Reagan abolishes wage council

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, saying there had been "a great deal of misinformation in the country," announced Thursday he is abolishing the Council on Wage and Price Stability and prohibiting federal agencies from implementing new regulations for 60 days.

In an opening statement at his first new conference since taking office, Reagan said the Council on Wage and Price Stability, which administered the Carter administration's anti-inflation program "has been totally ineffective in controlling inflation and has imposed unnecessary burdens on labor and business."

As for budget cuts, Reagan said no area of government will be exempt and he added that "the time has come where there has to be a change in direction in this country."

"We have lived beyond our means," he said. "We must gain control of this inflationary spiral."

Reagan said his administration would be cutting back on regulations pertaining to the political future of Jerusalem.

Jerusalem Committee confirms civic unity

By MIKE O'BRIEN
Staff Reporter

Members of the Jerusalem Committee yesterday released a statement confirming the indivisibility of the ancient city and calling for "increased delegation of municipal functions" to its local communities.

Jerusalem, however, is not going to be put in a terrible squeeze. There could be a lot of farmers going out of business this year because they don't have the money up front.

And the harried consumer?

"In terms of actual cost of production, energy is a very small portion," Lutton said. "When you consider the cost of production through the entire food chain (from planting the crop to selling it at the supermarket), energy accounts for only 2 percent of the cost. Even if the price of gasoline and diesel fuel goes up 40 percent, that would mean only a 5 percent increase.

Then no big deal, right? Wrong," Lutton said. "The supermarket people and others in the food chain see this (fuel) increase and they automatically say, 'We've got to raise prices.' We see an awful lot of price gouging going on (in situations like this)."

But the cost of energy is a different story down on the farm.

Lutton said energy makes up 10 percent of the cost of operating a farm. He said many farmers won't feel the pinch immediately because they've stockpiled fuel for spring, but summer and fall harvests are a different story.

v

Gasoline prices still rising

By ROBERT MACY
Associated Press Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Amateur oil speculators, bent on 20 percent interest rates and roller-coaster gains in the price of a barrel of oil, are about to take another blow — in the gas tank.

A U.S. Department of Agriculture economist predicted yesterday that regular gasoline would be selling for $1.10 to $1.70 a gallon by the end of 1981 — a hike of 25 to 40 percent over current prices.

"The effect on net farm income is anybody's guess," said Tom Lutton, an economist for the USDA energy research group at its National Economics Division in Washington.

Reagan abolishes wage council

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, saying there had been "a great deal of misinformation in the country," announced Thursday he is abolishing the Council on Wage and Price Stability and prohibiting federal agencies from implementing new regulations for 60 days.

In an opening statement at his first new conference since taking office, Reagan said the Council on Wage and Price Stability, which administered the Carter administration's anti-inflation program "has been totally ineffective in controlling inflation and has imposed unnecessary burdens on labor and business."

As for budget cuts, Reagan said no area of government will be exempt and he added that "the time has come where there has to be a change in direction in this country."

"We have lived beyond our means," he said. "We must gain control of this inflationary spiral."

Reagan said his administration would be cutting back on regulations pertaining to the political future of Jerusalem.

Jerusalem Committee confirms civic unity

By MIKE O'BRIEN
Staff Reporter

Members of the Jerusalem Committee yesterday released a statement confirming the indivisibility of the ancient city and calling for "increased delegation of municipal functions" to its local communities.

Jerusalem, however, is not going to be put in a terrible squeeze. There could be a lot of farmers going out of business this year because they don't have the money up front.

And the harried consumer?

"In terms of actual cost of production, energy is a very small portion," Lutton said. "When you consider the cost of production through the entire food chain (from planting the crop to selling it at the supermarket), energy accounts for only 2 percent of the cost. Even if the price of gasoline and diesel fuel goes up 40 percent, that would mean only a 5 percent increase.

Then no big deal, right? Wrong," Lutton said. "The supermarket people and others in the food chain see this (fuel) increase and they automatically say, 'We've got to raise prices.' We see an awful lot of price gouging going on (in situations like this)."

But the cost of energy is a different story down on the farm.

Lutton said energy makes up 10 percent of the cost of operating a farm. He said many farmers won't feel the pinch immediately because they've stockpiled fuel for spring, but summer and fall harvests are a different story.

v

Gasoline prices still rising

By ROBERT MACY
Associated Press Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Amateur oil speculators, bent on 20 percent interest rates and roller-coaster gains in the price of a barrel of oil, are about to take another blow — in the gas tank.

A U.S. Department of Agriculture economist predicted yesterday that regular gasoline would be selling for $1.10 to $1.70 a gallon by the end of 1981 — a hike of 25 to 40 percent over current prices.

"The effect on net farm income is anybody's guess," said Tom Lutton, an economist for the USDA energy research group at its National Economics Division in Washington.

B-P break-in

By MARY FRAN CALLAHAN
Senior Copy Editor

A male — who Dean of Students James Roemer said could have fit the police description similar to the alleged intruder — was arrested Wednesday morning by climbing through an unlocked basement window.

At that time, the man wore an orange ski mask, and a navy windbreaker with red and light blue vertical stripes running down the front.

Bree Phillips, his fraternity brother, said the man appeared to be armed with robbery.

"I carried a small blue revolver of small caliber at the time of the rape," Phillips said.

The incident has led Roemer to send letters to hall rectors in an effort to stress the importance of "being on the alert."

Shortly after 4 a.m. Wednesday morning, a Bree Phillips security guard — making her usual rounds in the hall — discovered the intruder in a basement corridor. According to Roemer, the woman's two-way radio was out for repair, so she promptly ran to telephone the Security department.

The intruder, however, "bolted the same window he came in," according to the dean.

Security officials arrived immediately at the dorm, but could not detect any sign of the intruder, Roemer said.

"It wouldn't have made much difference even if the guard's radio had been working because the escape took just a matter of seconds," Roemer added.

Last Sunday evening, security received a report that a man similar to the police description of the alleged rapist was seen walking south on U.S. 31.

Department officers, however, could not locate anyone after combing the area.

Police have described the suspect as a black, frizzy-haired, dark-eyed male of slender build in his late teens or early twenties.

The man sought the Jan. 16 rape is also wanted for armed robbery. He carried a small blue revolver of small caliber at the time of the rape.

That same day, the man wore an orange ski mask, and a navy windbreaker with red and light blue vertical stripes running down the front.
Jerusalem: Violence and PR

While most of us kicked snow and attended to the business of January this week, a robust gentleman with white hair and a sleek, low accent of Israel was com­manded the attention of 26 intellectuals and interna­tional leaders assembled here at the invitation of Fr. Hesburgh, whose native city was Jerusalem, but keep reading.

Most Americans pay little attention to Israeli affairs, which, to believe the after-the-fact historians, makes us the most fortunate of the world’s people. In fact, the idea of Israel is in the best condition, and they are run by members of the appropriate religion.

The Observer

Designer: ........... Darren Murphy
Copy Editor: ........... Mary Jo Quaife
Editorial Staff: ........... Pam Needles
Managing Editor: ........... Anne Smith
Layout Editor: ........... Bob French
Layout Artist: ........... Mary Jo Quaife
Photographer: ........... Bruce Oakley
Copy Editor: ........... Carol Maloney
Sports Copy Editor: ........... Elton Needles
Copy Editor: ........... Emily Oakley
Sports Copy Editor: ........... Elton Needles
Copy Editor: ........... Emily Oakley
Copy Editor: ........... Emily Oakley
Copy Editor: ........... Emily Oakley
Copy Editor: ........... Emily Oakley
Copy Editor: ........... Emily Oakley
Copy Editor: ........... Emily Oakley
Copy Editor: ........... Emily Oakley

A wave of anarchy and chaos has led the Polish government to take a “harder” stance in dealing with the labor unrest caused by the strike of workers in the police. The Polish authorities have arrested several people who they claimed had been involved in the riots. The police have also been called upon to stop the disturbances.

Taking Spain by surprise, Premier Adolfo Suarez was expected to announce his resignation on national television last night. He had said earlier this week that he would call for new elections in order to resolve the current political crisis.

The resignation of Suarez, who has held the presidency of Spain since 1974 and is widely respected for his efforts to reunite the country, is expected to have a significant impact on the political landscape of Spain.

Fighting continued in the West Bank and Gaza Strip yesterday, with at least 10 Palestinians killed and several dozen injured in various exchanges of fire. Israeli forces said they had killed two Palestinians in the West Bank who were suspected of carrying out attacks on Israeli civilians.

Jogging the campus road on Monday morning, a Notre Dame student was confronted by a man with a large knife. The man was carrying a large knife and approached the student with a threatening gesture. The student immediately fled the scene and reported the incident to the local police.

Design

The Observer (ISSN 589 930) is published Monday through Friday except during finals and summer. The Observer is published by the Catholic Student Association of Notre Dame and is mailed to all Catholic student families. Subscriptions cost $15 per year ($5 per issue by writing The Observer, P.O. Box 20, Notre Dame, Indiana 46556. Second class postage paid at Notre Dame, Indiana.

The Observer is the number of the magazine. No part of the reproduced rights are reserved.

Sunny and cold today. High in the mid 20s. Clear and cold at night with the low around 10 degrees. Increasing cloudi­ness Saturday. High in the upper 20s. — AP

Some areas have been restored: the road between the sixth and seventh Station of the Cross, for instance, is being repaired, but under Mylne's period. Even the sewage system, Kolleck pointed out, is "better taken care of." These are the improvements, according to the com­mittee, and even if one has never been to the Holy City to see them for oneself, certain patterns are evident: Terrorism activity, which plagued many of the con­tested spots along Israel's West Bank, does not mark yet its ugly head in Jerusalem. Kolleck pointed to terrorism for bad in tourism, and the Moslem residents who regard this as the right to do things by their friends who, having no homeland of their own, frequently stir up trouble in Israeli territory. The PLO is not afraid to show the world, and the Arabs hold office in the city. This, Kolleck says, is the result of their fear of retaliation by other Arabs. Other religions around the world have nothing to fear by the precedent of Israel becoming the super power in the Middle East.

