Here come the new Fighting Irish

Notre Dame vs. South: a modern Civil War

BY TIM BOURET
Special to The Observer

For reasons more sociological than personal, Notre Dame is not particularly popular with college football fans of the otherwise hospitable South. There has never been a warm reception for the Blue and Gold (or light Blue, or green or whatever shade they are wearing) in the South for reasons of religion, past wars or jealousy, especially in contemporary times.

Any individual raised in the North who migrates to the South for employment or some other reason, will document the feeling among southerners that they are still fighting the Civil War — "The War of Northern Aggression" as some call it. Athletics the natural rivalry caused by physical competition makes the blood run thicker, and when Notre Dame is involved it turns to cement. When you come to the South from the North, you are a Damn Yankee. But, when you move to the South from the Golden Dome, you're twice as bad — you're a Notre Dame Yankee.

It all started in the 1800's when a team led by Coach Grant pulled the naked reverse against Coach Lee's squad to score a late touchdown in the original North-South game. Since then, the South has been trying to get revenge, even though the North doesn't realize it. The feeling has carried over into the grand game of college football, especially when Notre Dame is involved.

The rivalry serves to motivate the southern squads because they look forward to beating Notre Dame, more than Notre Dame looks forward to beating them. "We have rivalries in our conference that date back to the turn of the century, but that game against Notre Dame in 1977 was second to none in importance to us," says A. Adams, former assistant sports information director at Clemson. "Coach (Frank) Howard scheduled that game in the late '60s, and we had a special news conference in 1968 just to announce it, even though it would not be played for about 10 years."

On the field, the motivation instilled in players can be frightening, and, in the case of the 1977 Mississippi-Notre Dame game, disastrous. "During the whole game the guy across from me was like a man possessed," said Ken MacAfee in a postgame interview. "He called me all sorts of names, he was like fighting in the Civil War."

Former Clemson cheerleader Joey Erwin summarized the rivalry motivation on a religious plateau. "When Notre Dame came to the Valley (Clemson) it was the Northern Catholics against the Southern Baptists. They (Notre Dame) didn't bear any Hail Mary's in the stands at Clemson."

Present Clemson coach Danny Ford put the meaning of the game with Notre Dame in perspective when he said prior to his team's game against the Fighting Irish.

For the fans, it's the anticipation of an explosive afternoon of college football. For the players, it's the anticipation after months and months of preparation. And for Coach Gerry Faust, it's the anticipation of a lifelong dream come true. "I know it'll be a real emotional moment for me the first time we go through that tunnel and hit the field," exclaims Faust. "That's something I've thought about a great deal since coming to Notre Dame." The 1:30 p.m. kickoff against the Louisiana State Tigers figures to be one of the most enthusiastic season openers the Irish ever have had. Yet Faust doesn't want the emotion surrounding his Notre Dame debut to run completely wild.

"The players can sense when you're relaxed, so I'll try and control myself," he explains. "A team can be too psyched. Then they get tight, and they don't perform the way you want. So we're trying to keep a low-keyed approach for this game."

On the other hand, Faust must guard against a case of overconfidence developing in the Irish camp in view of LSU's loss to Alabama last weekend.

"This game is our most important, because it's the first. We're not looking past it, and we're not counting LSU out. I was impressed by the way they came back in the second half against Alabama — they came out and played excellent football, and probably won the second half statistically," Tigers Coach Jerry Stovall was equally pleased with his team's performance after halftime. "I'm proud of the fact that the team continued to play with emotion even though they were so far behind," he relates. "Our big problem came defensively — we didn't defend the option off the wishbone well."

Stovall doesn't feel that facing Notre Dame's full house offense will present any new challenges to his squad. "We've played a lot of teams that use misdirection and different formations."

Recalls Moeller

By ROB BLACKMON

SPT Bovelle Sport Editor

BATON ROUGE, La. — Eric Ellington arrived in Baton Rouge a year ago and immediately stepped onto a rollercoaster. The high-flying running back came out of Cincinnati's Moeller High School as billed as LSU's game-breakers. But that's not how it turned out. Instead, according to the scheme of the Tigers' veer offense, Ellington usually took a straight handoff and found himself at the bottom of a big pile in the middle of the field.

