Joseph Kennedy, the nephew of presidential candidate Edward Kennedy, made a surprise visit to Notre Dame yesterday.

Young Kennedy campaigns at ND

by Tom Jackson

News Editor

A portion of the famed "Kennedy clan" undertook a campaign tour through South Bend yesterday on behalf of presidential contender Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, with the son of the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy-Joseph Kennedy III-milling a short stop on campus in the late afternoon for some good old-fashioned "pressing the flesh.

Kennedy, the 28-year-old ne\-w\-p of the candidate, arrived in South Bend yesterday morning to open up the district's Kennedy Headquar\-ters at 401 N. Michigan Ave., and also to start getting people thinking about Kennedy and to get him in the forefront of the Democratic candidates," according to Dan Jackson, Kennedy's third district coor\-dinator.

Kennedy was in Indiana campaigning for the Democrat\-ic primary to be held May 6. Jackson commended that Indiana's vote Tuesday, 82 percent, for the U.S. Senate's ranking Kennedy point out that John Kennedy won here in 1960, and Joseph's father Robert picked up his first primary victory here in the 1968 race. Jackson added embas\-sively that "If he (Joseph) is one-tenth the man his father was, he'll be a great person."

The young Kennedy, who ran a non-profit oil company, when he isn't campaigning full time as candidate, is a member of Notre Dame after a tour through the City Council building in South Bend and lunch at Goupepe's with local dignitaries. However, his campus visit was hastily organized for some good old-fashioned "pressing the flesh."

He continued to the LaFortune Student Center, where he worked the nearly empty main lounge, the Huddle, and finally the Student Government offices. From there, Kennedy walked to the Administration Building where he spoke with University Presi\-dent Fr. Theodore Hesburgh and a group of students in Hesburgh's office.

Kennedy concluded his stay by working the crowd watching Bookstore Basketball, and then by stopping himself in front of the South Dining Hall to catch the 3 p.m. rush.

Between his stops on campus, Kennedy has taken the punch out of the Democratic candidates, according to Tom Jackson, Kennedy's third district coor\-dinator.

Robber shoots woman

by John M. Higgins

Another robbery/murder occurred early yester\-day morning near the Castlewood apartment complex on Ironwood Road.

Patricia Schallol, 54, was beaten and shot at 1 a.m. yesterday morning in her home at 18384 Cleveland Road in Clay township. She was pronounced dead at the scene at 1:45.

According to Sgt. Richard Snell of the St. Joseph County Sheriff's Department, a lone ass\-aist broke into the residence through the back door at approximately 1:00 a.m. The intruder, described by police as "a black male," entered the house, beat Schallol's husband Edgar, 56, with a piece of fire wood, then tied him up and threw him in the basement. The robber then killed Mrs. Schallol, beating her and shaking her once in the head.

Mr. Schallol managed to use a telephone in the basement to summon police. Police say they have no suspects.

This is the second murder in three days in the Notre Dame/St. Mary's off-campus community. On Tuesday night, Delmarie Britton, a South Bend resident, was the victim of robbery/murder in her Notre Dame Avenue apartment.

There, three men broke in through the front door, tied up Britton's boyfriend, and shot Britton in the back, leaving her body in the living room.

When asked if there was any connection between the murders, both Snell and Sgt. Eugene Kyle of the South Bend Police Department said that "It's too early to tell."

Students living in the area were surprised upon receiving news of the murder. "This is a pretty good neighborhood," resident David O'Connor said. "I don't know that kind of person near St. Louis Street, but I didn't expect it around here," he commented.

"It's surprising, but I don't worry very much," Jim Minnott remarked. "This area is pretty heavily trafficked."

"But it makes me wonder," O'Connor added.

Carter threatens blockade if economic sanctions fail

by The Associated Press

President Carter turned the U.S. economic vise on Iran a little tighter yesterday, and got a boost from West Europeans. Portugal banned all trade with Iran, and the European Parlia\-ment urged the nine Common Market nations to consider breaking diplomatic ties with the revolutionary regime in Tehran.

At a Washington news con\-ference, Carter hinted at the naval blockade option, noting that "the inten\-tion with Iran is to constrict and finally the blockade step will be military action."

But Carter was not specific about what he might use force against Iran, saying, "I have not decided on the military steps with our allies that I might take."

However, he hinted at the naval blockade option, noting that "the inter\-ruption of commerce with Iran is a logical move."

A naval blockade could inter\-rupt trade between Iran and other countries, including Western Europe, which is heavily reliant on oil imports.

"We are still attempting to avoid that kind of action," he said. "But we cannot preclude that kind of action."

Carter noted that the new sanctions campaign was about six days after he broke diplomatic relations with the revolutionary government. Carter thinks that if the United States continues to make threats, the Iranians will drill more wells--"that's a crock of baloney."

Kennedy also attacked Carter's "pressing the flesh." Carter accused Kennedy of doing an "excellently wishy-washy. I just don't believe he stands up in the vested interests of the United States."

Carter continued to the LaFortune Student Center, where he worked the nearly empty main lounge, the Huddle, and finally the Student Government offices. From there, Kennedy walked to the Administration Building where he spoke with University Presi\-dent Fr. Theodore Hesburgh and a group of students in Hesburgh's office.

Carter finally admits
U.S. has entered recession

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter said yesterday the U.S. economy "probably has entered a period of recession" that will cause "pain and ... disruptions" for many Americans. But Carter said he believes that is the price for restraining inflation, and predicted the downturn will be short and mild. It was the first time the president has acknowledged a recession apparently is at hand, although predictions by his own economic forecasters recently have been bolstered by layoffs in the auto industry and a sharp decline in homebuilding.

