Brosch discusses Jerusalem furor

By MARY AGNES CAREY

Staff Reporter

The possibility of Arabs and Jews living peacefully together in Jerusalem was the message of Ambassador Zvi Brosh, special advisor to the mayor of Jerusalem, to a large crowd in Haggar Hall last night.

"This belief is based on mutual and common progress," Brosh said, "it is not a utopian belief. We see the administration of Jerusalem as something to experiment with and adjust to the needs and necessities of all," he said.

Brosh, explaining "here on a very special mission," is part of the Jerusalem Committee which meets today and tomorrow with University President Fr. Theodore Hesburgh. Brosh said the group will "convene and look at what we're doing - take stock of the tremendous work that's been done in Jerusalem - peek into the looking glass and see what lies ahead."

Brosh said, "a firm hand and a clear mandate to get us back on the road economically" is the purpose of the upcoming line elections in Israel, and he added any economic recovery program must be "realistic and effective. At best, the economy will stay put."

The Ambassador noted, however, that Jerusalem "must preserve its unity as a city and its status as the sovereign capital of Israel; an overall purpose "that is shared by everyone."

Despite a temporary stalemate in settling economic and political issues with Egypt, Brosh views Jerusalem as "one bright light." According to Brosh, Jerusalem will "fire ahead" to raise the standard of living of the city's Arab inhabitants to "what Jewish inhabitants have enjoyed for 50 years," as well as the city's efforts to "renovate, renew, and rejuvenate" itself to become "a more beautiful city to live in and visit," he said.

Brosh noted Jerusalem's improvements in water distribution, drainage systems, and increased preservation and rebuilding of historic sights of all religions as some of the city's recent measures to improve life for Arabs in habitants. Brosh added that making "a city that is capable of a form 500,000 Christians coming to Jerusalem each year to worship at their holy places" as "the task we must enjoy."

Maintaining the "transcendency of day-to-day life," the ambassador explained, requires "new solutions to different problems every day," and he assured the Arab residents of Jerusalem "that this is not a passing fad." Brosh noted the extension of free education through high school for both Jewish and Arab children, with all schools governed by the Jordanian curriculum.

See BROSH, page 5

Drugs: Feds start shambles, no cash

Narcotic baron Nicky Barnes went to prison but yielded a mere pittance of his heroin fortune to the government. The wealth of the dissolved Black Tuna gang remained virtually intact. Yet in those cases and scores of others, the government had the legal right to claim cash, property and other assets acquired with drug money. Prosecutors, more intent upon winning criminal convictions of drug traffickers, have neglected the necessary procedural steps to seize assets.

Barnes, in the interest of protecting defendants' rights, have refused to freeze assets the government has attempted to seize. Smugglers, ever more sophisticated in international finance, have developed ingenious methods of shielding their fortunes beyond the reach of U.S. authorities. Justice Department and Drug Enforcement Administration officials say they are fixing some of the flaws in the seizure operation, but congressional critics remain skeptical. They expect to present the Reagan administration with recommendations for strengthening enforcement of the seizure laws.

The General Accounting Office, the congressional watchdog agency, is expected to complete a report this month detailing those recommendations. Among the proposals will be

Summit calls for war

TAIF, Saudi Arabia (AP) — The 37-nation Islamic summit displayed unity on the emotional issue of Jerusalem yesterday and rallied behind new calls for a "jihad" or "holy war" to expel the Holy City from Israeli control.

Both Morocco's moderate King Hassan and PLO guerrilla chief Yasir Arafat urged united action to regain sovereignty over Jerusalem.

After the speeches, Arabs dressed in a battle jacket and cheetah headbands - walked arm in arm with the North African monarch from the glittering $300 million conference hall.

However as the summit neared its end, differences remained over the handling of such divisive issues as the Iran-Iraq war and a resolution to condemn Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

Iran and Libya have boycotted the summit and Egypt and Afghanistan have been suspended from the 42-nation Islamic Conference.

In his speech, Hassan called the "jihad" as "moral and spiritual. It is not the bad and evil plans in a military campaign against the Jewish state.

Saudi Arabia's Crown Prince Fahd sounded a call, which has broad emotional appeal in the world's 800 million Muslims, last July after Israel's Parliament declared the annexation of Jerusalem part of its unified and "internal capital."