He never really got a chance to show his stuff. He fumbled a kickoff, which removed him from that role. He took a pitch and scrambled 15 yards, only to take a hit, lose the ball and find himself on the end of the bench for the rest of the game.

It was a year of freshman frustration. The Tiger staff decided to stick with the veer this year, so it looked for another place where Ellington's talents could be advantageous. Flanker was suggested, and flanker it was.

Ellington began spring workouts as the No. 4 flanker. Yet last week, when LSU opened against Alabama, the 5-9 sparkplug was at the starting lineup.

It looked as though the rollercoaster ride was over; that Ellington had settled into a position that he both liked and was impressive in performing. Not so.

Monday in practice, Ellington strained a hamstring muscle and was dropped from the depth chart. And this was the week he was supposed to play against his former coach and close advisor, Gerry Faust.

Coach Jerry Stovall says Ellington will play, but it won't be known how effective he will be until kickoff.

The loss of Ellington's darting running and catching could hurt LSU's chances considerably. Against Alabama, Ellington was one of only a few players to show any speed and quickness.

How ironic it would be for Ellington to be influential in an LSU victory.

"When I was in high school, we (he and Faust) used to talk a lot — we were pretty close," says Ellington. "He always told me if there was anywhere he'd go, he'd go to Notre Dame. I'm not surprised he went." Ellington, however, visited the Notre Dame campus like so many other Moeller graduates, but he chose to play elsewhere.

"I never thought of transfering to Moeller," he says. "The social life wasn't really what I wanted to be. There's more on campus than just going to class."

When Ellington's appointment was announced, rumors flourished about Ellington transferring to play for his old coach. But Ellington stayed put, despite the frustration he suffered last fall.

"I never thought of transferring to Notre Dame," Ellington says. "I didn't want to sit out a year. I made the decision to come here, and I'm happy with the decision. This year I'm a lot more confident. Things just fell into place and I don't know how it happened or why it happened. But I'm excited."

"Last year I was really nervous. I wondered how much playing time I was going to get instead of whether I was going to lose. But now I'm contributing more. I know what I'm doing and how I take a play work. It's a team effort all the way around, but everyone has to do their part."

No doubt Faust was yearly pleased with seeing those values in Ellington, it just took a year for them to grow. He had to reason that playing flanker in the Tigers' offense would be best suited his skills. He accepted this, and he succeeded in making the move.

"I had running back in my blood," Ellington says. "I used to love carrying the ball."

Cheerleaders shift focus

Alumni, pep rallies, fashion shows — football weekends return, along with the 1981 Notre Dame cheerleaders. Head Coach Chuck Faust leads the players on the field as the squad rallies its routines to rally the students in the seats.

Co-captain Shelly Obermiller is very excited about this year's squad, as she and Clark Gibson lead 10 others, including seven new members, into the LSU game. The enthusiasm of the new people seems to be endless according to Obermiller, who says, "They have so much spirit — and a lot of talent. We'll be trying new things, and this should be a great year."

This year's squad will be much different from last year's, just as the football team will show. A year of freshman frustration is behind them, and it's time to try new stuff.

"We're working on the direction of their cheerleading," says the team's advisor and Director of Student Activities James McConnell. "They want to stay away from glamorized stunts and routines that focus more on them than the team enthusiasm. This group focuses crowd attention and gets them involved, using creative routines that incorporate the crowd into what they're doing."

The cheerleaders have two seasons, in effect, cheering for the football and basketball seasons. They cheer at all home football games, and also at many away contests as possible. Also, they'll cheer at all home basketball games, and likely some road games.

The time commitment of the cheerleaders is a great one. They practice six days a week, two hours a session. Obermiller says it's tough on the squad, but they are doing pretty well so far. "Most of them are still so excited about the beginning of the season that it has not yet become a drain for them, and it may never."

