Editor's Note: Although violent crimes have decreased at the other get­ sider, off-campus crime on the whole is still perceptibly evident to Notre Dame students living in South Bend. In the following three-part series, the Observer examines the problems of the North­east Neighborhood, from different viewpoints—the South Bend
City administration, the South Bend
Police Department and the local residents, both permanent and transitent. Today: part three, the police department.

By Rob Fisher

For all of its problems, the South Bend Police Department manages to function with effici­ency. The police point out that Notre Dame students receive much concentrated service that they do not statistically deserve. Yet the off-campus area has the second highest burglary rate of the city districts, and the police recognize this problem.

Chief Thompson, head of the force, pointed out that the area is a natural environment for burg­laries because of the regularity and predictability of empty homes, unobtrusive house­

management and the "natural environment for burglary the police try to manage to function with effici­ency."

Burglary figures are one of the most common crimes, along with automobile theft. The police urge students to employ more common sense when they go out. They advise students to always walk in groups of five or more, especially if they are under 21. They also advise students to always lock their doors, keep their windows closed, and always inform the police if they suspect anything suspicious. They also advise against leaving money or valuables in plain sight.

Civilian members of the department are a part of the police force. The police have adjusted partly to the influx of two­ person patrols to single beats.

The police also advise students to always keep their doors locked, even if they are going to be gone for a short time. They also advise students to always keep their windows closed, and to always inform the police if they suspect anything suspicious. They also advise against leaving money or valuables in plain sight.

Civilian members of the department are a part of the police force. The police have adjusted partly to the influx of two­ person patrols to single beats.

(continued on page 5)

World reacts to landslide

By The Associated Press

Iran indicated the Republican victory would have no effect on the ability of the Reagan administration to wield power in the Iranian parliament, but would delay its resolution. "It is up to the United States to accept or reject the conditions set down last week by the Iranian parliament," said an official in the Office of Public Affairs. "The new administration doesn't make any difference to us who the president is." However, Radio Tehran quoted the deputy speaker of Iran's parliament, Hosseitalam Moosavi, as saying: "Because Carter's policies haven't worked, and the new administration will take over, these talks may be shelved."

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Britain and Chancellor Helmut Schmidt of West Germany, in warm words to Reagan, said they hoped for meetings with the president-elect.

President Valery Giscard d'Estaing of France said he hoped to establish "the dialogue which is natural between our two countries, friends and allies always."
President Carter declared yesterday that his landslide defeat at the hands of Ronald Reagan was a result of a "natural tendency" to vote against him. The protest vote that brought about the landslide was not a rejection of Ronald Reagan, but an aversion to the incumbent president. It was the last Iranian stronghold on the Shatt al-Arab's disputed border waterway used by both Iran and Iraq to ship oil. Hussein told the Iraqi Parliament he would push his territorial claims beyond the Shatt al-Arab estuary, the area where the Persian Gulf begins, if Khomeini chose to fight on.

From the evidence he had already compiled, the final results are not in and many races are still undecided, but here are some final campaign thoughts in the pre-election weekend report of election night 1980. A landslide...

We were heartened Monday night that his private polls showed he would lose his re-election bid decisively. "The last few hours before the polls opened were the dominant news story of the campaign, the stories not coming home immediately, mobs on the streets in Iran, just kind of reconfirmed American concern about our next dominion in world affairs," Carter said. "I don’t think there was any indication that there was a personal turn against me. It was not an aversion to me. It was just a frustration. The natural tendency is to vote against incum­bents." — AP

Without going into detail, here are the highlights of some of the elections for Senate, House appropriations, speech, and White House race. Green and Black lost. Pickle and Pepper won. Bacon, Rice and Turnipseed lost. Kindness and Peace won. Hope lost. Winning reporters were: Dodson, Norwood, Losson, Gray, Canary, Fox, Wolff and Woodcock. Fountain and Fields won. So did Glenn, Stump, Rose and Boggs. Lake, Bowes, Broderick, Franklin and Green won. Gramm, Chappell won. Church lost. Ireland and Holland won. So did Bonham, his early win. A landslide...

Iran’s religious leader, the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, yesterday rejected a “peace now” offer from Iraq. He declared “many of our youths have died in the war, and the younger generation of Iran’s Islamic revolution ordered his generals to continue the war “until the infidels (Iraqis) are defeated.” His speech in Tehran to a victorious and chanting army came a day after Iraq’s President Saddam Hussein declared he was ready to “withdraw our forces from Iran’s territories, after the fact, inconsistency by Iran’s state.”

The broadcast was monitored in Beirut, Lebanon. Hussein told the Iraqi Parliament he would push his territorial claims beyond the Shatt al Arab estuary, the disputed border waterway used by both Iran and Iraq to ship oil into the Persian Gulf, if Khomeini chose to fight on.

We were heartened Monday night that his private polls showed he would lose his re-election bid decisively. "The last few hours before the polls opened were the dominant news story of the campaign, the stories not coming home immediately, mobs on the streets in Iran, just kind of reconfirmed American concern about our next dominion in world affairs," Carter said. "I don’t think there was any indication that there was a personal turn against me. It was not an aversion to me. It was just a frustration. The natural tendency is to vote against incum­bents." — AP

A sit-in that began as a protest against Ronald Reagan, but ended in support of several campus causes, was ended last night when campus police halted dissidents from the University of California administration building. About 70 students and nonstudents had been threatened with arrest if they did not leave voluntarily. When they made no move, campus officers began removing them. Some of the protesters went limp and were dragged down the stairwell they had occupied for five hours. Even then, the protesters were told they could avoid arrest if they would just walk away. But 52 persons were taken into custody. Inside the building, the demonstrators chanted continuously but a reporter who watched the sit-in observed no violence. Originally about 150 demonstrators, at first they were not allowed to enter a possible draft and arrests of Reagan’s presidential election, moved into the campus ad­ministration building. But after two earlier arrests, some dissidents started drifting away. The building occupation began at about 2 a.m., as a campus rally “to build an educational movement against Reagan,” according to a rally organizer. Speakers exhorted the crowd to “make sure Reagan can do as little as possible to hinder human rights in the country.”

The Observer (USPS 935 050) is published weekly through Friday except during exam and vacation periods. Copyright 1980 by the students of Notre Dame and Saint Mary’s. Subscription rates may be purchased for $2.00 per year (12 issues) by writing the subscription office, Notre Dame, Indiana 46556. Second class postage paid, Notre Dame, Indiana, 46556. The Observer is a member of the Associated Press. All reproduction rights are reserved.

Partly cloudy today with highs in the mid 50s. Mostly cloudy tonight, washer. 60’s. Mostly cloudy tomorrow, highs around 60.

For any purchase of $2.00 or more

Savings coupon:
Free medium drink
with purchase of hamburger, large chill or salad.

The Observer (USPS 935 050) is published weekly through Friday except during exam and vacation periods. Copyright 1980 by the students of Notre Dame and Saint Mary’s. Subscription rates may be purchased for $2.00 per year (12 issues) by writing the subscription office, Notre Dame, Indiana 46556. Second class postage paid, Notre Dame, Indiana, 46556. The Observer is a member of the Associated Press. All reproduction rights are reserved.
OC Break-ins persist

by Laura L. Larimore
Senior Staff Reporter

Another in a continuing series of off-campus vandalism occurred Saturday night at the residence of Brian Wilcox and John Paulik, 920 N. Lawrence. Personal possessions valued at $3,500 were stolen, including a $1,600 Delby stereo system.

Remarking, the house was equipped with a light-sound burglary alarm system, window locks, and dead bolts on all doors. Entry was gained through demolition of the front door, although no axe marks were apparent.

Wilcox returned home at approximately 1:30 a.m. Saturday night to find the house thoroughly ransacked. The burglar alarm was still ringing; the thieves had not bothered to disconnect or steal the system.

Items stolen, besides the stereo system, which featured a record changer, were a television set, incuding one color TV with a home video attachment, a shotgun out of a closet, a camera with a telephoto lens, a clock radio, an electric guitar, a calculator, electronic equipment, and hand tools.

