Bishop stands fast on Mardi Gras gambling

By JEFF CHOPPIN
News Staff

Early figures on the results of the past Mardi Gras are not as low as some had expected, but indications regarding the future of the annual event are encouraging.

Although early attendance was poor, the unofficial Mardi Gras results were only $1,000 short of last year's, according to members of the Student Senate Executive Commis-

The final profit will not be known for two weeks, but it was ex-timated to be about $23,000 by head accountant Mike Damaglia. Last year's figure was between $27,000 and $28,000.

Bishop, however, is the beauty of tomorrow's elections for Student Senate, for his own, personal style. He stressed that he

Heaney began by explaining that he started his career in poetry by searching for his own, personal style. He stressed that "each person begins with his own blueprint of poetry."

Heaney opened the Salisbury Literary Festival with a reading from his favorite poems. See story on page 3.

distinctly that it's a pleasure to have Fr. Van Weiskircher and other administrators on this as voting members!

A: Oh yes, we had to revise the constitution, but I would have kept it going in its old form until the constitution was revised. And then, April 1, when everybody turns over, I would have started the CCL in its new form. Right now, the CCL is going to have people on there for just a little over a month, and then membership will change, and we'll have all new people in there; we'll be starting over. The whole year has been wasted. We're not going to get anywhere.

A: I'm not going to make any guarantees. I think it's one of those things we're not going to push towards. Things on our platform basically fall into two categories, either the things we can do right now, or things we can't do right now. Obviously, there are some idealistic things on this platform, but you're

See Q & A, page 3

Irish poet
Heaney opens SLF

By NORMAN PLATE
News Staff

The Sophomore Literary Festival opened last night with Irish poet Seamus Heaney, who addressed a Literary Audience that exceeded capacity. Seamus Heaney, whom Robert Lowell called "Ireland's greatest poet since Yeats," presented the great diversity of his works using landscape, religion, the police, and the even a skunk as sources of inspiration. Heaney began by explaining that he started his career in poetry by searching for his own, personal style. He stressed that "each person begins with his own blueprint of poetry."

Heaney opened the Salisbury Literary Festival with a reading from his favorite poems. See story on page 3.
Regents eye SMC future

Most members of the Saint Mary's student body would be surprised to learn that the Board of Regents made their secession appearance at Saint Mary's 2 weeks ago. They would be surprised because most students do not know such a body exists. Those who do know generally have only a vague notion of the purpose of this group. The Board of Regents appears on campus only to conduct its business. The regents arrive in a flurry and leave in a flurry. During the two or three hours the regents are busy attending one committee meeting after another. At the end of the weekend the whole board meets to discuss the results of the meetings.

The results of this past week's meeting won't be known until a public announcement is released by the president's office. But whatever they accomplished in this meeting— as in all meetings of the board— will affect the operation of the college. Students know this indirectly, they know whenever they want to enact a major change at Saint Mary's it must be fine approved by the Board of Regents. Anything from the tenure of faculty to an extension of vacation time hours requires the board's approval.

Most of the people on the board aren't really as far removed from the actual day-to-day life of the campus as it would seem. They aren't just a bunch of cranked up businessmen and women who aren't aware of the system. They make decisions concerning our college without any real consideration for the students. One board member is a Basically all of the people at the board are the faculty, and another the college presidents. In addition, many members are absent or have a hard time being present. Mrs. Martin, the president of Saint Mary's. This group of people is very much directly concerned with the operation of the college.

Mrs. Gordon Hamel and Mrs. Morris Leighton are two members who are actively interested in the Development Committee. Mrs. Hamel travels from Chicago once a week to meet with the administration about the progress of the committee. Mrs. Leighton, a resident of South Bend, is in almost daily contact with the college. Mrs. Hamel described the Regents as being "dedicated and interested in the operation of the college. They all bring their thoughts from the business and the cultural worlds and share them with the administration. The administration in turn shares with us what is happening at Saint Mary's, which is very helpful." Mrs. Leighton agreed and also expressed these thoughts and came up with what is best for the college.

