see' incoming and outgoing airplanes on their radar just fine. So long as the airplanes are in the air.
But when the airplanes are on the ground - touching down, taking off, taxing, parking - they are sometimes impossible to see and control.
Ground smog obscures them.
You believe you have an answer to the smog problem. You dig out the plans for an airborne ground-mapping radar you helped design.
You adapt the design so the L.A. controllers can use it to see through smog. It works beautifully.
Today your smog-piercing radar is widely known as Airport Surface Detection Equipment (ASDE). It's a standard equipment at L.A. International and at the airport in Geneva, Switzerland.
Other airports with smog and snow problems are expected to have it soon.
You're glad you're in technology.

Oil Sleuths International.
You're a geophysicist. A good one. You could be with any of the big oil companies. But you wanted to get with a company whose specialty is the same as yours.
Exploration.
That's why you're at Ti, in Geophysical Service.
Ti explorer ships. Ti photo-geologic and Ti truck- and tractor-mounted vibrator systems are working all over the world.
They're finding oil. And they're identifying areas where no oil exists, thereby saving huge losses in drilling costs.
Also, Ti's worldwide computer network and its Advanced Scientific Computer is making 3-D recording and processing possible. This excclusive exploration technique is the only practical way to unscramble "no-record" areas on land and sea.
You're a happy sleuth. You're on the biggest hunt in history. And your team is out front.
You're glad you got into technology.

If you're not in technology yet, think it over.
If you are in technology, talk to Texas Instruments.

Sweden in their earlier game. In another big upset, Annie Borchink, a 28-year-old nurse from Holland who almost quit speed skating last summer because of an injury, led a parade of 19 of 30 contestants who broke the Olympic record in the women's 1,500-meter speed skating event, winning in 2:10.95.

U.S. hope Beth Heiden, who with her brother Eric heads the American team's medal hopes in these Olympics, finished seventh and said "I think it was just the press that thought I was going to be a lot higher. I wish it had been higher. I wish I would have broken the world record and I think I could have done better." Heiden was uncharacteristically fourth with 1:54.29 from the Soviet Union into the 30-kilometer race. The American hope in that event also disappointed. Bill Koch of Duluth, Minn., who surprised with a silver medal in the 10-kilometers at the Innsbruck Olympics in 1976, dropped out after 25 kilometers. He said he learned he wasn't in the running and "I decided I would save the energy rather than finish the race. That energy will be used Sunday in the 15-kilometer."

There were no American medal winners on the first full day of competition in these problem-plagued Games. The administration of New York Gov. Hugh Carey contacted the U.S. speed skating superstar, hopes to start his sweep of five gold medals today when he competes in the 500-meter event. Heiden will compete later in the 1,000, 5,000, 10,000, and 15,000-meter races.

CHICAGO - The Notre Dame women's fencing team, led by the 1-0 record into action Saturday. They defeated Milwaukee Area Tech, 11-5, on Saturday, and have faced even better than DeCicco or women's coach Greg Muerer had anticipated.

"They are something else," says DeCicco. "Everybody's fencing well. Last weekend Liz Bathon went out and won four straight. She looked like a national champion. And Doreen Careny wins three of four. They're really doing well.
