Robertson discusses dining hall changes

Q: Has this year seen any major changes in the food service?
A: There haven't been any major changes that we've already announced. Most have been pretty obvious. We increased the serving hours, adding fifteen minutes to both breakfast and dinner. We open a half hour early on Sunday evenings. We've made a few menuing changes, adding an entire to the four-week cycle of changing an entire in the schedule. That, of course, goes on every year, so we haven't made any major changes in the menu.

Q: What were the reasons for discontinuing SAGA management?
A: The University made a decision to go back to managing a basic menu for the entire campus. The students here on campus, on the whole, preferred this over the more complex menu that we had before.

Enforced retirement

The exploitation of emeriti

By JIM PLAMONDON

Each year for the past twenty years, about eight or nine professors at Notre Dame reach the age of 65, retire, and are given the title of "emeritus." Although most faculty members actually look forward to this merited retirement, others wish to continue their careers and teach beyond this age. Despite their desires, the University of Notre Dame forces these professors to retire anyway.

Dr. James P. Danehy, formerly a chemistry professor here at Notre Dame, challenged this policy in court in 1976. He pointed to the "Faculty Handbook of the University of Notre Dame" as supporting his argument.

"Tenure," according to the handbook, "shall be permanent in the normal course of events as long as a person has the right to hold an office or position."
The faculty handbook also states that "a member of the faculty ordinarily retires and becomes emeritus on the first day of July following the faculty member's 65th birthday."

Those two passages in the handbook are completely contradictory. Danehy argues, "tenure is terminated by a birthday; there is nothing permanent about it."

President Carter's 1977 amendment to the Age Discrimination in Employment Act has moved the retirement age to 70. The President felt that discrimination against older people was just as wrong as discrimination against women, racial groups or religious groups. Danehy is upset that "Notre Dame's policy will be changed by federal law rather than recognition of justice."

Professor Emeritus Rufus Rauch describes a faculty member's decision to retire as "one way street."

Professor of Sociology and Anthropology Dr. Irwin is "humbled by the fact that Notre Dame holds this policy." He adds that "the law will catch up with Notre Dame when the 1977 amendment takes action."

Several faculty members who are nearing the critical age of 65 simply refused to comment on the issue.

In addition to the ambiguity in the definition of tenure, Danehy contests another clause in the faculty handbook. It reads, "When a member is permitted to continue in active service beyond the date prescribed by retirement, service beyond that date will be on the basis of a year to year appointment, and the member will retire at the end of any service year unless reappointed for another year." Some professors are relieved at this, Danehy takes advantage of the emeriti simply because they reach a certain age. In many cases a professor must face the decision of either losing his or her job completely, or being replaced at a lower salary.

Dr. Press believes that Notre Dame's policy is "less than charitable in dealing with emeriti. Press is upset that "faculty members have given so much of their professional lives to the University, and haven't received fair treatment."

Dr. Robert Vacca, assistant professor of Modern and Eastern European languages, claims that the University "doesn't have a policy," and that most cases are "individualized." Yet he also realizes that the issue must not be treated as a one-sided issue. "Younger people," he says, "must be given the chance to teach also." If professors insisted on enrolling in the traditional retirement age, new teachers would lose valuable opportunities.

Dr. Rauch, the representative for retired faculty members on the Faculty Senate, thinks that the University has been successful in satisfying some of the Q&A, page 3

Q: Does student feedback enter into menuing decisions, and if so, to what extent?
A: First of all, because of our experience over many years, we did a detailed student preference survey on campus. It didn't tell us anything we didn't know already. Our campus is a little different from other campuses, because ours is pretty much a national campus. We draw our students from all over the country and from many foreign countries, and not just from one neighborhood. The production managers are on the menu committee that builds the menus for Notre Dame. On a daily basis they keep track of the number of times on the order form, the number left over, and so on. With this information, they can predict how often the various menu items will be ordered and the number of entrees to produce.

Q: Why aren't some of the more popular items, as for example, served more often?
A: We don't serve pizza twice or three times in a four-week cycle, and we vary the frequency in the future. The reason we don't have it served more often is because it takes extra time to make that many pizzas. That, of course, goes on every year, so we haven't made any major changes in the menu.