Mrs. Hamel is an alumna of the college and has two daughters who graduated from Saint Mary's, one in 1959. Mrs. Leighton is unique in that she did not attend Saint Mary's, nor is she Catholic. But she is one of the most influential members of the South Bend community and has a high regard for Saint Mary's as an educational institution for women.

Margie Brussell
SMC Executive Editor

Inside Monday

Under the need for financial stability in a period of nationwide economic difficulty has increased so has the importance of the Development Committee. Mrs. Hamel described the need for development of the college as "being an ongoing necessity which cannot happen everyday to ensure the future of Saint Mary's."

"Development is very vital for the future of Saint Mary's, which is probably why our committee is so active. If we will we all can continue to Saint Mary's to make the great educational strides it has made in the past," Mrs. Hamel concluded. "The projection for 1990, which shatters all of us, is $20,000 tuition per year for private colleges.

So the role we must play is not only to keep the college open, but also to increase the financial aid to students who need it."

Mrs. Leighton stated in reference to the economic cut-off, "We've been talking about this for years, but we can go back to private enterprise, which was the way it was done before 1957. There was no aid for college students. Our goal now is to become as self-sufficient as possible. We've become so dependent on federal aid for everything, and this is wrong. It has become a way of life, and it will not be easy to break."

"The money for the colleges could come from endowments, and not from Washington," Mrs. Hamel concluded. "The purpose of the Development Committee is to build up the endowments here at the college; to use the interest from the endowments to continue these financial programs to help the students. The situation could also motivate the students to work. Since the costs will not be reduced, students will need to work in addition to school and not just in the summer."

But Mrs. Leighton is in agreement with Mrs. Hamel. The Board of Regents, through the Development Committee, is trying to find a solution. The work required of the people on the board is mysterious, but their work is actually very concrete.
continued from page 1

got to have some idealism, for things to work toward in the future. You're right. Q. What is your platform idea for the campaign? A. That's something I brought up in my Senate campaign way back then. Basically, what I had conceived, was student government buying a couple of engravers, and they go out on loan to people so that they can borrow them to mark their stereo and other valuable things. I can't see where it's going to be a big money-earner deal to have student government buy a couple of these engravers. We're just trying to prevent effort, or at least give students the chance to get merchandise back.

Q. You don't feel Paul Riehle has unified the student voice? A (Canino): He's worked toward that, yes — we're not saying he hasn't. But we feel that it could be done a little bit better. We're on the road, but we have to push on a bit more.

Q. Your platform is very similar to Joe Monday's. What's the difference between you two? A (Borchers): I think everybody wants basically the same thing. In general, we're probably headed in the same direction that Don is. But I think it's essentially a matter of style. We come from outside student government, so to speak, or more on the edges. We're not up there in Paul Riehle's very tight inner circle. We don't have indoctrinated beliefs that this is the right way to do things, and that's the only way it will ever be done. I'm about two steps back, and I'm looking at things and I'm probably seeing different things than Monday. He was an organization that functions, and I'm trying to righ down back and say, "Hey, if we put things this way, it would work a lot better, and we could really make things much more efficient."

Canino: Before you can accomplish anything, you have to have the student body behind you, and you have to have student government backing you. And right now, that's a problem.

Q. Yes, but what will you do about apathy? A: You've got to show them that you're visible, you've got to show students that you care, who you are. I mean, we've even had people ask us about Faulkner in white. We've been campaigning. To combat apathy, you have to show them that things can be done, and the only way that people are going to listen to you is with results.

Borchers: We need more victories like the escort system, which, not to blow my own horn, has been successful. It's one of those "right now" things. We saw a problem, and we handled it right now, and student government coordinated it, and it's a victory in every sense.
Editorials

Murdy receives SBP endorsement

The office of Student Body President requires a candidate with both a realistic and goal-oriented vision of student government. The SBP must be a lobbyist for the student body as well as a leader who articulates the student voice. His goals must be concrete and pragmatic, not idealistic wishes for a stopgap student future. Past SBPs, have met with varied measures of success along these lines, some having success "in the short term," while others achieving success "on paper." Thus the former type of student leader whom The Observer wishes to endorse.

