Iran, Iraq blast respective oil facilities

by Anne Jane Dregulla

BHAGDAD, Iraq (AP) - In an alarming new turn in their war, Iran and Iraq have begun sending jet bombers against each other's oil installations, the most sensitive areas of their economies. The extent of damage cannot be determined precisely, but Iraq has strengthened the defenses around the disputed Al-Arab border waterway, informants said Monday. They said Iraq's oil output was down to one million barrels a day as a result of damage caused by raiding Iranian jets. Until the war broke out, Iraq was the world's second largest exporter of crude oil after Saudi Arabia. Iraq's production had been 3.6 million barrels a day, with 3.2 million exported through the Persian Gulf and 300,000 through pipelines across Turkey and Syria to Mediterranean terminals.

Before the war, Iran's daily average production of crude oil stood at 1.5 million barrels, of which some 500,000 barrels were exported through the Gulf. Now, Iran produces just enough oil to meet its own needs, the same source said. Oil officials were unavailable for comment and foreign reporters were not allowed to travel to the hard-pressed oil regions at Kirkuk and Mosul.

The extent of damage to the oil installations, although believed to be extensive, could not be determined. Diplomatic sources said the overall picture of the damage will become known only when foreign contractors are called in to make repairs.

Iraq's Khor al-Amaya and Mina al-Bkr oil shipping terminals were reported not operating, mainly because captains of oil tankers were afraid to travel in the Gulf to reach them. There have been conflicting reports about damage inflicted by Iranian air attacks on the two terminals.

No official comment was available on the status of these terminals, and industry sources said any damage to the ship berthing berths could seriously hamper Iraq's oil shipping for an undetermined period.

Doctors say Fr. Toohey suffers from encephalitis

by Mary Fran Callahan

Senior Staff Reporter

Doctors have discovered that Fr. William Toohey, the director of Campus Ministry, is suffering from encephalitis caused by the herpes simplex virus, according to Fr. Austin Fleming of Campus Ministry.

Toohey, who is hospitalized at St. Joseph's Hospital, has now been listed in "serious" condition, according to a spokesperson there. Last week, the priest was classified as "fair" and then "guarded."

In a statement released yesterday to The Observer, Fleming said Toohey's condition changed yesterday morning when "he showed signs of intracranial pressure on the brain."

Fleming operated on the priest yesterday to relieve the pressure associated with the virus. Fleming said physicians are treating the encephalitis with drugs.

"He will continue to be treated. He will be watched very closely for the next several days. The doctors are waiting for a reaction to the medication and his recovery to the surgery," Fleming stated.

After returning from a hospital visit yesterday, Fleming commented, "He is very critical."

Members of the Campus Ministry staff have requested that persons concerned about Toohey's condition not call the hospital for updates. As Toohey is now in an intensive care unit, visitors are forbidden; however, cards may be sent to the priest in care of St. Joseph's Hospital.
Can the public's appetite for information about the Watergate scandal ever be satisfied? The National Archives reported the answer is "yes." The archives announced that because of diminished demand, it has cut back the amount of time the Watergate tapes will be available for public listening. The tapes will be available to the public every morning, but not in the afternoon, said James Hastings, deputy director of the Nixon Presidential Materials Project. More than 9,500 people have listened to parts of the tapes since they were opened to the public May 28. The 31 tapes available were played during the two trials of Watergate defendants and attorneys of 6,000 hours of conversations secretly recorded on Nixon's in- structure. Among them are the "smoking gun" tape that prompted Nixon in May to resign. Fascist revival? Bombings blamed on ultra- rightists. Western Europe lives and kindled fears of a fascist outbreak in Western Europe. Even so, officials believe that, 35 years after the defeat of Adolf Hitler's Nazis and Benito Mussolini's fascists, there is no significant threat to democracy from extremist movements. Several groups in a half-dozen European countries has any political power, sizable popular support or, outside Italy, publicly elected representatives. However, ultra-rightist attacks on Jews, fascists last August, 13 died in an explosion at Munich's airport. The blast, Friday afternoon, a Paris synagogue. Authorities have blamed all three attacks on ultra-rightists. Officials say there are links among some of the attacks in some countries, particularly France and Spain, they suspect rightists can be found in law enforcement agencies. — AP

