The cattle prod consists of a handle, a slender metal tube containing six to ten 1.5-volt "C" batteries, and two prongs at the end. The prongs are touched to the skin and the switch is pushed to send an electrical charge.

The suit claims that on May 7, Alfred Washington was physically beaten by officers Steve Cump and Doug Acker. Acker, the suit contends, forced Washington to pull down his pants and then put a prod to his groin area five times. James Pichette, commander of officers Billy Ray Smith and Lamar Crouse, beat him on June 4 and that Smith stood on his hand while Crouse applied a prod to his chest and groin area.

Amos Lee McCoy says that on May 7, Crouse beat him and that Acker applied a prod to his leg and on his hands.

Washington and McCoy have been indicted on burglary charges and Pichette has been bound over to a Jefferson County grand jury on a burglary charge.

Former Police Chief George Barrett said between 60 and 70 of the prods were bought during the early 1960s "more or less for crowd control."

A trial date has been set in a lawsuit filed by three North Koreans who claim to have been injured by a six-day printout of the North Korean newspaper. The suit also claims that the printing caused a fire in the neighborhood.

United States is contacting the Chinese and Soviet governments to "request that they convey our deep concern over this incident to North Korean authorities and that North Korea avoid any repetition of such dangerous activity."

The SR-71, which can fly at over 2,000 mph, can photograph wide areas from altitudes over 80,000 feet. The United States never has accused North Korea of firing at the SR-71. According to a North Korean spokesman, the report was "proved that the North Koreans have not directly accused the United States of firing at the SR-71."

The commission was established to deal with violations of the armistice agreement. The first to defy a national strike offer was a newspaper. Belize, the last British colony in Central America, will become independent on Sept. 21, despite lack of final approval from neighboring Guatemala, the Foreign Office in London said Thursday.

But the door remains open for fresh negotiations on an amicable agreement answering Guatamalan traditional claims of sovereignty over the tropical colony of about 180,000 people, a spokesman said.

Belize, formerly British Honduras, had self-government since 1964, and independence was achieved because of the Guatamalan claim.

In the most recent British-Guatemalan talks, which took place in New York last month, "we were unsuccessful in resolving the problem even though the door is still open for negotiations to continue," said Foreign Office spokesman Brian Bowley.

The Social Democratic Party's youth wing Thursday called for a mass demonstration by West Germans to protest the Reagan administration's "peace-endangering policy.

A statement by the Young Socialists said the protest would be held Sept. 13 when Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. is scheduled to visit them, a tour of Berlin.

The Young Socialists said they believed Reagan was pursuing a policy of confrontation with the soviet Union that would lead to a "dangerous sharpening" of the national situation.

Gone with the wind for four days, Scarlet O'Hara is back to the kitchen.

Scarlet, a Southern American moccas worth $2,500, was stolen from Ed Bobenheimer's Topsfield bird shop Sunday. Yesterday, she was back and her kidnapper was under arrest.

Police arrested Arthur Todisco, 19, of Boston, who was charged with receiving more than $100 in stolen property.

Officers said they found Scarlet munching birdseed in a nine-foot cage in Todisco's apartment Wednesday, four days after she was kidnapped.

Bobenheimer told the police Todisco came to the shop Saturday and bought Scarlet for $2,500 plus tax. He promised to return, said Bobenheimer.

The next day the bird disappeared.

Elevated beds will be permitted to stand as high as seven feet, said Vice-president for Student Affairs Fr. John Van Wolveln in a letter to student council chairman Mike Martin.

But the student-built beds must still be at least three feet from the ceiling, in accordance with building regulations. The change is in the regulation, which originally stipulated that beds could stand no higher than six feet.

Fires set by rioters in the urban violence that erupted in several cities last month destroyed property valued at $83,000, Liverpool, Manchester and other cities.

An anti-abortion group will protest to the Vatican because a group of nun's are backing a women's rights rally.

The New Hampshire Rights to Life Committee called it "disgraceful" that the nuns have given $50,000 to a group of Polish nuns sponsoring a rally on Saturday to protest violence against women.

