Yesterday evening in Washington Hall Fr. Theodore Hesburgh gave his 40th and final annual speech as president of the University. He thanked the faculty for making the University what it is, and emphasized the point that a student reflects a university for only four years, whereas the faculty forms the atmosphere that makes a student want to come. He stated that the facilities of a university are nothing without the employed by the competent hands of willing faculty.

Hesburgh said that his goals during his tenure as President have been focused on the creation of a great Catholic university here at Notre Dame. The project extended his gratitude to the faculty for their support.

Hesburgh spoke of the future, a vision of "what yet might be." He stressed the need to continue the growth of the University saying that even though the student body has grown in 10 years has exceeded expectations by 80 million dollars, this is not the time to rest. The president said that a new year will begin this year, "PACE (Priorities and Commitments to Excellence), in order to preserve the integrity of the college.

He said, "It is easier to be a great university and not a Catholic university as well. Yet Notre Dame must continue in its tradition to sustain moral standards and to cherish values, according to the president who stressed that the university has to care for the morality of the Notre Dame community while continuing its intellectual growth."

Hesburgh asked the faculty to set the standard for the special elevator they should commit to the special voices of the University. He also said that the real progress in this aspect is due to the numerous faculty who give the living embodiment of the Catholic vision.

In the coming years, said Hesburgh, Notre Dame faces a challenge and a task. The faculty is not prepared to cherish this vision. By the time the faculty reaches the age of 10, the current handful of Notre Dame people will not be prepared to cherish this vision.

"Nothing can be done until we reach the state of emergency imposed when Sadat was killed, and the state would be removed. There was no collaboration," said Interview on Cairo television. Interior Minister Nabawy Ismail said the "factors originally planned to carry out terrorist acts in a number of Egyptian cities following the death of Sadat, with the aim of stirring up excessive panic among the masses."

CARO, Egypt (AP) — The Egyptian Interior Ministry said yesterday police have orders "to shoot instantly any man who disturbs the stability and security of the nation."

The warning appeared to be a response to outbreaks of Moslem fundamentalist violence following the assassination a week ago of President Anwar Sadat.

The Minister of Interior launched a nationwide hunt for Sadat's slaying by four members of a sect dedicated to killing Moslem leaders, who regards Sadat's chief assassin as a "traitor" to Sadat's army, which was targeted to be a Moslem fanatic army lieutenant.

There were no reports of new unrest as Egypt's 12 million voters prepared to elect Vice President Hosni Mubarak as Sadat's successor in a referendum today. Official results were not to be available until tomorrow.

The Interior Ministry launched a nationwide hunt for Sadat's slayer, who is among the five alleged ringleaders of an insurrection in Assuit, 250 miles south of Cairo. When 118 people were reported killed in two days of fierce street fighting last week.

The statement said anyone helping or harboring the wanted men was subjected to the state of emergency imposed when Sadat was killed, and the state would be removed. There was no collaboration."

Preparation for the October 12 meeting with the Notre Dame Board of Trustees was the focus of last night Student Senate Meeting. Student President Dan Mulligan outlined several subject areas that would be discussed at the Trustee meeting and encouraged the Senate members to present their views on the subjects.

Discussion began with the present situation of the Student Center. Mulligan said that the Trustees would be presented with a series of "failures" concerning the operation of the Student Union and a series of proposals on how to improve the conditions there. Bill Lawler explained that although there has been operational problems, he "didn't expect it going on as long as there is funding."

Further discussion centered on the building of a new student center, a project that Mulligan said is of foremost concern, although he has yet seen anything accomplished.

Kathy Juarado outlined the recent problems of off-campus housing. She said that better supervision of the housing situation is needed as student homes are being evicted due to local ordinance stating that no more than two non-related residents can live in a housing project. Failure of both students and landlords to recognize the ordinance was the norm for non-compliance. Juarado will present the Trustees with the off-campus housing problems while Pat Borcher will discuss the off-campus update at the meeting.

Student Vice President Tara Kenney said she would present the update on the co-educational situation at Notre Dame, which celebrates its tenth anniversary this year. Mulligan said that he would present the Trustees with an update on the student Government, faculty general, and the report on the student center. An update on the Graduate Student Union would also be presented, outlining such needs as an expansion of the capacity of materials and floor space of the Memorial Library.

Mulligan explained that the Board meeting would also contain the discussion of social life on campus. The Senate expressed the need to discuss the dating situation on campus. Many students feel the dating situation has been hampered by a lack of places to go on campus and a lack of opportunities to go off campus. Monday said that Fr. Theodore Hesburgh recently concluded that dating problems on campus were due to the inhibitions of students themselves. The general opinion of the Senate was divided between the two reasons. Although the project has an operating budget of about $200,000 a year, provided in part by the city and the Sun Prairie Cable Commission. Parents are forming a "Friends of KIDS-4" to support the channel.