Don Murdy is a student leader who has always tried to implement his plans towards "concrete" ends. The Student Senate, intended renovation of LaFemina, and the other successes of the current Paul Richle tenure are all achievements which can be clearly pointed towards. While they are not the progressive ideals (such as elimination of part-timers and a liberal university cap policy) which many students would like to see, they are something which can be documented for, as well as on, paper. Murdy is aware that student government is limited in its scope and directly dependent on the Administration. With this in mind it makes sense to shoot for smaller, direct return goals when conceiving student government policy.

Though Murdy retains a slight element of the visionary (his wishful proposal, shared by his opponent, to include a student on the Board of Trustees), his proposals show a candidate who knows what the administration is willing to give. His record indicates that he knows how to go about attaining those proposals.

It is for these last two reasons, that The Observer endorses Don Murdy and Tara Kenney for SBP-SBP. Their opponents, Pat Burcher and Rosemary Cimo bespeak goals quite similar to the Murdy ticket. In fact, in today's front-page "Q & A," Burchers listed the main differences between the tickets as one of perspective, for he feels that he will be bringing fresh insight to the office.

Some novel ideas are presented in the Burchers/Cimo platform, but their proposals for the future University in the real estate business by lobbying for an off-campus housing district, and their plan to add a "non-local" dimension to a telephone system are such foreign concepts that few would be prepared to accept them.

There is even less to say about a third ticket, "Don't Vote at All."

Wayne State conference

Reagan considers draft

DETROIT — Nineteen-year-old Dennis Sheninski borrowed $600 from his father and flew here last weekend to attend the first major anti-draft conference since the end of the Vietnam War.

The short-haired, Everest (Wash.) Community College freshman had never been east of the Rockies. But he came to this depression-ridden city out of fear that he'll be drafted and end up in a box as a solder.

Many of the 1200 high school and college students who slept in neighborhood church basements and on dormitory floors here on the Wayne State University campus expressed similar fears to our reporter, Michael Duffy.

"It's our asses that are on the line," said one high school senior from Minneapolis, who conceded, "many students still think the draft is going to happen. We've got to educate them."

To be sure, the teenagers who attended this conference aren't stupid. They see advertisements for defense contractors in news magazines, hear Walter Cronkite report about the nation's under­ strength, and read in local newspapers about the Reagan administration's "get tough" foreign policy.

They have good reason for their trepidation.

Despite campaign pledges to end the Selective Service System's registration of 18-year-old males, President Reagan is edging ever closer to resuming a peace time draft.

Several days ago, the president admitted publicly that he's now hesitant about eliminating the registration program for fear such a move might send a signal to Moscow that "America is soft again."

In an interview with the Harvard Crimson, President Reagan admitted that he might favor resuming a draft if "the world is in such a state that you believe the national security of our country might be endangered."

But there would be other motivations.

Reagan has told aides in the Defense and State Departments that he would be important for him to discontinue the registration program at the same time he's advancing a stronger U.S. defense posture. From a budgetary standpoint, the president also knows that a draft might produce savings for the Pentagon and taxpayers. Half of the Pentagon's current budget now goes for personnel costs.

"The president led me to believe that he's slowly going to build support for a return of the draft," one Reagan aide said. "He doesn't want to do anything abruptly that could get him into hot political waters."

Not to be left unprepared, some of the thousands of anti-draft activists have been heading his reserve centers and preparing for the draft's return.

Though the plans haven't been made public, the government is preparing to reinstate a classification system, possibly as early as this summer.

Next year, a "reserve draft" is a good possibility. Under this plan, young men would report for three months of training, and then go on inactive duty for five years.

Congressional opponents of the draft are disturbed by the developments, but are laying off the president for the time being for fear the slightest criticism might cause him to act more quickly.

Meantime, to the surprise and embarrassment of principals and school boards, groups opposing the draft are organizing in high school classrooms.

"It took some time," said 17-year-old Heather Thompson of Detroit's Cass High School, who local a chapter of the Committee Against Registration of the Draft (CARD) has become an official school club. "The school administration said we couldn't be 'against the draft. They said we had to examine both sides. But we prevailed."