Ronald Reagan accused the Carter administration yesterday of trying to boost the president's political standing a month before the election by " Jimmying" last week's wholesale price report to show that inflation is easing. "They have taken to making highly questionable uses of official governmental statistics to sugarcoat the bitter pill that has regularly come from Washington in the line of economic news," the Republican presidential candidate said. He made his charge at a rally in a crowded shopping center of this suburb of Camden as he set out on a two-week, cross-country trip. He planned to campaign in New Haven, Conn., last week, but was re-routed to Philadelphia, 40 miles east of Cape Erimu for two days, because he was having the best of times, something Notre Dame and St. Mary's students are not all that accustomed to.

But there was a live band. There was dancing — lots of dancing. There was singing. There was cheering. There were cheerleaders, too — from both schools, complete with uniforms. There were green and gold, and there were green and white. And it really mattered to no one where the students were. It was all so different.

in 1977, an amendment which would prohibit federal funding of abortions, he qualified that vote by saying he disagreed with the exceptions to the amendment—back oil proposed by Rep. Hyde.

Brademas added he has worked for a variety of policies to lessen the incidence of abortion, such as maternity leave policies, counseling for pregnant teenagers, and easier adoption systems.

In the interview, Brademas vehemently denied that he had accepted contributions from Amoco and Getty Oil, a charge made by Indiana Republican Chairman Bruce Melcher in statements to the Wall Street Journal.

The Majority Whip also got into the act when he was asked about the congressional race. He said, "I'm not saying, a fellow like that never had a business coming to the Congress of the United States in the first place.

On Quayle, who is running against Democratic Incumbent Danny Quayle, Brademas commented, "Danny Quayle is a pleasant, affable fellow who has no more business in the Senate of the United States than the man in the moon." Brademas noted that Quayle has no bills to his name, misses many committee meetings, and is often late for roll call votes "because he's just come back from the gym. He's a nice fellow, but he's out of his league."

Brademas also defended the high unemployment and decreasing population of South Bend by saying that it is a problem common to cities around the country, particularly in the northern part of the country as it migrate to the "Sun Belt."

How safe are we?

/By Rich Fischer

When I arrived at police headquarters (701 Sample Street) early Friday evening, Auditor Corporation Gene Kyle, commander of the afternoon watch, took time out to answer some of my questions before I hit the streets. When asked about the extent of police coverage in the northeast sector of the city, which encompasses the area from the St. Joe River to the town limits and west of Eddy Street, he took me out into the main corridor and showed me the manpower lists. He explained that there are always two cars riding in tractor after the afternoon shift, which lasts until 10:30 p.m., with one of these concentrating on the high assault-burglary area.

The manpower sheets were for project ABLE. Project ABLE puts three extra men, paid time-and-a-half, into the off-campus area during each afternoon watch, including one in an unmarked car. In addition to this, on Friday and Saturday nights, another three men walk the district in street clothes, both patrolling the area and acting as a decoy team. This means that the everyday coverage of the O-C area is five men, and eight on weekends. Considering that South Bend has a population of close to 130,000 people and that there are only 230 policemen to protect them 24 hours a day, the coverage allotted this area is generous.

I was next introduced to Corporal Tim Corbett, who was my guide for the remainder of the afternoon shift. Heading to the car, Tim commented that the rain should keep things quiet, although "you never can tell." When I got into car 660, I found myself leaning my left elbow on the butt of a shotgun, with the muzzle resting on top of my foot. I asked if it was loaded. It was. I moved my foot. While the car was being filled with gas, I asked Corporal Corbett his opinion of the ND students he encounters. He responded that they were "99% decent kids" who presented "no big problems", and that most of the problems were caused by stupidity, not malici­ousness. He said that students cause problems for themselves when they walk home alone, instead of in groups of five or six, or when they drink too much as to lose their ability to think straight.

Corporal Corbett told me that, yes, he does wear a flak vest, another other years back. When I questioned the amount of danger in routine patrol jobs, he explained that, yes, he did wear a flak vest, and that the dangerous problems for themselves when they drink too much as to lose their ability to think straight.