Maintenance prepares campus grounds as commencement nears

by Louis Breaux

It is no miracle that the campus awakens in its full-color regalia for the spring. Much of the beauty to be witnessed in the coming weeks is the result of work being done by the maintenance crew in preparation for commencement weekend.

For most students spring means baseball, frisbee, jogging, and reverberating across the quad, and lying under the sun on a patch of grass; but spring for the maintenance crew means cleanup and planting.

The maintenance department sets two major target dates annually for having the campus in peak condition, those dates being graduation and the open-weekend period at the end of the fall term. Edwin Lyon, director of maintenance, said, "We do what any other grounds crew would do, but hopefully we do it better." Lyon commended, "Although we have one of the best Dutch elm disease prevention programs in the country, we still seem to be losing the fight."

The number of trees on campus has dwindled from 1300 before the banning of DDT to 600. Lyon said, "DDT had the best results for us many years, but now we are forced to use substitute pesticides which do not have the same properties, such as fungicides and herbicides." Lyon said, "One may notice an increase in the number of trees on campus next fall since maintenance plans on replacing many of the lost trees with saplings over the summer.

One of the spring projects for maintenance will be to fertilize the campus. Lyon commented, last year we used a certain fertilizing mixture for the first time and we were very pleased with the result. We plan to continue using it this year."

After fertilizing the lawns, the crew will begin planting flowers, trimming hedges, and later moving the campus as the grass grows. Also the sod dug up by snowplows will be replanted and chuckholes in the roads and parking lots will be temporarily repaired.

Students should not have to fret about dodging sprinklers much this spring since the major watering will be done after school is out. "Right now we are two weeks behind because of the rain. We should not have to begin sprinkling both at the end of school since the April showers will take care of it," Lyon said.
Sean Donlon discusses position of Irish government in division

by Michael Mader
Staff Reporter

Spicing his serious, straight-forward talk with Irish humor, Sean Donlon, the Irish Ambassador to the United States, discussed the position of the Irish government on the political division between the Irish Republic and North Ireland last night in the Galvin Life Science Auditorium.

Throughout his talk, Donlon emphasized the rejection of violence by the peoples of both the Republic and North Ireland. Donlon also stressed the need for moderation and interest in the present differences existing between the two Irelands.

Approximately 35 people attended the lecture and about half were students. Almost all of those present were Irish-Americans who frequently burst into laughter and were receptive to Donlon.

Explaining that "all Irish governments in recent years have set for themselves the same basic policy" concerning a reunion with Northern Ireland, Donlon listed the goals of the current government. While recognizing that Ireland has had two distinct political traditions, Donlon explained that the government also realizes its island's residents co-exist in areas of common interest and heritage.

Several institutions organized on an all-Irish basis that Donlon mentioned include the Churches, trade-unions, banking facilities and sporting events. The government rejects the effort of an attempt of one historical Irish tradition to dominate the other according to Donlon. "We need to eliminate sources of division and rancor," he commented.

Importantly, both Irish lands respect violence," Donlon said. To emphasize his point, Donlon used a poll taken of Irish nationalists concerning the tolerance of certain groups within Ireland. Out of 70 groups questioned, the IRA, Sinn Fein (of which he noted that Protestants were ranked 19th, one below unmarried mothers.

Detroit (AP)—Total layoffs among U.S. auto production workers will decline next week, according to company reports yesterday. The downward trend before heavy dismissals an­ nounced earlier this week by the two biggest companies began to take effect.

Layoffs among the five major U.S. companies will fall from more than 205,000, the second consecutive decline—the companies said.

The number of workers on open-ended layoff will rise from 169,550. Recalls in plants on week-long or two-week long shutdowns will bring the number on temporary furlough down from 41,900 to 27,800.

On Tuesday, Ford Motor Co. announced it would let go about 15,000 workers, including 6,100 from the white collar ranks, and close three plants. General Motors Corp. followed with an announcement that it was dropping 12,000 produc­ tion workers.

Ford's actions extend into August and GM's extend into October.

GM disclosed yesterday that it had laid off 1,100 white-collar workers for an indefinite period recently, almost all of them hired in connection with assembly plant cutbacks. GM has idled three plants until the new model year and has dropped ships from 21 plants since July.

Temporary production lay­ offs announced by the No. 1 producer totaled 10,000 in three plants next week com­ pared with 16,000 this week.

GM said its indefinite layoffs had risen from 80,000 to 82,000. Ford said its short-term lay­ offs would fall from 19,150 from eight plants to 7,650 in three, but its indefinite furloughs had risen from 41,000 to 43,200. Chrysler Corp. will idle 1,700 briefly, down from 5,800. Chrysler's open-ended layoffs rose from 39,000 to 42,000.

American Motors Corp. said no change in its 2,350 indefi­ nite layoffs but said it would shut a plant for a week, idling 1,300. Volkswagen of America has no layoffs.

Cuban refugees claim harassment before exit

San Jose, Costa Rica (AP)—Cuban refugees arriving from the Peruvian embassy in Ha­vana claimed yesterday im­ porters of President Fidel Cas­тро insulted them and took their personal belongings be­ fore allowing them to leave.

Two planes brought 254 re­ fugees during the second day of an airlift from communist Cuba, lifting the total flown up to 400. Peruvian officials said 9,700 Cubans still were waiting to leave their homeland.

The refugees, including wo­ men and children, looked wan and tired as they stepped off the Peruvian embassy plane.