The eastern sector of Jerusalem, captured by Israel from Jordan in the 1967 Middle East War, is the site of Islam's third holiest shrine, the Al Aksa Mosque.

The summit's call is a threat of an Arab oil cut off and U.N. condemnation of the Israeli action caused 13 South American and European countries to move their embassies from Jerusalem to Tel Aviv.

The Moroccan monarch headed a committee that drafted the Islamic summit's anti-Israeli strategy and a "Jerusalem document" is expected to be unveiled today in the final session of the four-day summit.

In his speech, Hassan said Islamic leaders should have resorted to "jihad the "day Israel annexed Jerusalem."

The eastern sector of Jerusalem, captured by Israel from Jordan in the 1967 Middle East War, is the site of Islam's third holiest shrine, the Al Aksa Mosque.

The summit's call is a threat of an Arab oil cut off and U.N. condemnation of the Israeli action caused 13 South American and European countries to move their embassies from Jerusalem to Tel Aviv.

The Moroccan monarch headed a committee that drafted the Islamic summit's anti-Israeli strategy and a "Jerusalem document" is expected to be unveiled today in the final session of the four-day summit.

In his speech, Hassan said Islamic leaders should have resorted to "jihad the "day Israel annexed Jerusalem.

The eastern sector of Jerusalem, captured by Israel from Jordan in the 1967 Middle East War, is the site of Islam's third holiest shrine, the Al Aksa Mosque.

The summit's call is a threat of an Arab oil cut off and U.N. condemnation of the Israeli action caused 13 South American and European countries to move their embassies from Jerusalem to Tel Aviv.

The Moroccan monarch headed a committee that drafted the Islamic summit's anti-Israeli strategy and a "Jerusalem document" is expected to be unveiled today in the final session of the four-day summit.

In his speech, Hassan said Islamic leaders should have resorted to "jihad the "day Israel annexed Jerusalem.

The eastern sector of Jerusalem, captured by Israel from Jordan in the 1967 Middle East War, is the site of Islam's third holiest shrine, the Al Aksa Mosque.

The summit's call is a threat of an Arab oil cut off and U.N. condemnation of the Israeli action caused 13 South American and European countries to move their embassies from Jerusalem to Tel Aviv.

The Moroccan monarch headed a committee that drafted the Islamic summit's anti-Israeli strategy and a "Jerusalem document" is expected to be unveiled today in the final session of the four-day summit.

In his speech, Hassan said Islamic leaders should have resorted to "jihad the "day Israel annexed Jerusalem.

The eastern sector of Jerusalem, captured by Israel from Jordan in the 1967 Middle East War, is the site of Islam's third holiest shrine, the Al Aksa Mosque.

The summit's call is a threat of an Arab oil cut off and U.N. condemnation of the Israeli action caused 13 South American and European countries to move their embassies from Jerusalem to Tel Aviv.

The Moroccan monarch headed a committee that drafted the Islamic summit's anti-Israeli strategy and a "Jerusalem document" is expected to be unveiled today in the final session of the four-day summit.

In his speech, Hassan said Islamic leaders should have resorted to "jihad the "day Israel annexed Jerusalem.

The eastern sector of Jerusalem, captured by Israel from Jordan in the 1967 Middle East War, is the site of Islam's third holiest shrine, the Al Aksa Mosque.

The summit's call is a threat of an Arab oil cut off and U.N. condemnation of the Israeli action caused 13 South American and European countries to move their embassies from Jerusalem to Tel Aviv.

The Moroccan monarch headed a committee that drafted the Islamic summit's anti-Israeli strategy and a "Jerusalem document" is expected to be unveiled today in the final session of the four-day summit.

In his speech, Hassan said Islamic leaders should have resorted to "jihad the "day Israel annexed Jerusalem.

The eastern sector of Jerusalem, captured by Israel from Jordan in the 1967 Middle East War, is the site of Islam's third holiest shrine, the Al Aksa Mosque.
Legislation that would remove 2 million people from food stamp program, for a savings of $495 million in 1982, was introduced yesterday by Sen. William Proxmire.

Proxmire's bill would restrict the number of people eligible to participate in the program by reducing the amount of money the government disregards in computing an applicant's income.