"We feel we are being hypocritical," said the committee's President Barbara Keresu. The nuns' involvement is improper, she said, because "anti-life and pro-homosexual" groups are also sponsors.

But Sister Joanne Bibeau said the Sisters of Mercy felt they "would be very negligent" if they didn't fight violence against women.

When rumors began to spread that Northern Indiana Public Service Co. might scrap its controversial bulk nuclear power plant, state Rep. Bill Dreda decided to "clean my house for a victory party and keep my fingers crossed.

Dreda, a Democrat and outspoken anti-nuclear critic said he wanted to be ready for a celebration when the formal announcement came.

That occurred Wednesday afternoon when NIPSCO president Edward F. Gerschap announced the company had decided to proceed with the project that has encountered 10 years of legal battles. The unfinished plant is located on the shores of Lake Michigan near Burns Harbor.

Gerschap said NIPSCO's board members voted to shut down the plant because of costs.

Breda said that more than 200 party-goers celebrated Wednesday night.

Most local political figures, NIPSCO construction workers and union officials -- all opponents of the nuclear power plant -- attended the party, he said.

Tom Gerschap, the driver of the Long Island baggage truck that crashed and flipped on its side when its brakes failed on the Ohio Turnpike, was transferred Tuesday to the Cleveland General Hospital for consideration of pressing charges against the U-Haul company that leased him the truck.

The club, which was insured for $10,000 in the venture, said it does not plan to press charges against the driver, however, who says "I was in the truck just as much as their baggage was," insisted that the truck was in good working order and makes his decision to press charges. He plans to contact the Notre Dame Legal Aid department for legal advice in the case. -- The Observer

Med flies descend on LA

SAN FRANCISCO (ap) — Six more adult medflies were found near Los Angeles yesterday, but no information may have been brought under control in the lush San Joaquin Valley and the San Jose area where it began.

The recent discovery of Mediterranean fruit flies in suburban Los Angeles was announced as officials endeavored to stop aerial spraying.

Local agriculture authorities recommended a 165-square-mile quarantine area be established around Baldwin Park. The state’s newly eradication centers are preparing a 5,600-square-mile quarantine zone, more than double the size of the zone already established in Northern California.

In recent days, flies also have been found near Oakland, east of here. The Baldwin Park and Oakland areas, 400 miles apart, are the southwest and northeastern points invaded by the flies.

Helicopters dumped pesticide-laced bait over 9 square miles around Baldwin Park on Wednesday night and were to spray malathion over 12 square miles of Oakland on Thursday night.

Meanwhile, state agriculture officials said the cost of battling the pest could reach $1.2 billion if the infestation becomes epidemic.

Although information about the new semester in London program for Arts and Letters juniors is scarce at present, an informational meeting for students interested will be held in the near future, according to Acting Dean Robert Burns. Signs announcing the meeting will be posted around the campus.

The College of Arts and Letters has developed this program for juniors primarily because of the many cultural and educational opportunities in London.

The program will be conducted during the spring semester at Notre Dame’s London Center in Piccadilly. Professors from both Notre Dame and London will teach the courses.

Currently, both the Notre Dame Law School and the College of Business are using the London Center.

There will be courses available in English, social sciences, religion/philosophy. The courses and credit hours that students will receive will be recorded on their transcripts and will apply toward the student’s GPA at Notre Dame.

Tutorials will be available in each student’s major subject and there will be a variety of mini-courses available.

Students who go to London will be housed in either a block of flats or in one of the central London hotels.

Approximately 140 students have expressed strong interest to date, while 80 to 90 have asked for more information, according to Dean Burns. He hopes to send a group of between 35 to 50 students, which would make this program comparable in size to the sophomore programs in Angers, France, and Innsbruck, Austria.

Dean Burns indicated that while students of all Arts and Letters majors expressed interest, the response was strongest in English, Government, American Studies and Economics Departments.