ND gay students organize

by Kathy Caroten

The Gay Students of Notre Dame announce the organization of a group for homosexual men and women on campus.

The main objective of this group is to create an environment for the exchange of ideas and information and the con­dation of the gay portion in contemporary society. The group is presently more concerned with resolving problems faced by individual gay stu­ dents, than it is with altering the Notre Dame Community's at­ titudes toward homosexuality.

According to spokesmen for the group, the University of Notre Dame has had a gay organization since 1969, but the group being more active in some years than others.

The University, however, has never recognized this group. The members of this organi­ zation interviewed, claim that representatives from their group have gone to Fr. Hesburgh in the past and asked for recognition, but he has always refused.

They also said that the Director of Student Activities a few years ago was willing to give their organiza­tion club status, but this pro­posal was immediately revoked by higher authorities.

The gays do not see their predicament with the adminis­tration as changing in the future. In fact they view the University as “moving back­wards” in policies. They claim that it is the Catholic stigma at the University that puts the damper on the situation. They say the Church considers homosexuality a “grave moral disorder” and can only accept homosexuals if they choose to be celibate.

According to spokesmen, there is no group policy on the Catholic Religion, rather each gay person must resolve his relationship with the Church in his own mind.

When asked why they chose to attend Notre Dame, given the present circumstances, the members replied that it is a place to get a good education, and most students did not be­ come actively gay until after they had already come here.

Despite scientific and psy­chological studies, no one really knows what causes homosexu­ lity, but the question is for the gay student to answer himself. Many problems. They claim that one realizing his or her own ho­ mosexuality can be a traumatic experience, especially in an atmosphere where the Church causes tremendous amounts of guilt in students with homo­ sexual tendencies.

The organization wants such students to know that they are not the “only lonely fags out there.” Consequently the or­ ganization runs a gay informa­tion line, and has a post office box for written correspondence as well.

According to the members, “the biggest step is accepting yourself as you are, to be honest with yourself, even if not with anyone else.”

Two years ago, the Notre Dame gay community was brought into the limelight by a series of articles published in the Observer, written by student Mark Amenta. The gays them­ selves say that Amenta went a bit “overboard,” implying that it was “better” to be gay, without stressing that there were his own viewpoints.

Many gays were upset by his statements, especially due to the fact that the entire gay community was automatically linked to his opinions. This incident discouraged any af­ firmative gay action until recently.

The present community in­ volves about twenty people who consider themselves “just a group of friends.” They do not aspire to become a publicly recognized group, rather they are happy to remain in the back­ground, as off-campus students, they also feel that Dean Roemer is more concerned with kegs at midnight than with the present circumstances, the incident that has focused atten­ tion on students. They see students around.

Gay students at Notre Dame have already come here.

The events of the last few weeks involving the war between Iran and Iraq have started me wondering and worrying about the distant, but ominous, specter of war, and the prospect that I could be drafted and sent to fight and possibly die "for my country." It's funny because this past summer's registration proceedings didn't scare me half as much as last week's sending of planes to Saudi Arabia by President Carter to aid in the defense of the Persian Gulf and Straits of Hormuz area.

I will admit that this is due to a large amount of paranoia on my part, but it reminded me of the initial moves into Vietnam, and even more significantly it showed a willingness on the part of the government to get involved in the conflict in the Middle East to defend the oil routes, and eventually, the oil fields.

It is much too early for any drastic statements or actions, but I cannot ignore the potential implications of these and other actions. I am referring to the saber-rattling statements made by Carter toward the Iranians last winter, the futile Iranian rescue attempts and the increasingly jingoistic and xenophobic mood on the part of many Americans. (Not to mention the favorite theory of us cynical pacifists that the economy cannot function without a war.) That published picture of Zbignieff Brzezinski jokingly pointing an AK-47 at the Soviet Union is a focal point of my concern, because every time I see or think about that picture, it occurs to me that Brzezinski will have a large hand in getting us involved in a war, but it will be he and my friends who are holding that rifle for keeps.