"They even took my electric shaver," Wilcox said. Additional articles have been discovered missing by Wilcox and Paulik each day since the crime.

Wilcox contacted South Bend Police immediately after surveying the damage. They arrived roughly 30 minutes later and took fingerprints of the burglar alarm and fragments of the door. Wilcox provided the officers with a serial number list of the articles stolen.

The police were appreciative, but expressed little hope for recovery. "Most of these jobs go house-to-house," an officer explained. This means that stolen goods are sold prior to the actual recovery.

The thoroughness of the job and the time required to move the stolen goods to a vehicle led Wilcox and Paulik to the conclusion that the thieves must have known exactly what they were doing. The students estimated that at least ten trips by a strong man would have been necessary to transport the articles out of the house. "A group of big and strong men must have driven Wilcox and Paulik commented.

The house itself is not in the student district and is the only student residence in the neighborhood. A street light shines in front. "Everyone must have been asleep," Wilcox noted. By its false sense, the alarm had prompted neighbors to contact police.

"I will bet it happened just a few minutes before I got home," Wilcox said. The alarm works on 14-minute cycles and had begun a new cycle when he entered the house.

"I lived on campus last year, in the worst part of town and never had anything stolen. I think there are a limited few who are causing this wave of off-campus burglaries," Wilcox added.

Both Wilcox and Paulik are fifth-year students at Notre Dame. They have resided at this location since last May, and will graduate this spring.

"I won't buy anything else of any value before I leave South Bend," Wilcox said, primarily to discourage further vandal attacks. He was also the victim of a motorcycle theft this summer from the Aerospace Engineering building parking lot during daylight hours, which received little action from authorities.

Reagan's election delays release of hostages, Iran says

By The Associated Press

President Ronald Reagan's decision will delay the release of the 52 American hostages held in Iran but will not change the conditions for freeing them, Iranian officials said yesterday.

The spiritual advisor to the militants holding the hostages, deputy parliament speaker Hojatoleslam Mohammad Khomeini, was quoted by Tehran Radio as saying in an interview with Greek television: "Because (President) Carter was already in office, we would have reached a solution faster if he were re-elected. With Reagan's victory the hostages will live a long time. I think Carter's policy has failed in the United States and this has no effect on the hostage issue."

Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai as well as Khomeini said in interviews with the Iranian news agency Pars that the election of Reagan would have no effect on Iran or on its conditions for release of the hostages, Tehran Radio reported.

Khomeini was quoted as saying the hostages will be put on trial if the United States does not act on Iran's conditions for releasing them. Khomeini headed the committee which drafted the conditions, approved Sunday by the Majlis, the Iranian Parliament.

In Washington, State Department spokesman John Trattner said yesterday the United States was "definitely amenable" to face-to-face negotiations on terms for release of the hostages.

On Tuesday, the State Department said the Carter administration will move "expeditiously", "deliberately" and "with care" in responding to the conditions. There is no indication when a response will be made.

The conditions: the United States must unfreeze Iranian assets held in American banks, return the wealth of the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, drop lawsuits against Iran and pledge non-interference in Iran's affairs. Yesterday was the hostages' 368th day in captivity.

"The conditions for release of the hostages were passed by the Majlis which has to do with our country," Rajai was quoted by Tehran Radio as saying. "We don't care who is ruling in the U.S. government. These conditions were passed by the Majlis, and we will carry them out."

An aide to Rajai said the Iranian government had not yet taken custody of the hostages from the militants who seized them Nov. 4, 1979, possibly because the prisoners are in scattered locations. The aide, contacted by telephone from Beirut, Lebanon, identified himself only as Mr. Aziz.

Earlier this week, the militants offered to turn responsibility for the hostages over to the Iranian government.

The aide said the hostages had been moved to different places in Iran after the aborted U.S. military attempts in April to rescue them. "They are not in one special place, but in different places," he said, adding he did not know where they were being held.

THE MUSIC BOX
120 W. Mishawaka Ave.
Mish., IN (256-5440)

Lots to see at the best new club in town, with the best entertainment around:

NEW PLACE

Oct. 31, Nov. 1 -- South Shore with Straight Flush
Nov. 6 -- Alex DeGrassi with Rick Walters
Nov. 7 & 8 -- The 3rd Street Siders
Nov. 12 -- Free Spirit
Nov. 13 -- Jeff Lorber Fusion with Free Spirit
Nov. 14 -- New grass Revival with Pink & The Naturals

To help make your Thanksgiving Special...with Avis...

Go with Avis...and leave your worries behind.

Oldsmobile Cutlass Supreme
$20.00 a day
Unlimited miles

Rate good from Tues., Nov. 25, at noon through Mon., Dec. 1, at noon.

Whether it's business or pleasure, Avis can get you going with a well-maintained car, great rates and superb service. All cars come with a tank of gas--you pay only for the gas you use. It's the only way to go—with Avis! Avis features GM cars like the Oldsmobile Cutlass Supreme.

234-1024

Mishawaka Regional Airport
South Bend, IN Irish-Iraq

Neutrality hints at aggression

By Richard Falk
Pacific News Service

EDITOR'S NOTE: One of the principal laws governing international relations—that no nation shall condone military aggression against another—seems to have been forgotten in the case of Iraq’s invasion of Iran, an aggression which no major state has condemned. Richard Falk, a renowned expert on international law, argues this fact as a possible prelude to America’s own use of sanctioned force in the Middle East. Falk is professor of international law and practice at Princeton University and a member of the editorial board of Foreign Policy magazine.

The Iraqi-Iran war may well prove to be a turning point in modern international relations. For the first time since World War I, major aggression by one country against another has been overlooked by all major states— if not actually encouraged. Iraq’s surprise attack on Iran has not been condemned in any major government circles outside of Teheran as a violation of the United Nations Charter or as a fundamental breach of international law. Such a pattern of acquiescence to trans-national aggression is of great significance. The United States, in particular, has consistently emphasized its opposition to the unilateral use of force to resolve international conflict. There may be grey areas within the concept of aggression, such as minor border disputes, “hot”, but when one country uses its military forces to launch an all-out attack on another, there is no doubt that aggression has been committed.

It is helpful to recall that the United States shed American blood in Korea (1950-53) and Vietnam (1962-73), allegedly to protect countries allied to us that were victims of aggression. Perhaps, more significantly, the United States in 1956 opposed the aggressive use of force by its closest allies, England and France, and sided with the victim state, Egypt, whose leader, Abdel Gamil Nasser, had antagonized the Eisenhower Administration by nationalization of the Suez Canal and moves toward closer relations with Moscow. Despite this diplomatic setting, the United States stood behind Nasser’s demand that the invading forces be withdrawn from Egyptian territory without giving anything in return.

More recently, the United States has staked by Pol Pot’s claims to govern Cambodia because the bloody regime was the victim of Vietnamese armed force. Other elements are equally “hot”, such as the China card which inclines Peking toward support for China’s friends and away from Soviet friends, but the normative peg—the justifying rule of conduct—was opposition to Vietnam’s “aggression”.

By proclaiming neutrality and opting for a stance of non-involvement in the Iraq-Iran war, the United States, along with the Soviet Union, also repudiates a very solid body of international law that has been built up over the past century. The Versailles Treaty put burdens, by way of reparations, on the German people as a whole: a punishment imposed for allegedly initiating aggressive war. The Nuremberg War Crimes trials, in fact, considered aggression the key crime that encompassed all others. These principles were then embodied in the United Nations Charter as its cornerstone. These rules against aggression have been manipulated by both superpowers in a number of instances. Various forms of intervention have occurred in the internal affairs of foreign states, but until now, the right to engage in naked aggression has never been condoned. As recently as a few months ago, President Carter was eloquently indignant about the Soviet aggression against Afghanistan. Why, then has Iraqi aggression been overlooked altogether? The obvious answer is that no relevant government, including our own, has an incentive to destroy the Islamic revolution of Ayatollah Khomeini. The United States, in particular, looked for months in a fruitless endeavor with Teheran over the fate of the American hostages, was in no position to position itself with Iran. More generally, the radicalism of the Iranian revolution is a threat to the stability of all governments in the region, especially as Saddam Hussein’s minority regime is opposed by a Shi’ite majority. Perhaps it is possible then, to account for this unique response to Iraqi aggression as a special case, reflecting Iran’s unusual degree of isolation in the international community. Surely Khomeini’s international unpopularity is a factor, but is it not the whole story? The United States has been moving increasingly, since the abortive Shah takeover, claiming for itself a unilateral right to use force to safeguard the oil life line of the world. Such a claim underlies the announced function of the Rapid Deployment Force. In other words, even the United States—for so long the great champion of outlawing aggression— seems to be preparing the ground for its own future aggressive use of force.

UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO
GRADUATE SCHOOL OF BUSINESS
M.B.A.

All Majors and Fields Invited

Our representative will be present on your campus for the Graduate School Career Day to answer questions about our curriculum, admissions, financial aid, and career opportunities in the following management fields:

- Health Administration
- Public and NonProfit
- Finance
- Human Resources
- Marketing
- Economics
- General Management
- Management Science
- Accounting
- Policy

Monday, November 10
Contact the Placement Bureau
Room 213 for Details
Police

(continued from page 1)

This compensation has had several incidental advantages, and experience has shown this method to be more efficient than the traditional two-person patrols in providing thorough police coverage and promoting inter-cooperation among the officers.

There is some relief in sight for the overworked officers, however. The city has approved and the department just finished the screening of applicants for 11 patrolman positions. Chosen in the next few weeks, these 11 people (mostly minority) will train in the station for six months, and after being successfully reviewed, be sent to the academy for 14 weeks of intensive training. After they are graduated from the academy, they will be posted to the South Bend Police Department proper.

This addition to the department will not totally alleviate the problem of underpatrolled streets, but it is a partial solution. In any case, the increased manpower will probably not be visible to Notre Dame students. This is not due to police negligence, but rather to the fact that we already receive much more than our percentage of police coverage.

Specifically, police protection in the northeast district is both extensive and methodical. There are always two cars in the district, during the daylight hours, one of these cars is unmarked, and devotes its time to cruising the streets watching for burglaries, while the regular district black-and-white handles the routine calls. At night, this extra car concentrates on providing protective surveillance of the students on the streets, especially those journeying home from the bars.

The police also provide specialized services just for the students. These include placing three detectives in the off-campus area, on foot, during home football games. The department also has an over-time program called Project ABLE, which places three additional officers on the street during the evening hours. On the weekend, this supplementary force is inflated to eight men with the addition of an undercover decoy team. Another problem that affects the entire police force is wages. For a change, both administration and line agree that the police are underpaid for the work they do.

The third problem, inadequate equipment, is mainly evidenced in the patrol cars. In order to promote fuel conservation, Mayor Parent last year replaced the department's eight cylinder cars with the current six cylinder models. An unfortunate consequence of this action is the newfound inability of the police to outrun many of the cars in South Bend today in single pursuit.

Although problems are evident and there are problems due to a lack of manpower due to lack of money. Police department officials point to this problem, in addition to the problem of student responsibility, as factors that give the impression they may be less than efficient in carrying out their responsibilities in the off-campos area.

A desk in LaFortune is the place for one graduate student to display posters of his mentors and the effect they've had on his education. [Photo by John Macor]

World

(continued from page 1)

Other West Europeans, however, expressed misgivings about Reagan’s campaign pledge to scrap the SALT II nuclear arms limitation treaty with the Soviet Union and negotiated another one.

The Kremlin’s initial reaction came in a dispatch of the official Soviet news agency Tass, indicating a willingness to work with the Reagan administration. The Soviet Union, Tass said, “has always stood for normalization and development of Soviet-American relations on the basis of peaceful coexistence.”

President Anwar Sadat of Egypt and Prime Minister Menachem Begin of Israel congratulated Reagan in statements issued separately in their capitals. Mahmoud Labady, spokesman for the Palestinian Liberation Organization, called Reagan “a friend of Israel” and predicted his presidency “will increase tension in the area by supporting Israel’s expansionist policy.”
The Observer

---

CAL sponsors DC seminar, plans campus commission

By Sheila Shonick

The Center for Experiential Learning will be sponsoring a Social Concerns Seminar in Washington D.C. from March 14-21, 1981. Any sophomore or junior from Notre Dame or St. Mary's who is planning to live on campus in a residence hall during the 1981-82 academic year is eligible to participate.

One credit hour will be given for participation in the week-long seminar. Students involved will be expected to attend several preparatory meetings before spring break and also to write a reflection paper following the seminar.

The idea to have the Social Concerns Seminar sprung from a meeting in July of this year where Fr. Don McNeilly spoke with the Alumni Club of Washington D.C. Since that time, Jan Corey, Tom Crehan, and Sister Carrie F. Burkhowther have put much time into making this seminar a reality.

It is hoped that the seminar will "provide educational opportunities in Washington, D.C. related to specific socio-political issues of current and future interest to the participants as well as provide the opportunity for participation to "meet with resource persons from church-related groups who have experience in the political process representing concerns related to social justice." Participants will also have the opportunity to meet with Notre Dame alumni in the Washington D.C. area.

Following the seminar, those who participate will be expected to help develop a Social Concerns Commission in the residence halls for the 1981-82 school year. One student from each hall may participate. In this way, each residence hall will become more aware of and involved in social awareness and justice education programs and events.

Applications will be available today through next Thursday at either the Student Activities Office, 1st Floor of the Center for Experiential Learning (1110 East, Memorial Library). All applications are due by 4 p.m. Friday, November 14. The cost of the program has not yet been determined.

---

Republicans also ousted one-term Democrats in Iowa, New Hampshire and North Carolina, and captured seats in Alabama, Florida and Alaska where the incumbents had lost primary elections.

The upheaval means that Republicans, not Democrats, will be chairmen of the Senate committees in the 97th Congress. It makes Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee the incoming majority leader.

The upheaval in the House was deep, but not enough to undo the Democratic majority.

---

Dr. Boleslaw Sobocinski, retired University philosophy professor and founder of The Notre Dame Journal of Formal Logic, died Sunday in South Bend, at the age of 74. Sobocinski joined the Notre Dame faculty in 1956 and received the rank of full professor in 1965. A specialist in symbolic logic, he founded the quarterly journal in 1960 and served as its editor for 19 years.

In time the Journal became one of the University's major scholarly assets and earned a prestigious international reputation.

"We at the University are deeply saddened by the loss of our friend and colleague," said Professor Timothy O'Meara, provost, who added that Sobocinski directed doctoral dissertations of many students in mathematics and philosophy.

"Boleslaw not only enriched the lives of Notre Dame students and faculty but he also labored with great dedication to produce a scholarly journal of which the University is indeed proud. He and his accomplishments have brought the name of Notre Dame to library shelves throughout the world."

---

United Limo, Inc.

Travel United Limo To/From Chicago O'Hare Airport

One Way Fare............$22.00
Round Trip......$39.00

Deliver to your airline at O'Hare Airport
O'Hare pick-up at Lower Level Carson Restaurant

Save over 50% on Round Trip To and From O'Hare

New Schedule:

NOW LEAVING ND BUS SHELTER 6 TIMES A DAY

---

Senior Class Jeans Formal

At Pardner's Saloon (Formerly Cinnebar's)

Sunday, Nov. 9
8:00 p.m. to 1 a.m.

$10 includes — Open Bar
Live Band
Free Pardner's Membership Card
($2.00 Value)

Tickets on sale in Lemons Lobby and ND Dining Halls
Cheerleaders deserve praise

Dear Editor,

The cheerleaders need to be commended.