Some of the refugees were so exhausted they collapsed on the floors in small groups and went to sleep without waiting for mattresses.

Several said they left Cuba because they could not stand living under the communist regime and because of the high cost of living.

"We are workers and teach­ ers and painters," one man wanted to leave Cuba and escape the repression," said another.

Some 150 Castro supporters were at Jose Marti airport in Havana at 3 a.m. when the refugees arrived to board the planes for San Jose, the Cu­ bans said.

"They took away all our suits," said Gilberto Puigg, 35.

"They even took away our wristwatches," he added.

This is not just 10,000 people in the Peruvian embassy, but also the Cuban people angry at Castro," another man said.

Another man held up three luggage tags from Cuban Air­ lines. "See, I even have the proof that they have it," he said.

Describing the mob scene at Havana airport, a refugee who asked not to be identified said the Cubans "insulted, denounced and shoved and one man walked up to me and said, 'The only reason I won't hit you now is because your child is here.'"

Carlos Dominguez, 37, an accountant, said more than 40,000 people would have gone into the Peruvian embassy in Havana if police had not cordoned off the area. "People have lost their fear of Castro," he said.

Final destination of the Cu­ ban refugees, who began crowding into the Peruvian embassy's 20-acre compound the weekend of April 4, was still not clear.

Foreign countries have offered asylum to more than half of them.

Costa Rica, which agreed to the staging area, will allow 300 to remain.

Two U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service experts were expected soon to start processing papers for the 3,500 Cubans who will be going to the United States. An Ameri­ can Embassy source, who de­ clined to be identified, said it would begin processing papers before the first group leaves San Jose.

Congress yesterday. "Do you know how long it takes to get troops combat-ready?" he asked. "Six to eight months. Registration gets you 13 days," he charged. "Students who happened to be anxious to meet him, or able," he concluded.

Reaction to Kennedy's visit was by no means overwhelming or excite, but rather tepid as Sean Heffernan, president of the Young Democrats, termed it. Students who happened across Kennedy's path during the afternoon did not seem anxious to meet him, or impressed that they had just spoken with a member of the once widely respected Kennedy family.

Heffernan attributed the indifferent response to lack of advance publicity and organization, and he expressed disappointment that he was not informed of the visit earlier by the Kennedy organization.

Heffernan's hurried preparations in the hours before Kennedy's arrival were apparently the only advance work done on campus, even though a "Students for Kennedy" organization has been in existence for several months.

Paul Lewis, head of the "Students for Kennedy" organization here, said that Kennedy preferred simply to walk around campus, and that "He was either an hour here without organization or nothing at all. We took the hour without organization." Lewis noted that additional members of the Kennedy family are scheduled to visit the campus in the remaining three weeks before the primary.

Kennedy, a handsome, curly-haired blond with a smile almost photographically reminiscent of his father's, seemed comfortable as he went from person to person lobbying for votes, but most students were, surprisingly, not especially interested in chatting with him.

while live births remain constant and abortions increase. "Post-conception birth control is becoming the solution for the increasing numbers of young women getting pregnant," he claimed.

The claim of birth defects as a reason for abortion is based upon a mingling of the concept of unwanted birth and unwanted pregnancy. Using slides of fetuses at various stages of development, and then one of an aborted fetus in a bucket, Diamond emphasized, "A baby's life should not be available to anybody, even if its biological mother rejects it. God alone has access to it."

"Unless everybody is protected by the law, no one is safe. I speak for the fetus and that child must be given the right to live, or else give it the right to take the life of the unwanted mother when it grows up. Because as surely as night follows day, euthanasia follows abortion, and it's already happening," he concluded.

Ralph Nader leads attack on alleged abuses of big business

By the Associated Press

Yesterday was declared as "Big Business Day." or "Growth Day"—depending on your point of view.

Labor leaders, senior citizens groups and consumer activists led by Ralph Nader attacked alleged abuses in the marketplace with marches, rallies and mock trials marking what they called "Big Business Day."

Corporate supporters responded with "Growth Day" activities in defense of the economic system, which, they said, has "freely and properly provided so much for so many."

Individual events spread across the country. The focus of the "Big Business Day" campaign was a bill introduced in Congress earlier this month to limit the powers of the nation's 600 largest corporations.

Local groups, however, used the day to campaign for their own causes. The New Hampshire People's Alliance, for example, said the rally it sponsored at the capitol in Concord was designed to call attention to problems of unemployment, electricity rates and other consumer problems.

Members of the Massachusetts Building Trades Council, which marched through downtown Boston protested the increase in non-union construction firms in the state. And the Michigan Citizens' Lobby put the Hooker Chemical Co. and its parent firm, Occidental Petroleum Corp., on trial for allegedly polluting the environment. The guilty verdict was announced before the trial.

An Occidental spokesman said the charges were "unfounded and underserving."

"Big Business Day" supporters in San Diego included Jane Fonda, a senior citizens' group, Friends of the Earth, and an organization called "Tax the Rich." The group distributed 1,000 ballots on the campus of San Diego State University, asking recipients to vote for the "San Diego Corporate Hall of Shame."

Nader, who says the public is "increasingly dismayed by the gross misconduct of our largest corporations," scheduled a speech in his home state of Connecticut where the Citizen Labor Energy Coalition and the 1st Congressional District Congress Watch organized a day long program.

Included was a mock grand jury with citizens registering complaints. Since 1972, the group has "freely and underserving of corporations."

The "Growth Day" events were sponsored by the Heritage Foundation, a conservative think tank, Washington D.C. Lee Ray, a Democrat, said the group was sponsored by the foundation that Americans "are in a maze of regulations from which we need to rescue ourselves."