It is not yet known how much the cost of the spring semester in London will be, but it is expected that it will be covered by the student and probably Notre Dame fees. Dean Burns pointed out that students currently employed by the University may not receive jobs in England.

Students will be responsible for paying for some of the extra costs, such as theatre tickets, trips outside of London, some bus and underground fares, and daily lunches.

The new student identification number is designed primarily to enhance efficiency in the Registrar’s office, according to University Registrar Richard Sullivan.

The new system centers on the use of social security numbers as identification numbers. In previous years, the first three digits of the ID number indicated the student’s year and level of entrance. The last six digits ranked students alphabetically.

The computer can now alphabetize a name automatically when presented with a social security number. Sullivan added that the Registrar’s office can now give students their ID numbers when they apply to the University instead of at registration.

Sullivan does not foresee any problems in the transition between the systems. The computer will use the old identification number to store or give information if it is necessary.

The cost study, by the University of California at Berkeley Cooperative Extension Service and the marketing services division of the state Department of Food and Agriculture, said a permanent infestation could destroy about 10 percent of the state’s $4.1 billion-a-year soft-skinned produce industry — primarily peaches, oranges and tomatoes.

State officials continued to insist the eradication program was working and the pests would soon be gone. Only 275 fertile flies have been found in two years here.

The flies were first discovered in June 1980 in the Santa Clara Valley, a largely residential area south of here.

Medfly project spokesman Richard Sullivan said aerial pesticide spraying appears to have wiped out most of the flies in that 267-square-mile region.

Examiner conducts autopsy

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) - New York City's chief medical examiner conducted an autopsy Thursday on the embalmed body of Dennis McNell, hoping to learn whether he was murdered six weeks before his brothers' allegations led to the resignation of the city's gay playwright.

Dr. Elliot Gross entered the morgue at Kennebec Valley Medical Center in Augusta a few minutes after the chief justice of Maine's supreme court requested an autopsy.

Earlier in the day, a Superior Court judge in Augusta had refused to order an autopsy, citing the need for McNell's body to be exhumed from its resting place in the Southwest Maine necropolis.

The body was examined yesterday morning and transported 30 miles to the hospital morgue in Augusta until the Supreme Court decides.

After a 30-minute hearing in Portland, Vincent L. McKee of the Maine Supreme Judicial Court ruled that the family's lawyer failed to meet the specific requirements needed to block the autopsy.

John Whitman, the Portland lawyer representing the McNells' mother, sister and two missing older brothers, said no further attempts to block the autopsy would be made.

The case has attracted much publicity because of McNell's brothers, whose reported financial dealings with ex-CIA spy chief Max McNeil's were a major factor in the family's decision to block the autopsy.

Brown was originally scheduled to hold the second film festival the day of the factual statement about the 60's in America.

Ten GOP governors will attend, including Lee Dreyfus of Wisconsin, both of whom are running for president in 1976, and one or all of the above.

The governors will assemble for a reception Sunday evening, then get down to business as part of the economic recovery of the Midwest Thursday and Tuesday. They will focus on energy, water management, agricultural exports and reparation, which are pivotal to the recovery of the nation's heartland.

A state dinner - black tie optional - will end the conference Tuesday evening.

Strife escalates in southern Angola

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Angolan troops downed two South African aircraft yesterday in confrontations on the fourth day of fighting in southern Angola, the official Angolan news agency Angop reported.

The Angolan Defense Ministry said the South Africans suffered unconfirmed losses yesterday in every fighting with Angolan troops after South African warplanes bombed the southern provincial capital city of N'ziwa for the second straight day, Angop reported.

Angola's Marxist regime gave no details on casualties among its ranks, saying only that injuries had been reported.

A South African armored column that crossed the border from South Africa yesterday was ambushed, was engaged in heavy combat Thursday on the outskirts of the city, Angop quoted the Defense Ministry as saying.

A South African defense force spokesman declined to comment on the reports. Angola's restrictions on the Western press did not allow independent confirmation of the news agency's claims.

