Iranian Parliament ponders hostage issue in secret

by The Associated Press

Iran's Parliament discussed the U.S. hostages in secret for four days last week and may move toward a vote today. A deputy said new conditions for release of the captives have been decided.

Sources close to the talks said that after a heated debate in which several Parliament members threatened to walk out, the members decided to hold an open session today and vote on proposed conditions.

But deputy Husam Hashemi, reached by telephone from Beirut, Lebanon, said, "We may have an open session or a closed session — it is not for sure," and that debate may continue for the day.

Some members of the 228-seat Parliament or Majlis expressed guarded optimism over the possibility of a final decision today.

"The Majlis generally favored solving the issue in a way acceptable to both parties," deputy Ali Rahmani, a Kurdish deputy known to be moderate on the hostage issue, told reporters. "I think there is a 70 percent likelihood of a decision Thursday," Rahmani said.

Asked if new conditions had been added, deputy Hashemi said, "Yes, but we will make the public announcement later." Several lawmakers still were unsettled, but, "The condition of the hostages' health remains," he said. "We are debating on the apology." Deputy Ali Komeini, the 80-year-old Iranian leader, has said the U.S. government should apologize for its support of the late shah's regime. But in September, when he set out in general terms Iran's demands, the apology was omitted. His demands included return of the shah's fortune, a pledge of non-interference in Iran's affairs, withdrawal of lawsuits against Iran and release of Iranian assets frozen in U.S. banks. Khomeini, who holds the greatest power in his country, has charged the Majlis with responsibility for the hostages' fate.

Many deputies have suggested that additional terms may be added, but Rahmani, pressed by reporters, said the committee's recommendations basically follow those of his.

Some members suggested Iran be given three hours of U.S. television time to air its grievances, but this was not greeted with enthusiasm.

Some members walked out of yesterday's session as it became apparent the issue was heading back for public scrutiny, the sources said. It was believed those members favored dragging out the debate behind closed doors. Previous closed sessions were held Sunday and Monday.

The committee was preparing to meet again in advance of today's session. Their report was to be tabled in the Majlis by those who viewed it.

There were still a number of members who favor spy trials for the hostages and who do not want the matter resolved in the near future.

The decision removes a major source of tension in the church created by the pope's refusal to process almost 3,000 petitions on file from priests seeking release from their vows, Vatican sources said.

The papal directive is in a letter to bishops and heads of religious orders from Cardinal Francis Seper, head of the Sacred Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, formerly called the Holy Office.

An English copy of the letter, written in Latin and dated Oct. 14, was made available to The Associated Press yesterday.

The directive is believed to be a main factor in the sharp increase in the defections of Roman Catholic priests in recent years.

There are about 4,000 defections a year, or 1 percent of the world's 600,000 priests. This is double the rate during the pontificate of Pope Paul VI. In the United States, almost 8,000 priests are said to have left the priesthood since 1965.

The letter said the guidelines result from a study ordered by the pope "to determine the causes involved and to find a suitable solution" to the increasing requests for release from celibacy vows.

The guidelines appear to be "more liberal and somewhat more relaxed than the ones used by Pope Paul VI," said a Rome-based cleric who asked not to be identified.

Reaffirming the church's 1500-year-old ban on priestly marriage, the letter stated: "It is important that the priests give an example of fidelity in their commitment to their vocation until death."

The letter said the Vatican will now consider dispensations if the petitions fall under any of these categories:

"Priests who have left priestly life for a long period of time."

The cleric explained that this refers to priests who left the priesthood and married outside the church and who may have children.

In addition, the letter said the Vatican will retain its practice of granting dispensations on grounds of physical and mental ailments.

Papal directive concerns celibacy

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II, ending a two-year freeze on granting dispensation from vows of priestly celibacy, has issued new guidelines to allow Roman Catholic priests to leave the priesthood and marry but still remain in the church.

The decision removes a major source of tension in the church created by the pope's refusal to process almost 3,000 petitions on file from priests seeking release from their vows, Vatican sources said.