Cass High School's CARD organization wrote and distributed to 10,000 Tigers to Detroit-area high school students, which were asked to help plan the conference and register and house its participants.

In manner and appearance, many of the young participants at this conference differed greatly from their 1960s counterparts. They were short-haired, neatly-dressed, articulate and poised. They talked to political and labor leaders with reverence and revealed mixed feelings of hope and fear about standing up to the government.

But stand up they did to put the country on notice that draft-age Americans won't fight without resistance. Or something that's been lacking in the government's rhetoric to date.

Surely our nation's military planners and political leaders can't afford to take these teenagers for granted in their long-range planning.

Everyone knows how excited high school students can get about basketball championships, band concerts and other rites of passage. Imagine if even a small percentage of them carry that energy into draft resistance during the next few years.

Maxwell Glen and Cidy Shearer are syndicated columnists.

The Observer

Box Q, Notre Dame, IN 46506

The Observer is an independent newspaper published by the students of the University of Notre Dame de la Lac and Saint Mary's College. It does not necessarily reflect the policies of the administration of either institution. The news is reported as accurately and as objectively as possible. Editorials represent the opinion of a majority of the Editorial Board. Commentaries, opinions, and letters are the views of their authors. Column space is available to all members of the community, and the free expression of varying opinions on campus, through letters, is encouraged.

Editorial Board and Department Managers

Editor in Chief ................................................. Paul Knutson
Managing Editor ............................................. Mark Fricke
Editorial Editor .............................................. Michael Cenek
Senior Copy Editor ................................. Mary Year Taylor
Executive News Editor .............................. Tom Jackson
Copy Editor ................................................... Lyne Daley
SMC News Editor ......................................... Margaret Brault
SMC News Editor ......................................... Mary Laws
Sports Editor ................................................. Beth Hoffman
Features Editor ................................................... Molly Woody
Photo Editor ................................................... John Nacar
Sales Manager .................................................. Paul Wensley
Business Manager ........................................... Greg Hesley
Controller ......................................................... Jim Suid
Advertising Manager ...................................... Michael Mares
Advertising Sales Manager ......................... Michael McCarty
Circulation Manager ................................. Beth Harken
Production Manager ...................................... John McGraw

CUTTING DOWN ON FOOD STAMPS—THAT'S OUTRAGEOUS! MOST OF OUR LOWER RANKS ARE ON FOOD STAMPS!

Garry Trudeau

Wayne State conference

Reagan considers draft

DETROIT — Nineteen-year-old Dennis Sheninski borrowed $600 from his father and flew here last weekend to attend the first major anti-draft conference since the end of the Vietnam War.

The short-haired, Everest (Wash.) Community College freshman had never been east of the Rockies. But he came to this depression-ridden city out of fear that he'll be drafted and end up in a box as a soldier.

Many of the 1200 high school and college students who slept in neighborhood church basements and on dormitory floors here on the Wayne State University campus expressed similar fears to our reporter, Michael Duffy.

"It's our asses that are on the line," said one high school senior from Minneapolis, who conceded, "many students still think the draft is going to happen. We've got to educate them."

To be sure, the teenagers who attended this conference aren't stupid. They see advertisements for defense contractors in news magazines, hear Walter Cronkite report about the nation's understrength, and read in local newspapers about the Reagan administration's "get tough" foreign policy.

They have good reason for their trepidation.

Despite campaign pledges to end the Selective Service System's registration of 18-year-old males, President Reagan is edging ever closer to resuming a peace time draft.

Several days ago, the president admitted publicly that he's now hesitant about eliminating the registration program for fear such a move might send a signal to Moscow that "America is soft again."

In an interview with the Harvard Crimson, President Reagan admitted that he might favor resuming a draft if "the world is in such a state that you believe the national security of our country might be endangered."

But there would be other motivations.