South Africa's white-minority government, which claims the fighting began Monday, is directing at black nationalist guerrillas seeking independence for Namibia. Angop, however, reported that Angolan forces were involved. South Africa has said it was possible Angolan forces would be involved because of proximity of the military bases to the guerrilla camps.

Meanwhile, the "gravity of the situation" led Angolan President Eduardo dos Santos to request a United Nations Security Council meeting "to avoid a confrontation of an even bigger magnitude," U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim cut short his Austrian vacation and was returning to New York.

And the British Foreign Office said its ambassador in Angola and the ambassadors from France and West Germany were advised by the Angolan government Thursday to visit the battlefields in the southern part of the country.

Angop reported that the Angolan armed forces at N'ziwa destroyed a tank and shot down the South African plane and helicopter "violent combat" Thursday.

In Don Sani's message to Waldheim, the Angolan president said the territory was under attack by 135 tanks, 50 helicopter and 140 transport and "attack cars."

Angola and South African planes and troops destroyed the town of Xangongo in attacks Tuesday and occupied the bridge that connects to the province of Huila, Angop reported. The ministry said South African planes also bombed the town of Cahama on Tuesday.

The reports of fresh fighting Thursday came after the government news agency said the incursion into southern Angola was slowing down and that the South Africans were trying to gain time for a "discrete withdrawal" because of adverse international reaction. The South African invasion has been condemned by the United States, Britain, West Germany, Sweden, Canada and Yugoslavia.

Tax cuts may weaken charities

WASHINGTON (AP) — The country's private charities said yesterday they stand to lose more than $18 billion over the next four years because President Reagan's tax cuts will give the wealthy less incentive to make contributions.

"This unintended but unfortunate side effect of the broader tax bill could weaken many of the very voluntary organizations the president and the public are counting on to make up for federal budget cutbacks," said Brian O'Connell, president of Independent Sector.

Independent Sector is an umbrella organization representing most of the nation's public service organizations.

The $27.3 billion loss projected for private charities and public service organizations will be a "steep" cut, released by the same group last spring, which estimated that cuts in the federal budget would take away $27.5 billion.

With the $18.5 billion expected to be lost because of the tax package, the total loss in charitable giving will total $45.5 billion through 1984, O'Connell said.

Reagan's budget projections had assumed that some of the cuts made in federal support for social service programs, the arts and similar areas would be made up by private philanthropy.

Instead, O'Connell said, private philanthropy and the services it supports are caught in a "triple whammy."

"Federal program support has already been cut, contributions are now projected to go down and all this at a time when everyone is looking to these organizations to expand their services," O'Connell said.

The new study says that while charitable giving will go up slightly, it will grow at a considerably slower rate than it would have under the old tax laws.

"As a result, private giving is projected to decline as a share of personal income," the report says.
Controlled keg policy in order for campus

As the party season rolls around, students once again will be compelled to consider the keg issue. This will mark another year that students will become exasperated by the senseless restriction, while deemed as casually exempted, and no one is satisfied.

For the record, the policy formally bans all kegs of alcoholic beverages within the campus boundaries. The university administration has published an announcement by the Security department (which consists of confiscation of kegs as well as the hefty deposit), students have tried many ways, both openly and subversively, to get around the rule. It attempts at creating a forum with the Administration on this subject have been fruitless.

The classic arguent that kegs promote excessive drinking seems to us like little more than useless rhetoric. It is perhaps true that unproven use of a restricted good tends to make drinking which could lead to irresponsible actions. But this does not mean a controlled keg policy is not in order.

A controlled keg policy would allow kegs on campus under certain circumstances. An absolute ban on kegs is both unenforceable and unfair to responsible students, among whom the possibility of allowing kegs to be used at half parties should be explored. At a large half party, there is no difference between a keg and numerous cases of beer, except that the keg is far cheaper and easier to clean up.

Consequently, we would like to make this suggestion for an equitable keg policy. After consultations with the rector of a hall planning a party, a number of kegs needed for that party can be approved by the rector. This would avoid waste that is granted only to parties that will have a practical number of people present. This number can most certainly be worked out between the administration and layers—a number as small as 75 people per keg would be a reasonable ratio.