A mysterious explosion rocked central Peking's crowded main railroad station yesterday and witnesses said about 20 persons were killed or wounded. Most officials refused to comment, but one called it an "accident." A foreign ministry spokesman told authorities were investigating the 6:15 p.m. "accident" but gave no details. Reports of casualties could not be immediately confirmed. A steady stream of ambulances left the station and sped down Peking's main Chang An Boulevard, about a block away from the station. An unconfirmed report going through the crowd said the explosion was caused by a bundle of fireworks. A series of serious fireworks explosions on trains and in railway stations earlier this year prompted a crackdown at the time on persons carrying such items. AP

Chrysler Corp., lost $490 million in the third quarter of the year, the company said today, compared to a $461 million loss during the same period last year. The loss brought total red ink for the auto industry's Big Three companies to $1.63 billion for the July-September period. General Motors Corp., lost $567 million and Ford Motor Co. lost $395 million and brought the car company's total deficits to $8.25 billion over the past seven quarters.

America's Voyager 1 spacecraft, rapidly closing in for an encounter with Saturn, has found three new moons and confirmed three others circling the planet, scientists said yesterday. The robot craft, 12.8 million miles from Saturn and closing at 45,000 mph, pinpointed the new moons — the planet's 13th and 14th — in pictures taken last weekend. Dr. Bradford Smith said at a National Aeronautics and Space Administration news briefing. The newly discovered satellites, as yet unnamed, are orbiting close to each other outside the most visible rings of Saturn and take about 15 hours to circle the planet, Smith said. One satellite is about 185 miles in diameter and moving in an orbit about 30,000 miles above the giant planet's clouds. The other, approximately 155 miles in diameter, is in an orbit 49,500 miles above the clouds. "These images are extremely clear," he said. "All the moons' images are just dots of light on the pictures, but as we get more data we will refine the numbers," said Smith, head of the mission's imaging team. The spacecraft also confirmed three satellites previously discovered by Earth-based observations, including a small one that shares the same orbit as the moon Dione, Smith said. AP

Ronald Reagan does not realise that times have changed — in last worked in the '50s that will not work 20-30 years later. Dwight Eisenhower would not be a good president for the 1980s. The US may be the world's most dominant power geopolitically as it once did; other nations will not allow it, and we cannot achieve it. Why Reagan feel the Soviet Union would accept military inferiority? It is prepared to go up against superiority. The concept of SALT III (especially without SALT II) is a joke. Reagan's government-shaming fiscal proposals are commendable, but much easier said than done. He should know that from his experience in California. His tax cut proposals are untried and unproven in an economic situation as volatile as today's (especially with increased defense spending), and its basic premise of equal cuts for all income brackets is patently unfair. As John Anderson said last week in Washington, it would be "cakve for the rich, crumbs for the middle class, and an empty plate for the poor."

So for many, the choice has become this: 1) vote for Carter, simply to see Reagan from being elected, or 2) vote for the best man in the race, Anderson, and risk winning the election to Reagan. However, the record of Jimmy Carter has kept even this from being a choice.

Thirty American prisoners pardoned by Fidel Castro on charges that included hijacking and drug-smuggling left Cuba yesterday and were flown to the United States, where they were greeted by tearful and jubilant friends and relatives. About 200 people waved U.S. flags and cheered as the chartered American Airlines Boeing 737 arrived from Havana at Tamiami Airport in Miami. The Americans had been jailed for terms ranging from months up to 11 years. The Cuban government announced Oct. 13 that all U.S. prisoners would be released in response to appeals from congressmen, social organizations and relatives of the prisoners. Diplomatic sources speculated the move was another in a series of conciliatory gestures by Cuba. In September, the Cubans abruptly closed Mariel harbor to "Freedom Flotilla" boats that had ferried more than 125,000 illegal refugees to the United States, and the Cubans also helped underwrite a sect of hijackers, returning two suspects to the United States to face charges. Iran-Iraq conflict continues

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iran said yesterday it downed two of Iraq's long-range Soviet-built bombers deep inside its territory, one of them near Qom, the home of Iranian revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

Iran claimed fierce ground and air attacks on Iraq including bombing of large refineries near Baghdad and Basra. Iraq denied Iranian reports of heavy damage at the Baghdad refinery.