President Reagan is likely to lift the remaining food stamps today, a White House official said yesterday. The action could raise gasoline prices as much as 12 cents a gallon while adding $7 billion to the federal treasury through increased tax revenues collected from the oil companies. The White House had planned to announce the action yesterday, according to a White House source who asked not to be identified, but held off at the last minute because most of the day was devoted to the arrival of the hostages freed from Iran. About 25 percent of all domestic oil and all gasoline and propane are under the price controls imposed nine years ago. Their removal began in June 1979 after President Jimmy Carter announced a new program in April 1979 that would have lifted all controls by Sept. 30, 1981. The controls had been imposed by President Richard M. Nixon as part of his wage and price control program and were continued through several periods of oil shortages.

A power struggle between Iran's desegregation-minded hardliners and President Bani-Sadr's secular moderates escalated yesterday, with the president charging that opponents had twice plotted to assassinate him in the past two months. Bani-Sadr's supporters attacked and ransacked their Islamic Republican Party's headquarters in the northeastern city of Mashhad, chanting "close the imperialist gates," on November 4, 1979. The hostages were taken.

A turning point occurred this past December when one board member, in the name of fairness, leaked to the newspapers what he believed to be the final outline for desegregating the school system. Later, when questioned about this disclosure, Scamman simply said that it was only one of four possible options. Needless to say, this evasive answer only added fuel to the already out-of-control fire. It is important to realize that James Scamman was earnestly working for the good of the community. He failed, though, to understand the complexities of human nature and that too much change at one time will inevitably result in a social paradox. People do not like to feel cornered; and in this particular case, the parents of South Bend school children felt threatened by Scamman's vision of the future. Not only did Scamman want to successfully desegregate the schools, but he desired to change the overall structure of the South Bend education system as well. The modification of the structure would center around three changes: alternative schools (open classrooms, diversity of class selection, etc.), the boycott of the "grade separata structure" (that is, grades K-5 would be changed to K-8 and so on), and finally, the desire for declining enrollment so some of the schools would have to be permanently closed. Parents simply became scared.

The school board voted the final vote on the plan to be replaced by a boycott of K-8, yet things looked quite bleak for any kind of settlement. They had set Jan. 26 as the final day to bar public opinion on the desegregation options, however, this date was delayed due to the increasing wide-spread plea of "No Public Input." The final vote has been moved to Feb. 26. The school board feels ample time for the public to voice their opinions. Whether this month delay guarantees any sell-commitments to a desegregation plan remains to be seen and heard. What boils down to is whether South Bend can get back on its feet again.

In celebration of freedom, the 52 hostages delivered from Iranian bondage took the salute of their countrymen and effective citizenship.

The hostages were no words better than the simplest to express the feelings of the nation: "Welcome home." "Our flight to freedom is now complete," reported Scamman. The beginning of the mission to release the hostages was taken. "Mr. President, I give you ... 53 Americans who will always remember the hospitality of our country and who for whom a prayer of thanksgiving for the way in which this crisis has strengthened the spirit and resilience and strength that is the mark of a truly free country." - AP

In celebration of freedom, the 52 hostages delivered from Iranian bondage took the salute of their countrymen yesterday. President Reagan and his hardline associates with a vow of "swift and effective retribution" should terrorists ever again seize American citizens. From a platform draped with an American flag for each of the former hostages, Reagan said the world must understand that "there are limits to our patience." Rejoicing in the returns of the hostages, freed just as he took office a week ago, Reagan said there were no words better than the simplest to express the feelings of the nation: "Welcome home." "Our flight to freedom is now complete," reported Scamman. The beginning of the mission to release the hostages was taken. "Mr. President, I give you ... 53 Americans who will always remember the hospitality of our country and who for whom a prayer of thanksgiving for the way in which this crisis has strengthened the spirit and resilience and strength that is the mark of a truly free country." — AP

Cloudy in the morning and remaining partly cloudy through the afternoon. High in the low 30s. Cloudy again at night with a low in the mid 20s. Occasional snow showers and cold tomorrow. High in the upper 30s. — AP

Plan? What plan?

Throughout the past two decades, the subject of integration has caused much consternation in American society. This issue, which includes abolishing racial segregation in public schools, has reached a crisis point, which is the linewall with the over-publicized cases in Boston and Framingham. The only option that has made that the previous stab at desegregation has garnered support, is the proposal put forward by the President. Invariably, the affected communities will split. Feelings and attitudes that were thought to be nonexistent will suddenly surface and the issue develops not into individuals discussing a problem but one of a race pitted against another race.