There are two reasons why we make this statement: First, because they are doing a good job. They put in their 5 to 10 hours a week of practice, they're skilled, and they show enthusiasm. But frankly, all of these are too be expected. The second reason is not only not to be expected, but feel it needs to be explained. The University chillers planes for the football team, coaches, cheerleaders, etc., to help cut down expenses. Logical, right? Earlier this year, United Airlines changed the size of the plane to be used for four of the team's charters. The team still fits on the plane, so no problem, right? Wrong. For you see, the team has no problem, the cheerleaders have no room. It's reasonable to say that the simple solution would have been to book passage on another flight. The University had an even simpler solution—let the cheerleaders find their own way to the games. Now, in case I lost anyone, I don't mean the games at Notre Dame Stadium. I mean the ones in Arizona, New Jersey, Atlanta, etc.

For some reason the cheerleaders just don't seem to have the resources to be able to fly to each of these games (no big alumni grants for them). So the next best thing is wheels. In other words, while the students on campus were celebrating the football team's new No. 1 status, the cheerleaders were looking forward to a fourteen hour drive to cap off their week-end. And, of course, the University makes no effort to pay for this form of transportation either.

Need I remind the high echelons of the administration that the cheerleaders do indeed represent our University and might therefore receive more support than permission to sell pom-poms to raise money. Or maybe they'll let the cheerleaders walk to USC if they can't afford to drive (the fact is that they will fly there and to Alabama—it's too embarrassing for No. 1 Notre Dame to be on national TV and not have any cheerleaders at the game).

The fact that the squad is responsible for making all its hotel reservations, paying for its transportation and receives no financial help whatsoever seems to imply that the University cares to have no affection with a group of students that represents them every week, whether nationally or at home. But, who cares about that—the football team won and N.D. is number 1. It's just a matter of getting your priorities straight.

Gene Barba

Murphy errs

Dear Editor,

Concerning James Murphy's piece in The Observer ("Liberation in America, or Yet?"), I feel it needs to be explained. For you see, though the fact that the squad is responsible for making all its hotel reservations, paying for its transportation and receives no financial help whatsoever seems to imply that the University cares to have no affection with a group of students that represents them every week, whether nationally or at home. But, who cares about that—the football team won and N.D. is number 1. It's just a matter of getting your priorities straight.

The Observer

Box Q, Notre Dame, IN 46606

The Observer is an independent student published by the students of the University of Notre Dame du Lac and Saint Mary's College. It does not necessarily reflect the policies of the administration of either institution. The newspaper is reported as accurately and as objectively as possible. Editors represent the opinion of a majority of the Editorial Board. Commentaries, opinions, and letters are the views of their authors. Column space is available to all members of the community, and the free expression of varying opinions on campus, through letters, is encouraged.
Responding to critics who said Darkness at the Edge of Town was too dark, Bruce Springsteen said, “we’ve got a lot of lighter stuff in the can, but it just wasn’t the time.” With the release of The River, Springsteen apparently feels the time is now. Combined with the rest of his catalog, The River gives us the complete Springsteen, capturing for the first time on record the late 70s– early 80s rock ‘n’ roll facet of Springsteen which makes his live performances such an acknowledged celebrity. At the same time, some of his finest urban scenarios are also included.

Beginning with the Greetings LP, Springsteen and the E Street Band have progressively excised the band’s lighter side, such as “Spirit in the Night,” “Rosalita” or “Tenth Avenue Freeze-Out,” until by the Darkness album, only serious, intense tunes were included.

Meanwhile, Springsteen’s live shows continued to pay tribute to the band’s rock ‘n’ roll roots, doing enthusiastic, loyal covers of such hits as The Crystal’s “Then She Kissed Me,” Gary “US” Bonds’ “Quarter to Three,” Eddie Floyd’s “Raise You Hands” or Eddie Cochran’s “Summertime Blues.” On stage at Notre Dame two years ago, he teased, “Watch out I’m gonna do ‘Louie Louie.’” Then, as the crowd roared, he cracked out that familiar opening riff. That night, he also did The Animals’ “It’s My Life,” The Byrds’ “Eight Miles High” and The Boppers’ “Sweet Little Sixteen.”

The point here is that Springsteen’s music is not all stark, imposing landscapes, even though he does these perhaps better than anyone. His live shows depend just as heavily on the joyous, straight-up rockers, and the River display the ease with which the E Street Band can churn out this mode as well.

“Out in the Street” and “Crush on You” are prime examples of Springsteen’s facility in this style—neatly woven into a rock ‘n’ roll rhythm and riffs, but Springsteen makes it work anyway. “Out in the Street” focuses not on the dull tension of working a lousy job, but on the beauty and impatience of waiting for the whistle, and then the electricity and freedom of the big city street scene.

“Crush on You” is a swinging, upbeat rocker with every guitar cliché in the book, but Springsteen’s feverish shout and insistent pace capture a great deal of the genuine exuberance that doesn’t always translate so well onto vinyl. “You Can Look (But You Better Not Touch)” is a double-timed rave-up powered by Max Weinberg’s manic drumming, making this another rocker designed to be a live standout, even if it’s not as effective on record.

There’s also the “fraternity rock” number “Sherry Darling,” of which Springsteen said on his last tour, “the audience was always at least twice as loud as the band.” That’s the reason for the “party noises” in the back—there’s a harmlessness, an endless tune that the band has a great deal of fun with.

But there’s much more to The River than just party tunes. Springsteen uses the same musical tone, but adds his searing, forceful lyrics to create some of his finest, most compelling human portraits. “Point Blank” and “Jackson Cage” are two of Springsteen’s best tracks, utilizing the versatility of the band with differing arrangements for it. They also serve as good examples of Springsteen’s uncanny gift of wordplay and metaphors never more succinct than in this new Springsteen genre called neo-rock ‘n’ roll (as opposed to the classic rock ‘n’ roll of Springsteen). But as a critic, I am a little boy who wants to get away from the dump. In the other words, Bruce suffers from a drives his theme of escaping the new Springsteen genre called the emperor’s new clothes. The small boy who thus, most critics have little or nothing to say. The hordes of Bruce fans which line up to see each of his concerts, and thus, most critics have little or nothing to say. Such is the case

The River, Bruce rocks again!

On Independence Day, the Boss lauds the day he leaves home and his family, even though deep down he wants to get away from the dump. In other words, Bruce suffers from a chronic case of guilt. Why he just doesn’t go to a therapist instead of telling the record-buying public all his problems in moaning, mooselike tunes is certainly a mystery. Even more perplexing are the reactions of diehard Springsteen fans—“Gee, isn’t that wonderful,” they wail. A better word is self-indulgent.

The rockers aren’t. “I’m a Rocker” thunders along in one chord into oblivion, a part of that innovative new springsteen genre called “fraternity rock.” “Cadillac Ranch,” also a member of this new one tempos, neo-disco, simplistic style, gives tribute to a dumb rock art sculpture of old Caddies buried in the desert. Thank God we don’t have frats at Notre Dame.

On The River, Bruce succeeds in reducing his large and talented band almost to insubstantial. Clarence Clemmons’ sax roots pithetically here and there to remind us he’s still around, but for some inexplicable reason, he’s denied one of his patented solos heard ’round the world. Roy Bittan, the pianist who’s seen a lot of stage at Notre Dame two years ago, he teased, “Watch out I’m gonna do ‘Louie Louie.’” Then, as the crowd roared, he cracked out that familiar opening riff. That night, he also did The Animals’ “It’s My Life,” The Byrds’ “Eight Miles High” and The Boppers’ “Sweet Little Sixteen.”

The point here is that Springsteen’s music is not all stark, imposing landscapes, even though he does these perhaps better than anyone. His live shows depend just as heavily on the joyous, straight-up rockers, and the River display the ease with which the E Street Band can churn out this mode as well.

“Out in the Street” and “Crush on You” are prime examples of Springsteen’s facility in this style—neatly woven into a rock ‘n’ roll rhythm and riffs, but Springsteen makes it work anyway. “Out in the Street” focuses not on the dull tension of working a lousy job, but on the beauty and impatience of waiting for the whistle, and then the electricity and freedom of the big city street scene.