She adds that the greatest thing about being a cheerleader is the people you meet, and being able to represent the university. "It's been the best experience I've ever had. I feel lucky that I got the chance to cheer here, especially in Coach Faust's first year. The games are wonderful, with the electricity you feel when you walk into the stadium. But I think the pep rallies are the best. For 50 or 60 minutes we have the undivided attention of 3,000 to 4,000 people. The spirit there is unmatched by any other type Notre Dame spirit."

The squad enters its first regular season game today. The season will be marked by an opening game and desire to excel. Obermiller says this desire will make this cheerleading squad a great one.

"We want to be really great. We want to be able to do whatever we want to do for Notre Dame. Most importantly, we want the students to be proud of their squad."

Faust pupil awaits reunion

Michigan Southern Cal Penn State, then the bowl game and the Cinderella season of first-year Irish Head Coach Gerry Faust is complete with a national championship. Right?

A lot of people have visions of it happening — and it very well may — but if the Irish football team overlooks Louisiana State, Faust's dream may turn into a disaster.

But Faust isn't taking anything for granted. "LSU has got an excellent football team. In fact, in the second half of the game against Alabama they really came of age," Faust said. "I was very impressed with Malcom Scott — their right end — their two quarterbacks (Alan) Risher and the freshman (Tom) Byrd and of course I was impressed with Eric Ellington, who played for us at Moeller High School three years ago. Their quarter James Wagar averaged 42 yards a punt," Faust continued. "Their defense is very, very good. Led by Ramsey and Darud and they have an excellent defensive front, probably one of the quicker defensive fronts I've seen in the last couple of years in college football."

The Tigers were 7-4 last year and list defensive starters will be Tim Joiner at linebacker, James Britt, spit end Orlando Stovall and guard David Koch as the Tigers. "We really came of age," Faust said.

"Their secondary is excellent and the Tigers still may be the youngest team in the Southeastern Conference in fact, in the second half of the game against Alabama they really came of age," Faust said. "I was very impressed with Malcom Scott — their right end — their two quarterbacks (Alan) Risher and the freshman (Tom) Byrd and of course I was impressed with Eric Ellington, who played for us at Moeller High School three years ago. Their quarter James Wagar averaged 42 yards a punt," Faust continued. "Their defense is very, very good. Led by Ramsey and Darud and they have an excellent defensive front, probably one of the quicker defensive fronts I've seen in the last couple of years in college football."

The Tigers were 7-4 last year and list returning lettermen, including eight offensive and seven defensive starters. However, LSU did lose its opening game on ABC-TV to Paul "Bear" Bryant and his Alabama Crimson Tide, 24-7, last Saturday. But Stovall saw hope in his Tigers. "We felt that offensively and defensively, there were a lot of good things that we did. Offensively, we gained almost 400 yards, which we were impressed with," Stovall said. "Defensively we played well except for the big play. We'll have to expect that. We'll work very hard in finding the mistakes.

Faust also believes the 'Barna game helped them to grow. He had to reason that playing flanker in the Tigers' offense would be best suited his skills. He accepted this, and he succeeded in making the move.

"I had running back in my blood," Ellington says. "I used to love carrying the ball."

Solidarity alarms Polish press

WARSAW, Poland and Soviet authorities leveled communists' harshest charge against Solidarity yesterday, calling the independent union "counter-revolutionary." A radical member of the union suggested the labor federation now has people capable of running Poland's government.

Soviet warships were reported deploying thousands of Soviet marines in a mock landing exercise on the Soviet coast north of Poland, and the official Soviet news agency TASS quoted a letter from a Polish worker saying Solidarity leaders have discarded all camoflage and call directly for congress manifested an anti-Solidarity's character.

The Warsaw chapter of the Communist Party said Solidarity was developing, in defiance of agreements and the statutes, as a socio-political movement aiming at a counter-revolutionary change of the political system in Poland.

We have found confirmation in the sharpened attacks on the party, the government and the country's political legal order during Solidarity's adjourned, six day national congress in Gdansk, where the union was formed 13 months ago, the Warsaw party said.

The army newspaper, Zolnierz Wolnosci, said the congress manifested an "anti-state, tough course," and that its resolution threatening to boycott the next round of talks on worker's reforms was a "shar" challenge to the state authori"es, including the Sejm (Parliament) as the supreme authori"y.