Better fighting raged for the third consecutive day at a bridge southeast of the Iranian oil port at the Baghdad refinery. Iraqi bombers penetrated as far as Qom, 75 miles south of Tehran, and near Esfahan, 145 miles south of Qom, marked the first reported use of heavy bombers in the conflict. Qom is 180 miles east of the nearest Iraqi air base.

Iraq reported aerial attacks on Iranian missile launchers on the southern front cost it two aircraft.

It was not known if Khomeini, who Tuesday rejected a truce with Iraq during a speech delivered north of Tehran, was in Qom. The Iranian communiqué did not report an attack on the holy Shiite city.

"All six crew members of the bombers were burnt in the fire of Allah's punishment," the Iranian communiqué said.

Khomeini's Shiite sect rules Persian Iran, Iraq is Arab, and has a Shiite majority dominated by the socialist Sunni Moslem government of President Saddam Hussein.

Journalists discuss Dunne

by Julie Joyce

Professors Charles Fanning and Thomas Brown of Massachusetts presented the topic "The Irish in Chicago Politics and Journalism" in the second session of the Chautauqua series held in the Library Auditorium last night. The three-part series sponsored by the American Studies Department focuses on politics and journalism in Chicago style.

In introducing the two speakers, Professor Stritch praised the writings of Finley Peter Dunne, the main subject of the lecture. Dunne was a Chicago newspaperman and humorist whose writings were popular in the 1890's and 1910's. Dunne's pieces, combined with the "best dialect ever done in American English." Dunne's writings describe the Irish American community of Bridgeport on the Southside of Chicago.

Dunne was a part of Chicago's literary community which was probably most responsible for the Chicago cultural Renaissance during the period from 1890 until the 1930's. and his contemporaries were part of the Golden Age of American Journalism.

In his presentation, Charles Fanning said that Dunne came from one of the most exciting places in the history of communications because Chicago contained such a variety of extremes. Fanning, an English professor at Bridgewater State University in Massachusetts, welcomed the audience to the session.

The author of Finley Peter Dunne and Mr. Dooley and The Chicago Irish: An Anthology. According to Fanning, Dunne, although graduating last in his high school class of 50, was hired by a Chicago newspaper at the age of 16. The son of Irish immigrants, he became a city editor at the age of 21.

In 1890 Dunne's creation, Mr. Dooley, first appeared in print in Chicago's Saturday Post. The character of Dooley, a saloon-keeper philosopher in Bridgeport, is a source of solitude and companionship to the Irish laborer who come to his bar. Fanning proposed that Dunne's Dooley made three contributions to American literature.

First of all, his examination of the Bridgeport in the 1890's is historically and sociologically valuable. As an urban local colorist, Dunne adds the dimension of a sense of place. "Dooley's membership in a community reflects a class of events and occasions in interrelated lives" Fanning said, "and that is a total picture emerging from Bridgeport."

Secondly, Dunne's character sketches demonstrated that newspaper people's lives are worthy of consideration. His characters are human beings with a whale of dignity and tragedy. Thirdly, Fanning stated that Dunne's use of Irish dialect expanded the possibilities of the vernacular voice. Dunne represented something new in American literature as a writer who dealt realistically with his own heritage and environment.

His one-line writings are politically oriented, according to Fanning. Dunne was sympathetic to the Irish American pursuit of power in order to rise in the world. He was also sympathetic to the Irish American community which reflected the history of the Irish struggle to rise in the middle class.

In his commentary on Fanning's presentation, Thomas Brown gave credit to Fanning for assembling the collection of Dunne pieces. Until Fanning did so, the world of Bridgeport had been lost.

Brown, a former history professor at Notre Dame, presently teaches at the University of Massachusetts. He stated that the Irish American experience in Boston. Tensions existed between being Irish working-class and Irish middle-class in 19th century Boston. Brown posed the question, "What role will Finley Peter Dunne play in the moral and imaginative history of Chicago?" He concluded that we will know better when we have a clearer sense of the middle class community which emerged in Chicago.