Congress budget plan

Reagan says no to compromise

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan said yesterday he won't sign the compromise budget resolution worked out between the House and Senate to return the government to solvency.

Reagan, talking to reporters outside the White House, said: "This is no way to run a railroad.

On Capitol Hill, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said, "The president just called me to tell me he'll veto it."

"Veto" to reporters the president as he recessed the House before it could vote on the compromise. Reagan has vowed repeatedly to veto any "budget busting" funding bill.

O'Neill made his comments after Budget Director David A. Stockman told reporters the president found the compromise worked out over two grueling days of House-Senate negotiations was unacceptable.

Reagan was expected to veto the Dormitory budget veto, it was not clear that congressional leaders would ever submit the bill to a second consecutive vote.

Officials said that instead of voting to resolve the dispute over the measure immediately, the administration was seeking a 15-day, stripped-down extension of the expired stop-gap funding bill. That would minimize disruptions in government services while Congress and the White House worked to resolve their disagreements.

Technically, the government ran out of money at 12:01 a.m.

The Reagan administration earlier had declined to say whether the president would accept the compromise plan agreed to by House and Senate conferees as meeting his austerity budget or reject it with the Campus escort service on trial this week

BY MARGARET FOSMOE
News Staff

The Campus Escort System has been placed on trial basis this week in order to evaluate a lack of interest in the program, according to Brian Conway, Student Security Commissioner.

The evaluation will determine whether student response is great enough to warrant continued existence of the program. If not, the service will be discontinued.

The escort system was in place two weeks after fall break in response to what seemed to be a genuine interest in such a service. Utilization, however, has been minimal, with few women students taking advantage of the service.

In addition, the program has been plagued by organizational problems and a lack of male escort volunteers.

Conway said there has been an escort system at Notre Dame on and off over past years. However, this is the first time the program has lasted to a second consecutive year.

The response has dropped considerably from last year, causing the need for a reevaluation of the system to determine whether it will be continued.

"The program is for the benefit of the student body as a whole."

Conway attributes much of the lack of interest to the fact that there have been no reported attacks after dark so far this year. This may have lulled students into a false sense of security. His words: "Last year there were no attacks reported until about this time of year. Because of the warm autumn, more people have been out at night." Conway went on to see ESCORTS, page 4
When Office of Management and Budget Director David Stockman began an eight-month series of interliews with the author, assistant managing editor of the Washington Post, he probably didn’t realize the furor his article, published in the December issue of Atlantic Monthly, would create. In the 24-page piece Stockman did a lot of damage to the Reagan economic program. President Ronald Reagan has tried to sell Congress and the public. Stockman attacked the President’s plans for budget balancing, tax cutting and defense spending, invalidating the program Stockman helped to create. A reader would have to read Stockman for ten months to shape. As the Atlantic article quotes in reference to his recommendations for cuts in Social Security benefits, a statement that easily applies to his present situation, “Barely, I screwed up quite a bit.”

Stockman has never denied his quotes published in Atlantic, but, instead, has questioned Greider’s right to quote him. “Do people think I’m Stockman (a dope)?” he questioned immediately after the story broke. “Does anybody think I’m stupid enough to say things like that with my name attached to it?”

David, we do. “Nowhere in our conversations did he (Stockman) explicitly deny the quote,” Greider responded. The 18 Atlantic interviews were conducted during a one-month period, with plenty of time for Stockman to refute any statements, and the OMB director should have known the magazine’s photographer last month. Since the initial uproar, however, Stockman’s chances of a “walkout” or fair quoting have turned into a “mutiny” and that’s been the case. Allen investigation continues

WASHINGTON (AP) — Justice Department officials doubt that national security adviser Richard V. Allen received $10,000 instead of $1,000 from two Japanese journalists, but that the money was still being investigated, it has been learned.

Meanwhile, presidential counselor Edwin Meese III said yesterday, “I don’t see any plan at the present time for Mr. Allen to leave the White House” as a result of receiving the money as an expression of the two journalists’ gratitude for obtaining a Jan. 21 interview with First Lady Nancy Reagan.