So what is the Jerusalem Committee and why does it convene at Notre Dame? Well, let's put it this way: King Hussein of Jordan is not exactly an invited guest, and no Arab holds office in this city. The members of the committee, who range from architects to poets and economists and include the likes of Buckminster Fuller, are interested in "cultural" Jerusalem, but as Mayor Kolleck pointed out at yester­day's press conference, "all questions concerning Israel are inherently both cultural and political, and to that extent we had to do with the maintenance of an unabashed city under Israeli rule.

By the The Observer and The Associated Press

Friday, January 30, 1981 — page 2

Inside Friday -

Mark Rust
Managing Editor

newsbriefs

Copyright © 1981 by The Observer and The Associated Press

National leaders assembled here at the invitation of Fr. Hesburgh, whose native city was Jerusalem, but keep reading.

Most Americans pay little attention to Israeli affairs, which, to believe the after-the-fact historians, makes us the most fortunate of the world's people. In fact, the idea of Israel is in the best condition, and they are run by members of the appropriate religion.

The Observer

Designer: ........... Darren Murphy
Copy Editor: ........... Mary Jo Quaife
Editorial Staff: ........... Pam Needles
Managing Editor: ........... Anne Smith
Layout Editor: ........... Bob French
Layout Artist: ........... Mary Jo Quaife
Photographer: ........... Bruce Oakley
Copy Editor: ........... Carol Maloney
Sports Copy Editor: ........... Elton Needles
Copy Editor: ........... Emily Oakley
Sports Copy Editor: ........... Elton Needles
Copy Editor: ........... Emily Oakley
Copy Editor: ........... Emily Oakley
Copy Editor: ........... Emily Oakley
Copy Editor: ........... Emily Oakley
Copy Editor: ........... Emily Oakley
Copy Editor: ........... Emily Oakley

The Observer (ISSN 589 930) is published Monday through Friday except during finals and summer. The Observer is published by the Catholic Student Association of Notre Dame and is mailed to all Catholic student families. Subscriptions cost $15 per year ($5 per issue by writing The Observer, P.O. Box 20, Notre Dame, Indiana 46556. Second class postage paid at Notre Dame, Indiana.

The Observer is the number of the magazine. No part of the reproduced rights are reserved.

Sunny and cold today. High in the mid 20s. Clear and cold at night with the low around 10 degrees. Increasing cloudiness Saturday. High in the upper 20s. — AP

Some areas have been restored: the road between the sixth and seventh Station of the Cross, for instance, is being repaired, but under Mylne's period. Even the sewage system, Kolleck pointed out, is "better taken care of." These are the improvements, according to the committee, and even if one has never been to the Holy City to see them for oneself, certain patterns are evident: Terrorism activity, which plagued many of the contested spots along Israel's West Bank, does not mark yet its ugly head in Jerusalem. Kolleck pointed to terrorism for bad in tourism, and the Moslem residents who regard this as the right to do things by their friends who, having no homeland of their own, frequently stir up trouble in Israeli territory. The PLO is not afraid to show the world, and the Arabs hold office in the city. This, Kolleck says, is the result of their fear of retaliation by other Arabs. Other religions around the world have nothing to fear by the precedent of Israel becoming the super power in the Middle East.

So what is the Jerusalem Committee and why does it convene at Notre Dame? Well, let's put it this way: King Hussein of Jordan is not exactly an invited guest, and no Arab holds office in this city. The members of the committee, who range from architects to poets and economists and include the likes of Buckminster Fuller, are interested in "cultural" Jerusalem, but as Mayor Kolleck pointed out at yesterday's press conference, "all questions concerning Israel are inherently both cultural and political, and to that extent we had to do with the maintenance of an unabashed city under Israeli rule.

By the The Observer and The Associated Press
Former Ohio governor discusses world hunger

By DAVID RICKBAUGH Staff Reporter

The N.D. graduate emphasized the difference between the "wealthy, powerful, and educated first world" and the "poor, uneducated, and not fully human second world."

He said the nation of South Africa to depict the three ideologies of the first world. In this nation the powerful white classified them into three categories: those who think it is their duty to control the nation, those who feel the nation exists on a Darwinian theory of survival of the fittest, and those who are outraged at the exploitation of non-whites in their homeland.

Gilligan stated, "The world is South Africa expanded, we are all citizens of South Africa." He then asked the audience a question, "What group of South Africa whites are you in?"

The former member of the U.S. House of Representatives explained that the problem of world hunger still exists because those who have the power and the resources to end the crisis fail to do so.

"The world is controlled by the industrialized nations who control the world's resources, thus the underdeveloped nations of the world can gain political independence but never obtain the economic resources to control their destiny," commented Gilligan. He incorporated into his lecture the theory that world hunger will continue until the governments of developed countries devote their capabilities to solving world poverty. The irony of the situation is that 15 percent of the world, the industrialized nations, control 80 percent of the world's resources, whereas the remaining 85 percent of the world manages only 20 percent of the total resources.

In addition, several students have complained of poor treatment at the infirmary.

Gilligan stated that the major obstacle in fund allocation is the inability of the U.S. government to avoid budgets with emphasis placed on military spending. One government report on world hunger said, "If the industrialized nations of the world contributed 20 billion dollars to starving nations for the next fifteen years, poverty would be eliminated." The N.D. professor added that 400 billion dollars is spent yearly on weaponry.

Gilligan is currently a Thomas J. White Professor and the Director of the Thomas and Alberta White Center for Law, Government, and Human Rights at the Law School.

---

Influenza sufferers fill Infirmary

By DAVID SARPhIE

The campuses of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's have been hard hit in recent weeks by an outbreak of influenza. Although not positively identified as the Bangkok strain which has struck harshly throughout the U.S. in the past month, doctors at the N.D. student Health Center have been busy with an extra load of patients. In addition, several students have complained of poor treatment at the infirmary.

According to Dr. Robert Thompson, the infirmary has been inundated with patients having symptoms of the Bangkok flu. "About three-fourths of our beds have remained occupied in the past weeks," he reported. "This still doesn't compare to the epidemic that hit us in January of 1978."

Thompson estimated that the current outbreak is an epidemic, however, noting that it has begun to level off. "We have yet to bring in additional nurses," he remarked, "and we think those substitutes necessary due to the illness of regulars."

Several students have complained about the lack of efficient treatment at the health center. "The nurses looked like they were going out of their minds," observed one patient.

---

There are 4 billion people on earth. 237 are Scanners. They have the most terrifying powers ever created ... and they are winning.

SCANNERS

... Their thoughts can kill!!

PIERRE DAVID and VICTOR SOLNICKI present a DAVID CRONENBERG film SCANNERS

starring JENNIFER O'NEILL, STEPHEN LACK, PATRICK McGOOHN

also starring LAWRENCE DADE, MICHAEL IRONSIDE, HARVEY KEITEL, VICTOR SOLNICKI, PIERRE DAVID

produced by CLAUDE HEROUX, music by HOWARD SHORE, directed by DAVID CRONENBERG

A FILMPLAN INTERNATIONAL RIDE A ROCKEE EMBASSY PICTURES PHOTOGRAPHY RESTRICTED TO READ THE FOLLOWING RCo-derived Artists: "They Are All Scanners." NOW PLAYING AT A THEATER NEAR YOU!!!!
Turmoil strikes Iran

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

The cheering in America is being echoed by angry shouts of debate in Iran in the wake of the hostage release.

Two years after toppling the shah, Iran's revolutionaries are locked more than ever in a political tug-of-war - quarreling over the place of religious leaders in national life, the conduct of the war against Iraq, and the wisdom of the hostage-taking and of the way it was ended.

And a central question hangs over Iran's political life: what happens when 80-year-old, ailing Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini dies?

'There will be a real crisis when the ayatollah goes,' former U.S. Ambassador to Iran William H. Sullivan said in an interview. "There will be a lot of sound and fury before things settle down."

The release of the 52 American hostages on Jan. 20 healed a new confrontation between Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, standard-bearer of the "pragmatic" secular wing of the revolution, and Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai, who represents the more conservative wing dominated by the clergymen of the Islamic Republic Party.

The personal enmity between the French-educated Bani-Sadr and the often-credo Rajai is powerful. When Rajai became prime minister last August, Bani-Sadr described the former math teacher as an incompetent.

Since the hostages were freed, Rajai's opponents have been grumbling that Iran lost out on the deal, because only $2.8 billion was returned from what the Iranians estimated to be $11.5 billion in frozen assets.

Bani-Sadr declared he had nothing to do with the final negotiations, which were handled by Rajai's office, and the president's newspaper blamed the hostage-holding episode for many of Iran's current economic and political ills.

The political divisions are reflected on the battlefront against Iraq, where the Iranians have faltered for four months.

Bani-Sadr has taken active command of the war effort, strengthening his support among the regular army and air force.

The underlining conflict in revolutionary Iran is over the role of the clergy in politics, an age-old debate within Islam.