The students planning a party at which they would like to have kegs would be required to present their rector with a detailed plan for the number of people planning to attend the get-together. After the plans for the party are given to the rector, he can arrive at the number of kegs allowed for that party.

We believe this to be a very prudent, reasonable improvement on the existing keg policy. It would provide students with the use of kegs for campus parties, while leaving the final decision in the hands of the University. It has been quite some time since the Administration acknowledged any real student opinion on the subject of kegs. Now appears to be a very opportune time.

Fresen case settles little

It should surprise no one that the University's treatment of the case this summer, finalising the settlement which was announced last spring. The 16-page document is an interesting one, but in the end it accomplishes very little toward promoting and tenuring more female faculty members.

What the Free-Ford women based their suit on was a famed section of the Civil Rights Act, Title V, which contains the portion stating that employers may not discriminate on the basis of sex, religion, etc. To satisfy this standard Notre Dame—like many employers—long ago devised an affirmative action plan to hire more women and minorities. But they have never been able to meet the goals set for the plan, and until this case no one had troubled them about it.

Firing women is one thing, but tenuring them is another matter entirely, and the fact that there are very few tenured women professors at Notre Dame seems to indicate that something is seriously amiss. But by settling out of court, the Free-Ford case foregoes the opportunity to make last advances for future female instructors.

And the very first paragraph of the agreement in effect absolves the University of "any discriminatory practices, past or present," of this has never been decided by an impartial third party. This is a statement allowed to appear in the formal settlement by the women in the case, in exchange for more appeals and appeals' processes concessions made by Notre Dame. And this, of course, is exactly what Notre Dame wanted. They emerge from the case without any sort of evidence that they might discriminate on the basis of sex, and in fact the charge never gets any sort of public airing.

What the women in the case have won is another avenue of appeal for themselves through a special, three-person panel which contains a woman professor from another school. The University also has formed a new appeals process designed solely to handle sex discrimination which will never, in all probability, end up reversing an adverse action, but it also wins for the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, which intervened in the case.

One problem with tenure committee is that they are made up of an instructor's colleagues, and in cases like this that opens up the possibility of personal grudges, petty arguments, and sexual discrimination. And at Notre Dame, where women only joined the faculty ten years ago.

English prof protest settlement in open letter

Editor's Note: The following open letter, signed by the members of the English Department, was released earlier this month. The letter was signed by the following faculty members: Rich Coppola, Lynne Daley, Joe Ellis, Rich Gheesling, Michael Hartman, Lynh Jones, Tom Jackman, Dr. Prof. John D. Keating, Prof. Robert J. Lordi, Prof. Paul A. Rathburn, Prof. Walter R. Davis, and Dr. Prof. Edward A. Kline. The letter was signed by the following faculty members: Rich Coppola, Lynne Daley, Joe Ellis, Rich Gheesling, Michael Hartman, Lynh Jones, Tom Jackman, Dr. Prof. John D. Keating, Prof. Robert J. Lordi, Prof. Paul A. Rathburn, Prof. Walter R. Davis, and Dr. Prof. Edward A. Kline.

Dear Sir or Madam:

I am writing to express my concern regarding the settlement of the sex discrimination lawsuit brought by Dolores Frese-Ford against the University of Notre Dame. As an English professor and a member of the English Department, I am deeply concerned about the implications of this settlement for the academic environment at Notre Dame.

I believe that the settlement of this lawsuit is a significant failure for the University, and that it sends the wrong message to students, faculty, and the general public. The settlement agreement, which was reached without a trial, is based on the assumption that there was no evidence of sex discrimination on the part of the University. This assumption is based on the fact that the University has never appealed the decision of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, which ruled in Ms. Frese-Ford's favor.

As an English professor, I am well aware of the importance of having a diverse and inclusive academic environment. I believe that the settlement of this lawsuit will send the wrong message to students, faculty, and the general public. I urge the University to take steps to address the issue of sex discrimination on campus and to take steps to ensure that all students, faculty, and staff are treated with respect and dignity.