At the same time, Alex- ander B. Trowbridge, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, accused Nader and his supporters of "verbal overkill. What the nation should be focusing on, said Trowbridge, is "restoring American productive capacity."

...Donlon

In the same poll, Donlon found that Peskyrians were about 28th, just below the labor movement.

When mentioning Ireland's desire to be less energy dependent, Donlon said that all the Irish pray to St. Patrick, and the other Irish saints for energy, hoping to find enough oil to become a member of OPEC by the end of the 1980's.

While once economically inferior to North Ireland, the Republic has grown so well in the last 20 years that it has now overtaken the North, Donlon explained. "The biggest change in the last 35 years in Ireland has been the change from agriculture to industry, making it the fastest growing economy in Europe." Donlon de- clared. He further explained that because the economic balance, there can no longer be prejudice on the basis of economic status, as was the case when the Irish Republic was first created.

Historically, North Ireland has been linked with England for 200 years, and recent attention, which is the nation should be focusing on, Trowbridge, is "restoring American productive capacity."

ND/SMC prepares for Earth Day

by Barbara Bridges
Staff Reporter

Environmental appreciation and awareness will be the guiding spirit behind this year's ND/SMC celebration of Earth Day on Tuesday.

"Earth Day 1980" promises to be a spectacular affair at the Notre Dame Student Ministry Center (ND/SMC) and is being arranged for several speakers to discuss a variety of topics concerning man and his environment. The annual Earth Day celebration will begin Sunday with a vegetarian dinner sponsored by SURE and the World Hunger Coalition.

On Tuesday, several speakers will lecture throughout the day, and musical entertainment will be presented during the afternoon. SURE is an ND/SMC student organization started by South Bend resident Joe Lehner. The group is concerned with educating people on issues of alternative energy. They have a general opposition to nuclear power and believe in the need for citizen involvement in establishing energy policies.

SURE is an offshoot of Lehner's involvement in the South Bend Student Association, the "Bailly Downwind Alliance." The Alliance was formed to oppose the development of the Bailly Nuclear Power plant during the time when it was being built in Chesterton, Indiana.

Lehner is particularly concerned with enlightening the college community as to the environmental and energy issues facing the world today. He has arranged for a broad selection of topics to be addressed during the day in the hope that the community will look back on the last ten years to see what has been accomplished since the first national Earth Day.

The first national Earth Day was started to inform people of pollution problems and the scarcity of resources. It was also a celebration of nature.

Currently, the energy issue is one of paramount concern and, thus, is receiving a great deal of attention during the course of "Earth Day 1980."

Speakers from ND, ISUB, and various community organizations will be talking about issues such as solar energy, nuclear power, toxic substances, hazardous wastes, ethics and utilities. A special guest speaker, Sr. Rosalie Berrel, of the Ministry of Concern for Public Health in Buffalo, New York, will be discussing her extensive research on the health effects of low-level radiation.

Other topics to be discussed will be holistic effects of low-level technology, economics and the environment, environmental biology, environmental legislation, and Catholicism and the environment. Lehner hopes that Earth Day will "educate people on a wide range of subjects, provide a learning atmosphere, an opportunity for reflection and contemplation, and some fun." He also hopes to enlighten people as to environmental issues, the need for international brotherhood and wants to get people to "look forward to a second decade of environmental consciousness."

Approximately 25 student members of SURE will host Earth Day. Various academic departments and Campus Ministry have assisted SURE in sponsoring the day's activities. South Bend community musicians and student performance will entertain on the South Quad.

Rhodesia becomes free after years of civil war

SALISBURY, Zimbabwe (AP) - Rhodesia, wracked by years of civil war in a failed struggle for white supremacy, officially became the black-ruled nation of Zimbabwe at midnight yesterday, at 5 p.m. EST. The transition brought independence to Britain's last African colony.

The red, white and blue British Union Jack was lowered and replaced by the six-color standard of Africa's newest black-ruled nation.

Britain's Prince Charles was on hand to turn over the British Parliament's declaration granting independence to the southern African state. He was joined by four presidents, seven prime ministers, and envoys from some 100 countries as well as 40,000 mainly black guests in the Rufaro soccer field where the ceremony was held.

Wild cheers erupted from the stadium as Zimbabwe was born out of the ashes of a seven-year war between black nationalists and the country's white minority that cost some 20,000 lives and shattered an otherwise healthy economy.

Cooperation: Solution to the Crime Problem

The crime problem in South Bend has culminated this past week in two murders—one on the periphery of the ND/SMC off-campus community, and the other in that area's very center. Crime has been on the rise in South Bend with an unknown three separate murders occurring in the last three weeks. If the present trend continues, the surviving residents of the Northeast neighborhood—Crime, in these areas, is not a problem which only affects the student. It is a problem which affects both students and South Bend residents. The solution, therefore, must come from both of these two groups.

To begin to solve the problem, three steps must be taken: by the South Bend Police, Notre Dame/SMC Administrators, and off-campus students.

First, a dialogue must be opened between the three groups mentioned above. The police must direct more of their attention to the Northeast neighborhood area, not only for the sake of the students, but also for the benefit of the other residents of the neighborhood.

Second, the Administrations must take steps to convince the South Bend authorities of the seriousness of the threat posed daily to students and other residents of the neighborhood. Both Administrations have the influence off-campus students lack, but desperately need, to make the South Bend Police aware of the crime problem off-campus.