See IRAN, page 6

St. Mary's Student Body and Class Officer Elections

Mandatory meeting

Wed., Feb 4
6:00 pm
in the Student Gov't Room for all those interested in running

ELECTION DAY

THURS. Feb 19

---

SUNDAY, FEB 1
7:00 Regional Augusta at Regina 7:00 Alumni
8:00 McCardless
8:00 Billion 9:00 Walsh

Mardi Gras DEALERS SCHOOL

MONDAY, FEB 2
7:00 Flanner
7:00 Apple
8:00 Grace
8:00 B.F.
10:00 Carnegie
10:00 Stettin
10:00 Lewis
10:00 Howard
9:00 Carnel

TUESDAY, FEB 3
7:00 Holy Cross (SMC)
7:00 Fisher
8:00 Lovans
9:00 Badin

WEDNESDAY, FEB 4
7:00 Standard
7:00 Zahn
8:00 D.P.
10:00 Cavanaugh
10:00 Setti
9:00 Lewis
8:00 Howard
9:00 Carrol

THURSDAY, FEB 5
7:00 Holy Cross (ND) and St. Vincent at Holy Cross
7:00 McDonald
8:00 Lyons

(Announcing Something Worth Announcing.)

The New Advent Loudspeaker.

Announcing.

When you can offer a new version of the best-selling, most imitated speaker in the country, you might as well say it loud and clear.

So then. Here we have (and you can too) the New Advent Loudspeaker.

The original Advent became a best-seller by offering the full ten octaves of audible frequency response (with unsurpassed clarity, musical balance, and natural, unexaggerated overall sound), for a fraction of the previous going price.

The New Advent has the same overall kind of sound (for the same kind of price), but with more high-frequency output to take advantage of recent improvements in recordings and broadcasts. The difference isn't gigantic (there wasn't that much room for more), but it's definitely there for the hearing. And it adds more lustre to the best in records, tapes and FM broadcasts.

So come hear something worth hearing. It puts cost-no-object sound within reach and reason.

audio specialists, Inc.

401 NORTH MICHIGAN
SOUTH BEND, INDIANA 46601

“20% off” current supply only

Large walnut and vinyl Advents

---
SMC announces elections

By ANNE JANE DREGGALLA

Saint Mary's announced this week that elections for the 1981-82 class and Student Government officers will take place Thursday, Feb. 19. The election process will begin with a mandatory meeting for anyone interested in running for any office in Student Government or as a class representative on Wednesday, Feb. 4, at 6:30 p.m. in the Student Government Office in the Regina Hall basement. The intent of this meeting will be to discuss the nominating process and campaign rules for this year's election. Questions concerning this meeting may be referred to any of the present Student Government officers or to Maggie Quinn, elections commissioner, at 4689.

Nominations will then be open Thursday, Feb. 12, for both election. Interested individuals are to nominate themselves by having three copies of their platform delivered to 358 LeMans on that date. Each ticket running for class office is to consist of a candidate for president, vice-president, treasurer and secretary. According to the published rules, campaigning will begin Sunday, Feb. 15, at 12 midnight. Each ticket or candidate will have one poster on display in the library and one in the LeMans lobby. A copy of each platform will also be displayed in the dining hall for student appraisal.

The process concludes with the elections on Feb. 19, the earliest date on which they have ever been held. According to Maggie Quinn, elections commissioner, the reasons for the change were: 1) to make the transition of officers easier, "while the pros are still around"; 2) to avoid the end of the year rush; 3) to get a headstart on planning, thereby eliminating summer correspondence and contact problems and 4) to give the new officers time to pick commissioners without being rushed.

The new officers are now scheduled to take office April 1. Hall elections are still scheduled to begin after room picks in late March and the general election and interview process for commissioners will take place following that.

Quinn also "encourages everyone to run, the more people the better," and she "hopes everyone votes since the only way you can take a stand on the things you're complaining about is by voting."

---

SU plans ballroom renovation

The Student Union is planning to renovate the Lafitoune Ballroom, converting the remodeled north acreage into a coffeehouse/nightclub featuring live bands. The coffeehouse will be equipped with a dry bar that will offer a non-alcoholic beverage, from the non-alcoholic to the extreme. Plans also include a game room, complete with pool and all the latest video games. At present, the plans call for four phases of development, all of which will be implemented by the manager after the initial go-ahead is given. The first phase, which Student Union Director Rich Coppola hopes to have finished by the end of the semester, is the building of the stage.

---

Gasoline

"...the more people the better..."

"If you can afford it," Lutton said. The Kansas Energy Office said 2,000 farmers in the nation's largest wheat-producing state will have finished by the end of 1980, costing about $3,000 per farm. The control and price increases by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will likely add another $1,000 to that tab this year, according to Lutton's projections.

Style Goltz, a spokesman for the state energy office, said the decontrol phase of the fuel bill will cost the average farmer about $150, with the remainder blamed on OPEC.

The immediate decontrol which went into effect last week is expected to bring about a $1.20 to 1.50 rise in wheat prices. The immediate decontrol which went into effect last week is expected to bring about a $1.20 to 1.50 rise in wheat prices. The average farmer will have saved about 25 cents a gallon this year, Lutton said, with OPEC hikes responsible for the rest. The decontrol increase was coming anyway, under phased decontrol signed by former President Jimmy Carter. But fuel users are picking up the costs in one lump, rather than in pieces, from now through September, when decontrol was originally scheduled to be completed.

Lutton said the USDA's "best guess scenario" is that gasoline prices would have been $1.45 to $1.62 by the end of 1981 without decontrol, $1.50 to $1.70 with it. "It will compound our escalating inflation costs," said Howard Ward, a wheat farmer from St. John, Kan. "We're selling below the cost of production now and there's no escalator clause in our commodity prices."

Norman Griffin, a Hugoton, Kan., wheat farmer, agreed the hike will hurt. "But it seems to me like it's a little ridiculous to sell our own gas or oil at the well head so much cheaper than what we import," he said. "It's better to do that (decontrol prices) than have a conflict in the Middle East and not have any oil."

Marvin Duncan, an economist with the Feral Reserve Bank in Kansas City, said Thursday he was sticking with previous predictions that food prices would rise 12 to 15 percent in 1981, compared to 9 percent in 1980. He said agricultural interests have known "decontrol was coming down the pipe anyway" and Wednesday's action will prompt new economy measures on the farm. He forecast that each farmer would cut back on use of machinery such as "not tilling the ground as intensively before he plants a new crop."

Lutton agreed that the farmer who looks for shortcuts will be the one to survive higher fuel prices. "If farmers can't think about less fuel-intensive operations like minimal tillage or planting crops that don't need as much cultivation, they're going to be in trouble unless they (the commodity) prices offset the higher cost of fuel."

Duncan said he expected many farmers to cut back on irrigation because the pumps require fuel, and such a move might mean changing to crops that need less water. "The farmer in Nebraska may shift from alfalfa," Duncan said. "Farmers are a very sophisticated group of people," he concluded. "You will see them engaging in more and more energy-efficient techniques as fuel prices rise."

---

FRIDAY cocktail hour

3-8

2 mixed drinks for the price of 1

16 oz Miller $.85

Saturday

2-9

Corb's

---

Go Irish Beat Carolina

U.S. 31 (Dixie Way, North in Roseland) across from Holiday Inn
open at 6:30 am 7 days a week

---

The Observer

Friday, January 30, 1981 — page 5
Housing contract due on Monday

By LOUIS BREAU

The need for a junior class housing lottery will be decided next week after all the housing contracts have been turned in. The contracts are due in the Housing Office by Monday.

Director of Student Residences Fr. Michael Heppen said, "I will be very surprised if a lottery will be necessary this year." He said, though, that he could not be sure until all of the contracts have been turned in.

Fr. Heppen does not anticipate a lottery for juniors to move off-campus because of an increase in necessary beds that will be available in St. Ed's Hall and the final completion of Pasquerilla East and West.

Many students have expressed dissatisfaction with off-campus living, largely due to the continuing crime wave, and some have anticipated that this could present a minor housing problem if not enough students move off-campus.

To be eligible for housing on campus, all students must return the contract by Monday. Those who are considering moving off-campus should mark their calendars for the lottery, which will be held on April 29, 30, and 31.

Fr. Heppen noted that almost 12,000 capsules of the drug Symmetry had been used in recent weeks. "Because of the inordinate demand for the drug, we have at times run out," he said. "It has rarely been for more than a night, however.

"Room picks will follow the same phase," commented Don Murray, advocate of increased space for social activities.

The final phase would be giving the Ballroom a new coat of paint, and the third will be building a kitchen. "But I think we can combine Two and Three into one room," he remarked. "We're not quite sure of its effectiveness as a preventive drug.

"Musique of Sundane Kids," a distinguished ensemble that plays pieces of the Baroque through classical eras, will be presented by the University Artist Series on Wed., Feb. 4 at 8 p.m. in the auditorium of the Snite Museum of Art.

Saint Mary's opens new exhibits

Two new art exhibits opened this week in the gallery at Saint Mary's College. Photographs by Carl Toth will be on display in Hammes Gallery, and recent work in porcelain and stoneware by Ron Canby will be shown in Moreau Gallery. Both exhibits will be on display through Feb. 20. An artist's reception will be held today from 7 to 9 p.m. and is open to the public.

Sunday Masses at Sacred Heart

5:15 pm Saturday Rev. Robert Griffin, c.s.c.
9:00 am Sunday Rev. Neil Rasmussen, O.P.
10:30 am Sunday Rev. Patrick Gaffney, c.s.c.
1:15 pm Sunday Rev. Austin Fleming
7:15 pm Vespers
Rev. Patrick Gaffney, c.s.c.

Nazz

is looking for student performers. Anyone interested in performing at the Nazz, please call Mary Lloyd at 234-7930 or 4763 (on campus phones only)

...Flu

continued from page 3

They really seemed overworked.