“I think until he seems to have to do some more than that he himself will have to make that decision,” Mr. Allen’s chief”...

any more often is the tremendous production problem involved. We have to be careful with the menu planning so that we can produce it properly. We know it’s popular, and we think we’re serving it enough for our purposes. On the other hand, if we have an item that continually isn’t eaten by very many students, it will tend to go off the cycle completely, or it will be removed frequently. Liver and onions is one where we may serve seven or eight hundred portions in both dining halls when we serve it. We don’t take it off the menu completely, because some people do like it. We just serve it less frequently.

Q: To meet the increased demand at the North Dining Hall because of the opening of the new Paquet Sierra dorms, has there been an increase in the budget and number of portions served there?
A: How naive do you think we are?
If we know there are 500 more people to feed, that must go into our menu planning.

Q: Is that true, then, why, more often than not, is the main entree gone by 6 p.m.? What accounts for this inconsistency?
A: When that happens, it is because we didn’t plan for enough. The best thing for you, the student, to do is to let them know that you either look for the manager or director then write a comment card, or come yell at me, but let someone know that. N.D. students enjoy semester at sea

By David Guffey

A year ago Chris Patricoski, a senior biology student, was on a schooner pass off the Virgin Islands participating in an accredited program called Sea Semester, and last Friday Patricoski gave a slide presentation and discussed the program which took him to sea for 54 days.

Sea Semester is run by a private educational institution affiliated with several major colleges including M.I.T., Cornell, and Boston College. The program includes a six-week shore component at Woods Hole, Massachusetts and a six-week voyage aboard the research vessel Westwind.

Patricoski left for Woods Hole in the Fall of last year. He and twenty participants spent the six weeks there taking three classes on the vessel. Patricoski was the first Notre Dame student to participate in the program, but he commented that scheduling and transfer of credits was not difficult.

Next semester two Notre Dame juniors, Jeanne Grasso and Barbara Jacobs will be participating in Sea Semester. Grasso commented that the cost of the program is comparable to a semester at Notre Dame. Transportation costs, however, to the port of rendezvous made it slightly more expensive.

Notre Dame is not directly affiliated with the Sea Education Association which conducts the Sea Semester. Daniel Winiscar, assistant dean of the college of Science, commented that there have been no problems fitting it into the academic programs of the students who have decided to go.

Dean Winiscar commented that it is a "super program, from everything I have been told, it is a worthwhile experience that one can't get in the classroom." He also commented "I wish I had the opportunity to do it myself."

There are eight sea semesters a year, however, space is limited and acceptance into them is selective. Applicants are chosen, according to Patricoski, by grades and extra-curricular activities involved with water. One need not be a science student to apply.

first veto of his presidency.

Edwin Meese III, one of President Reagan's top advisers, said the conference agreement "did not produce the kind of savings in domestic programs that we would have liked, and also they have not yet resolved the problem of (foreign military aid)."

"Questioned on CBS' "Face the Nation," Meehe said the conference report achieved "a very low level of savings" and he indicated the White House was advising House and Senate leaders to try to change the plan when it reaches the floor.

White House Chief of staff James A. Baker III, Stockman and Max L. Friedenrider, the president's chief congressional lobbyist, met with House and Senate GOP leaders before the chambers went into session yesterday.

The administration officials returned to the White House to discuss the situation with Reagan.

Later, Senate aides said the president called Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., asking that Congress adopt a simple 15-day extension of an interim spending plan that lapsed Nov. 20. But during House debate, Rep. Silvio O. Conte, R-Mass., urged the president to accept the compromise.

"This continuing resolution is not the place for a fight to the death," Conte said.

A veto would send Congress back to the drafting table — and plunge the entire federal government into a new work week without funds to operate.

"There are a lot of numbers floating around up there and we have to sort them out," Friedenrider said after House and Senate negotiators reached their post-midnight agreement yesterday.

"This week was a complete failure. We have not produced any real legislation. The president's top aides are obviously out to scare the public and they are not doing it very well."

to emphasize that with the advent of cold weather, the campus will be more deserted at night, providing little protection for a lone female. This, he says, is the importance of maintaining the escort system.

