Reasoner meets Hesburgh for ‘Sixty Minutes’

By JOE RODRIGUEZ

For the past two days the cameras of the CBS news magazine, “60 Minutes”, have been rolling here on campus. “60 Minutes” had originally planned to do a segment on the retirement of Notre Dame President, Fr. Theodore Hesburgh. But when Fr. Hesburgh agreed to remain in his position for five more years, “60 Minutes” continued with its plans to profile the 84-year-old university patriarch.

Harry Reasoner, currently on campus to anchor the segment, talked about his job at “60 Minutes”. Reasoner praised the opportunities for creative journalism that are offered by the program. In addition, he commented on the “60 Minutes” staff.“To put out a quality show, week after week, takes a team effort by a dedicated group,” he said. Reasoner particularly enjoyed working on this segment. The anchormen, who first met and interviewed Fr. Hesburgh eighteen years ago, called the University president “one of the most fascinating personalities I’ve dealt with in my years of journalism.”

Reasoner emphasized that the aim of the segment is not to profile Fr. Hesburgh not only as the president of Notre Dame, but as an individual as well.

scenes for the show, which will air sometime in February, were shot at various spots around campus, as well as at the annual football banquet, held last night at the ACC.

Non-Christian courses
Theo dept clarifies policy

By KAREN MCCLOSEY

Controversy surrounded theology courses recently due to a misunderstanding of department policy.

Students were reportedly told that non-Christian theologies could no longer be used to fulfill the theology requirement. James Coggins and Karen Miranda told The Observer that when they registered for certain non-Christian courses, they were referred to Associate Professor of Theology Fr. Edward Malloy. Fr. Malloy reportedly informed them that because of pressure from alumni, faculty and other staff members, the Theology Department was imposing new restrictions on students. Because of this, he reportedly told students that the non-Christian courses would no longer fulfill the department requirement. When questioned further, Fr. Malloy reportedly told the students that any request for requirement credit would have to be reviewed by Department Chair Fr. Richard McBrien.

According to Fr. McBrien, the faculty of the Theology Department became concerned about the issue when theology professors entered their classroom a few days after pre-registration opened. The board had the following. “This course no longer fulfills the second course requirement.”

This incident led to a discussion at a regular faculty meeting the following week. At this gathering, the question was raised as to Fr. Malloy’s actions, which seemed to conflict with departmental policy. The policy at Notre Dame is that the theologian in question is enrolled “Collegiate Requirements in Theology at Notre Dame.” Enacted in December of 1979, this document remains the guide for undergraduate theological study. The document states the following with regard to second theology course requirements: “Second courses build on an intelligent grasp of tradition to show how theological understanding can further the liberal education of students in all four undergraduate colleges, as well as open ways of understanding how Christians can contribute to today’s world.”

The section dealing with non-Christian courses states that such courses examine “another religious tradition in an historical and systematic fashion, opening students to a cross-cultural theological perspective.”

According to Prof. Robert Wilken, several members of the faculty were upset that Fr. Malloy acted in a manner contrary to the policy of the department.

Assistant Prof. Phillip Dewey stated that “nobody is required to go to Fr. Malloy to get permission to take a non-Christian course.” In confirming these incidents, Fr. McBrien said that Fr. Malloy acted on Fr. McBrien’s authority. The department chairman explained that the professors were concerned that students were not receiving an adequate background in Christian theology. They felt that it was their obligation to advise them in these matters. However, Fr. McBrien stressed that this does not mean that non-Christian courses do not fulfill theology requirements.