Desegregation finally surfaced in the classic case of Brown v. the Board of Education of Topeka, Kan. in 1954, in which the Supreme Court ruled that "separate but equal" was an illegal practice.

Brown vs. the Board of Education

Wednesday, January 28, 1981 — page 2

The Observer

The Turning point occurred this past December when one board member, in the name of fairness, leaked to the newspapers what he believed to be the final outline for desegregating the school system. Later, when questioned about this disclosure, Scamman simply said that it was only one of four possible options. Needless to say, this evasive answer only added fuel to the already out-of-control fire. It is important to realize that James Scamman was earnestly working for the good of the community. He failed, though, to understand the complexities of human nature and that too much change at one time will inevitably result in a social paradox. People do not like to feel cornered; and in this particular case, the parents of South Bend school children felt threatened by Scamman's vision of the future. Not only did Scamman want to successfully desegregate the schools, but he desired to change the overall structure of the South Bend education system as well. The modification of the structure would center around three changes: alternative schools (open classrooms, diversity of class selection, etc.), the boycott of the "grade separata structure" (that is, grades K-5 would be changed to K-8 and so on), and finally, the desire for declining enrollment so some of the schools would have to be permanently closed. Parents simply became scared.

The school board voted the final vote on the plan to be replaced by a boycott of K-8, yet things looked quite bleak for any kind of settlement. They had set Jan. 26 as the final day to bar public opinion on the desegregation options, however, this date was delayed due to the increasing wide-spread plea of "No Public Input." The final vote has been moved to Feb. 26. The school board feels ample time for the public to voice their opinions. Whether this month delay guarantees any sell-commitments to a desegregation plan remains to be seen and heard. What boils down to is whether South Bend can get back on its feet again.

In celebration of freedom, the 52 hostages delivered from Iranian bondage took the salute of their countrymen yesterday. President Reagan and his hardline associates with a vow of "swift and effective retribution" should terrorists ever again seize American citizens. From a platform draped with an American flag for each of the former hostages, Reagan said the world must understand that "there are limits to our patience." Rejoicing in the returns of the hostages, freed just as he took office a week ago, Reagan said there were no words better than the simplest to express the feelings of the nation: "Welcome home." "Our flight to freedom is now complete," reported Scamman. The beginning of the mission to release the hostages was taken. "Mr. President, I give you ... 53 Americans who will always remember the hospitality of our country and who for whom a prayer of thanksgiving for the way in which this crisis has strengthened the spirit and resilience and strength that is the mark of a truly free country." — AP

Cloudy in the morning and remaining partly cloudy through the afternoon. High in the low 30s. Cloudy again at night with a low in the mid 20s. Occasional snow showers and cold tomorrow. High in the upper 30s. — AP
St. Catherines' Medal

SMC honors achievement

By LINDA WEEKS
News Staff

Each year, Saint Mary's College awards the St. Catherine's Medal to an outstanding sophomore or junior student to recognize unusual undergraduate achievement and to give encouragement and incentive during the middle years of undergraduate study.

This award is sponsored by Kappa Gamma Pi, the National Catholic Honor Society with which Saint Mary's is affiliated.

Each January, the Committee on Academic Standards invites members of the Saint Mary's community to nominate those students who best exemplify the high ideals of Catholic womanhood. The committee gathers information on the candidates and invites each girl to reply to her nomination. According to Mrs. Marcy, Academic Affairs Director, it is often difficult to get the candidates to reply because "they usually don't like to toot their own horn." The committee carefully reviews each candidate and selects a winner on the basis of academic achievement and service to church, college, and civil community.

The committee announces its decision in the early spring, and the winner receives the St. Catherine's Medal at the Honors Awards Convocation at the end of the year.

Patricia Burke, now a senior, received the 1980 St. Catherine's Medal for her outstanding academic achievements and her involvement in several charitable organizations. Patricia, a residence advisor in Regina Hall, is involved in CILA, helps students prepare for the Ireland Program, and has been involved in the Urban Plunge program. Women like Patricia illustrate the ideals and values symbolized in the St. Catherine's Medal.
Iran: is it really over?