Third, students who live off-campus must report all crimes to the police and ND/SMC security. In the past, students have taken an apathetic stand by not reporting stolen cars to the police and off-campus students: the problem which affects both communities. To successfully eradicate the problem for both communities, to successfully eradicate the problem for both communities, to successfully eradicate the problem for both communities, to successfully eradicate the problem for both communities, to successfully eradicate the problem for both communities.

It is a problem which affects both communities. To successfully eradicate the problem for both communities.

WSND ignored

Dear Editor,

I am writing in response to the "Classical Music Primer" on the features page of the April 10, 1980 edition of the Observer. I am certainly in agreement with Mr. Sullivan's view that classical music is an art form that can be appreciated by people other than the music majors and that, indeed, classical music does have an appeal for anyone whose ears are attuned to beauty. I will also agree with his recommendations for those unfamiliar with the classical literature. However, Mr. Sullivan ignored the easiest method of acquainting oneself with the classics without even leaving one's room, one can attend 17 hours of fine arts performances each and every day simply by tuning to 88.9 WSNF-FM. I believe this to be the easiest way possible to experience the world of classical music. I hope Mr. Sullivan's easiest method will follow Mr. Sullivan's suggestions and tune into Notre Dame's fine arts service—WSND-FM. Thank you.

Security ready to help

Dear Editor,

The Security Department is appalled at the thought of a life taken in our community. To the fact that such a life was taken in the nearby vicinity only last week, we are all acquainted. What is some of our concerns. We will assist in any way possible that we can. The South Bend Police can feel welcome calling upon our department. Both the Director and Assistant Director were at the scene when the death of the campus being reported. The department monitors radio traffic of area police in an effort to keep our cars informed of any happenings.

We have a meeting schedueled for Monday afternoon to discuss methods of reducing tension resulting from the fears people are going through. The meeting will be with the South Bend Chief of Police. We have had others, worked with him and other agencies and plan to continue such meetings. Quick advice for the present revolves around security of the campus resi- dences. We suggest deadbolt locks, know who is coming to the door. Use lights as effectively as possible. Be good witnesses by helping to watch out for your neighbors. Don't leave dressing room drapes, curtains, or shades opened. Explore potential alarm devices with the police or other residents in the apartment complex dwellings. Walk in groups if possible, arrange transportation with friends rather than taking a chance on the unknown.

Report suspicious activities to your local police agencies.

Sacred Heart alive

Dear Editor,

Sacred Heart Church—at the heart of our campus—is a two-story, gable-roofed, brick building, and a very good example of this type of architecture, to be sure. As the liturgical and music programs expand here on our campus, it should not be just an old building, or a museum piece.

Tonight it was much, more, indeed, that comes with the sound of fine contemporary liturgical music and drama. This is not the usual: a story, but rather a true story with sacred music and spirituality. A true mystery play was presented. "The Pilgrim" was performed by Pete Proulx, a religion major. Drama in keeping with this Eastern European theme was strong, difficult but very beautiful, presented prayerfully and generously by over one hundred University students and faculty. There was a full band, bell choir, a small orchestra, a fine choir. There was fine drama that moved us, so meaningful was an act of faith to the simple and usually unlettered followers of the Gospel presented through drama and music. The Heavenly Father became, as it were, a man, a something "neat and mean". The principle was that if you really understood that the Gospel is a story centered on real people, the right ideas would germinate in the heart. Nowadays the trouble often is that we start with the ideas and not the people. (Taken from program notes by Erik Routley. At Notre Dame, we, perhaps, need more than anyone, need to make the Gospel "COME ALIVE"."

Fitzsimmons forgotten

On Monday evening there was a sports banquet to honor the Notre Dame women's track team. Ms. Fitzsimmons, who deserves to be honored, was not among those individuals honored. I thought this was a bit of hard work and accomplishments.

Defending My Position

Reagan Not That Bad

Joseph Falvey

When I wrote my original column on the Pinto trial, I had expected a reply to it. In fact, I thought it would be beneficial if someone wrote a counterpoint to it. I was not, however, prepared for the avalanche of character assassination. Well, the constructive criticisms I had hoped for, his letter was a personal attack. I feel that I should answer his few substantive charges and establish that I am not an unemployable loon who attacks big business out of spite.

I am disillusioned with present business practices, but I am not prejudiced against business. When I saw such abuses as the DC-10 explosion, I worked with the Tinley Park, Federal, and the Wonderful Pinto, I began to doubt my choice of major. When I saw that the lofty corporate wall takes on its thinnest motives, my doubts grew into conviction. Instead, I have chosen a legal career (believe it or not, Mr. Oelerich, the law schools I have applied to do seem to like me.)

Once Mr. Oelerich finished his defamation, he then made a number of statements that beg a reply. First of all he spent the bulk of his letter telling why it was ridiculous to expect Ford to produce a totally safe car. In doing so, he missed the entire point of my column. My point is not that Ford failed to produce a totally safe car, but that he ignored an obvious hazard that would have been easy to repair.

I believe that the suggestion in Mr. Toomey’s headline story of October 13, 1979 more than proves my point. According to confidential Ford memos obtained by the government, Ford knew from crash tests before producing the Pinto where the gas tank could be placed to make it safer during crashes but apparently decided against the design, because the car’s luggage space would be reduced.

Once the Pinto was in production, Ford conducted tests in which the car’s gas tank was punctured in crashes at about 20 m.p.h., but management did nothing to notify consumers or the government.

Ford developed several ways to reduce the hazard—not costing less than $10 per car—but decided not to implement the changes until ordered to do so by the government.