According to Fr. McBrien, “The department reserves the right to advise students about an adequate department chairman explained that the professors were concerned that students were not receiving an adequate background in Christian theology. One tricky issue that has been dormant for a while at Notre Dame is the question of whether or not the campus should be wired for cable television reception. To the best of our knowledge, only two dorms on campus currently are equipped with an integrated cable system. Flanner and Grace. As the time of their construction in the late 60s, the possibilities presented by cable were apparently very much on the mind of administrators. However, there were two prime considerations which seem to have cooled that enthusiasm:

First, there is the cost factor. Wiring each dorm room or suite in each hall at Notre Dame would be a very costly proposition, and more improbable in nature, is the concern among some members of the administration that access to the plethora of cable stations and pay TV alternatives would serve as a serious distraction to students' work and study habits. Both of these concerns were well warranted, so why resurrect a seemingly dead issue?

It is essential that we recognize the fact that our society is on the threshold of revolutionary technological changes — most of which center around the home television set and the personal computer. The days of simply sitting in front of the "tube" and mindlessly absorbing sitcoms and game shows are dying a quick death. Within several years, the home entertainment system will have evolved beyond our wildest dreams.

Twenty-four hour sports and news networks will be available in all homes and in some test cities, households are also receiving traditional newspapers in new form. Via the television set instead of on the doorstep through experimental channel with their city newspaper.

Columbus Ohio is the urban would-be a cable world where one can view possibilities of cable. In that city, cable is operating a system known as QUBE in essence is a two-way television hookup in which viewers can respond instantly to public opinion polls, trivia questions, and other queries. Banking and retailing functions are also being performed by test households — all via television cable hookup.

But what does cable have to offer Notre Dame and could the benefits of its contribution be enough to outweigh the negative aspects mentioned above? We should at least look at the possibilities before rejecting the concept out of hand.

In addressing the first concern, cost, the possibility of reaching an installment arrangement with potential cable companies should be investigated. In return for granting a franchise to one of the potential bidding firms, the company is pledged to create free or cut-rate installation charges. No additional bureaucracy would be needed by Notre Dame because the decision to receive cable service or not would be up to individual students, and all billing and servicing would be performed by the cable company.

One other stipulation in any potential franchise agreement would call for the provision of at least one public access channel exclusively for the Notre Dame campus. This is key in addressing the study distraction concern.

This public access channel would serve two purposes — both educational. First, programming on this channel could consist of special-cast-related on air reviews sessions. One very popular "shock" would undoubtedly be a Thursday night chemistry review session — in preparation for Friday's "Emil." Close to one thousand freshmen are enrolled in this class, and even if a fraction of the total tuned in, there would still be a substantial number of students deriving educational benefit from the system. The sessions could be presented over by teaching or graduate assistants, or even advanced students in the class.

Other possible candidates for airing at one time consideration on the public access channel could be Economics 123 and 124 — both classes with over 700 students tradition­ally enrolled. Organic chemistry, accounting, engineering, and many other large classes could be covered in reviews or update programming in a manner similar to that proposed for freshmen chemistry.

The educational possibilities presented by cable television would accrue in the field of communication studies. Access to even the modest facilities of proposed channel would enable the instruction students now receiving in the Communication and Theatre and American Studies departments Telecommunications courses. Insiders are now offered through both departments but enrollment is severely limited. Although the channel would only broadcast on campus via carrier current, all the basic functions of a TV station could be roughly duplicated, including experience in producing news and sports programming.

The carrier current nature of the operation would, of course, benefit WSN-AM, which currently suffers from poor reception andarranged programming. In addition, because the cable system to student's stereos would dramatically improve reception — while still not competing directly in the South Bend market with the two University-owned radio stations.

Notre Dame Food Service has announced the formation of a new deli file for the spring semester. Situated in both serving squares of the South Dining Hall, the new service will feature made-to-order sandwiches and self serve soups. Students may select from cold cuts, meat salads and an assortment of breads and relishes. The deli service will begin in early February and will be offered only during lunch periods Monday through Friday. — The Observer

The Notre Dame Alumni Association is planning its annual hall visitation program. Scheduled for Jan. 21, the program will consist of a series of wide conferences enabling alumni members to brief students on the association and its activities. Students may also air any questions or comments concerning their expectations of the association. Of particular interest to many students will be a thorough discussion of the alumni association's annual summer job placement service. The tentative schedule features three of four alumni board members available at each of six sites across campus. — The Observer