Others treated at the center were upset over the inadequate allocation of medicine. One of the 51 students questioned the reasons for the short supply of the drug normally used to fight the strain of influenza.

"It doesn't make sense to me," said one student. "Why aren't there more supplies available?"

Thompson explained that the drug metrel had been used in recent weeks. "Because of the inordinate demand for the drug, we have at times run out," he said. "It has rarely been for more than a night, however.

"I think we can combine Two and Three into one room," he remarked. "We're not quite sure of its effectiveness as a preventive drug.

...Ballroom

continued from page 5

and the installation of the sound and lighting systems, along with the opening of the game room.

The second phase will be giving the Ballroom a new coat of paint, and the third will be building a kitchen. "But I think we can combine Two and Three into one room," he remarked. "We're not quite sure of its effectiveness as a preventive drug.

...Unity

continued from page 1

This recommendation led the entire committee to suggest within its general statement that interaction between residents in traditional ways could be enhanced by locating business, commercial, and recreational centers in convenient areas.

The final working committee discussed methods of publicizing Jerusalem's "Dancing Pattern of Coexistence," which Zvi Brosh, a special assistant to Mayor Kolk, said could be achieved by remembering to emphasize the positive aspects of Jerusalem's development.

After the conclusion of the conference, Mayor Kolk told reporters that the committee's resolutions were important and that his city government had a "good record" of carrying them out.

Kolk, apparently pleased with the results of the conference, summarized it by comparing it to a recent Arab conference in Saudi Arabia which advocated force to "free" Jerusalem. The mayor stated, "This is the difference, Mecca declaration, Notre Dame declaration, one makes war, the other peace."
I Never Told You To Hate Your Father

Hated his father, he said. He never remembered seeing his father, now his father had written, saying he wanted to meet him. "Couldn't stand to see him," he said. "I've always hated him, and a never cared about me. I grew up, you have to have a family that looks something like you, but there was just my sister and my mother and me. I hated my father because he never came home. He moved from it I was born, he didn't see me. I would have looked like this.

"I was looking at him, feeling sorry for a man I had never met. I thought, "Maybe the father hates himself for being a stranger to his own family." "They live," I said, "you grow up with just women in the house, you look for a father figure; some had died early, before I could break his heart."

"Were you a car thief or a punk?" he said, moving from A to Z in his sitting of human evil.

"Held to him," I said, "I deceived and deceived them in matters of that kind and I must do it very seriously. It was the way that hurt him the most, because it seemed like a betrayal."

"He eventually forgive you?" he said.

"He died before we could talk of golpervisent." I said. "I was away from home, and a never even c Spiele die, not even being sure if I cared for him at all."

"He was probably more hurt than angry," he said. "He never could have borne me, he was the kind that may do, but I'm not the kind that may do, but I'm not the kind that may do."

"The final ting he wished for, my mother told me, as for me to come home, so that we could be a family again. Told my mother I was afraid he hated me, and spe in s, there's a lesson here for me. Children forgiving parents as parents forgive their children, and all that crap."

"Children growing up without fathers it neces it ven to invent them," you've imagined a father deserving of contempt. You've denied him and identity worthy of love. You would be healthier to beac acquainted with the father who needs your forgiveness than with the father who is beyond to beae."

"Told for pay to go to hotel," I came home," he said. "Now I would pray for him to go to hell if I thought God would think of him that way."

"Do you really hate him so much," I said, "that you want to punish him like that?"

"No," he said. "I don't hate him that much. My mother always says, 'I never told you to hate him'. I never did hate him enough to want to human evil."

"I never saw Rick after that night. He went off hating his father, leaving him as a child, but he didn't knew it. After he graduated, he sent me note sometimes telling me all was well and that he was good that he would get back to see me. He never mentioned a word about his father.

"Seven years later, after Mass one Sunday, a middle-aged man introduced himself. 'I think you know my son Rick.'

"He thought not look like a father deserving of him?"

"I don't know if you've heard," he said, "that Rick was killed in an accident related to a training program for freeway interactions in Ireland."

"I expressed shock and disbelief. 'There's no reason why something can't have known,' he said. 'It was never mentioned in the papers.'

"He went on, "It was a terrible shock to Rick's mother, and a burden to have to write to his former mother. I'm Navy too, and was supposed to visit Rick through my fleet connections. I was a week late, and Rick was scheduled to meet him in the Persian Gulf."

"Then I said, 'I couldn't think of other words to say.'

"I don't know if the ever told you," he said, "but Rick was a great son. My father trusted me, and a seemed wiser to stay away. Later, when Rick was older, I tried to get in touch but he still too thin to want to see me."

"He spoke to me of your; said, "Finally, his bitterness melted, at least to the point where he was willing to write, I think, to his mother in invention." he said. "She never wanted the children to invent our own."

"It was wise of her to feel that way," he said.

"There were lots of things I had to say to Rick," he said, "that could only be said in person."

"These were things he needed to hear," I said, "that he could only have heard from you."

"There were things I needed to hear," he said, "that I could only have heard from you."

"I wasn't sure if the ever told you," he said, "I don't know if the ever told you."
Alumni and students: 'What can improve LaFortune?

One afternoon last October the students once again voiced a strong plea to the student activities subcommittee of the Board of Trustees that something must be done to help a stagnant social center on campus. The argument was reinforced when the students held a reception that night for the Trustee members in the Ballroom at LaFortune; the defeat of their sitting center was no longer just idle or our crazy notions—they were "for real." The last time the Trustees expressed their concern, and offered their unstinting support. It was the general consensus of the Trustees, the Administration, and students that some sort of renovation to the Ballroom was the first step in solving this problem.

At the two previous proposals to renovate LaFortune were discussed. The first one, the New Chautauqua proposal, was developed by two Notre Dame students John Amato and Big Andy Andrews during the 1979-1980 school year. This plan projected the Ballroom as a "professional night club." Not only would it provide entertainment (Chicago Jazz), but also the aesthetic touches which are essential to the "atmosphere" desired by the students of LaFortune. But in May of 1980 the proposal was rejected for two main reasons. The university disapproved of the proposal.

The second proposal was designed by Andrew Panelli, one of the students. This plan, called the "Buddies" Plan, Panelli knew of the problem of the first proposal, and scaled down his plan to include only the essentials—lighting, sound, and the stage. The university offered to put up a partial renovation of the Ballroom to start renovation and operation and ask the students to be responsible for the remainder. At a sub­sequent Board of Trustees meeting the students voted not to allot any money to the project. Emphasizing this meeting was that the space would be used as an exhibition room for thegraphics association or as a small scale student center. No money would be spent on "trappings". The stage would be a "bottleneck" by "patching up" the stage. Since then we have developed our concept of the Ballroom as the top of an atmosphere. But in May of 1980 the proposal was rejected for two main reasons. The university disapproved of the proposal.

The second proposal was designed by Andrew Panelli, one of the students. This plan, called the "Buddies" Plan, Panelli knew of the problem of the first proposal, and scaled down his plan to include only the essentials—lighting, sound, and the stage. The university offered to put up a partial renovation of the Ballroom to start renovation and operation and ask the students to be responsible for the remainder. At a subsequent Board of Trustees meeting the students voted not to allot any money to the project. Emphasizing this meeting was that the space would be used as an exhibition room for the Graphic Association or as a small scale student center. No money would be spent on "trappings." The stage would be a "bottleneck" by "patching up" the stage.

Since then we have developed our concept of the Ballroom as a small scale social entertainment center. This center would be adequate for the need of the students who asked for this and money would not be wasted. We want to develop a student atmosphere and students want some social atmosphere at LaFortune. The Ballroom has the potential to become the social center of LaFortune. We need to take positive steps in solving this dilemma. We need to show that we are not the alcoholics they picture us to be, but students who drink because we have nothing else to do. Give us a relaxed spot where the atmosphere is laid back and conducive to healthy male-female relationships, and we in return give those positive relationships to the university. This is a dilemma that should be faced. I might add that if these positive measures are successful we will not be surprised at some ethical approaches of similar kind to one found around here.
Irish masochism: an update

Dear Editor,

The eternal obsessive compulsion to use the adjective "Irish" for everything from non-Irish (call the man "Irishman" or "Irishwoman") down to fishlophous bars and beerers in this area shows itself hollow whenever we examine any Irish news for the heart of it.

The recent attentat in Belfast, the attempted assassination of Bernadette Devlin and company received not more attention than around ND than in non-Irish" texts. This, I advocate, is that we part from the manifestism of Irish consciousness (consciousness does not relieve a single poor Irishman and woman poorer."

The Observer

Dr. King's birthday: Jan. 15th

Dear Editor,

I often wonder about the growing policies that we are about to decide what articles are printed in The Observer. I am extremely curious to know why the student newspaper, The Observer, failed to acknowledge the birthday of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. in any of The Observer's editions.

Dr. King's birthday obviously did not warrant a report on the difficulties that many civil rights groups are struggling against in their fight to have their King's birthday made into a national holiday. Dr. King's birthday did not even warrant a single line on the back pages of The Observer in itself type. I would think that something could be found for print even if The Observer had to rely on the wire services for information. Various cities, including South Bend, acknowledged the birthday school closings and special community services.

Did the editorial staff forget the birthday of Dr. King? Were the staff members not aware that community groups and concerned citizens went to Washington, D.C. to protest the backlash against the students, which editors not realize that this University is dedicated not only to recognize or to celebrate this day of celebration and heritage of Ireland, whatever small type.