Ford then joined other automakers in an aggressive lobbying campaign that was successful in delaying and softening proposed federal standards. Their strong fuel systems must be to resist rupture and potential explosion.

These hermos had ben used very successfully in civil cases against Ford, and they constituted the core of Prosecutor Michael Conover’s case. In a questionable move, Judge Harold S'afield reaffed the bulk of these memos as evidence. This controversial ruling may have decided the case.

I am glad that Mr. Oelerich knows that the closing speech of the Pinto and the van was 50 m.p.h. Since, in his such an expert in analyzing accidents, I am surprised that Ford did not call him as a witness. I, unfortunately, am not so certain about the closing speech. I also know that the van was moving at about 50 m.p.h. at the time of the crash. I am not sure that they eyewitnesses testified that the Pinto was ever traveling at less than 50 m.p.h., which the crash occurred. This seems to indicate a closing speed of more than 50 m.p.h.

Probably the most disturbing aspect of the trial came at the end of Ford’s defense. Ford brought in expert witnesses who told them how dangerous other 1973 subcompacts were. One witness, a former head of the National Highway Transportation Safety Administration, said that these other cars might have had fuel systems that were even more unsafe than the Pinto’s. Where were these experts seven years ago? They were keeping quiet while the consumers spent their hard-earned money on cars like this.

Mr. Oelerich seems to have no idea what to do about a system that operates in such a fashion.

Mr. Patrick Ireland recently wrote a letter to the Observer in which he blindly attacked Gov. Ronald Reagan. He initially made a point stating that Reagan has reversed his position on the abortion issue. He rambled on from that point to make a prejudiced argument, e.g., that it is not pro-life to be concerned with the life of the unborn only to have them blown to bits protecting American business. The Middle East, or that Reagan’s motto, “Let’s make America Great Again” is only to the extent that it is a word of reassurance.

If Mr. Ireland would calm down long enough to make any logical points, I might be able to rebut his charges in an erudite logical form. Unfortunately, Mr. Ireland chose to make blind accusations rather than logical arguments. Thus, rather than rebutting arguments, I must simply state some of Gov. Reagan’s positions.

First of all, Mr. Ireland’s attack refers to any position on abortion. As Governor of California, Reagan signed into law one of the most liberal abortion laws in the country at that time. Supposingly, he has altered his views on abortion, which he has stated is a decision that the local community must make.

His major concern now is to have others see the error of their ways, renounce abortion, and stop the destruction of unborn life here in this country, both by passage of the Helms Human Life Amendment and by the appointment of pro-life justices to the Supreme Court. The National Right to Life Committee has acknowledged Reagan’s sincerity on this issue, and he has only been the one member of that committee that reversed his position on abortion. As Governor of California, Reagan signed into law one of the most liberal abortion laws in the country at that time. If Mr. Ireland were to return to the pro-life candidates, he would have done something more to be within the realm of constructive criticism.

I don’t know whether others see the error of their ways, renounce abortion, and stop the destruction of unborn life here in this country. I am not sure that the Supreme Court will reverses its position on abortion. As Governor of California, Reagan signed into law one of the most liberal abortion laws in the country at that time. If Mr. Ireland were to return to the pro-life candidates, he would have done something more to be within the realm of constructive criticism.

I am not sure that the Supreme Court will reverse its position on abortion. As Governor of California, Reagan signed into law one of the most liberal abortion laws in the country at that time. If Mr. Ireland were to return to the pro-life candidates, he would have done something more to be within the realm of constructive criticism.

Somewhere, in the uncharted recesses of LaFutre, enshrined in black and white, there exists a file detailing the nine-month history of Gamer's Anonymous.

Questions already weary the reader's mind. What is 'Gamer's Anonymous?' Who owns it? Does it make enough money to pay for what it is doing there? Is it kosher? GA was designed, simply, to bring together people who like to play certain games with other people who like to play those same games. There are no dues, no meetings, no elections. The record keeps is one of the present members. According to founder and president, Kris Wheaton, 'GA is a unique organization as far as organizations go. It exists solely to serve the student. It is an entirely voluntary club with about 20 full-time, active members and over 100 part-time members.'

Any one who wants to do in a player is called the GA office (located in GA President Kris Wheaton's room), specify GA, and ask for the name of some members. An index that cross-references players with the types of game played is used to find an appropriate opponent. If a member gets called and does not want to participate then he or she simply says, 'I don't know what we are going to do next year.' We are thinking about moving March up a day or so.'

Finally, a Free University course taught by Wheaton, is being offered this semester on fantasy role-playing. Through a series of lectures and game-playing, such diverse subjects as The Imperial Character Player, Magical Systems: Mnemonics vs. Lawful Rationalization, and What to Do in Case of Attack by Dragon are being taught.

In addition, many impromptu social gatherings (known to GA members as 'drunken orgies') and no less than four campaign-type games are being sponsored by GA. Joe LaBella, freshman member of GA, stated, "The current players are all officers and have a keen interest in the game. As a lock of hair plucked from the head of a girl from Badin and a piece of paper with the word 'Hunch' written on it. Points were allotted for each item and an overall winner was finally declared. Dan Dwyer, co-founder of the costume party, stated, "I don't know what we are going to do next year. We are thinking about moving March up a day or so.'

When asked why he organized GA, Wheaton commented, "I have been a lover of games since way back. I have been a power player and the plan failed to excite anyone then the event comes off as a part-time, active members and over 100 part-time members.'

A certain casualness characterizes GA, and an atmosphere created by the club operate on the Baggit Rule, that is, 'If you are going to show up then the event comes off as a part-time, active members and over 100 part-time members.'