The system works on a volunteer basis, with each male dorm supplying escorts for a particular night and time. Escorts are available at the library to escort a woman to her dorm night from 10-11:45 p.m. Elsewhere, women may call 768-6000 to be escorted anyplace on campus from 7-12 p.m.

Conway insists the program has had plenty of publicity, with posters having been hung in all of the female dorms.

"He emphasized that the response and evaluation this week will determine whether the escort system will ultimately be maintained or dropped. If only one or two calls are received, it will be assumed the interest is presently not sufficient, said Conway. "The program is for the benefit of the student body as a whole. The evaluation will determine if the student body feels it is an important and necessary program, and whether it should be continued."

JUST TWO YEARS IN THE ARMY CAN HELP PAY FOR COLLEGE.

These days, money for college is becoming harder and harder to find. Except for people who look in today's Army.

The Army combines good-sized college benefits with a short two-year enlistment. So you could accumulate $15,200 for college and be home to use it in just two years.

The Army will also bring home the kind of maturity that can help in college. And, if you're in a hurry to earn money for school, consider the Army's two-year enlistment. It can get you money for college before you even start to lose your study habits.

Protests mar German visit by Brezhnev

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev arrived here yesterday for his first visit to the West in two years. Chancellor Helmut Schmidt was at the airport to welcome the Soviet leader and top level Kremlin officials and joined the motorcade that bypassed the site of anti-Soviet and peace protests.

Brezhnev and his party, which included Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, arrived just after 7 p.m. at Bonn-Cologne airport, ringed by hundreds of armed guards. The ailing Soviet leader, who will turn 75 next month, moved carefully with short steps as he descended the Aeroflot jetliner's steps to meet Schmidt and West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher. At one point he almost lost balance and was grabbed by a Soviet military of-

Hours before the Kremlin chief arrived, 50,000 people took part in three anti-Brezhnev demonstrations in the West German capital to protest Moscow's military and human rights policies and demand nuclear disarmament.

Brezhnev's talks with Schmidt and other officials have taken on new importance because of the growing West European peace movement and next week's U.S. Soviet talks on reducing nuclear missiles in Europe.

The government mobilized 5,000 police to protect the Kremlin leader, and ordered about 20 groups of Afghan and other refugees to stay home.

A government spokesman said only-ly refugees who had applications pending for political asylum were affected, but others were free to demonstrate. Earlier, officials rejected the Soviet Embassy's requst to ban all protests during Brezhnev's four-day visit.

SMC chooses ‘Hospice’ for charity

BY KANDY POWELL

The Observer

Hospice of St. Joseph County has been chosen as Saint Mary's College's charity for the year. Hospice was chosen through the result of a school survey given by Saint Mary's student government. Twenty-one-hundred forty-eight surveys were distributed to the student body listing six possible charities. Over 50 percent of the surveys were returned and the majority vote was determined to be Hospice.

Hospice of St. Joseph County is located in the Angels Building across from the St. Joseph Hospital. It is a special program of health care for the terminal patient. Hospices don't focus on death, but on the period of life that is left — making it more meaningful for the patient.

The interdisciplinary hospice team includes a registered nurse, a patient care coordinator, a volunteer coordinator, the medical director, a social worker, a spiritual coordinator, an office manager, and volunteer nurses. Together they provide services for both family and patient. Hospice views its role as being four-fold, to provide medical relief for pain, to educate those involved in home care, to provide supportive services, and to provide bereavement follow-up and counseling for the family for up to a years-time.

Betsy Boyle, a Saint Mary's student, is the first intern to St. Joseph's Hospice. Anyone is able to volunteer to work for Hospice. It requires a three week training course consisting of two three hour sessions a week. The sessions teach the volunt-neers about patient care and family

need. An internship to Hospice is available through Saint Mary's sociology department.

Hospice was started through funding by the Junior League of South Bend. The program receives no state money. They do, in special cases, receive third party benefits, but most of their funds are from personal donations. Saint Mary's student government will start their money raising campaign at the end of January. All donations will go towards helping terminally ill patients and their families.