Finally, Brown believes that the Dooley pieces will find their appropriate places not only in studies of Chicago, but in all of American studies as well.

One of the Chautauqua topics is "Politics and the Press in Contemporary Chicago," to be held at 8pm in the Library Auditorium.
GAO finds waste in declassification process

WASHINGTON (AP) - The General Accounting Office proposed yesterday that the government abandon its practice of reviewing old classified documents and declassifying those that can safely be made public.

At issue are 617 million pages dealing with state secrets of war, peace, diplomacy, arms control, espionage, trade negotiations and other government activities in the area of national security.

The GAO, a government watchdog agency, cited the $11 million it costs each year to pay people to review the old papers.

But its proposal drew criticism from the National Archives, storehouse of old government records, and from Steven Garfinkel, director of the Information Security Oversight
Office.

He called the proposal "drastic, "inappropriate," "One-dimensional" and "illogical."

The GAO proposed dropping the review of classified documents put into effect by an executive order signed by President Carter in 1978.

Carter directed agencies to look at all classified documents as they become 20 years old and declassify those that can be disclosed without harm to the government.

Previously, papers were not reviewed until they were 30 years old.

The GAO said more than 135 agencies hold 617 million pages of documents requiring review.

The agencies include the FBI, CIA, Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, U.S. Information Agency, and the departments of State, Justice, Commerce and Defense. Also on the list are many agencies no no longer in existence.

Instead of systematically reviewing all classified papers, the GAO recommended that the government examine only those requested or likely to be requested by members of the public, chiefly historians.

It estimated that 90 percent of the declassified papers are of no interest to historians or to the public.

The agency called systematic review "inefficient and costly."

People wanting documents that had not been reviewed could seek them through the Freedom of Information Act, the GAO added.

The GAO said "page by
"costly and time-consuming" be-because materials about foreign governments must be kept secret for 30 years and because some information must be weeded out to avoid revealing the methods and sources used by intelligence agencies.

A federal magistrate Wednesday set bond at $1 million for Joseph Paul Franklin, charged in the slayings of two black youths in Utah and wanted for questioning in a string of race-related shootings, including the May 29 wounding of civil rights leader Vernon Jordan.

With federal marshals tightly screening hordes of reporters converging on the courtroom here, U.S. Magistrate Paul Game set a hearing for next Wednesday to determine whether the 30-year-old Mobile, Ala., native will be sent to Salt Lake City, Utah, to face charges that he violated the civil rights of two blacks who were shot to death with a rifle as they jogged in a park last summer.

Franklin, wearing dark glasses and with tattoos of an eagle and the Grim Reaper on his long-sleeved arms, showed little emotion as the bond was set.

In asking for the high bond, U.S. Attorney Gary Betz ticked off a list of other crimes that authorities want to question Franklin about, including the wounding of National Urban League president Jordan, slayings of blacks in four other cities, the alleged defrauding of a Utah hotel, bank robberies in Tennessee and Georgia and use of fraudulent identification to obtain a firearm in Kentucky.

Betz said there also is an escape warrant for Franklin from police in Florence, Ky. He added that Franklin is a drifter who hasn't held a job for three years and has used 12 aliases, wigs and other disguises to avoid authorities.

Attorneys said Franklin has no felony convictions, but four misdemeanor convictions. They declined to elaborate.

New Orleans jazz lives on!

The best traditions are to be enjoyed, and few are more enjoyable than traditional New Orleans jazz as played by the artists who create this great sound — the Preservation Hall Jazz Band. These are the musicians who made musical history with the creation of New Orleans jazz a century ago. They now travel throughout the world playing for audiences that have never heard their music before.

The Preservation Hall Jazz Band will be in South Bend tonight only, for an 8 p.m. concert at the Morris Auditorium. Now in their 60s, 70s, and 80s, the band members still play with the same spirit and joy that symbolizes New Orleans jazz. Their music is a trip through the-century street parades and saloons, from the river boats and from the hearts of the people who loved and danced and cried. It's music played by men who worked the docks all day, but weren't too tired to blow their horns most of the night.