“Crush on You” is a rushing, upbeat rocker with every guitar cliché in the book, but Springsteen’s feverish shout and insistent pace capture a great deal of the genuine exuberance that doesn’t always translate so well onto vinyl. “You Can Look (But You Better Not Touch)” is a double-timed rave-up powered by Max Weinberg’s manic drumming, making this another rocker designed to be a live standout, even if it’s not as effective on record.

There’s also the “fraternity rock” number “Sherry Darling,” of which Springsteen said on his last tour, “the audience was always at least twice as loud as the band.” That’s the reason for the “party noises” in the back—there’s a harmlessness, an endless tune that the band has a great deal of fun with.

But there’s much more to The River than just party tunes. Springsteen uses the same musical tone, but adds his searing, forceful lyrics to create some of his finest, most compelling human portraits. “Point Blank” and “Jackson Cage” are two of Springsteen’s best tracks, utilizing the versatility of the band with differing arrangements for it. They also serve as good examples of Springsteen’s uncanny gift of wordplay and metaphors never more succinct than in this new Springsteen genre called neo-rock ‘n’ roll (as opposed to the classic rock ‘n’ roll of Springsteen). But as a critic, I am a little boy who wants to get away from the dump. In the other words, Bruce suffers from a drives his theme of escaping the new Springsteen genre called the emperor’s new clothes. The small boy who thus, most critics have little or nothing to say. Such is the case

The River, Bruce rocks again!

On Independence Day, the Boss lauds the day he leaves home and his family, even though deep down he wants to get away from the dump. In other words, Bruce suffers from a chronic case of guilt. Why he just doesn’t go to a therapist instead of telling the record-buying public all his problems in moaning, mooselike tunes is certainly a mystery. Even more perplexing are the reactions of diehard Springsteen fans—“Gee, isn’t that wonderful,” they wail. A better word is self-indulgent.

The rockers aren’t. “I’m a Rocker” thunders along in one chord into oblivion, a part of that innovative new springsteen genre called “fraternity rock.” “Cadillac Ranch,” also a member of this new one tempos, neo-disco, simplistic style, gives tribute to a dumb rock art sculpture of old Caddies buried in the desert. Thank God we don’t have frats at Notre Dame.

On The River, Bruce succeeds in reducing his large and talented band almost to insubstantial. Clarence Clemmons’ sax roots pithetically here and there to remind us he’s still around, but for some inexplicable reason, he’s denied one of his patented solos heard ’round the world. Roy Bittan, the pianist who’s seen a lot of...
Pianist Bolet to perform at O'Laughlin

The dazzling piano virtuoso Jorge Bolet will perform in concert November 11 in Laughlin Auditorium of Saint Mary's College at 8 p.m. Bolet's program for the evening will include Mendelssohn's "Songs Without Words," Opus 10; Schumann's three sets of Opus 9; Chopin's "Sonata in B flat minor," Opus 35; and Valse Impromptu," and "Hungarian Rhapsody No. 3" by Liszt.

Bolet has won extraordinary acclaim throughout the world both as a concert recitalist and soloist with orchestra. He chairs the Piano Department at the renowned Curtis Institute in Philadelphia previously headed by Josef Hofmann and Rudolf Serkin. Bolet is also known for his radio, television and movie appearances as well as for his best-selling recordings. His recording of Liszt Songs and Opera Transcriptions named "Greatest Hits of the 1850's" was one of the six best recordings named one of the six best recordings of 1972 by Down Beat.

Bolet began studies in his native Cuba at an early age and became a student of David Saperton at the Curtis Institute of Music when he was twelve. He graduated in 1934 with a major in orchestra. He chairs the student of David Saperton at the Curtis Institute of Music.

"Valse Impromptu," "Nocturne" and performances with Musica Viva have earned him the title of "Virtuoso of Bolet." His "Valse Impromptu," "Nocturne" and performances with Musica Viva have earned him the title of "Virtuoso of Bolet."

"Valse Impromptu," "Nocturne" and performances with Musica Viva have earned him the title of "Virtuoso of Bolet."

Rock Viet VI

I am happy to report that the response to my last quizz was, comparatively speaking, overwhelming. Twenty-two entries were received; of those, fourteen had all the answers correct (the other eight had at least eight of ten correct). The winner, whose name is from the correct entries, is Albert Emsley of Fair Hill. He will be the recipient of a fine book of "The Owl." If you would like to follow in the footsteps of Albert Emsley, you must write ten correct answers to today's quiz to the quiz referee by Monday.

This week's quiz is very simply explained. I will give you a list; you tell me what the elements of the list have in common. Most of these have very specific things in common, more than what may seem obvious.

The answers to last week's quiz are as follows: (1) Lynden Strayhorn. (2) "More Than a Woman" was "Misty Mountain High" by Led Zeppelin. (3) Elton John got their name from their telephone exchange letters; (4) The Jeff Bridges on a house 1972 was named Company; (5) A group that the Rolling Stones popularized was of the six best recordings of 1972 named "Greatest Hits of the 1850's." (6) The Hollies named themselves after Buddy Holly. (7) The Doors got their name from the Alouda Huxley book "The Doors of Perception." (8) John Tull invented the seed drill, and Ian Anderson honore him by using his name for his group; and (10) A group that the Warlocks was looking through the Oxford English Dictionary and came upon the words "Grateful Dead." "Tin Nory"

Features

Thursday, November 6, 1980 — page 9

Rock Viet VI

I am happy to report that the response to my last quizz was, comparatively speaking, overwhelming. Twenty-two entries were received; of those, fourteen had all the answers correct (the other eight had at least eight of ten correct). The winner, whose name is from the correct entries, is Albert Emsley of Fair Hill. He will be the recipient of a fine book of "The Owl." If you would like to follow in the footsteps of Albert Emsley, you must write ten correct answers to today's quiz to the quiz referee by Monday.

This week's quiz is very simply explained. I will give you a list; you tell me what the elements of the list have in common. Most of these have very specific things in common, more than what may seem obvious.

The answers to last week's quiz are as follows: (1) Lynden Strayhorn. (2) "More Than a Woman" was "Misty Mountain High" by Led Zeppelin. (3) Elton John got their name from their telephone exchange letters; (4) The Jeff Bridges on a house 1972 was named Company; (5) A group that the Rolling Stones popularized was of the six best recordings of 1972 named "Greatest Hits of the 1850's." (6) The Hollies named themselves after Buddy Holly. (7) The Doors got their name from the Alouda Huxley book "The Doors of Perception." (8) John Tull invented the seed drill, and Ian Anderson honore him by using his name for his group; and (10) A group that the Warlocks was looking through the Oxford English Dictionary and came upon the words "Grateful Dead." "Tin Nory"

Features

Thursday, November 6, 1980 — page 9

Rock Viet VI

I am happy to report that the response to my last quizz was, comparatively speaking, overwhelming. Twenty-two entries were received; of those, fourteen had all the answers correct (the other eight had at least eight of ten correct). The winner, whose name is from the correct entries, is Albert Emsley of Fair Hill. He will be the recipient of a fine book of "The Owl." If you would like to follow in the footsteps of Albert Emsley, you must write ten correct answers to today's quiz to the quiz referee by Monday.

This week's quiz is very simply explained. I will give you a list; you tell me what the elements of the list have in common. Most of these have very specific things in common, more than what may seem obvious.

The answers to last week's quiz are as follows: (1) Lynden Strayhorn. (2) "More Than a Woman" was "Misty Mountain High" by Led Zeppelin. (3) Elton John got their name from their telephone exchange letters; (4) The Jeff Bridges on a house 1972 was named Company; (5) A group that the Rolling Stones popularized was of the six best recordings of 1972 named "Greatest Hits of the 1850's." (6) The Hollies named themselves after Buddy Holly. (7) The Doors got their name from the Alouda Huxley book "The Doors of Perception." (8) John Tull invented the seed drill, and Ian Anderson honore him by using his name for his group; and (10) A group that the Warlocks was looking through the Oxford English Dictionary and came upon the words "Grateful Dead." "Tin Nory"
Center to hold stress workshop

A Stress Management workshop, offered by the Counseling Center, will begin tomorrow. The 2-semester workshop will examine the various aspects of life that lead to stress, as well as our thoughts and actions that make it more extreme. Special attention will be given to practicing methods for coping with and relieving stress, including training in relaxation techniques and self-monitoring thought and behavior. The workshop will meet tomorrow and next Friday from 1 to 4 p.m. The sessions are open to all students, faculty and staff. Call 1718 or come to the Counseling Center, room 400 Administration Bldg., to sign-up or for further information.