Professor Kasimirz Braun, winner of the first of Merit for National Culture in his native Poland, will travel to America on a year long fellowship during the spring semester. Braun is a female student and guest drama director at the University of Notre Dame. The appointment was announced by Michel Lilman, chairman of the ND-SMC Department of Fine Arts and members present at the National School of Drama in Warsaw University and serves as artistic director and general manager of Teatr Wsapolozesny in Wroclaw. One of his duties at Notre Dame will be the direction of a Shakespearean comedy, the selection to be announced later. His Shakespeare credits include Twelfth Night, Hamlet, and Romeo and Juliet on Polish stage and television. Braun will teach "Acting Advanced Topis Polish Drama and Theater," and "Advanced Topics: Shakespeare: Theater and Society." He will stay at Notre Dame for the year. Braun is the author of six books, including The Second Reform of the Theater, The New Theater in the World 1960-1970, and Notebook of a Director. — The Observer

A former chief deputy in New Iberia, La. has been accused by a federal grand jury of providing protection to marijuana smugglers. Jim Desormeaux was arrested Wednesday night, said Sheriff Erroll "Romeo" Romero. Desormeaux allegedly received about $100,000 in protection money for activities that took place in Louisiana from April to about June 1, 1979. Desormeaux was a state trooper before Judge Lee P. Gagliardi in U.S. District Court. Papanastassiou was arrested Dec. 2 on a complaint by U.S. Customs Service agent after he allegedly sold four volumes, including a 1585 edition of Galileo's "Discorsi." A request for his extradition has been made by United Kingdom authorities. Washington (AP) - President Reagan asked Americans working in Libya to keep them from becoming pawns in an ideological battle.

The government said 1,500 U.S. citizens, many of them oil technicians, might be "imminently dangerous." The State Department also banned travel to Libya by U.S. citizens.

With border guards alerted to be on the lookout for alleged Libyan assassins trying to infiltrate this country, officials implied that yesterday's decisions were only first moves in a cold war with the Libyan strongman Muammar Khadafi.

The government still is considering an embargo against oil from Libya, which supplies about 4 percent of U.S. imports, according to officials who spoke privately.

"The steps taken early today by President Reagan to respond to the problem of Libyan lawlessness," Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. told reporters in Brussels, Belgium, where he conferred with European leaders.

"I have been told: 'Don't rule out positive further steps, but the actions taken are justified by the prevailing circumstances.'"

When asked whether William Clark announced the moves, but refused to link them to the administration's belief that Khadafi has sent an assassination squad to this continent to kill Reagan or other top government officials in retaliation for the American downing of two Libyan MiG-21s in early August.

Reagan said Monday he had evidence of the assassination plot, but none has been made public. Clark said the steps were taken in view of the overall pattern of Libyan behavior over the past six months.

"A sizable source indicates that a six-man assassination team... may attempt illegal entry into the United States via Mexico during early December 1981," said a notice posted at the university on the U.S.-Mexican border south of San Diego, Calif.

Conway explains escort service statements

Contrary to a report in Wednesday's Observer, Student Government Security Commissioner Brian Conway did not resign as head of the escort service.

Conway explained that he went before the Hall President's Council Tuesday night to discuss the lack of participation by hall volunteers in the service. He asked the hall presidents to assume greater responsibility in staffing the service. However, Conway did not step down as hall service.

According to Conway, volunteers have failed to show up at their appointed times at the Memorial Library in the past few weeks. "There was a lack of communication somewhere along the line," Conway explained. As a result, Conway was forced to staff the service himself.

Conway concluded that the halls would have to assume more of the burden of operating the service. Each of the six men in a dorm will staff the service on a rotating basis. Escort leaders in each dorm will report on the night's work to Conway.

This system will be used in the first three weeks after the semester break. At the end of that time, Student Body President Don Murday, Student Body Vice President Tara Kenny and Conway will evaluate the escort service, and its future.