All it comes to this: If and when there is a war and an accompanying draft, what will I do? It would be very easy to assume the position of a doctrinaire on this issue, and decide whether to fight or resist. But the initial, emotional taking of either position ignores the paradoxical reality of war and the crucial decisions that may be made by each and every potential draftee.

The days of blind compliance are past, at least for me, and this situation opens up the classic argument of the individual versus the state.

Before I go any further, I may as well state my position on this matter. I have decided that I will not fight, or in any way be party to a war that is fought on foreign soil. I am not going to fight so that people can drive Cadillacs and have blow-dryers and air conditioners. I'm not going to die for France and Germany in the latest, episode of European craziness. In fact, the only situation in which I can see myself fighting in a war context would be a direct invasion of the United States, a situation which would directly threaten the sovereignty of the country. I often wonder if I would even fight for that, but if I didn't, it would be for very different reasons than those I wish to deal with here. I have not come to these conclusions without experience with the military, as I have been involved with ROTC, and my father is a former member of the military.

I suppose that most people will see my position as ultimately selfish, because it is not built upon a lifelong commitment to pacifism or some deeply felt set of religious beliefs. In fact, I used to be gun-ho about war, but the more I think about it, the more I realize how much closer than I care to admit, to attending the Naval Academy. But now I'm a little older, basically a little wiser, and I no longer see war as making any sense in any way shape or form. Why should I, or anyone for that matter, go to some foreign land and undergo a life-altering, possibly life-ending experience as the result of rhetorical differences between big-time politicians whom I don't know, will probably never even see, and who view me solely as another warm body to carry a back pack and an M-1. Why should I die for the principles of a monolithic bureaucracy that only needs me for war and taxes? I have a mother who loves me quite a bit, and so far I like living. As Muhammad Ali said, "I ain't got nothin' against them Viet Congs.

There have been wars since the beginning of time, and they have only proved one thing: that wars don't prove, change, or settle anything. We are sandwiched between propaganda and patriotism from the age of five, and if it is so deemed, we are expected to give up everything and go die for something which we don't even know about. It is as poet Alan Bold said, "Not for his country, because of it." It can get very frustrating, and it makes me very angry, because I may be just another insignificant Social Security Number out here, and I'm the only one I've got. I feel the same way about my friends. I say no, not me, not my brother, not my sister, not my friends. Nobody. No way.

Then I have to turn around and face what is always called reality. War exists in this world and it always will. But that doesn't make me want to participate in the madness called war. I can't see any reason why either my friends, or anyone else, should or be a member of the last generation they bury.

Wine that makes you glad the heart of men.
— Psalm, CIV, 15

over since the dawn of alcohol, a drinking comedy has existed and has given us countless drinking songs and verses. A drinking comedy is generally one with a short chorus, thus allowing ample time for a hearty swig between verses. Perhaps one of the most charming Medieval drinking ditties was dedicated to an animal whom nobody usually saw until after many verses—and as many drinks.

"Hey, loun dem ditte done Drink to the Magic Squirrel Sing out a song a fiancé namn Megwel Hey mon mon mony mony ho Sing hop ho Sing diddle diddle dii dii Sing 'The Magic Squirrel' Hey loun dem ditte done Drink to the Magic Squirrel!

The rest of the verses were unpronounceable and often alluded to backstairs.

This was a favorite among the British Isles until the Age of Reason. The Irish have always been noted for their drinking ballads and verses. Short verse was always welcome in Irish pubs, and quite often it was all that could be remembered after a few rounds. Typical of such short verse is "O'Halgarth's Bar and Grill"; "Tell me, bartenders, So how is your mother? And what is that drink that you're making? Bring us a battle, Old man Maggie, Drink till we want to eat bacon."

Over in mainland Europe, drinking tunes were also popular. The Germania song such greats as "Heil, Heil, the Gang's All Here," and "What do you do with a Drunken Father?"

Italy, too, saw its own drinking culture. However, in Italy, while drinking, it was more common to play the role of Saint Paddy, do, pray for whisky, that we will, and if ever I'm up, I'll sing O'Hallaghna's Bar and Grill.