The Daily Crossword

ACROSS
1. Shiloh
4. Thin nads
9. Walk in water
13. A Gardner
14. Savour
15. Top actor
16. "Lucio di --"
18. Zella
19. Office item
20. Sleep genie
22. New Mexico art colony
24. -- Maleh
25. Virtue
26. Drummer's woes
27. More elite
35. Assignment award
37. Tarzan pal
38. Silent performer
40. Lank
43. Oldtime race
44. Abound
45. Tramp
46. Allen and Lawrence
48. Plus
50. Husbands
52. Ma Papas
53. Battler
55. Avatar of Vishnu
56. Golf clubs
61. American painter
66. Theaters award

DOWN
1. Impish
2. Alas, 1959
3. Heat reg.
4. College
5. Loading iron of sorts
6. From -- Z
7. Pain
8. Small housing
9. Tall ship
10. Style of furniture
11. Brazilian woman of rank
12. Verve
13. Overloads
14. John
15. Alarm

67. In (called)
69. Turner or Louise
70. Bolt
71. Chinese city
72. Attention
73. Grand, soap, or horse
74. Fabris, to friends
75. DOWN
76. Printers measure
42. Pel for Almer
47. Jeweled headpiece
49. Bahubali on ice
51. Former
56. Island near Italy
57. Clothes
58. Rose's husband
59. Trig word
60. Sand
62. Fed
64. Sign light
65. Attempt
66. Eden woman

Yesterday's Puzzle Solution:

All Rights Reserved
Throughout this month, Gene Corrigan, the Cavalier Athletics Director, has been a frequent sight on the University of Virginia's campus, engaging with students and faculty alike. His influence over the students reaches his fund-raising efforts as well. Corrigan wanted a building to handle the snow. By the time you get there in January, we'll already have a foot or so on the ground, and life goes on.

His influence over the students reaches his fund-raising efforts as well. Corrigan wanted a building to handle the snow. By the time you get there in January, we'll already have a foot or so on the ground, and life goes on.

Corrigan seemed more comfortable on the campus than he has anywhere else. His reputation precedes him, and students knew he was coming. The two have their obvious differences too. Corrigan was shocked to learn that students couldn't have kegs in the dorms. "Where do you have parties?" he asked.

Corrigan offered a tour of the campus. He seemed happy in his environment, and it seemed so happy with him. Why South Bend and Notre Dame?

Just as he was heading south on Route 29 through the majestic Shenandoah Valley, I couldn't understand why a man would want to leave all of that beauty behind. And after our interview was over, Corrigan offered a tour of the campus. He seemed so happy in his environment, and it seemed so happy with him. Why South Bend and Notre Dame?

"I've been writing and writing about Notre Dame. It's nothing extravagant, but the Recreation/General Recreation—much like Notre Dame's capsules, every other person we passed had a kind word for Gene Corrigan. "Gene, we're gonna miss you, but the best of luck to you. I hope Notre Dame realizes how lucky they are."

Sometimes Corrigan knew the well-wisher, but most were just your average Joe; a student—not necessarily an athlete, a teacher, a friend. And Corrigan had a moment and a kind word for every one.

What Gene Corrigan did for the University of Virginia cannot be measured only in new facilities or varsity sports. For the first time in the school's history, there is true pride in the athletic program. Corrigan is a football games is now more than just another chance to get drunk at the greatest party that the students could use for intramurals and athletics.

"Don't worry," I said. "The basketball and hockey teams will both be there. If you ask Digger and Lefty nicely, they might let you borrow a couple of able bodies." Ironically, Notre Dame will be playing Virginia in basketball at Chicago's Rosemont Horizon (Feb. 23). "There's no way I could go to that game," she said. "I could cheer against Ralph (Sampson) and Jeff (Lam) and the boys. But I couldn't cheer against Notre Dame." Her husband agreed.

Virginia's student newspaper, The Cavalier Daily, ran an editorial after Corrigan made his resignation official. The headline read simply, "The Luck of the Irish." The Irish, the school and its fans are indeed lucky to have Gene Corrigan in South Bend.

Thumbs up

Irish lucky to get Corrigan

Michael Ormman

Corrigan's transition from southern state school to small midwest private school—be easier than it may appear on the surface. "The two schools are very similar. Both schools have i.e., redly spirited student bodies. Both has—rich traditions of academic and, only recently at Virginia, athletic excellence. Both have big round administration buildings—U.Va.'s Rotunda and Notre Dame's Golden Dome. Both went through the same growing pains during the 1970s with the admission of women—Notre Dame in '72 and U.Va. in '70. The two have their obvious differences too. Corrigan was shocked to learn that students couldn't have kegs in the dorms. "Where do you have parties?" he asked.

Corrigan seemed more comfortable on the campus than he has anywhere else. His reputation precedes him, and students knew he was coming. The two have their obvious differences too. Corrigan was shocked to learn that students couldn't have kegs in the dorms. "Where do you have parties?" he asked.

Corrigan offered a tour of the campus. He seemed happy in his environment, and it seemed so happy with him. Why South Bend and Notre Dame?

"I've been writing and writing about Notre Dame. It's nothing extravagant, but the Recreation/General Recreation—much like Notre Dame's capsules, every other person we passed had a kind word for Gene Corrigan. "Gene, we're gonna miss you, but the best of luck to you. I hope Notre Dame realizes how lucky they are."

Sometimes Corrigan knew the well-wisher, but most were just your average Joe; a student—not necessarily an athlete, a teacher, a friend. And Corrigan had a moment and a kind word for every one.

What Gene Corrigan did for the University of Virginia cannot be measured only in new facilities or varsity sports. For the first time in the school's history, there is true pride in the athletic program. Corrigan is a football games is now more than just another chance to get drunk at the greatest party that the students could use for intramurals and athletics.

"Don't worry," I said. "The basketball and hockey teams will both be there. If you ask Digger and Lefty nicely, they might let you borrow a couple of able bodies."

Ironically, Notre Dame will be playing Virginia in basketball at Chicago's Rosemont Horizon (Feb. 23). "There's no way I could go to that game," she said. "I could cheer against Ralph (Sampson) and Jeff (Lam) and the boys. But I couldn't cheer against Notre Dame." Her husband agreed.

Virginia's student newspaper, The Cavalier Daily, ran an editorial after Corrigan made his resignation official. The headline read simply, "The Luck of the Irish." The Irish, the school and its fans are indeed lucky to have Gene Corrigan in South Bend.

Stacy Tornus, a freshman, has earned praise from coach Jim Johnson for his performance in the defensive backfield.
In polls

What's wrong with No. 1?

It could only happen at Notre Dame. There isn't another place on earth that people would be so upset about a number-one ranking. Anywhere else in the country, co-eds would be going bonkers, coaches would be tripping over their tongues and department stores would be pedaling Dan Devine dolls.

But here, students are wondering aloud how much being ranked number-one will hurt Notre Dame's chances to defeat Alabama. What terrible luck. What could we have done to deserve this?

That's very simple. The Notre Dame football team has worked so hard to deserve this. So the Irish sit atop the college football world, exactly where they deserve to be. What's so terrible about that?

Sure, there's an added burden that goes along with being the best in the land. But something tells me that nothing could make it any harder to defeat Alabama in Birmingham. And the friendly folks in Atlanta didn't wait for Notre Dame to rise to the number-one spot before unleashing their barrage of booze bottles and dead fish.

But there's something more important. This Notre Dame team oozes with character. Its won-lost record is proof enough of that. The story behind this team, though, goes much deeper than its 7-0 ledger. It started in August, when head coach Dan Devine announced his resignation.