The paper said the union's warnings to impose Solidarity's version of worker self-management and hold a national referendum on the issue "on the one hand impressed (us) with their openness and horrif"ed us with their utterly provoc"ative character on the other."

The suggestion about running the government came from the leader of Solidarity's chapter in Szczecin, a Baltic port on the East German border. The official, Marian Jurczyk, is regarded as a radical in the 9.5 million-member labor federation, the first one freed of party control in the Soviet bloc.

Jurczyk, in an interview with Solidarity's news service, said that the "union didn't have the proper people to nominate the government" during the period last March when Solidarity threatened a general strike.

When asked, "would the union be able to nominate the proper people today in case of a strike?" Jurczyk replied, "I think so."

Nonetheless, Solidarity adjourned its congress Thursday with a call for free elections in Poland.

Iranian religious leader dies in grenade explosion

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - A grenade carried by an assassin exploded in a worshipper-filled square in the Iranian city of Tabriz yesterday, killing an ayatollah who was a key man in the Islamic regime and six worshippers, Iran's state-run media reported.

Tehran Radio said the unidentified terrorist died instantly in the blast and that 12 worshippers were wounded. The Ayatollah killed was Assadollah Madani. The official Pars news agency reported:

"An unidentified man, fastening a grenade around his waist, approached the ayatollah pretending he wanted to ask a question. Suddenly the grenade exploded, severely wounding the prayer leader and other worshippers. Ayatollah (Assadollah) Madani immediately taken to a hospital but was married while undergoing surgery. The terrorist was killed on the spot."

Madani, a fiery orator who was leading yesterday's Sabbath prayers when he was attacked, was a top aide to Iran's revolutionary patriarch Ayatollah Ruholla Khomeini and the latest to die in a wave of assassinations of clerics and political leaders in the fundamentalist Islamic regime.

An official in the provincial governor's office reached by telephone told The Associated Press in Beirut earlier that Madani was wounded. But he had no immediate figures.

Hit and run incident

A car traveling south on Juniper road last night narrowly missed a woman, but struck the baby stroller she was pushing, according to Rex Rakow, of Notre Dame Security. The accident occurred about 8:30 p.m. Rakow said that the car clipped the stroller, spilling the eight-month-old baby onto the road. "There were no visible scrapes or scratches on the child," he stated. According to an eyewitness account, the car did not stop, but was hailed by a group of pedestrians leaving Notre Dame’s pep rally. The mother and child were taken by ambulance to St. Joseph’s Memorial Hospital. The Observer

O’Connor confirmation hearings

Supreme Court nominee Sandra Day O’Connor, completing three days of confirmation hearings, declined to endorse the idea that teen-agers should be denied abortions unless they have parental consent. However, she indicated that the Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday she believes teenagers should voluntarily consult with their parents before having abortions. Mrs. O’Connor’s refusal to call for mandatory parental consent for abortions or receipt of birth control information came during a final exchange with her principal adversary on the committee, Sen. Jeremiah Denton, R-Ala. In most cases, the Supreme Court has ruled that states may not require doctors to obtain the consent of a teen-ager’s parents before performing a requested abortion.—AP

Begin makes offer to U.S.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin said yesterday he has offered the United States use of his nation’s air and naval bases to deter the “danger to freedom” posed by the Soviet Union in the Middle East. Begin told reporters at a Blair House luncheon his proposals, which also include storing U.S. tanks in Israel and flying Mediterranean air cover for U.S. transport planes, were under discussion by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon. But he said Israel would not call on American troops to fight in its wars and that he did not request a defense treaty with the United States. “We draw a line of distinction between defending Israel and our common interest in resisting Soviet expansion into the Middle East,” Begin said.—AP

Attica prisoners riot

Fifteen Attica State prison inmates locked in solitary confinement broke windows and pelted guards with excrement yesterday, but their rampage was quickly broken up by officers using tear gas, a prison spokesman said. The action occurred shortly after 375 other inmates had sat in silence through breakfast, and it came almost 10 years to the day after more than 1,000 prisoners took over part of the prison in what ended as the bloodiest prison riot in this country’s history. There were 19 inmates in the special housing section of the facility when the trouble began,” said Lou Genin, a spokesman for the state prison in Albany. “It appears that about 15 inmates were involved and are still in cell blocks where we know who the ringleader was.” He said no inmates had been injured, but two corrections officers suffered minor injuries.—AP

POW relives Nam experiences

By JIM McCLURE
News Staff

The speech, entitled “Faith, the Key to Survival and Triumph,” was presented by the South Bend Association for Life Underwriters.