Homer J. Gooden, President, BCAC

Dear Editor,

Last Thursday was one of the first days of class, and it would have been proper to start off the semester by taking time to observe Dr. Martin Luther King's birthday. Dr. King taught us many things we can never forget in the classroom: how to live with our fellow human beings, how to bring about social change through peaceful means, that love is still the best defense. Al.

Perhaps the Observer is not able to stress so some of the positive attributes and accomplishments of black people, because the curriculum here ignores the Black Experience. I have talked to many students here who never encountered Blacks before Notre Dame, and who have only a stereotypical conception of who Blacks in America are. One such stereotype is often expressed in The Observer - Black man-as-convict. I feel that it is the duty of the university as an educator to dispel these misconceptions, and one way of achieving this would be by exposing students to people such as Dr. King, a black man who is, like Thoreau and Gandhi, decided to put into practice the ideals and teachings of Jesus Christ, the Lord and Saviour we all claim to worship. James Derico

'D. N. Shuffle' - a song and dance

Dear Editor,

The time has come for someone to stand up and be heard from. I feel something must be said concerning the famous "ND Shuffle." You know it, it's what the administration does all the time, projecting one image while doing a totally different matter. To an outsider, ND stands for integrity, honesty, fairness, and all those things your mother told you should be why you were a child.

Well we, as insiders, know the truth. The horrible fact. The lack of respect for our intelligence, and the administration's overall managerial ineptness are things we all have come to accept as things which may never change. And really, those things we could accept as a part of university life it wasn't for the faggers hypocrisy mentioned with the hopes and needs of its community. It appears as if all matters to our administration is that the bank balance is up and the television coverage is plentiful. I think the administration should take a look at its people, professors and students alike, and realize just what the people are working and studying here.

We came here with visions of grandeur and were met with innumerable incomprehension. A school's greatness is not measured by the number of its buildings or the amount of money it receives, but more important standards. A school's greatness is in its people, the ideas coming alive in its classrooms, and enthusiasm for life. I feel this is the Notre Dame, ND, just as great as the legends of the past, and all they need is a chance to show themselves. I fear, though, that if the administration does not change its misconceptions of greatness the Golden Dome may become the second institution living off the heroes of the past.

Name withheld on request

The Observer

Friday, January 30, 1981 — page 9

P.O. Box Q

Women seek security

Dear Editor,

Last week there were two incidents involving a female Notre Dame student who was walking home in the vicinity of the campus village apartment complex and the ACC. One of these resulted in a rape.

Dean of Students James Roemer sent a letter to all students in the Campus Village Apartment complex relating these events to them and cautioning female students to avoid walking home alone.

Two female Notre Dame students and I live in the Campus Village and have no plans to change this, but occasionally, if weather permits, I will walk or take my bicycle.

Last Wednesday I was walking home at about 10:30 p.m. I couldn't help but feel a bit nerv­ous about being alone, even in the daylight. As I was going past the tennis courts, a brown compact car was following me. I paused and stopped near the back entrance of the ACC. I didn't feel good about the driver (a young man white male, at least 20, and had a mustache) and shouted in my direction. Hey ... I couldn't understand what he said. Apparently he was asking me for directions some­where, as people often do. Then I realized that he was doing something extremely obscene. For a minute I was completely thrown off. I began to run in the direction of my home. I didn't want to turn around.

I used to feel quite safe walking or running around the Campus Village area, even at night. Off­ campus crime, I thought, was generally restricted to robberies and muggings in the Northeast neighborhood. But what hap­pened to me and those other girls who went out, was repeated in broad daylight. These incidents were not relaxed, but they certainly will make OC students take a more serious view of the situation.

Name withheld

For anyone who lives off-campus, a car can be a useful tool, even during the day. Get a security escort, or find a ride with a friend. And to anyone who has a car, please stop and offer rides to any students you see walking alone. Apparently our home isn't as safe as we once believed.

Name withheld on request

Anthony Kerrigan

"N.D. Shuffle" - a song and dance

Dear Editor,

"N.D. Shuffle" is a song and dance. The words of the song come from the lyrics of the dance. The words are an attempt to express some of the feelings that I have as a student here at Notre Dame. The song is a reflection of my experiences here, and I hope that it will be enjoyed by others as well.

The song is about the difficulties we face as students here at Notre Dame. The dance is a way for us to release our frustrations and express our feelings. I hope that others will find the song and dance to be a source of comfort and strength for them.

I would like to thank everyone who has helped me with this project. Without their support and encouragement, the song and dance would not be possible. I hope that everyone will enjoy hearing and performing the song and dance, and that it will bring some happiness and joy to those who listen to it.
Campus

Friday, Jan. 30, 1981

- 5:15 p.m. — mass and supper, balla shed.
- 6:30, 10 p.m. — film, "de shivage," carroll hall smc.
- 7 p.m. — track meet, nd vsloyola, brede, valparaiso and u. of illinois chicago circle, acc.
- 7:15 p.m. — opening reception, carl niblo-photography, homes gallery.
- 7:30 p.m. — opening reception, rov kovach-recent work in porcelain and stoneware, moreau gallery.
- 7:30-10 p.m. — cia education workshop, "justice in the 80s: doubts and directions." panel discussion with provost, e.g. a. gouer, nor jeason, s. ahn and karlhein m. osberger, bayes hall.
- 7:15, 15, 12 p.m. — film, "my bodyguard," e.g. aud, r.
- 8 p.m. — keenan review, e. laughlin aud.
- 8 p.m. — concert, santa fe library and advance tickets $3, at the door $5-50, sponsored by a campus crusade for christ and the knights of columbus.

Saturday, Jan. 31, 1981

- 9:30 a.m- noon — cia education workshop, "justice in the 80s: doubts and directions." reflections by students and alumni working for social change, mcneely library lounge.
- 4 p.m. — basketball, nd men vs. south carolina, acc.
- 6:30, 10 p.m. — film, "de shivage," carroll hall smc.
- 7, 10:15, 12 p.m. — film, "my bodyguard," e.g. aud, r.
- 8 p.m. — keenan review, e. laughlin aud.
- 8 p.m. — basketball, nd men vs. south carolina, acc, metro tv.
- 8 p.m. — recital, stillman guest artist: guitar, little theatre.

Molarity

- Teacher tells, ditto sheets and those school rules.
- I have it, i count, true or false, 15 signs.
- And old hoot's in the demix, we have 3 tests: one that counts, and no real test, I think it'll be spured:
- No class, no class -- I've got no class.

Peanuts

- I just found out why camels can go 50 long without water.
- It has something to do with their big noses.

The Daily Crossword

---

Mardi Gras Tickets Sales Participation Chart

- 100 percent
- 60 percent
- 40 percent
- 20 percent

---

Charles Schulz

- If I were a camel, sweetie, I'd take you out in the desert, and leave you there.

---

Michael Molinelli

- Was he had any hits?
- No, I think he doesn't play the straight game.

---

The Observer Weekend

Friday, January 30, 1981 — page 10
King plays consistently

By MARK HANNUKSELA
Shorts Writer

Maureen King laughs when told about her being one of the most consistent players on this year's Saint Mary's College basketball team. "I don't know about that," she adds with a shy grin on her face. "I've just been really looking at it that way. I would say I've been consistent to a point, but there are still some nights when I play better than 1-0 on others."

King is scoring consistently as she's like, King is still filling a very important role as a member of third-year coach Jerry Dallcssio's basketball squad. "I guess the best way to put it is she's the force inside," says Dallcssio of King. "That means rebounding, and scoring when we get her the ball. She is one of the few players that I can use consistently."

King is currently in her second year as a member of Dallcssio's squad. As a froshman, she played extensively at the center-forward positions, but not a lot of playing time. She was prone to foul trouble. This year, according to coach, that is not happening as often.

"Maureen has really matured as a player," says Dallcssio. "She's playing a lot smarter. Because she's playing better, she's staying out of foul trouble, she's scoring a lot more playing time. I think she's going to keep getting better -- she hasn't really hit her peak yet."

"I haven't seen her do anything really outstanding yet, she's not really the star," says the 5-9 native of Pennsylvania. "Some nights I score a lot, and some nights I rebound well, but I'm still waiting for that one night when I put everything together."

"I'm not a perfectionist, though," she adds with a shy grin on her face. "I don't really like that word, because it implies being perfect."

Despite not being able to put everything together, King has compiled some very impressive numbers so far this year.

Heading into tonight's 8:00 p.m. contest with Pekville College of Kentucky, King leads the team in rebounding and steals, is second only to sophomore classmate Anne Armstrong in scoring, and is among the leaders in field goal percentage, shooting just over 50% from the floor.

In Wednesday night's loss to Notre Dame, King scored only six points, but pulled down a personal high 14 rebounds. It was largely because of this dominance of the boards, and her effectiveness in clogging up the middle that the Belles were able to stay close to the Irish for the first 25 to 30 minutes of the contest.

"There is a noticeable difference in our team when Maureen isn't in there," says Dallcssio. "She's really one of the keys to our winning and playing well. The thing that got us in trouble Wednesday night was Notre Dame's excellent defense."

King's basketball career began back in the seventh grade. From day one, she was a natural, for two reasons: her height and her family background. "I guess you could say I grew up in a basketball-oriented family," she says, while being mobbed by a couple of fans in the Holy Cross Hall lounge. "I have two brothers who played basketball in high school, and my dad played at Westminster College in Pennsylvania, so I was always around the game."

"The funny thing is though," she continues. "I didn't plan on playing here. I wasn't even thinking about playing college basketball."

If Maureen King has any flaws, they are an overwhelming sense of modesty, almost to the point of overlooking her own talents, and a tendency to be especially critical of herself. Jerry Dallcssio thinks this criticism is the only thing getting in the way of that perfect game King keeps looking for.