Police fear clash in Northern Ireland

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Police arrested three Protestant militants driving a van full of explotives yesterday, a day before planned demonstrations and a 12-hour general strike by Protestants demanding Britain crack down on the IRA.

A police spokesman said the van was stopped at a checkpoint near Newtownards, a staunchly Protestant town 10 miles east of Belfast. The Rev. Ian Paisley, who has organized today's "Day of Action" protest, plans to parade men of his vigilante-style Third Force in the town tonight.

More than 600 members of the Third Force, some of them armed, marched through two villages in Londonderry, northwest of here, Saturday night. It was the first time since Paisley founded the group two weeks ago that its members had publicly brandished weapons.

The events heightened police concern that violence will erupt during today's protests. The demonstrations were called to protest Britain's failure to prevent the assassinations of 10 Protestants this month — including a Protestant member of the British Parliament representing Northern Ireland — by the almost exclusively Roman Catholic Irish Republican Army.

Juggler tradition...

The most recent issue of the Juggler, Notre Dame's student-run literary magazine, came out last Thursday. The Juggler, a literary magazine that must be for English majors or those few who are really into poetry, unfortunately, has few people feel this way about its very fine publication.

By Bill Kracklauer

Published under the auspice of Stu- dents' Publications, Inc., the Juggler, Honor Fraser & Mario Pedi, the Juggler has a long and distinguished history here at Notre Dame. The first independent literary magazine to appear on campus, the Juggler, which was published from 1929 until the beginning of World War II. During the war years, the University thought of the Juggler as a distraction in Europe, but in April 1947, the first issue of the Juggler became available for sale.

Sadly, the Juggler has always had a bit of a rocky start. Recognized nationwide as a superior campus literary publication, the Juggler disappeared in 1948. Because of poor circulation, the University contemplated suspending its budget. However, various faculty members including the magazine's current advisor, Prof. John Matthias, managed to save the Juggler.

This magazine has an impressive legacy. Nearly every one of its editors has gone on to distinguish himself as a writer. Michael Ryan, editor during the 1966-67 academic year, has won the coveted Tate Younger Poets Prize. Of the other notable editors are: Michael Patrick O'Connor, Larry Sears, Bormi Holcher and John Santos, who were in Notre Dame's most recent Rhodes Scholar.

Last year, the Juggler entered the "Coordinating Council of Literary Magazines' national competition for the first time and was awarded second place. Prof. Mat- thews feels that it may have won because it has been a more frequent entrant.

With such impressive credentials, why does the Juggler have relatively few issues? Editors Anthony Shaum, Anthony Walton, and Burbridge, Douglas Kreitzberg feel that much of the changes that were made only a few years ago, including a second place award in the national competition of college literary magazines, this year's literary magazines, this year's literary magazines. That's not to say the Juggler is not as polished, professional look.

The imagery of Return from the Field, which is an integral part of the University which people read too tightly. It suffers an image problem because too few people have any knowledge of its purpose and content. Notre Dame and St. Mary's should be places where people broaden their horizons — including their awareness of the arts.

The Juggler will be available this Monday and Tuesday and again after the holidays for only twenty-five cents. Copies may be picked up in the English department office, room 509 O'Shaugnessy and at the bookstore. A quarter is not much to pay for such a long tradition of excellence.

By Jenny Pitts

Abundance of material, much did not receive the full attention warranted.

This year the Juggler will come out in three smaller issues (rather than the one large issue) in an effort to avoid this problem. In addition to the current Juggler, the editors will publish a second one early next spring and a third in the spring. The clearly present issues excellent for those who want to allow the reader to focus his attention more closely without being overwhelmed.

The change from a bound paperback volume to a glossy magazine like volume was also advantageous. The magazine has a very bit of a professional look. The glossy finish is especially eye-catching.

A fine change, or more correctly a return to the Juggler the editors are biographical notes on the con- tributors. It is a nice idea. It makes these people's artistic lives possible, taking them from their "father's plane" and setting them down in the world of chemistry and engineering majors.