Anthony Walton

It is also necessary, however, to look at what might have happened had the hostage crisis been handled differently. One possible solution might have been to hand down a deadline to the Iranians, which if not complied with would have resulted in the bombing of a city or a strategic facility. This would have probably resulted in the hostages being killed, and then the U.S. would have been left with only a revenge alternative of doing any good to kill a lot of innocent Iranians. So again, I think that Carter’s handling of the situation was prudent. Besides this, the failure of the rescue mission illustrated the problems involved with any quick strike military retaliation in this specific instance.

Another consideration is the shrewd manipulation of many facets of the situation, especially the media, by the Iranian government. They probably would not have been so much as a blip on a battlefield, but they were a formidable psychological foe. For example, consider the Christmas videotape of the hostages. Just as the pressure was building for another military excursion, the Iranians injected a factor of humanity into the situation. Until then, the media had been used to intimidate and coerce the U.S.; now the captors were using it to seduce and turn the American public. We saw the hostages through the human being of 52 reasons to make Iran, and it had become a key of any kind of life—squeezing the action because we had come to know the hostages as people, and they assumed an almost neighborly role.

This was a master stroke by the Iranians, and at the risk of sounding like a Commie basher, I think the KGB was in on it, because it was classic television psychology and propaganda.

I hope the U.S. learned a few things from the crisis, most importantly that we can’t trust our “friends.” No country really came out of the situation to aid, and what token actions that were preferred came after coercion. Every one of the traditional “allies” feared offending either the Arabs or the Iranians.

At present, this shows a foreboding light super to be word “alliance.” If nations allow the oil question to dictate foreign policy then that will be a new era of “every nation for itself” that will undermine any attempt at unified Western action. Perhaps this should be the strongest lesson of the crisis, as it was taught before to no avail during the Arab Oil Embargo. The industrial West has to free itself from Middle East oil dependence or else. What will it take to drive this fact home?

Another lesson that should not be lost in the rhetoric of the crisis and its solution is in how to avoid a repeat in the future. The U.S. cannot afford to overlook the kinds of problems that caused the crisis. The best prevention would be to develop better intelligence operations in order to be more aware of changing political climates in upsetting countries. (The CIA, however, should never again be allowed to meddle in the affairs of another country.)

The U.S. cannot be held or considered responsible for unpopular rulers like the shah. There is potential for a return in several countries. What would happen if leftist (or rightist) guerrillas in El Salvador seized the embassy in order to bring down the government? It would be more prudent to let developments in countries take their own course rather than courting possible retribution by supporting unpopular regimes.

Also, this is more desirable than relying upon military brushtuiues to insure security. In the Iranian instance strong military action would not have accomplished much more than to solidify Arab and Iranian resistance, and most likely it would have brought the Soviets into the equation. They would have liked nothing better than to have an excuse to send some adventurers into Iran. Military might is no longer a panacea. (This raises another interesting question as to what good are nuclear weapons when military needs are more likely to require quick “hot-shot” flexibility.)

All in all, I’m very glad that, if this had happened, it happened with Carter in control rather than Reagan. If Reagan had been president then, a good number of us would probably be in Tehran cradling M-16s. Something else occurred to me while taking in all the hoopla surrounding the return of the hostages: I wish people would leave them alone and not try to turn them into heroes or villains. As a psychologist Herbert Gold said, they are not heroes, they are victims. I think they need their privacy to ease their return to normal a life as possible, and they don’t need People, National Enquirer type stories for that matter, prying into their lives. But, these days the country needs something to cheer about.

I think, however, that if there were any heroes involved, they were the eight men who died in the rescue mission, and one very maligned president, Jimmy Carter.

Anthony Walton appears each Wednesday on The Observer’s editorials page.
Sure to meet

SURE (Students United for Responsible Energy) will hold an organizational meeting tonight at 6:30 p.m. in the Lafayette Ballroom. All are invited to attend.

McBrien to discuss justice

NOTRE DAME, Indiana — Rev. Richard F. McBrien, chairman of the theology department at the University of Notre Dame, will discuss "Judicialization of Trade Law" Wednesday, Jan. 28th and Thursday, Jan. 29th from 6:00 to 9:00 PM in ballroom 2nd floor La Fortune.

Classes begin the week of February 2nd

Weekly Crossword

The Daily Crossword

©1981 by Chicago Tribune-NY News Syndic. All Rights Reserved

MOULARITY

The way she loved knives... The way she loved knives... The way she loved knives... The way she loved knives...

MOLARITY

The way she loved knives... The way she loved knives... The way she loved knives... The way she loved knives...