"Maureen has improved a great deal since last year, but she tends to be especially critical of herself. She's always trying to analyze her game, and correct her mistakes, which is good, but she doesn't look at all the good things she does often enough. That's what I try to do is point out the good things."

Dallcssio went on to say that, "The thing Maureen really needs to work on is getting her confidence up to the level of her talent. What I mean is in her talent level is up here, (pointing one hand above his head) and her confidence level is down here (pointing the other hand at stomach level)."

Karen Tripucka, seen here as she goes up for another basket, is now "off the Irish all-time scoring list."

Oregon State wins 16th straight

CORVALLIS, Ore. (AP) -- Center Steve Johnson scored 27 points and dominated play inside Thursday night to lead unbeaten Oregon State to an 81-67 Pacific 10 Conference basketball victory over 10th-ranked UCLA.

The Beavers, tied with Virginia for the No. 1 ranking in The Associated Press poll, never trailed and hit just under 70 percent of their first-half field goal tries. UCLA, 5-3 in the conference and 11-4 overall, trailed by as many as 16 points early in the second half but pulled within six, 57-51, on Darren Davis' inside basket with 9:08 remaining.

Beaver reserve guard William Brew responded with a three-point shot to pull UCLA back to 60-51.

Washington State, 16-1 overall and 8-0 in the Pac-10, made 16 of 23 field goal attempts in the first 10:43, en route to a 96-71 rout of the Cougars.

Beaver forwards Mark Radford and Ray Rhineboth scored 14-31 at halftime.

PURPOSE to help you consider the priesthood in the Congregation of Holy Cross

DATES Friday, February 13 to Saturday, February 14

PLACE Moreau Seminary

REGISTRATION by calling the Vocation Office - no cost

3685
BIobby Knight

The epitome of enthusiastic fans in the mid-1960s, the Green Bay Packers Backers, will forever lo, must disagree with their leader, Vince Lombardi. Lombardi's authoritative discussions of professional football have often been mentioned in the same breath as a biblical quotation. One of Lombardi's "scripture passages" went something like this, "Winning isn't everything, it is the only thing." The death of the Packer mentor was tragic, yet do not fret Lombardi's fans for that spirit, rather obsession, with winning is still carried on in the college ranks today by one of the most famous coaches in college basketball.

His name is Bobby Knight, head coach of the Indiana Hoosiers.

He is indeed obsessed, more exactly, possessed with the idea of winning. Knight, some people forget to tell him, perhaps a grade school teacher or maybe a high school advisor, what exactly is the definition of class.

Undoubtedly, Bobby Knight has been one of the most successful college coaches already at the youthful age of 41. Included in his totals are a national championship and five Big Ten titles in nine years. He, in fact, has more wins at age 40 than any other college coach. Successful in numbers, yes, but successful as a teacher of young men, an exemplary figure for his players, certainly not.

To begin to rehash stories about Knight is like an introduction to the world's longest novel—there seems to be no end. But for a starting point I'll use the Puerto Rico incident. Is it coincidence that Bobby Knight, not any other coach in the nation, was involved in an altercation with the foreign law? He certainly wasn't the first coach to take a team out of the country.

Originally, Knight was offended by a few Puerto Ricans' lack of respect for America, specifically, the American flag. But Knight, the true patriot that he is, defended his country and had his prejudice induced him—the same prejudice that caused him to make drivel comments toward the black athlete?

Then there was his famous reprimand of the Indiana fans when they objected to an official's decision by chanting, obscenities. Knight this time took it upon himself to snatch the microphone from an undoubtedly surprised announcer. Yet another story.

If I may borrow a quote from a recent edition of Sports Illustrated, Knight's classy comment on the student's way I play, so I stay after practice a lot to work on different things I didn't want him to stop till I get there. With all the work King puts into her game, and that sense of quiet determination that keeps driving her, one has plenty reason to believe that her outstanding game is not too far in the future. It may not come tonight, but let there be no doubt—it will come. And when it does, Maureen King will finally rest easy.

continued from page 11

This Domer takes advantage of the unusual weather to get in some exercise.

IRISH COUNTRY
(UPDER new management)

744 N. Notre Dame
232-0111
OPEN AT NOON-LUNCHES SERVED DAILY

MON—$2.25 beer 9-10
TUES—ladies night 2 for 1 9-10
WED-SAT—live music
happy hour mon-fri. 12-6

bring in this coupon have a beer on us!

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A federal judge, still hoping for a last-minute settlement of the Oakland Raiders anti-trust suit, held closed-door meetings Thursday with half a dozen attorneys in the case.

Bill Robertson, negotiator for the Los Angeles Coliseum Commission, was the only principal figure in the case who appeared with the judge. He said that he tried to find a compromise in the better legal battle which stems from the Raiders' efforts to move to Los Angeles.

Robertson said only that U.S. District Judge Harry Pregerson had asked that he attend the pictorial conference.

"If the NFL is going to make some proposal I guess they would want me to be there," he speculated.

But there was no clue whether any proposals had been offered.

The Coliseum, which is seeking a replacement team following the Los Angeles Rams' move to Anaheim, and the Raiders are using the National Football League to get their team as an alternate.

MONTREAL (AP)—Minnesota rookie goalie Don Beaupre and the Los Angeles Kings high-scoring "Triple Crown line" headed the list of 12 players selected to the Prince of Wales Conference All-Star team, the National Hockey League announced Thursday.

The starting forward line for the Wales team, which will face the Clarke Trophy-winning Canadiens in the 33rd NHL All-Star Game on Feb. 10 in Vancouver, was the only one not composed of players on the last year's All-Star teams.

Another concept, goalie Martin Larson, was selected to back up Beaupre, the 19-year-old rookie who has been a sensational performer for the North Stars this year. With four players on the Kings, the Los Angeles Whalers are the only other teams to place more than one player on the team.

"The first team in the NFL, not the first four as in previous years."
Iowa holds Big Ten lead

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Iowa, sparked by Kevin Boyle and Steve Krafcsin, took charge of the game by scoring 15 straight points in the first half and went on to defeat Purdue 86-67 in a battle of Big Ten Conference basketball leaders Thursday night.

Boyle scored 21 points and Krafcsin came off the bench to net 20 as the 13th-ranked Hawkeyes retained a share of the Big Ten lead. Iowa set its record to 5-2 in the league and 13-3 overall. Purdue, which managed only 10 points in the first 12 minutes of the game, fell to 4-3 and 11-5.

Iowa held Purdue scoreless for 6 1/2 minutes during its first-half outburst, which turned a 7-6 deficit into a 21-7 lead with 9:35 left in the period. Iowa extended the lead to 25-8 on consecutive jump shots by Vince Brookins and led the other three times by 17 points before settling for a 59-27 halftime advantage.

Purdue never got closer than eight points in the second half as the Hawkeyes maintained their defensive pressure even though Krafcsin, starting center Steve Water and Kenny Arnold got into foul trouble.

Judge

continued from page 12

franchise shift. The league voted 22-0 last March against the Raiders' proposed move. It would take 21 affirmative votes to approve a move.

The case is scheduled to go to trial Feb. 9.

The battery of lawyers who crowded into Pregerson's chambers Thursday included representatives of the Raiders, the Coliseum Commission, the NFL, the Rams and the Oakland Coliseum which was granted permission to join the suit as an intervenor last week.

The normally talkative attorneys were tight-lipped about the secret meetings. After a talk with the entire group, Pregerson met separately with the attorneys for each party.

Former San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto, who, along with attorney Moses Lasky, represents the Raiders and its managing general partner Al Davis, emerged from their private session with the judge and gave an elaborate shrug but refused to say much.

"We talked about mutual friends," was all he would say.

AL-LIKE

Join others AL-LIKE' you

Student Health Center
3rd floor Ext. 8809

NHL

continued from page 12

Conference city — are defensemen Larry Robinson, of Montreal and Mark Howe of Hartford. The second team consists of Lessard, defensemen Bure and Toronto and Randy Carlyle of Pittsburgh, center Mike Rogers of Hartford, left wing Steve Shutt of Montreal and right wing Danny Gare of Buffalo.

Five of the 12 players — Beaupre, Lessard, Howe, Carlyle and Rogers — will be appearing in their first NHL All-Star competition. Dionne made the Wales team — which has won all five previous meetings under the inter-conference format — for the sixth straight time. With 148 points in the balloting, Dionne fell just two points short of unanimous selection.

Wales Coach Scotty Bowman, currently the general manager of the Buffalo Sabres, will make eight additions to his squad next week. At least one player from the conference's other three teams — Boston, Detroit and Quebec — must be named.

The voting, with points awarded on a 5-3-1 basis for the first three choices, was as follows:

Goalies: Beaupre, 81; Lessard, 79.
Defensive: Howe, 99; Robinson, 84; Carlyle, 77; Selanne, 72.
Left wing: Simmer, 146; Shutt, 66.
Right wing: Taylor, 136; Gare, 55.
Center: Dionne, 148; Rogers, 66.

...NHL

Even the coolest says it's cool to work layout with The Observer

All new or interested persons should come to the organizational meeting at 8:00 p.m. Thursday night in the Observer office, third floor LaFortune, or call John at 1715.
Irish host four teams in indoor track meet

By MATT HUFFMAN
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame indoor track team will run its second meet of the year tonight when they face Loyola, Bradley, Valparaiso, and Illinois-Chicago Circle. The home opener for the Irish is scheduled to begin at 6:30 p.m. at the ACC and will include fifteen separate events. Admission is free.