The most recent issue of the Juggler is a collection of photographs (John Macor, Edmund McMenamin, Michael Mulligan, Eileen O'Meara, Richard Schwartz, poems), poems; annotated.

The poem annotated by John Macor.

Resonant poems. Anthony Walton shows to readers who only know him as a literary critic, other facets of his talents. Before the Storm is a beautiful, tender poem. The loneliness that comes when love is lost. Summertime in a wonderful sketch of the imaginative wanderings brought on by the heavy, sweltering heat of a summer's day.

"Brother," one of these poems by Paul Burbridge, is a poem of love, both for its content and its subject matter. The subject of the poem is a dreamer, looking at the world as it appears on the body which are in fact the remains of the aborted twin. The thoughts of carrying around these remains are beweildering, and the skit, which McRaven captures both the eeriness and the annually close yet empty feeling the surviving twin must feel. ("I imagine you sometimes in complement/What you are or are not/"). This is a fine poem as one will read anywhere, including English class.

Perhaps my favorite (if it is indeed possible to make such a choice) is An Autumn Tale by Douglas Kreitzberg. The imagery in this short story is wonderfully precise, yet there is an aura of fa- cination, an ineffable quality which distances it from the reader. The imagery seems to be secondary to Kreitzberg's ability to use and in- dulge langauge.

This is only an incomplete and insufficient sketch of a little of what the Juggler has to offer. The editors are interested in receiving poems. What shall the world do with its children? There are the verses the executives know nothing of.

Certainly, if there are artifices lives that are not worth living, nothing of a remarkable example of who they are and are they are capable of is found to be the interior heat has not...Juggler.

Juggler's are available in the English department office and the Bookstore for 25 cents.

President faces a tickle press corps

If the job of the president of the United States was to run 41 feet, run a mile in three minutes or swim the English Channel both ways without an oxygen tank, we would have a successful president. If the job of the president of the United States was to run the country perfectly to the satisfaction of everyone, it is, we'd never have had a complete disaster. We never have, of course.

President Reagan is beginning to turn against newspaper and television reporters who suggest he's less than perfect. He's beginning to suggest that they're unfair. He's beginning to say that some of the people in the administration must be doing it. He's beginning to say that some of the people in the administration must be doing it. I personally hope that the president keeps doing the best he can. I hope that reporters stay off the rail, hobbling him with such a possible mistake he may be making. Finally, I hope the people in his ad- ministration continue to leak tidbits of information to the press. Most of all, I hope he does a good job and the people who trust the country put in when they elected him.

President Reagan ought to renounce himself every night before he and Nancy go to bed that we never promised him it was going to be easy. We never said, when we voted for him, that we wouldn't criticize him. I suggest he's made some terrible mistakes, and he probably knows it, too. Why would he think, smart, experienced reporters with inside information wouldn't keep going after him? If someone wrote a viciously critical and inaccurate story about me tomorrow, my inclination would be to find the person who wrote it, copy it, and suggest that he be dead because the reporter was a woman, I'd think of some else to suggest. If a president can't get off his feet, and when asking the job he should know he can't. He's got to swallow criticism along with high and unreasonable praise and understand that neither is absolutely accurate.

The press has ultimately gotten to every president we've ever had. I can't remember one who didn't eventually ask the press to step out into the back area. I can tell you coming now with President Reagan and I wish there was something we could avoid. The beast. The press has to be his sense of humor. It's easy to keep a sense of humor when someone attacks you, the job you're doing, your wife, your family and your friends, but President Reagan ought to understand that we expect him to have Christ-like qualities.

What the press does to a president is almost as a democratic a process as a national election. There are more than 8,000 newspapers in the United States writing about events here reporters ac- curately reflect the opinions of the electorate. There are a lot of good honest men and women who let the facts fall from their typewriters they may. They are not true to god. They are profes- sionally suspicious and not sure that they are dead horses with their reports. There are other less admirable journalists who let their opinions choose the facts they use when they're writing about Presi- dent Reagan. About half of those are consistently negative and the other half are consistent supporters have had a successful press. President Reagan ought to understand that we expect him to have Christ-like qualities.