LETTERS TO A LONELY GOD

A Single Story Mountain

Rev. Robert Griffin

"Boh," said Father Raymond, O.C.S.O., whom I was meeting for the first time, "what the hell are you doing in here? This is the Bishop's suite. I smiled as humbly as I could, so the countenance I wasn't spoiled by pride.

"Are you a mystic?" I said. He certainly didn't talk like a mystic; but when a man has been a Trappist monk for over forty years, as he has, you can never tell what viruses of virtue he may have caught from the holy books and the solitude.

"I'm not a mystic," he said, laughing as though I had asked him to try on a suit that fitted him like a rent. "I'm a man."

I knew he was a holy man; there was no mistake about that. I felt his presence to be a holy one, familiar to me. When they told me it was a garden, I had expected to find flowers. Instead, I saw the followers who were not yet strong enough to be the brothers of God, shrinking back from Your pain, final of becoming the poor. Having men who know You as the Christ.

There is another single-story mountain at Gethsemani, where Thomas Merton lived, in solitude, as a hermit; a place, Merton said, nor where he expected to find God, but a place where he thought God might like to find him. It may have been, for all I know, Merton's Mount of Transfiguration. After two years, he might have said, to the new King: "I've been to the mountain; the eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord. If that was Merton's experience, he has left me far behind, in the company of apostles who fell asleep on Jesus Christ. He needed, in the tough touch of their hands on his shoulders to keep Him from sweating drops of blood."

It's going to the theatre sometimes compare tickets, to find the place where each one is sitting. Folk travelling towards heaven need to compare tickets also; otherwise, they can make the mistake of getting off at the wrong station, before they have travelled long enough and far enough.

I'm not moving on a mystic's ticket, that's why I have brought more money than they had given me the code words welcoming me to the brotherhood of Gethsemani. The simple, gracious lang­ uage of the monk who got even with God left me glowing from the hospita­ lity of one American priest saying he was a holy man, and we were friends in Jesus, Who would show mercy to us both. Mysticism could not have brought us closer; rum and gin, and so on, as well good friends. It was only. It took sincere words that weren't the least bit accurate, and two prints of that they shared faith, and would recognize each other in heaven.

Sometimes, when you go out to dinner, you hope that your company has brought more money then you've brought; because, really, you are not able to afford a more expensive meal. Sometimes, in believing, you want to borrow from the ones who live in your surprise, you discover already have. That's the truth that awaits you when you climb a single-story mountain.

Uncommon Women; Wiles and Worries

Besides selecting a play with an all-female cast, I was organized an all-female backstage crew, to complete the atmosphere of a play for women about women, by a woman."

Uncommon Women worked, thanks to the kaleida­ matheologian Mary's actresses involved, rather than the script itself. In her attempt to create a sympathetic but comic version of the wiles and worries of several women graduating from college, Wasserstrom saturated her script with bad jokes, all but sub­ merging her characters in bathroom humor. Fortunately, Jaquer's troupe managed to reach between the one-liners to establish a cross-linkage of realistic anxieties and doubts that keep the play coherent and together.

Central characters are six graduating seniors, all concerned about their impending initiation into the real world. After four years of a woman's college, of being taught that they are the leaders of tomorrow, the women begin to wonder about the extent of their capabilities.

Wednesday held a lot of good news and a little bad for the Notre Dame Lacrosse Club. The good news was the club's elevation to varsity status next year; the bad news was the club lost to rival University of Michigan, 7-6, on Carter Field.

"It was a hard-hitting game fought to the end," said Notre Dame captain Nick Gehring. "Anytime Michigan and Notre Dame get together there is a good game. We played excellent, there were just a few missed pans and a few mental mistakes near the end. Without them the outcome could have been very different."

Notre Dame and the University of Michigan are both members of the University division of the Midwest Lacrosse Club Association. At present the Wolverines lead the five-team conference with a league record of 4-0 (1-4 overall). Notre Dame claims second place in the division with a 2-1 league and 6-3 overall tally.

Richard "Digger" Phelps, head basketball coach for the Fighting Irish, has agreed to serve as Honorary Chairman for the 3rd Annual Michiana Lung Run. Phelps, who was recently appointed to the American Lung Association board, will temporarily retire his basketball training shoes and don running shoes as he assists in promoting the Second Annual Michiana Lung Run. The Lung Run will start at Howard Park on Saturday, June 7, 1980 with an expected 1500 participants surging off with the sound of the gun.

Anyone, any age is encouraged to participate by filling out an entry blank, available at the South Bend Tribune, Hook's Drug or the American Lung Association, and pay the $5.00 entry fee.

ND softballers play twinbill

The Notre Dame women's softball team will play St. Xavier's of Chicago in a doubleheader at Leiphart Park today. Brutt Hancock, a 1951 graduate of Notre Dame, will coach the second-season team organized by Karen Olig and Beth LaRocca. The Irish, 6-2 after losses to Grace College welcome newcomers. Those interested should contact Olig at 2165 or 1238.

I-ball baseball resumes Sunday

All first-round winners in the interhall baseball tournament will compete on Sunday in second round action. Captains should contact the Interhall Office today, if possible. The office itself will attempt to contact teams by Saturday at 3 p.m.

"I love shortstop—it's really my position. The biggest adjustment I had to make was thinking of myself as a shortstop from the outfield was most important because of such a key position that I have to be prepared for every pitch and for any mistake I will be wherever the ball was hit. The outfield tested me to increase my concentration because you aren't involved in as many plays.