Sincerely,

[Signature]

N.Y. Mets, Expos continue surge

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Frank Tavares singled home the tying run and Hubie Brooks doubled in the game-winner in a two-out rally in the eighth inning of Houston's ace reliever Joe Niekro as the New York Mets defeated the Astros 5-4 Thursday.

Alex Trevino started the Mets' rally by singling in a single play off Houston starter Joe Niekro. Sambito, 5, came in and struck out Mosier Wilson as Trevino stole second.

Trevino then looped his game-tying single to right-center and Brooks chased home the winning run with a shot into the left field corner.

Mike Marshall, 2-0, who also was the beneficiary of Wilson's late-inning heroics, never hit a home run.

Ray Burris held Cincinnati to one hit for eight innings—a one-out single by Ken Griffey in the seventh—a walk and Terry Francona drove in the first three runs of his major league career as the Montreal Expos completed a three-game sweep of the Reds with a 12-0 victory Thursday night.

Burris, 6-5, lost his no-hitter when Griffey blasted a single to left field after one out. Burris struck out three batters and walked one for his third straight victory of the second season.

Reggie undergoes physical exam

NEW YORK (AP) -- Reggie Jackson underwent a physical examination Thursday amid concern that the one-legged "outfielder" was nearing the end of his time with the New York Yankees.

Jackson checked into New York University Medical Center for a series of tests at the request of Yankees management to try to find if any physical problems have caused his season-long slump.

He was expected to catch a plane later in the day to Chicago, where the Yankees opened a four-game series with the White Sox, according to a spokesperson for the American League club.

Jackson, batting .212 with six home runs and 28 runs batted in this season, was asked to take the physi­cal in a letter from Cedric Tallis, the Yankees' executive vice president, Wednesday night.

"We want to convince ourselves that Reggie's OK. He's a very valuable ballplayer and we think he deserves the best," Tallis said after meeting with Jackson and his agent, Matt Merola, prior to Wednesday night's game against Minnesota at Yankee Stadium.

Jackson, 35, was benched for Wednesday night's game. On Tues­day, Manager George McGinnis had listed him as day-to-day with a sore foot and pain in his lower back.

"It wasn't a reprimand," Michael said. "I'm trying to get more offense generated. We're fifth in the league and that's not good enough for me.

When asked how he felt, Jackson said, "I haven't felt anything for a week. I kind of wish I was out. I kind of wish I was something, I have the juices to still play. I still want it." Jackson is in the final year of a five­year contract with the Yankees and since before spring training has been sparring with owner George Steinbrenner over terms of a new pact.

Tallis said Jackson had made no mention of his contract at Wednes­day's meeting, which also was at­tended by Michael, Lou Saban, the Yankees' president, and Ed Boderick, the club's lawyer.

UNITED THE BEER COMPANY
Veterans impress
Johnston coordinates defense

By MICHAEL OLENIK

The imposing schedule which creeps close to the 1981 Notre Dame squad has been the subject of talk for many Irish followers. This year's docket deserves plenty of attention as five legitimate Top 20 teams lie in ambush for Gerry Faust's first collegiate effort.

However, because dust rises and settles daily now on Carrier Field, discussion can finally center around performance rather than speculation. And one of the key observers of performance on the Irish practice field is first-year defensive coordinator Jim Johnston, formerly the Notre Dame secondary coach. Although he still spends plenty of time with his seasoned pass defenders, Johnston now controls the regios on the defensive unit as a whole, and he seems to have grabbed on tightly.

Stationed in his office a few days after double-sessions had ended, Johnston related his thoughts and hopes on Notre Dame's defense as the season approaches.

"Because of the tremendous performance of our defense last year we haven't made a lot of changes," said the 39-year-old Irish assistant. "Many of our goals and philosophies from last season have carried over into this season. The key is to perform consistently well from the first game to the last. With openings like LSU and Michigan, a slow start would definitely be dooming.