We like President Reagan. We're beginning to think he may be making some serious mistakes. It doesn't call for a fistfight in the al- ley with reporters.

Purdue names Burtnett head football coach

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Leon Burtnett, M, defensive coordinator at Purdue University for the past five years, was named head football coach Monday, replacing Jim Young.

Young, who announced his retirement as coach last week, will become fulltime associate athletic director.

Burtnett came to Purdue in 1977 after a year as assistant coach at Michigan State. He previously was an assistant at San Jose State, Wyoming, Washington State, Montana State and Colorado State.

Announcement of Burtnett’s appointment was made yesterday at a news conference in Mackey Arena.

Burtnett said all coaches on the Purdue staff would be retained.

"We’re a close family. The exact duties of each coach could change, but I’ve asked them all to stay on," Burtnett said. He said the Boilermakers of the future would be "very, very oriented."

The new Purdue coach said he prefers an offense that includes running, which was contributed by Leon Burtnett, 38, defensive coordinator at Purdue University, said Leon Burtnett, defensive coordinator at Purdue University, during the news conference in Mackey Arena.

"I feel very strong in this area (recruiting). It’s an exciting thing for me to go into the home of a (high school) senior and try to interest him in coming to our school."

ORCHARD PARK, NY — It's been a frustrating year for Vagam Ferguson. Just a year ago, he was a mainstay in the New England Patriots' starting lineup. Sam Cunningham was strong in the season out in a contract dispute. Andy Johnson was out for the year with an injury. Chuck Foreman was but a shadow of what he'd been during his glory years at Minnesota.

"Vagam was the guy we went to when we needed three or four yard yards," says one club official. "He was what football fans in New England call a 'bread-and-butter guy.' When we had to have the yards, Ferguson would get them."

As the 1981-82 season opened, however, Ferguson was on the bench. An ankle injury suffered in one of the Patriots' preseason games was the culprit.

At first the new culprit is Tony Collins, a rookie out of East Carolina. He took Andy Johnson was out for the year.

Interhall championship decided

The Red from Dillon High rallied for two fourth quarter touchdowns to capture the interhall football championship yesterday, by defeating the Off-Campus Raiders, 14-0, at Broar Carrier Field.

The game was scoreless for three quarters and resembled an old NFL championship game played at Lambeau Field in Green Bay or Soldier Field in Chicago. The sub-freezing temperatures and icy ground shut down both teams' offensive attacks.

Dillon again showed the strong defense it did all season. On the year, Dillon allowed just eight points. "Our defense allowed us to stick with them," Finan noted. "They (Off-Campus) had just two good plays in the first half. Mike McGuire was their leader for us."

Leading rushers in the game were McNathan, who gained 51 yards on 13 carries and the Raiders' Willie Solis, who ran the ball 14 times for 49 yards. Reserve tailback Mike Dunbar was another key off of the Dillon bench, as he carried the ball six times for 27 yards. Bob Wicke, who has been a standout for Dillon all season long, finished with four receptions for 62 yards.

most of the day. Although Off-Campus maintained ball control in the first half, neither team threatened until the fourth quarter.

The play that perhaps turned the game around for Dillon was a 42-yard fumble recovery by Tony Spence to Bob Wicke. The Subs went to the Off-Campuss 19-yard line, and three plays later, it pass from Kevin Kenney. Hart Green points after made it 7-0 Dillon, with about six minutes left in the game.

"It was the first time we used the flea-flicker play," Spence noted. "We designed it just this week.

Dillon's first down penetration prior to the flea-flicker was to the Off-Campus 45-yard line. In all, the drive went 51 yards in just four plays.

On the play following the touchdown, Raider quarterback Matt Huffman was intercepted by freshman Brian Brueck. Huffman thought that play was the key to the game. "I thought we had a pretty good chance to drive in the fourth quarter," Huffman said. "But I threw that interception and that just caused a letdown in our defense."