Barrish has committed only one error in 17 games (on a pop up). I can hit as well as I can bunt, and has driven in five runs. I come alive at the plate, two hits in five different games per my role will be wherever the ball was hit. The outfield tested me to increase my concentration because you aren't involved in as many plays.

But I can get the singles and doubles," Barrish credits his improvement at the plate for the record .245 in 1979 and what he termed a "bittersweet" fall practice as well as the team's improvement to a change in mental attitude.

"We really believe in ourselves now—when we see in a game, we expect to win. We're 13-4, it's my senior year and I'm not used to being in this winning position. I walk around smiling all the time now."

Barrish even smiled about his feature article. "I have told all the guys on the team for four years that one day they would do a feature on me and title it... .In the shoes of Rick Pulasio. Barrish was right.

Tracksters face tough test at Illini Classic

The Notre Dame track team travels to the Illini Classic this weekend for what should prove to be one of the most competitive meets in the Midwest this season. Nearly all of the teams from the Big Ten will be there (including powerful Indiana) along with many other potent clubs in the Great Lakes region. There will be no team score kept so the Irish will be competing for individual laurels on Saturday.

The field of 23 to 30 teams should enhance the Irish performance according to head mentor Joe Piane: "We expect some very tough competition at Illinois. The best track teams in the Midwest will be there. However, I think that kind of motivation helps our kids perform better."

Because the Classic has qualifying times, not all of the Irish roster will compete.

"Although the qualifying times eliminate some of the team from running, it adds to the overall quality of the meet," comments fifth-year coach Piane.

In order to get more tracksters in the race for ribbons, Coach Piane has made a tactical move.

"We took Jay Miranda and Chuck Aragon off the dual relay team and replaced them with Kevin Kenney and Jim Slattery. With Aragon and Miranda running the half-mile, this will allow more of the team to get in the meet," explained Piane.

This meet, followed by the prestigious Drake Relays next weekend, will test the Irish.

Tough matches await the women's tennis team this weekend when the Irish travel to Bloomington, Indiana to play Indiana State and Purdue.

Notre Dame Coach Jerry Seagal will put her squad's 3-0 record on the line against two powerful Division I schools (Indiana and Purdue) and Sycamore club defeated by the Irish in a tournament last fall.

"I know competing against such tough Division I schools isn't going to be easy," says Segal, "but we need the work before the regionals. You don't get any better playing against weaker opponents."

Segal is looking for good performances from her number two and number four singles players, Linda Hoyder and Carol Shukis, respectively. The other members of the Irish women's team include state champions in their positions. Hoyder, a freshman, has only lost one match this year.

Notre Dame mirrored victories over Texas Lutheran, California Baptist, Mary's, Texas, and Trinity College en route to finishing this season's dual meet record unblemished. They'll face neighboring St. Mary's College next weekend for a chance to compete in the Division III Regionals in May.

Drills focus on goal line situations

One of Notre Dame's most glaring weaknesses during its 7-4-1979 season was an inability to finish drives started in the end zone on first and goal situations...so that goal was changed. But it didn't take advantage of the best weather of the spring to work on full-speed goal line drills.

Spring Football

was controlled. The drill was the first all-out hitting of the spring.

The number-one offense, working against the second-team defense, started with the ball first-and-goal on the 3, then the second-string defense tried its luck at the top offense...the pad-rushing drill was a good measure of how much players were evenly matched in practice.

The Irish coaching staff normally sees more such drills early in the season, during double-sessions and after the first couple weeks of games, but coach Dan Devine and his assistants were quite pleased with what they saw...matching the numbers one and two offense and defenses against each other is something new this spring. Banish has been forced largely by small numbers, but it points out that individual improvement and teamwork will be even more stressed when the players are more evenly matched in practice.

Dave Bartish

In the shoes of Rick Pullano...

When some baseball aficionados chimed the phrase "utility man," they meant as a compliment, they've been watching Dave Bartish. The 6-4, 205-pound junior played third base, left field and right field during his four-year career as an Irish second baseman.

But the "utility man" image ends there, as Bartish has been a consistent starter at three of those four positions. His presence has been well wherever Notre Dame coach Tom Kelly has needed him.

"I had always played in the infield before coming to Notre Dame," explains the graduate of Cinnaminson's St. Xavier High School. "My natural position was at shortstop, but that position was filled when I got here as a freshman, so once I had made the team, it was a matter of figuring out where I could play."

That shortstop position was filled by the talented shoes of Rick Pullano, '80. "In my freshman year, more than anything else, I did not want to take away from Rick," admits Bartish. "But Rick at shortstop, I knew I had my work cut out for me," remembers Bartish. "But playing behind Rick helped me a lot because it pushed me to play that much harder and to try to get a lot more ground balls in the infield. That, plus my hitting, helped me a lot personally because he was such a great guy to have on the team and to have helping you."

"He could go into almost any situation," adds Brian Boulan, defensive line coach for the Notre Dame football team, and handle himself well.

John Scully's name isn't exactly the kind that rolls off the tongue when you think of Irish football, but his presence on the field and the way he runs his offense is something new this spring. Banish has been forced largely by small numbers, but it points out that individual improvement and teamwork will be even more stressed when the players are more evenly matched in practice.

Jim Crowley, last surviving member of the "Four Horsemen," will speak Sunday at the annual Rockne Memorial Breakfast.

Center Scully aims for All-America

"He can be anything he wants to," says Dan Devine with a touch of conviction that possesses a brand of sincerity earlier reserved for few players. "He could go into almost any situation," adds Brian Boulan, defensive line coach for the Notre Dame football team, and handle himself well.