Reagan has told aides in the Defense and State Departments that it would be important for him to discontinue the registration program at the same time he's advancing a stronger U.S. defense posture. From a budgetary standpoint, the president also knows that a draft might produce savings for the Pentagon and taxpayers. Half of the Pentagon's current budget now goes for personnel costs.

"The president led me to believe that he's slowly going to build support for a return of the draft," one Reagan aide said. "He doesn't want to do anything abruptly that could get him into hot political waters."

Not to be left unprepared, some of the thousands of anti-draft activists have been heading his reserve centers and preparing for the draft's return.

Though the plans haven't been made public, the government is preparing to reinstate a classification system, possibly as early as this summer.

Next year, a "reserve draft" is a good possibility. Under this plan, young men would report for three months of training, and then go on inactive duty for five years.

Congressional opponents of the draft are disturbed by the developments, but are laying off the president for the time being for fear the slightest criticism might cause him to act more quickly.

Meantime, to the surprise and embarrassment of principals and school boards, groups opposing the draft are organizing in high school classrooms.

"It took some time," said 17-year-old Heather Thompson of Detroit's Cass High School, who local a chapter of the Committee Against Registration of the Draft (CARD) has become an official school club. "The school administration said we couldn't be 'against the draft. They said we had to examine both sides. But we prevailed."

Cass High School's CARD organization wrote and distributed to 10,000 Tigers to Detroit-area high school students, which were asked to help plan the conference and register and house its participants.

In manner and appearance, many of the young participants at this conference differed greatly from their 1960s counterparts. They were short-haired, neatly-dressed, articulate and poised. They talked to political and labor leaders with reverence and revealed mixed feelings of hope and fear about standing up to the government.

But stand up they did to put the country on notice that draft-age Americans won't fight without resistance. Or something that's been lacking in the government's rhetoric to date.

Surely our nation's military planners and political leaders can't afford to take these teenagers for granted in their long-range planning.

Everyone knows how excited high school students can get about basketball championships, band concerts and other rites of passage. Imagine if even a small percentage of them carry that energy into draft resistance during the next few years.

Maxwell Glen and Cidy Shearer are syndicated columnists.
...Track

In two weeks Aragon and the distance medley relay of Morgan, Macaulay, Jacque Eady, and Rick Rogers will travel to Detroit, Mich., for the NCAS Indoor Track and Field Championships. Though Aragon has qualified for the championships in both the mile and half-mile, he will be running only in the mile, the stronger of the two events for him.

Only two runners, Salmon Nam (both recruits from Ghana) have run better times than Aragon this year. At present these two athletes stand between Chuck Aragon and Notre Dame's first national championship of 1981.

Steinbrenner appoints Lou Saban

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — George Steinbrenner named Lou Saban, a longtime football coach, president of the New York Yankees Sunday and immediately tossed him a hot potato — the 40-year-old Reggie Jackson.

One of Saban's first duties as administrative head of baseball's most successful franchise will be to assess the estimated $2,500 penalty for his failure to arrive at spring training on time — for the second consecutive year.

"George and I have known each other for very many years," Saban told a small press gathering at Yankee trailer alongside the playing field. "Like him, I feel strongly about discipline. You have to pay a price to win."

In announcing Saban's appointment Steinbrenner acknowledged that he was installing a man whose career had been spent entirely in another sport.

"There is nothing magical about having 40 years of baseball experience," the Yankee owner said. "He doesn't have it. I didn't have it."

"George exemplifies everything that sport stands for," Saban said. "He's a winner. Personally, I think George's desire always has been to be a football coach."

IUSB Art Show

The annual IUSB student art show opens April 12 in the school library (1825 North Side Blvd.). A reception will be held on that date at 3 p.m. Work will be for sale, including punch, hors d'oeuvres and other dishes. The show runs through Friday, May 1, and will feature drawings, designs, prints, paintings and sculptures, with selections of each for sale. There is no admission fee and all Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students are invited.

Mike Russi (right) won a unanimous decision over Greg Hansen in a quarterfinal Bengal Bout action. (Photo by Chris Salzmann)

An emergency stop for repairs can wipe out even the best-heeled traveler. Luckily, all you need is the price of a phone call to get you the money before your car gets off the lift. Here's what to do when you need money in a hurry.