The staff includes a 20-child production crew picked through auditions — a 13-child programming committee selected by Ms. McMahon and eight casts being trained for next year. Although the project is not directly affiliated with the Sun Prairie School District, all participants must be students in the district.

A few adult volunteers are on hand for safety reasons and for technical advice if the kids request it. But there have been no accidents in two years of operation, and the training period to cover the youngsters need little help with the equipment.

I'm only the adult producer. It's important I what I think they want to talk about. We leave the kids to talk about the things they want to do, what they want to talk about."

Ms. McMahon commented: "In so many situations with children, adults do the talking, not the listening."

They try to give as little advice as possible," said 11-year-old Jon Garrett, beginning his second year with KIDS-4. "We do everything. We make it, we produce it, we write it, we film it."

"I usually do film I'm not usually talent. I'm a technician," he added with a small pride.

Adults on the project have been surprised that jobs behind the camera are far more popular than on-camera spots. But the reason is obvious to the kids.

"I get to see how it works," Chris explained."

There are no child stars on KIDS-4, which is available in about 180 Sun Prairie households. "No one child gets singled out," Ms. McMahon said. "They're simply too young to cope with that kind of attention. And blame."

Sub-zero temperatures and sleepless nights plagued two pilots who completed the first transcontinental flight in a balloon, but the thrill of the landing more than made up for that, they said yesterday. "It was an adventure,"... said pilot John Shoecraft, who talked to reporters along with co-pilot Fred Gorel the day after their historic landing in Super Chick Ill. "It was just very thrilling to us." The two Arizona businessmen had gotten their first full night's sleep since leaving Coza Mesa, Calif., on Friday for the 2,515 mile trip.

A recent survey of 1981 graduates at the University of Notre Dame indicates a dramatic increase in the number of students who intend to embark on service careers. The survey is conducted each spring at Notre Dame by the Analytical Studies Department in the Office of the Dean of Administration, and this year's included the responses of 91 percent of the University's graduating class. The results which were released last week show that 12.7 percent, or 7.2 percent of Notre Dame's class of 81 intended to enter the military, of some other form of volunteer service. This represents an increase of 63 percent from the findings of last year's survey. The survey showed that 68.7, or 46.6 percent of the Notre Dame graduates intended to enter the job market. 59.7, or 32.7 percent intended to apply to high schools, 14.6, or 6.8 percent to seek degrees in business administration, 22.3, or 1.5 percent intended to apply to dental schools. 120, or 8.1 percent were undecided about their careers plans. — The Observer

Student Senators hope to improve student life

Editor's note: The following installment is part of a series of weekly Student Government updates.

Last spring, the students of the University of Notre Dame elected Student Senators from the off-campus and four on-campus districts to serve as representatives in the Student Senate and initiate changes on campus life.

The special speakers this year are Clare Padgett, Tom Weitman, Tricia Hiler, Brian Callaghan and Matt Huffman. Each rep has chosen a specific project and works with a cabinet member to improve this chosen area.

Tom Weitman is concentrating on the dorm social space problem. He is comparing the quality of various party rooms on campus and will be suggesting improvements to upgrade those halls lacking in this area.

Brian Callaghan did some research into the University Dine's prices last spring and is looking at both the Student Basketball Ticket procedure and the evaluation of Campus Laundry Service.

Clare Padgett focuses her work on security concerns on campus and has presented plans both to improve the campus lighting and increase the number of bike racks. She is also working on placing phones in campus parking lots and other secluded areas.

Tricia Hiler is taking a number of different angles to improve the campus food service. She is trying to start a food education program and is exploring the feasibility of alternative meal plans for on and off-campus students. One of Tricia's long-range goals is to try to produce a soup and sandwich bar in each dining hall.

Matt Huffman, Off-Campus Senator, is concentrating on the crime and housing problems which face the Off-Campus student. This crime questions are being attacked through working with landlords and neighbors. In addition Matt is presently examining a proposal submitted by a real estate broker that suggests townhouses as the answer to Notre Dame's overcrowding dilemma.

Aside from these specific goals that the reps hope to realize, all five are committed to developing their understanding of student issues. "We're here to be used," says Senator Hiler. "Students have to realize that their areas of concern are ours."

Besides what it has taught the children, the project has shown the adults what children can do, given the chance. It has also shown them never to underestimate the youngsters' brass. One boy wrote to Walter Cronkite and signed the letter. "Your fellow anchorman, David Vause."