Leading the band will be "Kid Thomas" Valentine, trumpeter. His story is part of the New Orleans jazz tradition. Born in 1896 in Reserve, Louisiana, he grew up in a world where his father played the cornet and was a blacksmith for the instruments for the St. John's Parish Band. He played primarily cornet, but developed a special love for the cornet. By 1915, his stonking style had made him a popular performer in local clubs and night spots. Within a few years he was leading his own band. The band members have earned, "playing for the kids," in an old art gallery that later became Preservation Hall in New Orleans.

For this reason, Kid Thomas can rightly be considered "Mr. Preservation Hall." He is a natural showman and his exuberant command of his horn, along with his ratty tone, bespeaks rough New Orleans jazz.

Appearing with Kid Thomas will be Joseph "Two-tart" Butler on bass, Samuel Edward on saxophone, banjo and violin, Alonzo Stewart on drums, Ermannal "Manny" Sayles on banjo and baritone sax, Wortho G. "Johnny" Thomas on trombone, Raymond "Stardust," in reminiscent of her classic "Legend In Your Time." (Interestingly, Mr. Taylor appears on background vocals on this one.) "Therm" is like a grown-up version of "That's the Way I've Always Heard It Should Be." Both succeed because while they may be reminiscent of past successes, they aren't a blatant rip-off of the same.

Then there is "Jesse." a tale of an old boy who has hurt the singer before, yet whom she still loves.

Despite the reminders of her friends, when he comes back down, she goes back to him. "Jesse" is Carly Simon's best single release since the Golden Era. "Come Upstairs," a definite single possibility, opens the album, and is basically the same tune as "Jesse." ("Well I've known you for years/Oh but now it's all changed," except the singer wants to go there now, bigger and golden than just cutting flowers and making the wine cold. She even sings the chorus in a somewhat seductive manner (e.g., "Go on up stairs/You can take off my clothes," the latter line whispered). And there is also "Take Me As I Am," which seems to move better than many previous songs, and could also succeed as a single.

The other three songs on the album are nice but unmemorable (I've listened to the album several times and can't remember a thing about them). "James" seems to be filler, similar to the title song of Billy Joel's 32nd Street. "The Three of Us in the Dark" and "The Match" follow along-with the ratty tone, bespeaks rough New Orleans jazz.

Most of the Preservation Hall band members have made and played this music for more than 50 years, and it is a part of them. Their music, while dated in origin, attracts enthusiastic fans of all ages. Because they improve as they go along, each concert is an original that will never be reconstructed in exactly the same way. The Preservation Hall Jazz Band concert is sponsored by Century Productions, Inc., at a part of their "ShowTime '80" entertainment series. Tickets for the concert are available at the Century Center Box Office. Call 284-9111 for ticket information.

Come Upstairs

Carly Simon
Warner Bros.

Since 1974, when Carly Simon released her album "Homestake," she has been unable to match either the quality or quantity of her early-70s successes like "That's the Way I've Always Heard It Should Be." "Anticipation," "You're So Vain," and "Light as a Feather" were all big hits at the time. After that hit she has had since then was "That's the Way I've Always Heard It Should Be." Still, there are some fine songs culled from her last two albums, which were released her album during the time of her marriage to the late Bruce Jenner.

Simon's current album, "Come Upstairs," looks to be a change of pace. While the songs on the album are not as catchy as those on her previous albums, they are still enjoyable, and few are more enjoyable than her song "In Pain." Simon's voice is in great shape, and she is able to convey the pain and sadness that she feels in this song. She is also able to convey the joy that symbolizes New Orleans jazz. Her music is a trip through the-century street parades and saloons, from the river boats and from the hearts of the people who loved and danced and cried. It's music played by men who worked the docks all day, but weren't too tired to blow their horns most of the night.