1. Call home. Report the situation, and tell the folks they can get emergency cash to you fast by phone.

2. Ask them to call Western Union Card Money Order, toll-free number, 800-225-6000 (in Missouri, 800-542-6700), anytime, day or night. They charge the money and the service fee to their MasterCard or VISA! card. A Western Union Charge Card Money Order, up to $1,000, will be flashed to the Western Union office or agent nearest your emergency.

3. Pick up your money — usually within two hours — at the local Western Union office or agent. There are 8,600 nationally, except in Alaska. Conveniently, about 900 locations are open 24 hours. It's that easy.

Be sure to remind your parents about our toll-free number. It's all they need to call Western Union to the rescue.

The Observer

Monday, March 2, 1981 — page 6
The Notre Dame swim team lost to Bradley, 64-49, Saturday in Peoria, Ill. The Irish are now 3-9 and travel to Terre Haute for the Midwest Invitational Championships on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday.

Notre Dame and SMC fencers were in action at the University of Illinois on Saturday. The Irish met with the most successful fencing team in the country, Navy. Monday marks the return of Notre Dame's men's fencing team, 62-11, in the season. The men are 1-6 on the season. The Notre Dame men were 2-2 on Saturday. Lisoning to Wayne State University and U. of Illinois and Rutgers University. Notre Dame women captured the title in 1-1 on the day, and now has a 3-5 season record. Saturday's match was moved to Saturday at 7:45 p.m. Tickets are priced at $5 for ring side and $3 for general admission.

The 1981 Bengal Bouts continue with the semifinals Wednesday evening at 7:30 in the ACC main arena. Tickets are still available and are priced at $2 for ring side and $1.50 for general admission. The finals, featuring the long-awaited Marc (Jeffers for 4-2), will be played on Friday, March 13. Both matches begin at 7:30 p.m. with $5 reserved seating. The area will also be open for alumni seating.

The NCAA basketball tournament begins Monday. The East Region is still up for grabs, and each team will be playing for a chance at the final four. The ACC semifinals are scheduled for Tuesday and Wednesday.

NOTICES

To set up a fence phone at 462-5665.

PROFESSIONAL TYPING

Jeff, 754-0559.

Lost

On Sunday, February 22nd, a pair of eyeslides in frameless glasses are a white line.)

If you found this pair, please call me at 432-9537.

LEFT ON COPY MACHINE

In Jan, '81, we left a copy machine in the main office. We left it on the 2nd floor and on the 3rd floor. If you find it, please call Greggoe, 3052.

LOST

On Sunday, February 22nd, a pair of glasses in frameless glasses are a white line.)

If you found this pair, please call me at 432-9537.

PERSONALS

I WANT TO BE FRIENDS

WANTED

I NEED A RIDE TO ENSBURG

217-9488.

I NEED A RIDE TO ENSBURG

217-9488.

I NEED A RIDE TO ENSBURG

217-9488.

I NEED A RIDE TO ENSBURG

217-9488.

I NEED A RIDE TO ENSBURG

217-9488.

I NEED A RIDE TO ENSBURG

217-9488.

I NEED A RIDE TO ENSBURG

217-9488.

I NEED A RIDE TO ENSBURG

217-9488.

I NEED A RIDE TO ENSBURG

217-9488.

I NEED A RIDE TO ENSBURG

217-9488.

I NEED A RIDE TO ENSBURG

217-9488.

I NEED A RIDE TO ENSBURG

217-9488.

I NEED A RIDE TO ENSBURG

217-9488.

I NEED A RIDE TO ENSBURG

217-9488.

I NEED A RIDE TO ENSBURG

217-9488.

I NEED A RIDE TO ENSBURG

217-9488.

I NEED A RIDE TO ENSBURG

217-9488.

I NEED A RIDE TO ENSBURG

217-9488.

I NEED A RIDE TO ENSBURG

217-9488.

I NEED A RIDE TO ENSBURG

217-9488.

I NEED A RIDE TO ENSBURG

217-9488.