Coffee stated that after being locked in solitary confinement he realized that “the only strength I would find would be that which I brought with me—the key to my survival was simply faith; faith in myself, my fellow man, my country, and my God.”

The Captain told an audience of approximately 400 how he and his fellow prisoners “spoke” to each other by tapping out a simplified alphabet with their knuckles on the cell wall.

Although they were prevented from seeing or speaking verbally to one another, the POWs were able to communicate using a “tap” language.

The Americans shared vital information and prayed together daily, “Communication was so very important because it became the very symbol of our togetherness,” Coffee said.

This togetherness helped Coffee and his companions endure torture, isolation, and anti-American propaganda which was played almost non-stop into each cell.

Coffee returned to the U.S. with the first group of POW’s on February 12, 1973. “The America to which I had returned was very different. It had changed many ways, a few for the good but I thought many ways for the bad.”

Coffee noticed that the very faith which sustained him and his fellow servicemen in prison was lacking in the country at that time. “America was at its low point. It needed faith in itself.”

The captain went on to emphasize that “We need faith in our goals. We need faith in America, we need faith in God, and we need faith in ourselves.”

Captain Coffee is currently on leave from his duties as Fleet Air Operations Officer on the staff of the Commander in Chief Pacific Fleet.
Quick trip

Haig departs for Europe, Arabia

Washington (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. left yesterday on a quick trip to three European countries and a secrecy-shrouded meeting with Crown Prince Fahd of Saudi Arabia.

After a 12-hour stopover in Malaga for the Fahd meeting today, Haig planned to continue to Yugoslavia and Germany. He was scheduled to return to Washington on Tuesday.

In Germany, Haig will consult with Chancellor Helmut Schmidt over growing anti-U.S. and anti-nuclear unrest, particularly among German youth. On that score, Schmidt is expected to ask-and likely get-Haig's assurance that the U.S. will not deploy neutron nuclear weapons in Europe in the near future.

Haig himself is in the target of demonstrations planned tomorrow in Berlin, where he will deliver a speech on U.S. defense strategy.

Little has been said about the meeting with the Saudi crown prince, who is considered one of the most influential members of the royal family and whose support for U.S. policies in the Middle East is considered crucial.

Although a reporter learned of Haig's trip Tuesday, the State Department declined to confirm it until just prior to Haig's departure.

Haig said earlier yesterday that Saudi Arabia is "strategically oriented toward Western interests" and that cooperation in easing the Iranian crisis and in holding down oil prices "has underlined as perhaps nothing else has heretofore the importance of the American-Saudi Arabian relationship."

He made the remark on the ABC television program "Good Morning America."

Government and diplomatic sources said Haig probably wants to reassure Fahd that there will be no last-minute hitch in the controversial sale of $8.5 billion in U.S. weapons, including five Airborne Warning and Control Systems aircraft, known as AWACS.

The Saudis made the sale a test of their relationship with the United States, and Fahd reportedly has said he would cancel a proposed visit to the United States later this year if the sale did not go through.

President Reagan refused to budge despite the objections voiced by visiting Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin this week that the AWACS are a threat to Israel.

TV filming features ND sites, people

Notre Dame President Fr. Theodore M. Hesburgh, Head Football Coach Gerry Faust, various campus religious landmarks will represent the University in the special.

Comedian Bob Newhart, who gained popularity from his Saturday night CBS television program "The Bob Newhart Show," narrates the special.

The program, one of a series produced by Family Theater Productions in Los Angeles, will feature Mother Teresa. Filming began in Washington D.C. with scenes revealing the work the Albanian nun has done with the poor.

Rev. Patrick Peyton, the "rosary priest," created the idea for the show and is also known for an Easter special featuring Princess Grace of Monaco on narration.