Blacks riot in Gainesville

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Black youths pelting motorists and pedestrians with rocks and bottles yesterday in an area where about 250 people rampaged the night before to protest the shooting of a black teenager by a white policeman.

Police said the disturbance at midday yesterday was far more limited than Wednesday night's outbreak in this North Florida city of 85,000, home of the state's largest campus and one of its few black police chiefs.

"We're responding to it. It's not as big a group at this time," police Lt. Don Dean said.

Dean said the number of black youths participating in the disturbance was "about 10 or 15," compared with the estimated 250 who rampaged for 90 minutes following the shooting of 16-year-old Columbus Williams by an officer trying to make a drug arrest. He was reported in satisfactory condition at a hospital yesterday.

More than 60 riot-equipped police were called in to quell that disturbance.

Police Chief Atkins Warren was in his former hometown of St. Louis when the disturbance broke out. He rushed back to Gainesville yesterday, toured the troubled area, then met with his staff.

The investigation of the shooting was in the hands of the state attorney's office.

Police said Williams had grabbed the service revolver of undercover officer Ernest Bridges as Bridges tried to arrest him in a drug investigation. Bridges shot him in the chest with a backup weapon.

But witnesses claimed that the youth had followed on the curb and the officer was in no danger when the shot was fired.

"(Williams) was lying on his stomach. He was physically helpless," said Joseph Bryant, an insurance agent.

He was getting up. Boom! He shot him," said Sharon Alexander, 27.

One black community leader expressed surprise at the violence and said he did not think it was "symptomatic of any racial problems in Gainesville."

When asked what brought on this modification in the department, Switalski said that it was not city growth or an increase in crime in the Northeast neighborhood that caused the change.

The domestic program was founded in 1978, when five Notre Dame graduates traveled to social work, such as teaching school and working with juvenile delinquents.

The program has expanded since then, moving to other cities where Holy Cross Associates now work. The last current sites are located in Colorado Springs, Colo.; Haywood, Ga.; Phoenix, Ariz.; and the original Portland site.

While students from the Portland area also participate, Notre Dame and Saint Mary's graduates comprise 85 percent of the program. Generally, there are five volunteers at each site. The volunteer ratio is about 50 percent male, 50 percent female.

The domestic program runs annually, from August through July.

Fecaney, presently a Notre Dame law student, participated in the program from August, 1979 through July, 1980. He taught grade school while at the Phoenix site.

Fecaney emphasized that the program is open for all graduates. "No specific major is necessary to join. We are simply looking for students interested in a variety of social work," he said.

For each volunteer in the program, $4,000 is placed in a common house budget to pay expenses. In addition, volunteers are given $30 a month as spending money.

There is a Christian aspect to the program as well. Participants remain close through such activities as worship.

Fecaney described the flexibility of the program. "Basically, the volunteers can do what they want on the local level. There is a Holy Cross priest present at each site to coordinate the program. There is a great deal of flexibility involved," he explained.

The international program involves a two- and one-half year commitment. Thus, the overseas group that left this past August will return in December of 1983.

Associates accept applications

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) -- Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. said yesterday that new U.S. actions against Libya were in response to "terrorist activity" but that most of American-European allies probably would maintain "the closest" contacts with the Libyan government.

Referring to a U.S. request yesterday for Americans to leave Libya, and cancellation of U.S. passports for travel to Libya, Haig told reporters, "The steps taken today by President Reagan are in response to the problem of Libyan lawlessness."

But Haig said the steps were primarily to protect Americans and that the United States was not "engaged in victimizing Libya."

In recent weeks U.S. officials, speaking privately, had spoken in terms of punitive actions against Libya such as banning imports of Libyan oil to the United States. The Reagan administration alleges Libyan leader Muammar Khadafy is plotting to kill the president or other high U.S. officials.

"I don't rule out potential further steps, but the actions taken are justifiable by the prevailing circumcumstances," Haig said. "It should be read precisely that way."