UNICEF
Day

No child should starve for attention. But last year 10 million children did. Some 50% of all children born in the world's developing nations die before their fifth birthday from malnutrition or a related disease. Almost half of those that survive suffer malnutrition severe enough to leave their minds and bodies irreversibly damaged. This week, the United Nations Children's Fund will need help in its drive to change this tragic situation.

UNICEF is committed to conquering world hunger through programs to train local workers, supply seeds and tools for village gardens and teach proper nutrition to mothers. UNICEF works side by side with the local government and community to light the interwoven chronic problems of poverty, malnutrition and disease. Its basic services approach combats hunger by confronting the root causes: unsafe water, poor sanitation, unsuitable environment, lack of education or absence of health care.

Halloween is a traditional day for children and giving. October 31 is also National UNICEF Day, a day to remember the work UNICEF does for the world's most needy children and mothers, donations are vital to UNICEF's ability to respond when needed and a small amount can go a long way.

UNICEF asks that we remember this generous week. UNICEF collection boxes and volunteers will be on campus; there will be candy sales in the dining halls and Music for UNICEF at 283-1823. Contributions will go far to help in the war against world hunger and malnutrition. Volunteers are needed. Anyone interested, please contact Kathy Campopinda at 283-1823.

Illinois in trouble with Big Ten

The news release said the conference seeks to determine "whether the University of Illinois is in compliance with conference principles of institutional responsibility and faculty control and with the conference's eligibility procedures."

The proposal defines institutional responsibility as each member school's adherence to Big Ten regulations.

The principle of faculty control requires that each member university delegate to a faculty group within its organization the responsibility for the development of institutional policies concerning intercollegiate athletics, the administration of those policies and supervision of institutional compliance with conference requirements," the release said.

"In the Wilson case, the student, a sophomore from California junior college, claims he is a junior and therefore has enough academic credits to play football this season. However, the conference contends he is a senior and therefore does not have enough credits to meet the eligibility requirements.

Wilson filed suit against the conference and also won an order from the Illinois Supreme Court allowing him to stay on the team pending the hearing of his suit in the Circuit Court after the season ends. "This investigation, and many others which the conference conducts, reflects long-standing conference traditions and principles," the release said.

"... Student-athletes must be first and foremost students who meet conference-wide academic standards. It added that under the Big Ten's "self-governing principle ... each of the 10 universities has a duty to the other members and to their student-athletes to observe strictly conference rules, including those involving academic progress and eligibility. It requires a thorough investigation in any instance where a possibility of a violation of conference requirements may exist."

petition before the appeals court, asking them to block Karen from tryouts while considering the issue of whether she should be allowed to play at all. The judges agreed 2-1 Monday to do so.

Karen's lawyers filed another motion Tuesday asking the appeals court to reconsider and to ask for a temporary injunction barring the school from holding the tryouts.

"We argued that there would be an irreparable injury if she were not allowed to try out for the team," said Andrew David, one of Karen's attorneys.

But Schwartz said the school believes Karen should be kept off the boys' team for two reasons. First, Schwartz said, federal and state laws prohibit boys and girls from competing together in contact sports.

"Second, he said, "If girls are allowed to compete in intercollegiate sports, under the law there is a regulation which we can prevent boys from trying out for the girls' teams ... and the girls will be replaced by boys. The girls' programs would be destroyed."
There will be NO sports staff meeting tonight. We will meet next Thursday at 6:30 p.m.

O'Connor awaits decision

CHICAGO (AP) — As her school's basketball season begins, 11-year-old athlete Karen O'Connor is sitting on the sidelines, waiting for the seventh U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals to call the shots.

When Karen went to her junior high school Tuesday to try out for the basketball team, she found the door closed to her because of an all-boys policy and a Monday appeals court ruling.

"She came this morning, and her father said she was here to try out for the basketball team. He was reminded that he was under a court order (not to let her try out)," said Phil Arenstein, principal of MacArthur Junior High School in suburban Prospect Heights.

"We're doing everything the law asks us to do and they're seeking to overturn the law," said the school's attorney, Allen Schwartz. "We're not trying to deprive her of anything."