Although the defense has but a few minor adjustments from last year's version, preparation for LSU will not begin until next week. It is Johnston's hope that after this week his unit will know and understand Notre Dame's entire defensive system.

"Right now we are preparing for the season as a whole," he said. "We are showing them our total defensive package, rather than concentrate on any specific set out of our multiple defense." Considering the achievements of last year's unit, improvement is difficult to expect. According to Johnston, there is little to be improved upon.

"We'd be very happy to play as well as we did for most of last year. We do want to force more turnovers, and we are working on causing those turnovers. We would like to get the ball for the offense and help them get some opportunities."

Overall, Johnston exudes confidence in the coaches and players he has at his disposal. He knows he has class athletes and he knows they can play good football. Defensive.

"But the question is not whether she has the ability to perform, but whether they have the mental fortitude and concentration to execute properly.

"The ability to overcome the pressure caused by expected improvement," he predicted.

"If the Irish can handle the pressure and Johnston's "two-show defensive lines" can continue to impress as they have in the past. Dunne's ability to keep a total defensive coordinator will not only have little trouble adjusting to his new responsibilities, but he might even begin to feel a bit of a burden to produce."

IRISH ITEMS - The weatherman cooperated, and the Irish were able to some hitting out on the field yesterday, the team conducted a full-scale workout while light rain falls on the Monastery Beer played from the sky-ward line. Dave Condeno said the receiver, grabbing a Blair Kiel pass in the end zone with one hand the Korgel scored on a quarterback keep from the two, and connected with Mike Fanslie for a touchdown pass. Freshman running back Chris Smith was a tough ball carrier to bring down. On defense, tackle Kevin Griffith made a good, strong effort, burning down a Korgel pass and causing a fumble in the end zone.

Ovett, Coe continue mile record battle

LONDON (AP) - Steve Ovett and Sebastian Coe, the fastest middle-distance runners in history, are locked in a bitter battle for the world mile record.

The two Britons each have reduced the world mark twice in the past two years, and over the past year, their intense rivalry has reached new heights.

Wednesday night at Koblenz, West Germany. Ovett clocked 3 minutes, 49.60 seconds, shaving 15 of a second off the mark Coe set at Zurich, Switzerland, exactly a week earlier.

Coe is expected to attack the record again in the Ivo van Damme meet at Brussels, Belgium, tonight and hopes to render meaningless all the controversy over Ovett's record.

If Coe breaks the record again, he will become the first to smash the world mark. That fact would give him less satisfaction than regaining the record from Ovett.

The pair seldom speak of each other's achievements and Coe erected the news of Ovett's latest record on Monday without comment. There is little doubt that Coe is busily preparing to smash the record they don't like each other.

Although Coe's time was off the 1980 Moscow Olympics, Coe winning the 1,500-meter gold medal and Ovett the silver, the two have not raced over a mile in 1981, raising the issue of how world wants to see.

Instead they are away at each other's marks in the other three middle distance events. Coe currently holds the 800- and 1,000-meter world records, while Ovett owns the 1,500 mark.

The rivalry between the two often breeds controversy and so it was earlier this week.

But the doubts about the validity of Ovett's mile mark were increased by Ovett, who was suspected of being underweight, and Coe was not as fast.

The mile was added to the meet so late that it was not mentioned in the official program. IAAF rules specify that a race must be mentioned in the printed program for the record to be considered valid.

John Wylie, the IAAF information officer said: "the German Federal Federation will check with the meet organizers from all the races until 7 a.m.

Wylie said if so, they will file a race report with the program. The German are very much interested in the race."

The meet was a test for the world mile world record so late that it was not included in the official program. IAAF rules specify that a race must be mentioned in the printed program for the record to be considered valid.

Peter Bruebel, one of the organizers of the meet said that because of technical reasons. Ovett's name was not included in the team participate in all copies of the program, but confirmed that everything was in accordance with the rules.

He said the details would shortly be sent to the German Track Federation.