Who would take his place? What kind of season could Notre Dame possibly hope for under a lame-duck coach? Things didn't calm down much when it came time for Devine and his staff to choose a starting quarterback.

Now is the time to enjoy the lofty ranking that Notre Dame's football team has worked so hard to attain. If the Irish are able to finish their season unbeaten and top-ranked, that's fine.

But if they don't, there is no reason that it should take the luster off what they have accomplished so far.

The story behind this team, though, goes much deeper than its 7-0 ledger. It started in August, when head coach Dan Devine announced his resignation.

Who would take his place? What kind of season could Notre Dame possibly hope for under a lame-duck coach? Things didn't calm down much when it came time for Devine and his staff to choose a starting quarterback.

But here, students are wondering aloud how much being ranked number-one will hurt Notre Dame's chances to defeat Alabama. What terrible luck. What could we have done to deserve this?

That's very simple. The Notre Dame football team has worked so hard to deserve this. So the Irish sit atop the college football world, exactly where they deserve to be. What's so terrible about that?

Sure, there's an added burden that goes along with being the best in the land. But something tells me that nothing could make it any harder to defeat Alabama in Birmingham. And the friendly folks in Atlanta didn't wait for Notre Dame to rise to the number-one spot before unleashing their barrage of booze bottles and dead fish.

But there's something more important. This Notre Dame team oozes with character. Its won-lost record is proof enough of that. The story behind this team, though, goes much deeper than its 7-0 ledger. It started in August, when head coach Dan Devine announced his resignation.

Who would take his place? What kind of season could Notre Dame possibly hope for under a lame-duck coach? Things didn't calm down much when it came time for Devine and his staff to choose a starting quarterback.

Now is the time to enjoy the lofty ranking that Notre Dame's football team has worked so hard to attain. If the Irish are able to finish their season unbeaten and top-ranked, that's fine.

But if they don't, there is no reason that it should take the luster off what they have accomplished so far.
Notre Dame hosts Tri-State

by Kelly Sullivan
Women's Sports Editor

Notre Dame will attempt to close out its regular season on Friday night when the volleyball squad hosts Tri-State College. Game time is set for 6 p.m. in the A.C. jiet.

The Irish battled Tri-State in their season opener, dropping a highly contested three-game match. But Notre Dame coach Sandy Vanslager believes her crew has come a long way since then.

"We made a lot of mistakes on fundamentals then, and we were constantly in the net. But I've seen a lot of improvement in the girls the past couple of months." What the Irish mentor feels her team must do this evening is keep their concentration and play aggressively off the net.

"Accomplishing those two objectives will guarantee us a win," she added.

The Irish fell to both Purdue-Calendar and Bethel in contests earlier this week. Purdue-Cal handed Notre Dame a 10-13, 4-13 decision, while the huso Pilots were 4-15, 14-16 victors.

"Defensively, those two matches were our best of the season," Vanslager offered. "The blocking was excellent, but we didn't position ourselves on the line well and we were not reacting to the ball."

Junior Jan Yurgalitis returned to action since sustaining a back injury last month. Vanslager cited her strong performance on both offense and defense this week.

Notre Dame, now 2-9, will start preparing for state tournament action after tonight's match. The Irish compete in the playoffs next weekend.

---

Tony Hunter (85) missed last week's Navy Game, but is listed as a probable start versus Tech. (Photo by John Macon.)

McGraw joins free agents

NEW YORK (AP) — Tig McGraw, one of the heroes of Philadelphia's rush to baseball's world championship last month, declared for the free agent registry draft yesterday, charging that the Phillies are not willing to pay him at the same level as the team's other top players.

McGraw and outfielder Steve Braun of the Toronto Blue Jays pushed to 52 the number of players declaring for free agency with the deadline for filing at midnight yesterday.

Only one other player, Texas pitcher Charlie Hough, was eligible to join the free agent list but the knuckleballer was reported close to signing a contract with the Rangers.

McGraw issued a statement to explain his situation.

"I have entered the free agent draft as of this afternoon, Nov. 5," it said. "My request to the Phillies was this: my contribution to the first world championship in 97 years was equal to that of any person or player on the team. I want to be in the norm with the salaries of these players.

To date, the Phillies have declined to make me a proposal of salary comparable to those salary levels of the other key players of the team. I didn't want this, but at this point there was no other choice."

The deadline — 10 days following the end of the World Series — was merely to declare for the draft. Players who filled still can sign with their teams until next Monday, three days before the draft takes place.

...Johnson

[continued from page 16]

Toran has given us a very sound unit.

"Tom Gibbons has been a very good leader. He has accepted his responsibilities well and helped to make things clearer to many of the players."

...Home

(continued from page 16)

I am reflecting on last season here at Notre Dame, Johnson seems very satisfied with what has occurred. "I have enjoyed Notre Dame immensely. It has to be one of the top schools in the country because it has some of the top people that I've been associated with. To tell you the truth though, I haven't had too much time to think about it, because I have plenty of other things on my mind, mostly Georgia Tech."

...Corrigan

(continued from page 16)

"I really didn't have a great perception of Notre Dame at all," he recalls of the days before he had any affiliation with the school. "In fact, I had almost none. I got mad because they were on television all the time... and won." But he added with a grin, "I wanted to get my school on.

"But I guess that the greatest thing that happened to me (to give me an impression of Notre Dame) was the trip out there and the chance to talk to some people about Notre Dame's feeling for athletics. It's just a proper one. That's what showed me completely - more than anything, because I really believe that the worst thing you can do to an athlete is pamper him.

"You have to keep athletics in focus, and who keeps it in focus better than Notre Dame? Really nobody - nobody does - and that's a great thing."

Corrigan will be working at Notre Dame during a very dynamic and transitional time in the school's history. The second coach will be leaving at the end of this season as will the athletic director. The President, Fr. Hesburgh and his Executive Vice President, Fr. Joyce, will be retiring in the not-too-distant future. Somehow, this man who never has had any direct affiliation with the University before, must fit into the picture.

"I hope I'm fitting in in order to sustain what's there, particularly the perspective on athletics because I think that's important at Notre Dame. I sensed that that's important to the student body and the alumni. Because of the great tradition, they can continue to be good.

"The other thing is sustaining a program during a time when costs are just... well you know what it's like driving a car and everything else. It's just real tough. Coming up with ways to do that without interfering with Notre Dame itself - academically or any other way; those are the things we'll be talking about and addressing when I get out there."

Holy Cross Fathers
University of Notre Dame

A community of faith and friendship where young men prepare to become Holy Cross priests.

For further information or vocational counseling with no obligation contact:
Rev. Andre Leveille, c.s.c.
Box 541
Notre Dame, Ind. 46556
219-283-6360

Prices Good
While Supply Lasts

Castillo White Label
Rum 1 Liter $5.39

Pabst Blue Ribbon
Beer 24-12 oz. Cans $6.69

Kamchatka Vodka 1 Liter $4.49

Bellows London
Dry Gin 1 Liter $4.99

Riunite Lambrusco
750 ml $2.59

Red White
Blue Beer
24-12 oz. Cans $5.98

3126 South Bend Ave.
Phone: 277-5611
ND Party Headquarters

Thursday, November 6, 1980 — page 13
Weaver nearing end?

NEW YORK (AP) - Mike Weaver, the World Boxing Association champion, returned quietly in triumph from South Africa yesterday and said he won't be fighting much longer.

"I promised my mother I would quit," said the 29-year-old Weaver who fought several years for grocery money before hitting the pot of gold.

"I'm not fighting much longer," said the ex-marine who made his first WBA title defense Oct. 25 when he knocked out South African Corrie Coetzee in the 11th round in the South African black homeland of Botswana.

"I want a fight in February, then a possible fight against Cooney and then Holmes and that's it. Three fights, that's it," Don Manuel, the manager who has helped turn Weaver's career around, said the determining factor on who Weaver's next opponent would be is money. Weaver, who as a substitute fought for a few hundred dollars or less in the first few years of a career that began in 1972, picked up a payday of about $2.5 million against Coetzee.