But Karen, a basketball whiz who has competed with boys in little league competition for four years, feels deprived.

"I don't think it's fair and I'm very upset about it," said Karen in a telephone interview.

"I've been getting a lot of harassment, mostly from boys, in the halls. They say, 'Why do you want to play on the boy's team?'"

"I think I'm as good as the boy players," she said.

The day before the tryouts, the appeals court blocked temporarily a lower-court order that would have allowed Karen to compete.

A lawsuit was filed on her behalf earlier this month, after she learned she would not be allowed to try out for the boys' team.

Last week, U.S. District Judge Prentice H. Marshall ruled Karen should be allowed to try for the boys' team because the girls' team would not be challenging enough for her.

MacArthur and the District 3 school board filed an emergency (continued on page 9)

Who's tops in the NBA? By Alex Sachere AP Sports Writer Who are the 10 greatest pro basketball players of all time? Who was the best coach? What was the National Basketball Association's finest team?

The league has taken a stab at answering those questions as part of its 35th anniversary celebration. Members of the Pro Basketball Writers Association of America were polled to determine the NBA's all-time team, coach and player, and the results will be unveiled at a luncheon tomorrow in New York.

But why wait? Before reading any further, take a timeout and jot down your own selections. A ballot with 50 players and 15 coaches was sent to PBWA members to aid in the voting, but all it did was refresh the memory. You ought to be able to come up with quite a 10-man club without it.

One thing worth noting is that only active players were included on the ballot. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Julius Erving. This should suffice, to a degree, the fact that most members of the PBWA did not see the players from the early days of the NBA. For this writer, nine players came to mind immediately — no doubts, only questions. Only the 10th spot on the team was tough because of his skill, his hustle, his longevity and his clan.

But the ballot asked for 10 men, and filling that last spot was tough. (continued on page 6)

Busick steps down as ND ticket manager

by Beth Hoffmans
Sport Editor

Notre Dame Ticket Manager Michael Busick has announced his resignation effective December 31, 1980. Busick, who has held his present post since March, 1975, will leave Notre Dame for a position with Heritage, Carrick, and Gates, Inc. of Louisville, Ky.

"It's an opportunity for myself and family to improve our lives," said Busick, who graduated from Notre Dame in 1973 with a degree in business administration. "It is a better opportunity in a career-wise and will give me a chance to improve myself. I will be taking the skills gathered here at Notre Dame and applying them to the business world."

I hate to leave Notre Dame, but I have reached a point in my career where I am at a plateau. I need bigger challenges.

Busick, whose new duties with the insurance firm will included handling the day-to-day routines of a general manager, emphasized that he needed a "people-oriented position."

"I'd say a person sensitive to the needs of everyone," said Busick when detailing qualities he saw necessary in the selection of his successor. "One that could understand certain limitations and judge the needs of all individuals, but be as fair as possible.

Busick served as assistant ticket manager for two years prior to taking his present position. He also served as the head student manager in his senior year at Notre Dame.

One of the main cogs in the Notre Dame hockey breakdown camp, Busick added that the once endangered program is now "financially sound and growing.

Busick added that the season opener for the Irish was received a high of 2000 that far.

Busick, who received his masters in business administration from Indiana University in 1977, will move the move to Louisville in January with his wife Judith, daughter Jennifer and son Jeffrey.

Robinson sticks foot in mouth

In case you didn’t know, John, O. J. Simpson does a pretty fair job as a sports commentator for ABC-TV.

But how about Charles White, last year’s Heisman Trophy winner? He’s even smart enough to memorize enough lines to be on a television show. Must be some white blood in that boy, huh John?

All of this is just the latest in a series of dispicable antics on the part of Robinson. Last fall, Robinson, with a holier-than-thou tone, declared that if he discovered any of his players not attending classes, he wouldn’t permit them to play — even if the upcoming opponent were Notre Dame.

Sure, John.

Besides having ugly racial overtones, Robinson’s latest folly is simply a copout. As of last spring, every single former Notre Dame player in the National Football League had an under-graduate degree. And every basketball player to spend four years at Notre Dame under Digger Phelps has a diploma to show for it.