MOLARITY

The way she loved knives... The way she loved knives... The way she loved knives... The way she loved knives...

MOLARITY

The way she loved knives... The way she loved knives... The way she loved knives... The way she loved knives...

MOLARITY

The way she loved knives... The way she loved knives... The way she loved knives... The way she loved knives...

MOLARITY

The way she loved knives... The way she loved knives... The way she loved knives... The way she loved knives...

MOLARITY

The way she loved knives... The way she loved knives... The way she loved knives... The way she loved knives...

MOLARITY
continued from page 6
Little more depth at the guard position since Deb Henley has been coming around, but that's it.

Daffinio feels that the guard spot is indeed a crucial one, and he points to Notre Dame's senior captain, Maggie Lally, as the key to Irish success.

"I think Shari (Marvey) is an excellent player, and they have some good freshmen, but Maggie is the one who has to do it in the clutch," he says. "She is their leader on and off the floor and the key to the team."

Going up against the 5-0 Laffs will be Saint Mary Maureen O'Brien.

continued from page 1

riculums (allowing more job opportunities), as well as the introduction of adult education as important measures taken to benefit Arab residents.

Brosh stated "hardly any terrorism" existed in the city, and said the "threat of terrorism hangs more over the Arab population than the Jewish population." The ambassador noted that although no Arab has been a member of the Jerusalem city council due to fears of "exposing a threat to the city's tranquility." Arab residents still discuss issues and concerns with city leaders through various committees. "The Arabs are not exposed to the glare of the cameras," he said.

According to Brosh, Jerusalem can be viewed as "a pattern that proves co-existence between Jews and Arabs is not only possible but beneficial for both. Together we can find a way," he said. "For Jerusalem to remain the united capital of Israel and give Arabs, in their inhabitation as a minority, every possible control over their own lives."

Brosh responded to audience questions concerning several issues in an inquiry about the future population of Jerusalem. Brosh explained that the city's population by the year 2000 will not exceed 650,000 (the current population is 400,000) in order to maintain Jerusalem as a city one may "drive through."

Noting the difficulty of population control, Brosh admitted that Jerusalem has "urban problems like any other city."

Answering a question about Jerusalem's plans for its Arab residents, Brosh repeated the importance of allowing the Arabs to run their lives as independently as possible.

Concerning the lack of Arab residents in city government, the ambassador noted the Arab's fear of "very acute terrorism" as the major reason. Brosh, commenting on the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO), stated the PLO endorses both terrorism and "the elimination of Israel."

Today's opening session of the Jerusalem Committee begins at 4 p.m. in the Center for Continuing Education and is open to the public.

...Preview

...Brosh

MICHIGAN SNO-N-GO REPORTS
Snow, ski, snowmobile and road reports 24 hours a day. Free literature available.

Call toll-free 800-248-5700

JUDO - "THE GENTLE WAY" equals self defense & sport & conditioning
All beginners or ranked ND-SMC students and faculty welcome.
Black belt instruction.
sunday 2:00 pm  monday 6:00 pm
starts SUNDAY JANUARY 25.
2nd floor Rockne bldg.
call Mark 3303 or John 8471

MARDI GRAS HALL BOOTH CHAIRMEN
MANDATORY MEETING!
7:30 on Thursday, Jan. 29th
Lafortune Little Theater at Please be on time.
Bring pencil and paper.

NOTRE DAME STUDENT UNION
SPRING BREAK IN DAYTONA BEACH
MARCH 13 - 22, 1981
$207
$195

TRIP INCLUDES
• Round trip motor coach transportation on first class charter coaches leaving the campus Friday evening March 13 and traveling straight through with plenty of partying to Daytona Beach, arriving the following day. The return trip departs the following Sat. in the afternoon, and arrives back on campus the next day.
• A full seven nights accommodations at the Plaza Hotel of Daytona Beach, Florida.
• A great time in Daytona with special parties and activities.
• Optional trip to Disney World available.
• All taxes and gratuities.

SIGN UP NOW AT THE TICKET OFFICE IN THE LA FORTUNE BUILDING
8:00 a.m. - 5:00 p.m. MON.-FRI.
OR CALL 283-3031 (after five 283-6283)
NOTICES

FLOAT TIP: THE OTHER IS A BLUE BANANA WITH THE WORD IHOP MONOGRAM ON IT. HIGH PERSON VALUE. PLEASE CALL 435-4509

FOR RENT

Home for rent: second semester and home school year. Ideal condition, close to campus, partially furnished. For info call 287-8637 6 a.m.