The two big paydays looming for Weaver are against Gerry Cooney, an unbeaten white heavyweight who is ranked No. 1 by both the WBA and the World Boxing Council, and, of course, against Larry Holmes, the WBC champion.

Weaver was stopped in the 12th round in a title fight against Holmes in 1979. Weaver was considered such an underdog that the three major television networks wouldn't buy the fight. "People tend to judge me by my record," said Weaver.

The record of Weaver, who lives in Los Angeles, was 18-8 going into the Holmes fight. But he gave Holmes a rough time and has won all four fights since, including a knockout of John Tate with 45 seconds left in the bout to win the WBA title last March 31.

"I think Larry Holmes has the right to say he is the heavy-weight champion of the world," said Weaver. "He beat me, but I feel I can beat him. I think I'm the best heavyweight in the world today."

Weaver certainly has come on as a fighter and said "it didn't just happen. He was 9-6 back in 1976 when he asked the California State Athletic Commission to get rid of his managers and was allowed to. He booked with Manuel and it's been a winning combination which has paid dividends for the one-time odd-job man who fought for extra money.

Basketball tickets available

Student basketball tickets may be picked up at the second floor ticket window of the ACC from 8:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. according to the following schedule: Seniors, Monday, Nov. 10; Juniors and graduate students, Tuesday, Nov. 11; Sophomores, Wednesday, Nov. 12; and Freshmen, Thursday, Nov. 13.

From Friday, Nov. 14 until Wednesday, Nov. 19 students who are not able to pick up tickets on scheduled days may get their tickets. Any tickets unclaimed by Nov. 19 will be forfeited by the student and a refund rendered.

There will be a limit of four ID's per pick up. Because of a high demand for tickets this game some students may have been lotteried into the bleacher section. A list of juniors with bleacher seats will be published in tomorrow's Observer.

Any student interested in purchasing tickets for the Nov. 20 game with the Polish National Team may do so at the Gate 10 box office from Nov. 10 to Nov. 14. On Nov. 17 unpurchased student tickets for that game will go on sale to the general public.

For The Benefit Of The Mentally Handicapped!

At The Notre Dame ACC
November 13, 1980 5 To 9:30 P.M.!
Army ticket refunds for Notre Dame or St. Mary's students who entered an individual game ticket for the October 18 game and did not pick that ticket are available in the form of cash refunds during the hours of 9-5 p.m. Monday through Friday at the Box Office Window. Students may pick up their refund during the month of November. The last day refunds will be issued will be Wednesday, November 26 (the day before Thanksgiving break). Presentation of your student ID card is required to obtain the cash refund.

The internal six-mile run will be held on Saturday, November 11 and Sunday, November 12 entirely on the Notre Dame campus utilizing the golf course, lakes and campus roads. Notre Dame undergraduates, graduate students and staff members are invited to participate for men and women in each category (undergraduate, graduate and faculty/staff). If you wish to run, you must come to the interhall office (C-229, C-201, C-222, C-101), complete the insurance and entry forms before Wednesday, November 12. Women interested in playing lacrosse should contact Nalla Byrne at 232-3565. Play is open to Notre Dame and St. Mary's women and no previous experience is necessary.

FOOTBALL

TA M E R T H U R S A T U R D A Y

TEAM STATISTICS ND OFF

TOTAL YARDS 2880 1644

Team Yards 263 54

Yards Per Play 4.8 3.8

PENALTIES-YARDS 3 5

FUMBLES-LOST 1 0

N O N O P P

RECEIVING

G NO YDS AVE TO LO

Hunt 6 20 267 13.1 73

Melcher 7 11 187 16.1 7

M. Martinez 11 5 46 2.7 7

Montaño 18 5 128 15.0 5

Van 6 9 88 15.6 24

Wayne 6 4 63 15.8 17

Sweeney 5 6 25 5.0 5

J. Stone 7 2 19 8.5 10

Baker 7 1 26 17.0 2

Chase 1 1 16 17.0 11

M. Berspohn 7 1 14 15.0 14

NOTRE DAME 7 23 137 18.8 4

OPPONENTS 48 1076 21.8 1

PUNTING

G NO YDS AVG 4

NOTRE DAME 9 41 13.7 1

OPPONENTS 2 6 3.0 1

PUNT RETURNS NO YDS AVG LOSSES

NOTRE DAME 7 99 14.1 0

OPPONENTS 16 160 10.0 0

FIELD GOALS

NOTRE DAME 2 2 100.0 0

OPPONENTS 6 6 100.0 0

SCORING

G PAT P.A.F. FG TP

Oliver 7 0-19 0-0 19-0 0

Hunt 7 1-19 0-0 19-0 0

J. Stone 7 1-19 0-0 19-0 0

Kash 3 0-19 0-0 19-0 0

Van 6 1-19 0-0 19-0 0

Wayne 6 0-19 0-0 19-0 0

SOCCER

RIDE TO AREA 10, 0-0-0-0, NO YDS

NOTRE DAME 7 20 8 11-21 0-0

OPPONENTS 16 16 10-25 0-0

Anybody going to or near Denver for Thanksgiving? One way trip. Call 324-1527.

Need 2 Ga Tech Student Tix for Air Force. Please call Mike of 324-9729.

Need a ticket to Ga Air Force. Call Larry, 324-1527.

Want to sell 12 6-5 25 14-34-4 0-0 1-0

Bskts.

Do you remember 1952? Rob does.

Do you remember 1952? Rob does.

Do you remember 1952? Rob does.

Do you remember 1952? Rob does.

Do you remember 1952? Rob does.
For Irish Johnson tutors defenses

by Mike DeWiek

Sports Writer

As Notre Dame enters the final stretch of the 1980 season, imposing schedule, it is beginning to show the typical post-summer observers that the team is gaining momentum at a furious pace. With the second season contest remaining, the Irish seemed to have built an atmosphere of genuine confidence.

Obviously, much of this confidence comes with the pleasant surprise provided by the offensive line and the steady play of freshman quarterback Blair Kiel, but Johnson, a vocal proponent of the Notre Dame team seems to be coming from its defensive units.

In tracking their efforts since the second game of the season against Missouri, Johnson sees steady improvement in all phases of its play. Whether it be his second-game interception against Iowa State, he says it's coming from its defensive unit.

"Bill has his own philosophy of discipline and the importance of winning football games." says Johnson. "We both realize the necessity of eliminating small mistakes in order to have a winning football team.

"He doesn't over-emphasize the money-making sports like football and basketball, although he realizes that few athletic programs could survive without their revenue. He loves all sports equally.

"Regarding the athletic programs, he feels that it's a 'we' activity in a surrounding where there aren't a whole lot of 'we' activities. I just think it's very important to do that.

"The other thing is that the institution has to want to do it. If the institution wants to want to do it - they want to have a reasonably broad program - then they've just got to figure out how to do it.

"As a sports writer, I think it's a great experience since I used to write with Tom DeSantis before coming to the University of Virginia. I really enjoy being a part of such a great academic experience.

"The thing that's great about being a sports writer is that you get to talk about the things that you love - everything from tennis to soccer to football. It really doesn't make any difference what it is. It's a great experience. I think it's a 'we' activity in a surrounding where there aren't a whole lot of 'we' activities. I just think it's very important to do that.

North Dakota State head coach Mike DeWiek has been at the forefront of the trend of athletic programs being the bread and butter of a school's economy. When the smoke had cleared, hockey had been reduced from 20 to 18 grants-in, the 221st season and Notre Dame began to compete with Title IX, offering its first scholarships in women's basketball. Yet there is really no permanent solution to the problems which arose last spring, and many hope that Corrigan will be able to do for Notre Dame what he did at Virginia - help the athletic department grow in the face of spiraling costs.

Corrigan's athletic philosophy wouldn't be complete without discussing the way a school like Notre Dame, or even Virginia for that matter, integrates academic and athletic excellence.

[continued on page 15]