African elbrowenders brewed up many drinking songs, including this one: "Gumboye goombah ye Gumbe goombah ye Gumbe goombah ye Drink that Schnapps, my mate!"

This was part of a Nigerian drinking ritual in which a whole tribe would do shots until everyone had passed out.

Russians never really sung full-fledged drinking songs. They would merely smoke vodka and hum Johnny Cash ballads.

The Far East introduced to the world the drinking haiku.

"The glinting cup Beckons like a mountain stream; Drink till I keel over!"

The youngest of large drinking cultures is the United States where drinking habits quickly surpassed those of its elders. Due to the "melting pot" principle, the U.S. produced a unique brand of drinking song and verse. Irish-Americans had great influence on the style of early American drinking poem.

"Tell me, bartenders, So how is your mother? And what is that drink that you're making? Bring us a battle, Old man Maggie, Drink till we want to eat bacon."

The American drinking ditty changed over centuries, but kept in original character of alcoholic camaraderie. Loggers emerged as the most colorful drinking sect. Probably the most popular and drunken lyric produced by this group was "Thank God I'm a Lumberjack!"

"Get me my axe in my hand And a beer on my lip Is my sweetheart, Mabel. Life’s too bitter but a keg o' Black Label. Thank that sawed loggin' man!"

Such traditional songs are still remembered in many parts of the world where leisure is leisure and not a competitor in the commercial sport. God only knows what sort of drinking songs our fast-paced, rat-race society will band down to posterity. Indeed, I should hope we do pass on some drinking songs to future generations lest we tamper with tradition. After all, some traditions are sacred.

"Drink a nectar for our days! Yeh! We drink Saloon, Close your account at First Savings and Loan. Then come to Skid Row and buy a round!"

"Shot in the Dark," adapted by Harry Kurnitz from Achar's "Idyll," is the forerunner of the Pink Panther films starring the late Peter Sellers. The Student Union Players opened it to a small audience last Friday night in Washington Hall. Unlike the Sellers films, the movie is more comedy-drama than slapstick. Advice: Sit through the first act. The second and third acts redeem the evening's opening scene.

The play takes place in Paris, in the shabby office of a newly-appointed magistrate, Paul Sevigne (Paul Pisanek). He is confronting his first case, a tarty young chambermaid, Josefa (Vivian Satterfield) who is accused of murdering her co-worker and lover, a chauffeur named Megwel. Sevigne's Higher Authorities are already pushing for MadameMartini's conviction at her employers—the fabulously wealthy Beurrevers—disapprove of the case's publicity in the papers. And the Beurrevers own half of Paris.

Sevigne believes Josefa is innocent—the criminal respect—and is determined to prove it. The plot thickens as the discovery that Josefa has had an affair with Monsieur Beurrevers, and Madame B. having a fling of her own. "Who knocks?" is resolved in the third and final act.

As the dedicated lawyer, Pisanek is likeable enough, more so as his sarcasm sharpens as the case proceeds. Nearly every scene plays Josefa to the hilt as a ditsy, giddy, young thing who'll prattle away for hours until one is tempted to throttle her into silence.

If Director Mary Kay Beckman had cut at least ten minutes of Josefa's ramblings from the first act, the scene would have been enhanced considerably. Perhaps Beckman left the script intact to let the audience identify with the erst-chattered-off Sevigne, and if so, she was successful. If Sevigne had finally lost his temper and throttled Josefa, he would have received a standing ovation from the audience, if not offers of assistance.

Fortunately, Sevigne's sidekick and secretary, Moristain, (Chris Vergara) provides some comic diversion from Joseph's twittering. Moristain is bored, indifferent chat with French chambermaid starts chirping about her many past problems until after many verses—and as many drinks.

Another Coach Rockne?

by George Strade
AP Sports Writer

COLUMBUS, OHIO—Another Rockne is coaching football.

And already John Rockne, in his first head coaching job, seems to be working miracles, as his illustrious grandfather, the late Knute Rockne, did at Notre Dame.

“We weren’t supposed to win any of our games this year,” said Rockne about his first team at Jonathan Alder High School.