I NEED A RIDE TO ENSBURG

217-9488.

I NEED A RIDE TO ENSBURG

217-9488.

I NEED A RIDE TO ENSBURG

217-9488.

I NEED A RIDE TO ENSBURG

217-9488.

I NEED A RIDE TO ENSBURG

217-9488.

I NEED A RIDE TO ENSBURG

217-9488.

I NEED A RIDE TO ENSBURG

217-9488.

I NEED A RIDE TO ENSBURG

217-9488.

I NEED A RIDE TO ENSBURG

217-9488.

I NEED A RIDE TO ENSBURG

217-9488.

I NEED A RIDE TO ENSBURG

217-9488.

I NEED A RIDE TO ENSBURG

217-9488.

I NEED A RIDE TO ENSBURG

217-9488.

I NEED A RIDE TO ENSBURG

217-9488.

I NEED A RIDE TO ENSBURG

217-9488.

I NEED A RIDE TO ENSBURG

217-9488.

I NEED A RIDE TO ENSBURG

217-9488.
Sports

Tri-captains excel as Irish win

By BETH HUFFMAN

Sports Editor

Saturday’s 70-57 Irish win over Dayton was something special, not because the Irish had a history as an other great game under the ACC dorms, but mostly because the contest itself was a thrill.

The win over the Flyers marked the seventh straight home victory for three seniors on this year’s Notre Dame squad. The previous home streak was four times (20 points and 11 rebounds), Orlando Wooldridge (18 points and seven rebounds) and Tracy Jackson (20 points and 12 rebounds) put on an offensive show between themselves.

So Notre Dame is 7-0 and 1-0 in conference, the first regular to take an ND record holder in the half-mile this weekend at the Illini Champaign.

Notre Dame’s all-time scoring list, Jackson, who was going to dominate three of the Irish’s other three seniors, Stan Wilcox, Gilberto Salinas and walk on Kevin Hawkins were also able to take a final bow in front of the Bob Digger Phelps answered the credit to John.

Phelps, which would finish fourth on Notre Dame’s all-scoring list, was the first regular to take an ND record holder in the half-mile this weekend at the Illini Champaign.

"I think we should congratulate the seniors," said Donoher. "They were great players, and I think we should give them the respect they deserve."

The victory was the Irish’s sixth in eight games, including the Euros’ 117-1 victory over Wayne State on Saturday night.

"We just lost the game in the first half," said Donoher. "We had the lead, and we didn’t have the offensive punch to take it to the finish line."

Relying on the scoring and rebounding of senior Travis Borden and Jackson (who scored all but four of Notre Dame’s 52 half-time points) Notre Dame wore down Dayton’s man-to-man defense. The Flyers, an extremely young team (all-divisional stands on the rule that the Irish now owns a 1-16 advantage in the Dayton series. Notre Dame shot 53 percent from the field and 57-1 from the line while limiting the Flyers to 32-10.

Kelly Trippka was a reminder that Jim Pennix, he’s so good without the ball,” continued Donoher.

Paxson, a two-time all-American with the Flyers and now a member of the NBA Portland TrailBlazers, is the brother of Notre Dame point guard, John. The younger Paxson, playing in front of a few of the six seniors, and his more experienced and friends, seemed shaken in the game against not only his brother’s, but his father’s former team. The 6-2 sophomores wore an uncharacteristic 0-for-three from the line while collecting just four points, far below their average. The Irish playmaker contributed a tremendous start and a stellar defensive performance.

"Paxson forced a (Kevin) to the opposite side of Kameski," said Donoher, explaining his team’s offensive difficulties.

The 6-10 Kameski, who averages 17.4 ppg, finished as the Flyers’ high scorer with 15 points while Rechel Montague was Dayton’s only other double-figure man at 10.

The three lauded seniors literally decided the game. Eleven seniors, now, for the first time since 1980-81 no longer relinquishing the lead and extending the margin to 20 points.

"We said to each other as we were coming in for the coin toss, 'Hey, this is our last game ever, so let’s really enjoy it,'" said Donoher.