And John Robinson would have a hard time convincing many people that Southern California’s academic program is as challenging as Notre Dame’s.

But he’d probably try.

At state tourney

Irish entertain hopes for win

by David Wurwein
Sports Writer

It doesn’t take in-depth research to see that the Irish field hockey team is up to its usual tricks this weekend’s state tournament in Richmond.

The team is PSYCHED.

I think we can take the whole thing and call it a day," said head coach Jan Galen, "and I know the team is ready to go. We have improved game after game and this year our team has a chance to win.

Since the St. Louis game and Clare Henry has really come on strong with the offense, so we’ve had a chance to regain our depth.

Should Notre Dame defeat Valparaiso as expected, they will play Franklin College in a possible regional match for the championship. Franklin dropped a close 1-0 overtime upset on Notre Dame.

Notre Dame defeated Franklin 20-19 on September 29, and would advance to the regional tournament if they could repeat the win.

"We’re up against teams we know we can beat," concluded Galen.

Last week, while most Notre Dame students enjoyed a quiet weekend at home, the squad continued the regular season with six games away from home, in as many days. Unfortunately, the team continued to experience the "bad luck-o-the-Irish" that has plagued them through the season when on the road, as they failed to produce a single victory.

Monday they were defeated by Indiana State 9-1, Tuesday by Missouri in a close 1-0 contest. Wednesday by nationally-ranked St. Louis 8-0, Thursday by Southern Illinois 3-0, and Friday and Saturday to Principia by scores of 1-0 and 3-0.

While most people would regard the week as a frustrating and depressing ordeal, Coach Galen saw it another way.

"We’re always looking for more practice and competition," she said. "We’re a maturing team.

"People have to remember that we’re a non-scholarship team. When we play teams like St. Louis, with eleven players on all rosters, we don’t expect to win.

"Our team turns white," (this is a football term) "if the school’s admissions office adheres to its minimum standards of a 2.7 grade-point average and combined SAT score of 800.

What a lovely thing to say.

Perhaps Robinson would care to repeat his antics on the part of Robinson. Last fall, Robinson, with a holier-than-thou tone, declared that if he discovered any of his players not attending classes, he wouldn’t permit them to play — even if the upcoming opponent were Notre Dame.

Instead, that distinction belongs to University of Southern California head football coach John Robinson, who has a brilliant future as a speechwriter for the Ku Klux Klan if he ever leaves USC.

Robinson, who played his fifth season as a software of the football program that fronts for an NFL breeding ground, told the New York Times that "Our team turns white," (this is a football term) "if the school’s admissions office adheres to its minimum standards of a 2.7 grade-point average and combined SAT score of 800.

What a lovely thing to say.

Perhaps Robinson would care to repeat his claim for the benefit of Red Bone, who compiled a perfect 4-0 grade-point average in high school and just happens to be a vital member of Notre Dame’s offensive backfield.

Or maybe he’d like to discuss the subject with Alan Page of the Chicago Bears. A former All-American at Notre Dame, Page passed the bar exam in Minnesota last year.

Both Bone and Page are black.

But Robinson need not even look as far as Notre Dame to find an example of very intelligent blacks who just happened to be exceptionally gifted athletes.

Who you on a little secret, John. That guy on TV who used to run through airports but now flies through terminals doesn’t have his lines dubbed in for him. And on occasion, O. J. Simpson does a pretty fair job as a sports commentator for ABC-TV.

In case you didn’t know, John, O. J. won his Heisman Trophy while playing at USC.

I know, that was during the John McKay Era. But how about Charles White, last year’s Heisman Trophy winner? He’s even smart enough to memorize enough lines to be on a television show. Must be some white blood in that boy, huh John?

All of this is just the latest in a series of dispicable antics on the part of Robinson. Last fall, Robinson, with a holier-than-thou tone, declared that if he discovered any of his players not attending classes, he wouldn’t permit them to play — even if the upcoming opponent were Notre Dame.