The filming schedule includes the filming of interviews in Annenberg Auditorium at 11:15 a.m. Monday morning, which will enable 200 students to serve as background for random crowd shots.

Department of Information Services Assistant Director Jay J. Kane called the show "a traditional Fr. Peyton film."

Kane said the syndicated program will air over 200 stations and reach every major audience.

Thus, the CFA was created three years ago to try to get things done within the NCAA. Different schools joined the CFA for different reasons—some for greed. Most others, like Notre Dame, joined for principles.

Among the CFA’s initial objectives was further internal reorganization. Why should Marquette, Western, Drake and the like—schools without major football programs—carry equal clout on the critical television issue as the Division I powers? Further, the CFA wants to impose tighter academic requirements, not only on college athletes, but on incoming freshmen as well. It also supports elimination of freshman eligibility and an increase in the number of coaches and scholarships.

In recent weeks, the media has painted an ugly picture of the CFA. A large part of the bias in print probably lies with the fact that the NCAA has a full-time public relations staff while the CFA has nothing—yet. Indications have been that if that the CFA wins, corruption will run rampant throughout college football. On the contrary, the CFA only could improve on the present situation. “The NCAA’s answer has always been to add another investigator,” says Corrigan. “The CFA’s answer is to get people together in a room and confront each other.”

A change in the approach to abuses certainly shouldn’t hurt. A present staff of about eight is playing watchdog over the 700-plus NCAA members. Now isn’t that absurd?

Corrigan is quick to point out however, “Not everything that goes on is the fault of the CFA. It’s tough to get 60 people to agree on anything, like college football.

Most have tried to drap a blanket of greed over the NCAA schools. For certain instan, that is an accurate charge. But not for all.

“IT’S a matter of rights,” Corrigan emphasizes, “Does the NCAA own the rights to anything that involves the Fighting Irish, including cable TV? Ah, the old vs. new—cable television. Today we are only scratching the surface. Any foresightful entertainment outlet, like a college athletic department, has to realize this as a gold mine of the non-too-distant future. People are throwing around figures—high as $50 million in cable revenues for one Notre Dame-USC game!!! There’s just no telling how big this could become.

Perhaps you’ve noticed the new satellite receiver on the roof at WNDU. Don’t think for a minute that its sole purpose is to make Channel 16 “The Observer.” Should the CFA win its battle in principle, thus stripping the NCAA of its television negotiating rights and returning them to the institutions, a private Notre Dame cable television network could become a future reality.

And would that hold down tuition! At the beginning, I said Notre Dame could have placed such a call in this week. Here’s why the University was not.

For three weeks, CFA and non-CFA schools have been talking, discussing, arguing, debating or whatever—to decide on a course of action. An eventual compromise is a certainty. After all, no one ever wins this kind of disputed outcome.

Different schools and conferences have wisely been pushing compromise. After all, if the NCAA exists the CFA members, it may as well dissolve itself. The CFA holds the trump card.

The Chief Executive Officers of the Big Eight Conference, for instance, sent a letter to the NCAA stating, “(We) agree that no further action should be taken on either the CFA or NCAA football television packages, until the NCAA has addressed the fundamental question of reorganization. We strongly urge that the NCAA move to convene a special meeting in November 15 for the resolution of these critical matters.”

“As members of the NCAA, we respectfully request an official response from the NCAA leadership prior to this week.”

The Atlantic Coast and the Southeastern Conference sent similar letters.

Tuesday the NCAA had a lot of wind taken out of its sails when a state district judge in Austin, Tex., issued temporary restraining order prohibiting the NCAA from taking or threatening disciplinary action against schools which participate in the CFA contract with NBC. The order was requested by the University of Texas as a first step in a class action suit it filed on behalf of all 61 CFA members for a right to control the television of college football.

The CFA postponed its re-vote scheduled for Thursday until next Friday. Also the NCAA has agreed to sit down and discuss a possible compromise, but has not made a date for it. The key here is that the NCAA won’t be settled until January at the annual NCAA convention.