The school 20 miles north-west of Columbus has won three of its first six games after a 2-6-2 season in 1979.

Young Rockne never met his famed coaching relative. Knute Rockne was killed in a plane crash in 1931, 18 years before John was born.

In 15 Notre Dame seasons, his teams lost 12 of 122 games for a winning percentage of .881.

“My dad, Jack, was only six years old when it happened,” said the Ohio high school coach by telephone. “He doesn’t remember the man much, either. I go talk to old-timers who knew him. You get goose bumps and chills listening to them talk about my grandfather.”

Young Rockne has his own coaching philosophy.

“...I’m just myself,” he said, “but I imagine since he’s my grandfather, there’s got to be some of him in me somewhere.

“I try to find something good about what every kid does in practice. We try to accomplish in another sphere. I believe we’re very strongly in discipline. I don’t think it’s been that strong here.

“We were supposed to be 0-6. But I hate to lose. Our kids are excited. They believe in themselves now.

“Alder’s players didn’t know they had a celebrity in their midst when they opened practice.

“They thought I was just another guy on the road,” recalled John Rockne. “But when the media started coming around, they found out in a hurry. They like it.”

Young Rockne did not miss a Notre Dame home game for 14 years while he was growing up in South Bend. “Then I was drafted,” he said.

He played quarterback at Riley High School in South Bend and at Northeast Oklahoma Junior College before two years before a shoulder injury short-circuited his career.

He served as an assistant coach at his alma mater, Central State University in Oklahoma, and at Murray State University and Campbell County High School in Kentucky before the Alder job opened.

“I made up my mind to be a head coach and I wanted to get a family atmosphere. I believe we’re very strongly in discipline. I don’t think it’s been that strong here.

“The shutout was the third in 1977 and 1978. The shutout was the third in 1977 and 1978.

The shutout was the third in the last three years and will remain in contention by the Bears to the Buckeyes. Chicago shut out Tampa Bay 10-0 in 1977 and again 14-0 last December.

Phipps finished 10-0 for 110 yards and Williams was 9-for-28 for 89 yards.

Water polo club aims for playoff spot

by Armond Kenfeld
Sports Writer

The water polo club will travel to Loyola of Chicago this weekend in an effort to keep its playoff hopes alive.

The Irish will play four games during the two-day tournament and will remain in contention for the conference title if they can win two of the four. It will be no easy task, however, as the opposition will include Kent State, the powerhouse of the Midwest, and Brown, the class of the East.

Mike Corbisiero, the club president, remains optimistic nonetheless.

“I think we at least have a shot. We could pull an upset,” he said.

Hempel presents lectures

Professor Carl Hempel, a noted philosopher of science at the University of Pittsburgh, will present three lectures during the week of Oct. 6 at the University of Notre Dame’s Memorial Library Auditorium.

Born near Berlin in 1905, Hempel worked with an influential group of philosophers known as “The Vienna Circle” before coming to the United States in the 1930’s.

Sailing team finishes 4th

The Notre Dame sailing team, currently ranked 19th in the nation, finished fourth at the Michigan International Championships this weekend in the 12-team field. In the “A” division, Irish skipper Phil Reynolds placed fifth with Marguerita Cristina as crew. Skipper Greg Fisher finished fifth in “B” division competition with Coril Silvassan crew.

Spectacular Bid to study

NEW YORK—Spectacular Bid’s outstanding career came to an abrupt halt amid controversy Saturday, less than three hours before he was to make his next-to-last start in the $500,000 Jockey Club Gold Cup at Belmont Park.

The 4-year-old gray colt became scratched because he wasn’t “100 percent fit,” but he also said Spectacular Bid would not be racetracked.

Spectacular Bid, the world’s top thoroughbred money-winning horse with a career history with earnings of $21,781,607, will go to stud at Spendthrift Farm in Kentucky Nov. 1.

Skier-Carter of the Week

CHICAGO (AP)—Tailback Phil Carter of Notre Dame has been selected Midwest Player of the Week on offense for his outstanding performance in Saturday’s 26-21 victory over Michigan State.