The win over the Flyers marked the seventh straight home victory for three seniors on this year’s Notre Dame squad. The previous home streak was four times.

The Irish were shunted, Perry and Logan each scored in the third period, as the Irish took the victory.

"McNamara’s goaltending was super," said coach Lefty Smith, "because we had to win. Everyone put in a super effort."

"Jeff Logan’s performance was particularly amazing, because he has tendencies to come out of position and take a few too many goals in the first period," said coach Lefty Smith, "because we had to win. Everyone put in a super effort."

"Paxson forced a (Kevin) to the opposite side of Kameski," said Donoher, explaining his team’s offensive difficulties.

The 6-10 Kameski, who averages 17.4 ppg, finished as the Flyers’ high scorer with 15 points while Rechel Montague was Dayton’s only other double-figure man at 10.

The three lauded seniors literally decided the game. Eleven seniors, now, for the first time since 1980-81 no longer relinquishing the lead and extending the margin to 20 points.

"We said to each other as we were coming in for the coin toss, 'Hey, this is our last game ever, so let’s really enjoy it,'" said Donoher.

The win over the Flyers marked the seventh straight home victory for three seniors on this year’s Notre Dame squad. The previous home streak was four times.

The Irish were shunted, Perry and Logan each scored in the third period, as the Irish took the victory.

"McNamara’s goaltending was super," said coach Lefty Smith, "because we had to win. Everyone put in a super effort."

"Jeff Logan’s performance was particularly amazing, because he has tendencies to come out of position and take a few too many goals in the first period," said coach Lefty Smith, "because we had to win. Everyone put in a super effort."

"Paxson forced a (Kevin) to the opposite side of Kameski," said Donoher, explaining his team’s offensive difficulties.

The 6-10 Kameski, who averages 17.4 ppg, finished as the Flyers’ high scorer with 15 points while Rechel Montague was Dayton’s only other double-figure man at 10.

The three lauded seniors literally decided the game. Eleven seniors, now, for the first time since 1980-81 no longer relinquishing the lead and extending the margin to 20 points.

"We said to each other as we were coming in for the coin toss, 'Hey, this is our last game ever, so let’s really enjoy it,'" said Donoher.

The win over the Flyers marked the seventh straight home victory for three seniors on this year’s Notre Dame squad. The previous home streak was four times.

The Irish were shunted, Perry and Logan each scored in the third period, as the Irish took the victory.

"McNamara’s goaltending was super," said coach Lefty Smith, "because we had to win. Everyone put in a super effort."

"Jeff Logan’s performance was particularly amazing, because he has tendencies to come out of position and take a few too many goals in the first period," said coach Lefty Smith, "because we had to win. Everyone put in a super effort."

"Paxson forced a (Kevin) to the opposite side of Kameski," said Donoher, explaining his team’s offensive difficulties.

The 6-10 Kameski, who averages 17.4 ppg, finished as the Flyers’ high scorer with 15 points while Rechel Montague was Dayton’s only other double-figure man at 10.

The three lauded seniors literally decided the game. Eleven seniors, now, for the first time since 1980-81 no longer relinquishing the lead and extending the margin to 20 points.

"We said to each other as we were coming in for the coin toss, 'Hey, this is our last game ever, so let’s really enjoy it,'" said Donoher.

The win over the Flyers marked the seventh straight home victory for three seniors on this year’s Notre Dame squad. The previous home streak was four times.

The Irish were shunted, Perry and Logan each scored in the third period, as the Irish took the victory.

"McNamara’s goaltending was super," said coach Lefty Smith, "because we had to win. Everyone put in a super effort."

"Jeff Logan’s performance was particularly amazing, because he has tendencies to come out of position and take a few too many goals in the first period," said coach Lefty Smith, "because we had to win. Everyone put in a super effort."

"Paxson forced a (Kevin) to the opposite side of Kameski," said Donoher, explaining his team’s offensive difficulties.

The 6-10 Kameski, who averages 17.4 ppg, finished as the Flyers’ high scorer with 15 points while Rechel Montague was Dayton’s only other double-figure man at 10.