... Brown

best of luck, and certainly better luck than Brown himself had for his first college game. "I'll never forget that game," he says with a chuckle. "We were playing at home against Missouri, and the coach of the Tigers was Don Faurot, the man I had beaten out for the Ohio State job. "The day started out on a bad note. As the team arrived for the game and was getting off the bus, I spotted some old friends from Massillon. So, I sent the boys inside, and stopped to talk. As I headed in the stadium, a guard grabbed me and asked for my ticket. "I don't have a ticket, I'm Paul Brown," I said. "Yeah, and I'm President Roosevelt, and you still can't have it," he replied.

"Well, there was nothing I could do to convince him. So I ended up throwing pebbles at the locker room window. Eventually, one of the players spotted me, and sent the trainer down to let me in. "We had seen Missouri's spring game," he recalls, "and there was nothing exceptional about it. But wouldn't know it, Faurot picked our game to invent the split T formation. "Now, the split T eventually revolutionized college football. It led to the wishbone and the veer offenses. But I didn't know what it was. Faurot was really trying to get back at me for getting the job he wanted. "Missouri drove up and down the field all day, but they couldn't seem to get inside our twenty yard line. We ended up winning, 12-7, which shows you how bad place-kickers were then."

After the game friends chided Brown for being unable to beat Missouri by a bigger margin. The tigers were not supposed to have much of a team. Little did they know that the split T would win every other game for Missouri, and they would end up in the Sugar Bowl. Brown and the Buckeyes lost just one game that season, and the next year the undefeated National Champions. Could Gerry Faust be as successful? "Anything is possible," Brown says. "Gerry is a superb coach, and he has terrific material to work with. He's going to do very well."

"You see, at places like Notre Dame.(AND Ohio State was the same when I was there) people want a winner. When you have that, there is no pressure. The real pressure for a coach comes when he is fighting with the administration or with the team owner. Otherwise, when the people want a winner, and you are doing your best to give them one, it's just a lot of fun."

ND soccer overcomes Loyola

The Notre Dame soccer team improved its record to 2-0 last night with a 7-0 thrashing of visiting Loyola (Chicago) on the astroturf of Carter Field. The Irish outshot their guests by a lopsided 38-1 count.

Sophomores Rob Snyder scored two goals for Notre Dame while classmate Ted Schwartz scored once and added an assist. Senior co-captain Sami Kahale dished out two assists. Rich Hunter's team now awaits tomorrow's showdown with national power St. Louis University. The game will be played on Alumni Field (east of Carter) at 3 p.m. Admission is $1; 50 cents for students with a Notre Dame or Saint Mary's ID card.

The collegiate football power needed a new head coach. They chose the country’s most successful high school coach, a man responsible for powerhouse teams in the Cincinnati area. They were criticized at first, but the man soon won over all his critics with his enthusiasm and winning football.

The story is well known to Notre Dame football fans. But this is not about Notre Dame’s new coach, Gerry Faust. This version took place 40 years ago, and involves one of the greatest football coaches of all time, Paul Brown.

“I was the coach at Massillon High School when the head coaching position at Ohio State opened up,” Brown recalls. “That was the only job I ever wanted. I had dreamed of being at Ohio State since the day I started coaching.” Paul Brown won the national championship in his second year at Ohio State, and later founded the Cleveland Browns, leading them to a number of NFL championships. He also established the Cincinnati Bengals, and now serves as the team’s general manager.

At the beginning of his career he built Massillon High into the strongest team in the state. It’s a tradition of winning that continues today. Last November, Faust’s Moeller High School team defeated Massillon in the Ohio state championship game. His success brought him acclaim, and his move to the college ranks created greater attention.

“Gerry Faust is going through the same things today that I put up with 40 years ago,” he says. “It seems like every reporter in the country wants to see you. They are all looking for some kind of angle. Of course, you have to have some press, but you can’t let them interfere with the work you have to do.”

Everybody says that a high school coach could never do the kind of job that he can do to build a winning college program,” he says. “They said the same thing when I went to Ohio State. But it’s really no trouble. The real strength of a high school coach is that he knows where to go. I knew everyone when I was the coach at Massillon — coaches, friends, former players — they are all helpful in recruiting.