FOR SALE

Lost and Found

For Rent: 3 BR in 2-story house on Center St. $158 per month, includes heat, hot water, use of kitchen and living room. Includes one roomate. Call: 133-6730.

List blue booking, PLEASE CALL AT 233-6730.

Lost: 3-year-old, 4-foot therapy dog. Missing from Hughes. Please call 335-4509.

FOR RENT

House for rent: one bedroom, two blocks from campus. 277-5024; 280-0595. Please call for info.

Wanted

Harley Davidson. B.S.U. want. Call 335-4509.

WANTED

Lost: cross, silver, 30th birthday present. PLEASE CALL 233-6730.

PERSONALS

Table: Crystal tickets. Want a couple of these in 6 or 7 weeks. Call 335-4509.

Imagine yourself designing a sonar system that can locate any ship in the ocean.

You can do it at Hughes Ground Systems Group. We're a leader in sonar signal processing and ground-based 3-D navigation systems. We've developed microprocessors you can hold in the palm of your hand and a system that safeguards an entire continent.

We offer one of the largest continuing education programs in the country and a world of other benefits.

Imagine yourself at Hughes.

We'll be on campus February 4

See your placement office for an appointment.

At Hughes, your future is limited only by your imagination.

Hughes Aircraft Company, Ground Systems Group, P.O. Box 3310, Fullerton, CA 92634
In ND-SMC series

Belles seek first victory

By BETH HUFFMAN
Sports Editor

Saint Mary's will play host this evening to the University of Miami basketball team in the Angie Atletiac Facility at 7:30 p.m. The Irish hold a 70-38 record of Win-Loss in the ACC.

"They think they have an edge at home," says Mary DiStanislao, who is in her first year as the Irish heir. "They'll be psyched up." But, "the Ferris third-year coach

Jerry Dallessio, does not see the home court as an advantage.

"Most of the Notre Dame shooters, as far as I can see, aren't backboard shooters," says
Dallessio, whose team is 5-2 in the ACC.

Dillanos, whose squad is 6-8 in the ACC, says his players are "not backboard shooters" as tiling a possible
"perceptual problem" for his squad.

The Ferris third-year coach

The ACC hardwood should thus be a welcome sight for the Irish, who play nine of their remaining twelve regular season contests at home.

Book LAG — Notre Dame obviously had academically in mind when it piloted this basketball season. With a weekend trip to North Carolina State and a game against Boston College on Saturday, the Irish will catch up on some much needed rest by taking today off. The Irish coach is leery of Saturday's game, saying, "It's a credit to Digger and the team like us consistently and intelligently.

Irish bleed Big Red, 80-67

By GARY GRASSEY
Associate Sports Editor

As freshman student-body favorite Cecilio Buckler's off-balance
19-foot jumper fell through the net with 5:02 left to play, the Notre Dame basketball team erupted with a scored and a basket by Sluby, and Digger Phelps, in a rare display of coupable delight, just sat back and smiled.

The Notre Dame coach and his squad were as happy as last night's dream. Phelps was the type of player to get up against to get ready for things coming up.

Digger told the assembled media Saturday afternoon in College Park, Md.

Phelps was the type of player to get up against to get ready for things coming up.

Digger told the assembled media Saturday afternoon in College Park, Md.

Digger told the assembled media Saturday afternoon in College Park, Md.

Digger told the assembled media Saturday afternoon in College Park, Md.

Digger told the assembled media Saturday afternoon in College Park, Md.

Digger told the assembled media Saturday afternoon in College Park, Md.

Digger told the assembled media Saturday afternoon in College Park, Md.

Digger told the assembled media Saturday afternoon in College Park, Md.

Digger told the assembled media Saturday afternoon in College Park, Md.

Digger told the assembled media Saturday afternoon in College Park, Md.

Digger told the assembled media Saturday afternoon in College Park, Md.

Digger told the assembled media Saturday afternoon in College Park, Md.

Digger told the assembled media Saturday afternoon in College Park, Md.

Digger told the assembled media Saturday afternoon in College Park, Md.

Digger told the assembled media Saturday afternoon in College Park, Md.