Alumni pressure
Big ones give Paterno trouble

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. — It was a Penn State first down at its own 21, late in the third quarter. Lion tailback Tony Mumblock took the handoff, but was stopped for no gain by Notre Dame's Bob Crable and Tim Marshall. The Irish referee (or, more appropriately, howled) down on Penn State coach Joe Paterno. Here he was, trailing the Irish, 21-7, after charging out to a quick 17-7 advantage in the first half. His offense had been stymied on its last six possessions with only one first down, and Paterno was stubbornly sticking to his ball-control game plan. Maybe the cold finally was getting to him.

But Paterno ignored the 84.175 announcers in Beaver Stadium on Saturday. Being an optimist, he no doubt thought they were boosing the latest brutal gust of wind, or that everybody in the crowd was from Philadelphia and it was just a primal instinct for them to howl.

Finally, Paterno's patience paid off, thanks to the marvelous running of sophomore tailback Jonathan Williams. After two key defensive plays — a goal line stand and an interception — stopped Irish scoring drives that would have put the game away, Williams, who gained 192 yards on the day replacing the injured Curt Warner, ran for 46 yards on four carries to pace the Lions' winning 82-yard touchdown drive in the fourth quarter. Penn State went on to beat the Irish, 24-21, and Paterno had vindication.

Joe Paterno has been well revered in his 16 seasons at Penn State. Saturday's win places him one short of the 150-victory mark for his career. But, in all those years of prosperity and bowl bids, he has one rap against him — he can't win the big game.

The examples are numerous: the 1979 Sugar Bowl (14-7 loss to Alabama for the national championship); the 1976 Gator Bowl (20-9 loss to the Irish); last year's 1-4-9 loss to Pitt, and, most recently, this season's losses to Miami (Fla.) and Alabama. The Irish and other natives were getting restless. Many fans even displayed "Joe Must Go" signs.

But, at least for this week, thoseblings will subside. "It was a great football game," said Paterno after the game. "Notre Dame is a very fine football team. But it was good for us to come from behind in the closing minutes with the pressure on.

"We've played so many good football teams lately. It was a great win for Penn State. It feels good to come back."

But, by no means is Paterno out of the woods yet. In between the first and last touchdown drives, the Lions' offense was sloppy. The most telling series of downs was on Penn State's second touchdown when it took the Lions seven plays to go the final three yards, with quarterback Todd Blackledge inching in for the score.

And it won't get much easier. Pitt, the nation's No. 1 team by default, plays host to Penn State this Saturday in Three Rivers Stadium. "I haven't even had a chance to think about Pitt," Paterno admitted. "They obviously have a great football team and it should be a great game."

However, even with a win against the Panthers, there is still the Fiesta Bowl on New Year's Day against USC. Maybe, just maybe, a three-game winning streak to finish the season finally would knock that overweight monkey off Paterno's back.

On Saturday, though, Paterno was content with beating the Irish, although Notre Dame is only a 5-5 team and played like one quite often against the Lions. "I'm especially pleased for our fans," he said. "They've worked too hard. I don't want them to leave this place (Beaver Stadium) with two straight losses."

Neither did Joe Paterno. One got the impression that the man, who, after all, may never have come back.

The new formation, which the Irish used to confuse Ohio State, has a single point man at the blue line, the two wingers in the same spot as before and the addition of another center into the slot which caused more disruption in front of the net.

There was a lot of disruption on the ice in the second period of Saturday's game as a wrestling match broke out among several of the players.

"There really wasn't any fighting, said Irish coach Digger Phelps. "Temper's have a tendency to get out once in a while when you get real intense and sometimes it gets a little bit out of whack. I didn't think it was any serious nature. I thought the referees handled it well."

"I don't approve of it (the fighting)," said Irish captain Dave Paxson, "but if the referees were tough enough, they'd take it away a lot of stick work. If they (Ohio State) know that we're going to stand up to them, since their game is physical, and that they're not going to get away with it, then it makes it a world of difference out there. So I think the referees did right, as long as they keep control of the game."

"A key to the breaking up the brawl, according to Boll, was "We were going into a shell and not getting to the puck. In the second period tonight we went out for the first ten minutes and beat them to every puck, and we controlled the game."

In the fourth period, the Irish outscored the Buckeyes 3-0, and headed to the dressing room with a 2-1 lead. The Irish had a 1-0 lead at the time of the first period.