Getting Life By Line

always meant to get to know Fr. Toohey.
I had my first few days off as a nurse. People who didn't know a thing about me dragged me here: the stars of my universe. I thought they would make me feel at home. I still hate it. They think it's the quiet Atarai surrounded by hundreds of other freshmen (all very happy, I thought). They thought I was a slow talker and didn't listen too carefully to the horizontal, but I watched him closely. I don't know just what it was — maybe his eyes or his confident bushy female mussiness turned that charismatic man finally made me feel as though I was looking for his name on the program.

In a society that is ac- customed to ease and speed, it becomes painful to let things slide than expend a bit of energy.

I went to all of our dorm Masses that Fr. Toohey said. I saw him al­ ready zeroing in on the campus. I planned to find the Campus Ministry office (here, I wasn't at all sure he didn't live in another building). I would glance in the CM office as I passed. Fr. Toohey often be­ came out of the corner we could open the campus ministry door as easily as I could glance through it. I never did. I always meant to get to know Fr. Toohey. But I never did and then he died. I never knew anyone who died and I guess I didn't really know Fr. Toohey, but I cried just the same. I cried for him, so young and suddenly dead. I cried for his friends and their deep loss. And I cried for his family. For this man I did not know. I felt a loss but I didn't know if I even had a right to. After all, I only met him that day.

A year ago Fr. Toohey's death left me sad and somewhat bitter as a part of my life had been lost. Remembering his death today still makes me think of the millenium. One thing that I'm always meaning to today is a celebration, the byproduct of his death. It is that attitude that I put behind me and I'm beginning to think that chunks of your life don't just disappear — they don't. But I was wrong in thinking I had left Fr. Toohey become a part of my society as a person so the memories I am left with are not of real friendship which can only be of lost opportuni­ ties.

But there are opportunities can be lost far too easily today. In a society that is ac­ customed to ease and speed, it becomes painful to let things slide than expend a bit of energy.

And if anything, the death of Fr. Toohey might provide an opportunity to do some things better, record for all time, and even that will materially affect the history of man. If the Romans had a sense of humor about the death of some of their great leaders, had they seen, I am certain, the death of some of their great leaders, had they seen, I am certain, the death of Nero, Emperor of Rome? Julian, Emperor of Rome? Julian was a long-time tyrant who made a strange death. It was, by any account, a long, strange death. It was, by any account, a long, strange death. It was, by any account, a long, strange death. It was, by any account, a long, strange death. It was, by any account, a long, strange death. It was, by any account, a long, strange death. It was, by any account, a long, strange death. It was, by any account, a long, strange death.

Andretti appeals USAC ruling

By STEVE HERMAN

Mario Andretti said yesterday he is appealing to the U.S. Auto Club’s last-week’s ruling that made Bobby Unser the winner of the Indianapolis 500-mile race.

Andretti was declared the winner when a late tap penalty was imposed against Unser a day after the May 24 race. But a special USAC panel ruled last Thursday that the penalty was too severe and instead fined him $40,000 for passing a line of cars as he left the pits during a yellow caution period.

Andrettis attorney, Forrest Bowman, said the protest by Andrettis was based on the contention that “the court of appeals conducted the procedure in violation of USAC rules book in that they did not give adequate notice of the hearing to all concerned parties.”

Bowman told The Associated Press, “We had a right to receive notice of the proceedings. The same notice that Penske Cars Ltd. (Unser’s racing team) received over 900 seconds received, in order to participate in all of the pretrial procedures in time to make objections to the constitution of the panel to participate in pretrial agreements and prepare for the hearing.”

Although the scheduled hearing was well publicized before it convened Monday, Bowman said “the actual notice was to Andretti” was a telegram the morning the hearing started.

Bittersweet will be the memory of Notre Dame's loss to Florida State for John Mosley, the sophomore tailback-wingback from Osceola, Nebraska. "This was an outstanding opportunity to display the running form that enabled us to score more than 2,500 yards in high school. By carrying the ball nine times for 54 yards, I was able to maintain the active day of competition on the college level. The Seminoles leave a bad taste in Mosley's mouth.

"I'm really down right now," admitted a somber Mosley shortly after Saturday's defeat. "I feel bad for the seniors because they've worked so hard and long. We don't look at Notre Dame as our destiny. We take pride in our performance. Being on top, I have a lot of respect for those guys. I really have mixed emotions about today."

"I was able to perform my best for the first time in my college career. I was able to make the effective passing. The ball was up in the air, not low. Mosley and I felt quicken and could make the move."