“Being a high school coach also gives you an opportunity to watch the college coaches who come to recruit your players. You can learn a lot about what you want to do, and what you don’t want to do, by dealing with them.”

Besides, if you have a good high school team, you can bring some of them along with you. Brown took six of his players from Massillon in his first year at Ohio State.

Faust has three members of last year’s Moeller team on the Notre Dame roster.

Assistant coaches are vital to the operation of a team, and that is always seen as a problem for a new coach.

“It’s not a case of learning the ropes,” Brown says. “The X’s and O’s make the transition quite easily. It may surprise you, but I used the same basic plays with the Browns and the Bengals that I did at Massillon. Gerry, apparently, is doing the same thing.

“The reason to keep some assistants from the last coach is just for the sake of continuity. There are a lot of things a new coach has to learn about the school or the organization. Besides, why not keep a man on the staff if he is a good coach?”

Brown is a fan of Faust, and he is eager to talk about the new Irish coach.

“I’ve known him for quite some time,” Brown says. “He is an unusual person, and a superb coach. All he has to do is be himself, and he’ll be successful. His enthusiasm and bobby personality make him a sweet person to be associated with. He’s just a great guy.”

Faust opens his first season this weekend in a game against LSU. Brown says he’s sent a letter wishing the

They are the leaders of their teams. One inherited his job, as one of a very few seniors. The other leads by example, and by means of his enormous talent. They will go head-to-head in the 1981 season against LSU.

Jim Britz was born in Minden, La., to Baton Rouge with a pocket full of pressing clippings. He has been named the defensive player of the year in Louisiana high school football three years in a row. He has excelled fully the laurels to come to him and has never been major college football for the Tigers.

Well, the honors were not forthcoming, at least until this fall.

On the other hand, Tony Hunter has committed to Notre Dame for the fall. He has been a senior starter in the secondary for the past three seasons. He is looking forward to his senior year and what he can do with it. He is the only senior starter in the defensive backfield.

“I think he'll know how a lot of times you get in college and you have to hustl...”

Tony Hunter has a more logical approach to the game. He has seen the way Jim Britz plays and he knows when to anticipate. A lot of times, in one-on-one situations, if you're able to think your man, you've got him whipped.

For his part, Hunter knows that he will have to be sharp. He is all, learning a new position.

“It's tough to learn a new position...”

Admits, "but I really like it. I'll still be the primary receiver, plus I'll be in motion a lot. The opportunity is there to ball too I enjoy the increased responsibility.

Saturday, the situation is bound to arise. On a "biological" hand, Hunter will race downfield. Britz will pick up the coverage, most likely with help from another back. Kiel has been slow to throw the ball.

Time and again, the two leaders will match wits and their physical abilities. How many times Britz will do his job will go along way toward leading his team to victory.

game against "Bama, a strong adversary.

"I expect LSU to come in here with that same kind of intensity (as they did in Notre Dame's national replay network on January 3, 1979)." Faust said. "Playing Notre Dame means too much to them to have any kind of letdown, even after an emotional conference game like Alabama. Plus, it'll be a good test for our young men to learn how to react in a more critical situation ready to play."

Should the game turn into a kicking contest the Tigers will rely on the foot of James Wagner. Lloyd Hobbs is the only Tiger option from the "Bama game sustaining a shoulder injury finishing him for the year.

thought, "Wow, I came here to be a running back and now I'm going to play flanker. I know I've got a shot at being a starter and they'll change you to a position and just leave you there. And if you don't you lose."

But today, I think I worked at it, maybe I'd have a chance to play more."

Ellington positively basked in the success of the coaching staff as well. He certainly will cause problems with flanker reverses and open field running.

Stovall, like Faust, has been a big influence in getting the team confidence to man the switch. And Ellington says the two coaches have always been friendly.

"They're about the same," he says. "I think Coach Stovall has a more logical approach to the game. Coach Faust is just with exact and busily-tailed, running around and hollering that they're going 85 miles per hour. I think highly of them both."

Ellington finds himself in an awkward position this week — playing against his former coach for a team that needs his talents to be used to the best.

It's nice to be important again.