In the first meet of the season, Notre Dame was sapped 66-65 by the Hawkeyes of the University of Iowa, though the Irish won nine of fifteen events. "We ran surprisingly well for this early in the season," said sixth-year head coach Joe Plane. "Right on down the line everyone ran competitively."

"This was our first race as a team and hopefully it will be a sign of things to come," Plane continued. Ed Kelly serves in Plane's top and only assistant.

Over the Christmas break Irish stars Tim Macauley and Chuck Aragon ran at East Tennessee St. Aragon ran a 1:52.2 in the 880-yard race which will qualify him for the NCAA track championships March 13-14 in Detroit. Macauley, running in the same open half came in at 1:52.8 and should improve even more to gain an NCAA berth for himself.

Tonight's crowd will be treated to an Irish team which is strong throughout each event. However, the middle distance and distance runners are unquestionably the strongest facet of the team.

In the two-mile run Ralph Caron should lead the way for Notre Dame. Caron is a freshman who proved himself this past cross-country season, often keeping a close pace with top runners Aragon. Caron finished third in the mile run at last week's meet in Iowa City.

Notre Dame will be strongest in the middle distance and distance runners which should test the main Irish strength. Their top star is Chris Heron in the middle distance.

Bradley is strong in the hurdles and also has some very fine jumpers. Ed Foreman is their top runner in the hurdles, while Pat Lawrence is a formidable threat to Bell in the sprints. The Bradley squad has already placed second at the tough Purdue Invitational.

The University of Illinois is strong in the sprints and is the favorite as a team in this category. No information was available on the Valparaiso track team.

"We will be running about 40 people total in the meet," says Plane. "We are only allowed to enter four participants in each race so a few guys will have to sit out, but it is still a good chance to see the bulk of the team in action."

This year's team shows great potential. Steve Chronert, Brian Macauliffe and John Karen will jump, skip, and throw in the pole vault, triple jump and shot put, respectively.

According to Coach Plane, Loyola has a number of good distance and middle distance runners which should test the main Irish strength. Their top star is Chris Heron in the middle distance.

University of Illinois is strong in the hurdles and is the favorite as a team in this category. No information was available on the Valparaiso track team.

"We will be running about 40 people total in the meet," says Plane. "We are only allowed to enter four participants in each race so a few guys will have to sit out, but it is still a good chance to see the bulk of the team in action."

This year's team shows great potential. Steve Chronert, Brian Macauliffe and John Karen will jump, skip, and throw in the pole vault, triple jump and shot put, respectively.

According to Coach Plane, Loyola has a number of good distance and middle distance runners which should test the main Irish strength. Their top star is Chris Heron in the middle distance.

Bradley is strong in the hurdles and also has some very fine jumpers. Ed Foreman is their top runner in the hurdles, while Pat Lawrence is a formidable threat to Bell in the sprints. The Bradley squad has already placed second at the tough Purdue Invitational.

The University of Illinois is strong in the sprints and is the favorite as a team in this category. No information was available on the Valparaiso track team.

"We will be running about 40 people total in the meet," says Plane. "We are only allowed to enter four participants in each race so a few guys will have to sit out, but it is still a good chance to see the bulk of the team in action."

This year's team shows great potential. Steve Chronert, Brian Macauliffe and John Karen will jump, skip, and throw in the pole vault, triple jump and shot put, respectively.

According to Coach Plane, Loyola has a number of good distance and middle distance runners which should test the main Irish strength. Their top star is Chris Heron in the middle distance.

Bradley is strong in the hurdles and also has some very fine jumpers. Ed Foreman is their top runner in the hurdles, while Pat Lawrence is a formidable threat to Bell in the sprints. The Bradley squad has already placed second at the tough Purdue Invitational.

The University of Illinois is strong in the sprints and is the favorite as a team in this category. No information was available on the Valparaiso track team.

"We will be running about 40 people total in the meet," says Plane. "We are only allowed to enter four participants in each race so a few guys will have to sit out, but it is still a good chance to see the bulk of the team in action."

This year's team shows great potential. Steve Chronert, Brian Macauliffe and John Karen will jump, skip, and throw in the pole vault, triple jump and shot put, respectively.

According to Coach Plane, Loyola has a number of good distance and middle distance runners which should test the main Irish strength. Their top star is Chris Heron in the middle distance.

Bradley is strong in the hurdles and also has some very fine jumpers. Ed Foreman is their top runner in the hurdles, while Pat Lawrence is a formidable threat to Bell in the sprints. The Bradley squad has already placed second at the tough Purdue Invitational.

The University of Illinois is strong in the sprints and is the favorite as a team in this category. No information was available on the Valparaiso track team.

"We will be running about 40 people total in the meet," says Plane. "We are only allowed to enter four participants in each race so a few guys will have to sit out, but it is still a good chance to see the bulk of the team in action."

This year's team shows great potential. Steve Chronert, Brian Macauliffe and John Karen will jump, skip, and throw in the pole vault, triple jump and shot put, respectively.

According to Coach Plane, Loyola has a number of good distance and middle distance runners which should test the main Irish strength. Their top star is Chris Heron in the middle distance.

Bradley is strong in the hurdles and also has some very fine jumpers. Ed Foreman is their top runner in the hurdles, while Pat Lawrence is a formidable threat to Bell in the sprints. The Bradley squad has already placed second at the tough Purdue Invitational.

The University of Illinois is strong in the sprints and is the favorite as a team in this category. No information was available on the Valparaiso track team.

"We will be running about 40 people total in the meet," says Plane. "We are only allowed to enter four participants in each race so a few guys will have to sit out, but it is still a good chance to see the bulk of the team in action."

This year's team shows great potential. Steve Chronert, Brian Macauliffe and John Karen will jump, skip, and throw in the pole vault, triple jump and shot put, respectively.

According to Coach Plane, Loyola has a number of good distance and middle distance runners which should test the main Irish strength. Their top star is Chris Heron in the middle distance.

Bradley is strong in the hurdles and also has some very fine jumpers. Ed Foreman is their top runner in the hurdles, while Pat Lawrence is a formidable threat to Bell in the sprints. The Bradley squad has already placed second at the tough Purdue Invitational.

The University of Illinois is strong in the sprints and is the favorite as a team in this category. No information was available on the Valparaiso track team.

"We will be running about 40 people total in the meet," says Plane. "We are only allowed to enter four participants in each race so a few guys will have to sit out, but it is still a good chance to see the bulk of the team in action."

This year's team shows great potential. Steve Chronert, Brian Macauliffe and John Karen will jump, skip, and throw in the pole vault, triple jump and shot put, respectively.

According to Coach Plane, Loyola has a number of good distance and middle distance runners which should test the main Irish strength. Their top star is Chris Heron in the middle distance.

Bradley is strong in the hurdles and also has some very fine jumpers. Ed Foreman is their top runner in the hurdles, while Pat Lawrence is a formidable threat to Bell in the sprints. The Bradley squad has already placed second at the tough Purdue Invitational.

The University of Illinois is strong in the sprints and is the favorite as a team in this category. No information was available on the Valparaiso track team.
Rain, hail delay tourney

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Heavy rain and occasional hail washed out the scheduled first round of the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am, and officials were less than committed Sunday that the famed golf tournament could be completed even on a delayed basis.

A series of Pacific storms have dumped more than three inches of rain on the three Monterey Peninsula courses, wiping out any play on Thursday and setting back the tournament schedule by one full day — at least.

The schedule now calls for single rounds Friday through Monday. But it's still a weather permitting basis.

INTERHALL

INTERHALL basketball rankings

DIVISION A

1. Grace No. 14 A (5-0)
2. Atkinson No. 14 B (5-0)
3. Grover, a southern California real estate developer. Argyros purchased 80 percent of the club for $180 million with four previous owners retaining 20 percent. Argyros, a student of the Seattle Mariners to George segment 2.

David Nagy at Hotel's announced it had approved sale of the Seattle Mariners to George

The 168 pros, each with an average handicap of 10.2, will play one round on each of three courses before the final round. That tournament could be completed even on a delayed basis.

"We'll have to wait to see," Nagy said. "The golf courses would be unplayable, but if the weather clears and it was apparent we could not play," Nagy said.

The long-range forecast called for clearing on Friday, but with the possibility of more rain on the weekend.

The 168 pros, each with an average handicap of 10.2, will play one round on each of three courses before the final round. That tournament could be completed even on a delayed basis.

"We'll have to wait to see," Nagy said. "The golf courses would be unplayable, but if the weather clears and it was apparent we could not play," Nagy said.

The long-range forecast called for clearing on Friday, but with the possibility of more rain on the weekend.

 declivity for the weeklong rain would be inequitable: The 168 pros, each with an average handicap of 10.2, will play one round on each of three courses before the final round. That tournament could be completed even on a delayed basis.

"We'll have to wait to see," Nagy said. "The golf courses would be unplayable, but if the weather clears and it was apparent we could not play," Nagy said.

The long-range forecast called for clearing on Friday, but with the possibility of more rain on the weekend.

The 168 pros, each with an average handicap of 10.2, will play one round on each of three courses before the final round. That tournament could be completed even on a delayed basis.

"We'll have to wait to see," Nagy said. "The golf courses would be unplayable, but if the weather clears and it was apparent we could not play," Nagy said.

The long-range forecast called for clearing on Friday, but with the possibility of more rain on the weekend.

The 168 pros, each with an average handicap of 10.2, will play one round on each of three courses before the final round. That tournament could be completed even on a delayed basis.

"We'll have to wait to see," Nagy said. "The golf courses would be unplayable, but if the weather clears and it was apparent we could not play," Nagy said.

The long-range forecast called for clearing on Friday, but with the possibility of more rain on the weekend.