Carter, a 5-10, 193-pound sophomore from Tacoma, Wash., gained 254 yards in 40 carries, one yard short of the Irish record set by Vagas Ferguson in 1977. Actually, Carter had gained 256 yards when cornerback Van Williams knocked him for a two-yard loss and out of the contest with a bruised rib.

“I’m only a sophomore, I’ve got ime for records,” said Carter who nevertheless made the record book by joining George Gipp, Marchy Schwartz and Neil Worden as the only Notre Dame backs to rush for more than 100 yards in three successive games.

Brutal Bears beat Buccaneers badly

Chicago Bears (AP) — Quarterback Jim Harvey threw for 194 yards and four touchdowns as the Bears overcame two interceptions and two touchdowns by Dallas Cowboys to win 27-24.

The Bears scored touchdowns on their first two drives and led 24-0 at halftime. Chicago quarterback Mike Ditka threw a 21-yard touchdown pass to Bob Fisher and 13 yards to James Scott to set up the field goal. Together, the two managers helped manage 173 yards in the first half.

The Bears came to life in the second half when a 39-yard punt by Parsons was downed on the Buck's two-yard line for a touchdown. The Bears' quarterback, Jim Harvey, hit Brian Bumata with a 57-yard pass to take the Tampa Bay five before he rolled to his right and ran 14 yards to the end zone for his first TD by rushing since 1974, when he was with Cleveland.

The next time the Bears gained possession, they moved from their own 40 to the Tampa Bay 27 on the running of Walter Payton before Thomas hooked his 44-yard field goal. The Bears broke a two-game losing streak for the Bears and led both teams with 2-3 records as the Buccaneers suffered their third-straight loss.

Early in the fourth quarter, Phillips fumbled and Dewey Selmon recovered on the Chicago 20 and gave Bucs an excellent scoring chance.

Phillip quarterback Doug Williams, sacked earlier by Dan Hampton, hit by James O'Neal and run out of bounds with Alan Page recovering for Chicago. Payton, held to only 10 yards rushing in the first half, then shivered through eight times for 50 yards to set up Chicago's 39-yard field goal with 3:12 left in the game to give the Bears a 16-0 lead.

The Bears' final score was set up when Phipps knocked out Chuck Fusina pass on the Tampa Bay 10, Phipps sneaked across on the next play.

Payton finished with 133 yards in 28 carries for only his third 100-yard game of the season against the Buccaneers. It also was Payton's 16th 100-yard game in the National Football League.

Late in the first half, Tampa Bay's Gary Davis returned a kickoff to the 44. The Bucs drove to the 20 and on a fourth-and-one, Williams sneaked to the 12 for first down.

It appears that Bert Keel [11] will be serving double duty this Saturday when seventh-ranked Notre Dame battles 13th ranked Missouri. Keel definitely will be handling the painting chores he has been juggling as the starting quarterback ahead of senior Mike Conroy.

Diamond men take Bradley tourney
by Dave Irwin
Notre Dame's baseball team captured the Bradley invitational over the weekend by winning two of three games. The Irish tied Bradley with a 2-1 victory over Bradley in the round-robin tournament. The Irish, who dropped their season conference, which was held this year in Colorado Springs. As is the custom, the mid-year awards were announced. The competition was fierce, if not, and the winners as follows.

The "Machado All-Quale-While You're
head Award" went to Phil Carter of Notre Dame. By losing three years on his final carry this week, he missed setting the school's single game rushing record.

"The Santa Claus Award" went to LSU, who fumbled 12 times in beating Florida this week. The "Machado All-Quale-While You're head Award" went to Phil Carter of Notre Dame. By losing three years on his final carry this week, he missed setting the school's single game rushing record.

"The A-Merry-Christmas-To-You Too Award" was presented to quarterback Jeff Quinn, who fumbled on the Florida State 10-yard line with 10 seconds left in the game.

"The Norman-Vincent- Pace-Positvie-Thinking Award" went to Florida coach Charlie Pell, who said: "I want players to think like an 85-year-old man whommaries a 25-year-old girl and buys a five bedroom house near an elementary school!"

The coveted "Heimlich Maneuver Award" went to the Montreal Expo, unanimously.