The 168 pros, each with an average handicap of 10.2, will play one round on each of three courses before the final round. That tournament could be completed even on a delayed basis.

"We'll have to wait to see," Nagy said. "The golf courses would be unplayable, but if the weather clears and it was apparent we could not play," Nagy said.

The long-range forecast called for clearing on Friday, but with the possibility of more rain on the weekend.

The 168 pros, each with an average handicap of 10.2, will play one round on each of three courses before the final round. That tournament could be completed even on a delayed basis.

"We'll have to wait to see," Nagy said. "The golf courses would be unplayable, but if the weather clears and it was apparent we could not play," Nagy said.

The long-range forecast called for clearing on Friday, but with the possibility of more rain on the weekend.

The 168 pros, each with an average handicap of 10.2, will play one round on each of three courses before the final round. That tournament could be completed even on a delayed basis.

"We'll have to wait to see," Nagy said. "The golf courses would be unplayable, but if the weather clears and it was apparent we could not play," Nagy said.

The long-range forecast called for clearing on Friday, but with the possibility of more rain on the weekend.

The 168 pros, each with an average handicap of 10.2, will play one round on each of three courses before the final round. That tournament could be completed even on a delayed basis.

"We'll have to wait to see," Nagy said. "The golf courses would be unplayable, but if the weather clears and it was apparent we could not play," Nagy said.

The long-range forecast called for clearing on Friday, but with the possibility of more rain on the weekend.

The 168 pros, each with an average handicap of 10.2, will play one round on each of three courses before the final round. That tournament could be completed even on a delayed basis.

"We'll have to wait to see," Nagy said. "The golf courses would be unplayable, but if the weather clears and it was apparent we could not play," Nagy said.

The long-range forecast called for clearing on Friday, but with the possibility of more rain on the weekend.

The 168 pros, each with an average handicap of 10.2, will play one round on each of three courses before the final round. That tournament could be completed even on a delayed basis.

"We'll have to wait to see," Nagy said. "The golf courses would be unplayable, but if the weather clears and it was apparent we could not play," Nagy said.

The long-range forecast called for clearing on Friday, but with the possibility of more rain on the weekend.

The 168 pros, each with an average handicap of 10.2, will play one round on each of three courses before the final round. That tournament could be completed even on a delayed basis.

"We'll have to wait to see," Nagy said. "The golf courses would be unplayable, but if the weather clears and it was apparent we could not play," Nagy said.

The long-range forecast called for clearing on Friday, but with the possibility of more rain on the weekend.

The 168 pros, each with an average handicap of 10.2, will play one round on each of three courses before the final round. That tournament could be completed even on a delayed basis.

"We'll have to wait to see," Nagy said. "The golf courses would be unplayable, but if the weather clears and it was apparent we could not play," Nagy said.

The long-range forecast called for clearing on Friday, but with the possibility of more rain on the weekend.
Icers open road swing

By BRIAN BEGLANE

DULUTH, Minn. — Looking for an oasis in a season when things just aren’t going your way?

The Notre Dame hockey team, you could not have picked a better place than this fresh-water playground in northern Minnesota, Duluth. Bulldogs, has the last few years. The two teams been a favorite among Irish players open a crucial two-game Western league tomorrow night's clash, but.

By BRIAN BEGLANE

Sports Writer

oasis in a season when things just aren’t going your way?

Minnesota·Duluth Bulldogs, has the last few years. The two teams been a favorite among Irish players open a crucial two-game Western league.

After this weekend’s series, the Irish travel to Ann Arbor to play Michigan State.

Goalie John McMamara, a busy man in the nets as of late, will lead the Notre Dame hockey team into action tonight at Minnesota Duluth. (Photo by Greg Casagrande)

Sorry, no gossip . . .

It has become the fashion for journalists to constantly be on the lookout for many new stories to report. Dig up the dirt, dream up a catchy headline and keep those presses rolling.

After all, a good newspaperman does have a certain responsibility to keep the readers informed. And, as any reader worth his contact lenses will admit, a real-life, drama-filled weekend is much more fun to read than one of those stories where everyone lives happily ever after.

Unfortunately, I cannot obey those tastes with this particular column because, quite frankly, nothing is rotten in the state of cagedom.

I know, I know... a couple juicy tidbits would really spice things up about now, right? Ok, how about this one:

There are three seniors on this team that don’t get along with each other. In fact, every day we see two of them jousting, and probably all weekend. Irish junior Dave Launton should get the nod in goal tonight.

Irony, I'm sure his taking South Carolina in the right direction.

Notre Dame, meanwhile, will look for the kind of balanced scoring that has eluded their team this season. This 3-3 tie last weekend in Columbia last week. Tri-captains Kelly Tricapa, Jackson Weidler, and Orlando Woolridge have scored 12, 10, and 7 goals, respectively, for Notre Dame. More power to them.

His Blue Devil's hounded the Irish from the NCAA semi-finals in 1979.

The stakes aren’t as high in tomorrow night’s clash, but Phelps and his seniors will undoubtedly try to make the most of their second chance against Foster. The first-year Gamecock coach brings a young 11-year old to South Carolina’s mediocre record, Foster’s club did upset Marquette in the ACC. Foster is noticeably calmer during games than last year, and has the potential to make this season’s battle with Notre Dame anything but a walkover.

South Carolina invades ACC tomorrow night

By KELLY SULLIVAN

Although Notre Dame beat South Carolina 90-66 in Columbia last season, Digger Phelps and his three senior starters will still be looking for revenge tomorrow night when these two teams meet in Notre Dame.

Tri-captains Kelly Tricapa, Tracy Jackson, and Orlando Woolridge were senior starters for Notre Dame played against Foster, then a first-year assistant coach. His Blue Devil's hounded the Irish from the NCAA semi-finals in 1979.

The Irish are still without the services of forward/center Gil Varner, who despise the Irish. In fact, every day we see two of them jousting, and probably all weekend. Irish junior Dave Launton should get the nod in goal tonight.

The Irish are floundering in ninth place with Michigan and Colorado State. The stakes aren’t as high in tomorrow night’s clash, but Phelps and his seniors will undoubtedly try to make the most of their second chance against Foster. The first-year Gamecock coach brings a young 11-year old to South Carolina’s mediocre record, Foster’s club did upset Marquette in the ACC. Foster is noticeably calmer during games than last year, and has the potential to make this season’s battle with Notre Dame anything but a walkover.

So that’s what’s right with the basketball team — at least not at Notre Dame. Phelps and Co. are always good for a few laughs — nipped in the bud. But stay tuned. This team might be worth a few laughs — nipped in the bud.

Love, with each other like Samson and Delilah. Hard to boast about that one, not for Mark Kelly.

“Before the there were always people upset about playing time, or how many shots they were getting, but that’s not the case now. The only goal on this team is to win a national championship.”

It starts with Digger, who is noticeably calmer during games than last year, and has the potential to make this season’s battle with Notre Dame anything but a walkover.

“Digger is the kind of coach that’s able to keep the players grounded and focused. He’s very measured in his approach and doesn’t let emotions get the best of him. He has a great sense of humor and knows how to keep things light. I’m grateful to have him as a coach.”

Another scandal bites the dust — nipped in the bud by a team that knows the joys of harmony and a coach who's dead set on keeping it that way.

So that’s what's right with the basketball team — at least not at Notre Dame. Phelps and Co. are always good for a few laughs — nipped in the bud. But stay tuned. This team might be worth a few laughs — nipped in the bud.

Love, with each other like Samson and Delilah. Hard to boast about that one, not for Mark Kelly.

“For the Irish, it’s different. The Irish are fighting off an injury bug this week. Senior defender Scott Cameron remains sidelined with a separated shoulder. This year’s question: "Who’s going to be out with a broken knuckle?”

In some good news for the Irish, sophomore Dick Olson returns to the lineup after spending two weeks with a knee injury.

“Before the there were always people upset about playing time, or how many shots they were getting, but that’s not the case now. The only goal on this team is to win a national championship.”

It starts with Digger, who is noticeably calmer during games than last year, and has the potential to make this season’s battle with Notre Dame anything but a walkover.

“Digger is the kind of coach that’s able to keep the players grounded and focused. He’s very measured in his approach and doesn’t let emotions get the best of him. He has a great sense of humor and knows how to keep things light. I’m grateful to have him as a coach.”

Another scandal bites the dust — nipped in the bud by a team that knows the joys of harmony and a coach who's dead set on keeping it that way.

So that’s what's right with the basketball team — at least not at Notre Dame. Phelps and Co. are always good for a few laughs — nipped in the bud. But stay tuned. This team might be worth a few laughs — nipped in the bud.

Love, with each other like Samson and Delilah. Hard to boast about that one, not for Mark Kelly.

“Before the there were always people upset about playing time, or how many shots they were getting, but that’s not the case now. The only goal on this team is to win a national championship.”

It starts with Digger, who is noticeably calmer during games than last year, and has the potential to make this season’s battle with Notre Dame anything but a walkover.

“Digger is the kind of coach that’s able to keep the players grounded and focused. He’s very measured in his approach and doesn’t let emotions get the best of him. He has a great sense of humor and knows how to keep things light. I’m grateful to have him as a coach.”

Another scandal bites the dust — nipped in the bud by a team that knows the joys of harmony and a coach who's dead set on keeping it that way.

So that’s what's right with the basketball team — at least not at Notre Dame. Phelps and Co. are always good for a few laughs — nipped in the bud. But stay tuned. This team might be worth a few laughs — nipped in the bud.

Love, with each other like Samson and Delilah. Hard to boast about that one, not for Mark Kelly.