In addition to the awards ceremony and a lavish sandwich buffet, the voters were treated to entertainment consisting of an eloquent Shakespeare reading by Bert Parks and Soupy Sales. Plans were also made for the year-end bash, when the voters will convene at the Breivis-Stratford Hotel in Philadelphia.

Incidentally, here are the rankings:
1) Colorado (6-4)—Buffalo ineptness reached new peaks in giving up 83 total yards and 82 points.
2) Northwestern (0-6) — Should've called Bill Murray for advice on handling Gophers.
3) Vanderbilt (0-6) — This week they were really "off."
4) California (0-6) — STILL eligible for the Rose Bowl.
5) Air Force (0-6) — Accomplished something very few teams have in losing to Yale.
6) TCU (0-6) — The Horned Frogs leap into the pollfor the first time this season.
7) The City of Cincinnati (1-6—8) — famous for losing to Yale.
8) William and Mary (0-5) — Would be better if they had nine kneecaps.
9) Penn (1-2) — Wins over Columbia don't affect the Bottom Ten rankings.
10) Princeton (0-6) — If we're average in their eighth straight loss to Brown.

Minor receiving notes:
1) Oklahoma (2-1) — Gave up 42 points to Colorado.
2) Bottom Ten voters (0-1) — We've stayed out of the fight game.

Georgia Tech (#4) sent a significant penetration against North Carolinawas mid-field.

Quote of the Week:
"All our doubles teams played superb," said Belles' coach Ginger Oram. "They decided the match for us. I was very pleased with their performance."

The Belles' top duo of Patry Coash and Maureen O'Brien had little trouble in downing its opponents 6-2, 6-3. As impressive for St. Mary's were the doubles teams of Ann Huber/Mary Soergel and Maureen O'Brien/Jan Danosch. Both pairs won their rounds in straight sets.

The contest with Butler was a continuation of a match scheduled last week, but interrupted by rain.

In singles play, Cooper upped her dual record to a perfect 5-0 for the season. The talented sophomore defeated her opponent 6-0, 6-1, despite a wrist that hampered her play in the Central Michigan Tournament last weekend. In that competition, Cooper suffered the first loss of her college career, falling to Western Michigan's top player. Her dual record remains unaffected by the tournament play, however.

The only other singles victory was posted by Anne Huber, playing the number five slot.

Win Wild West
Astros turn Dodgers blue
by Jack Stevenson
LOS ANGELES—The Houston Astros won their first divisional title in their 19-year history yesterday, routing the Los Angeles Dodgers 7-1 in a playoff for the National League West championship behind Joe Niekro's six-hitter.

Art Howe collected three hits for the Astros—a home run and two singles—and drove in four runs as Niekro became a 20-game winner for the second year in a row.

The Astros' victory, coming after three straight one-run losses to the Dodgers that forced the playoffs, advanced them to the NL championship series against the Philadelphia Phillies and the New York Mets.

The Astros opened quickly with two unearned runs in the first inning off the Goff, 7-11. Leedoff batter Terry Puhl reached first on Davey Lopez's error at second and advanced to third on Enos Cabell's single.

Cesar Cedeno then scored Cabell with an infield ground-out for the second run of the inning.

In the third, Howe hit his 10th home run, a two-run shot. It was the fourth for Cesar Cedeno, who had hit a pair of them.

The Astros opened their lead to 7-0 with three runs in the fourth off three Dodger relievers. After loading the bases on walks, Cabell and Jim Deshaies, a 2-1 walk, and a bunt single by Puhl, Cruz hit a sacrifice fly to center.

A walk to Cedeno loaded the bases and Howe bounced a single to center to score two more runs.

The Dodgers came back with a run in the bottom of the fourth on Dusty Baker's single, a throwing error by Cabell at third and Rick Monday's single.

Niekro, 2-12, got out of a bases-loaded jam in the sixth when he got Derrel Thomas to fly out, Niekro wound up with six strikeouts and two walks.

The game was delayed for about two minutes in the bottom of the fourth when fans bounced the Astros off the field in an attempt to stop fans from throwing objects from the stands.