U.S.-Soviet arms talks continue

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — While progress in U.S.-Soviet arms talks is being made, it is too early to predict there will be an agreement in time to head off planned deployment of American missiles in Europe. A chief U.S. negotiator told the NATO allies Thursday.

Paul H. Nitze told foreign ministers from 15 NATO countries that both sides were getting down to real issues in the negotiations" that opened Nov. 30 in Geneva, according to a senior U.S. official.

Nitze flew here to provide a progress report on the talks with the Soviets. The United States wants NATO to endorse the U.S. negotiating position and also to reaffirm NATO's decision to go ahead with deployment of 12 U.S. missiles beginning in 1983, if there isn't an agreement.

The senior official, who requested anonymity, said that following Nitze's remarks to a closed session, the NATO foreign ministers praised the U.S. effort in the Geneva negotiations.

Ambassador Nitze was able to report that the negotiations have been undertaken in a very serious vein and, the atmosphere between the two delegations has been a very positive one," said the official.

Sources and spokesmen for several other delegations indicated they were generally pleased with what Nitze reported.

The conference source who did not want to be identified quoted Nitze as saying the Soviet position in the first 10 days of the negotiation had not changed. The U.S. position, a "zero option," favoring a ban on all nuclear missiles in the European area, also apparently had not changed either.

Toth Ruhli, spokesman for the West German Foreign Ministry, said his delegation was pleased the talks were focusing on matters of substance. Mark MacFadden, the Canadian foreign minister, told reporters: "It's quite clear to us from what Mr. Nitze said the United States is very serious in these arms control negotiations."

A source in the British delegation was quoted as saying Nitze's report was "not unencouraging."" Nitze's appearance was part of a U.S. effort on several fronts to bolster European resolve to go forward with deploying the nuclear missiles — if there is not an agreement — to confront Soviet missiles which are already in place.

The U.S. delegation, headed by Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., wants the NATO communique, which will be issued at Friday's close, to declare that deployment along with negotiations "are important and the deployment's scheduled time in 1983, in the absence of an agreement, will go forward."

Some of the European countries, especially West Germany, are expected to face domestic pressure to forgo deploying the missiles on their territory in the absence of an agreement.

Moscow (AP) - Andrei Sakharov's daughter-in-law Alexeyeva receives visa

Andrei Sakharov's daughter-in-law Alexeyeva, daughter of the Soviet government's renowned nuclear physicist, received a visa last Friday permitting her to visit the United States to attend the Nobel Peace Prize ceremony.

Alexeyeva, 20, whose husband was arrested last week, was told to bring her passport, two photographs and 215 rubles (about $350 at the official exchange rate), which is the normal price for a Soviet exit visa.

She told reporters that the summons came in a letter that arrived at Sakharov's Moscow apartment last evening, shortly after she received word that Sakharov and his wife Yelena Bonner had voluntarily ended the hunger strike they began Nov. 22.

Miss Alexeyeva, however, said she has no intention of leaving the Soviet Union before seeing the Sakharovs.

She said the KGB told her earlier in the day that she could visit them next Monday.

"I will not have peace of mind until I go to Gorky on Monday to prove to myself that the Sakharovs are all right," she said.

Sakharov, winner of the 1975 Nobel Peace Prize for his work on behalf of human rights, was arrested at the Volga River city east of Moscow nearly two years ago to limit his access to foreigners.

Miss Alexeyeva married Alexei Semyonov, who studies at Brandeis University near Boston, by proxy last summer in a ceremony performed in Montana. The Soviets do not recognize the marriage.

Soviet media have been silent on the case since last Friday's blast against the Sakharovs and Miss Alexeyeva in the government newspaper Pravda. The report accused Sakharov of beginning the hunger strike to fan "anti-Soviet sentiments." In the West, Reagan aides consider taxes to fight deficit

DuPont uses coal sales to reduce debt

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Du Pont Co., owner of the nation's second largest coal producer, is preparing an "aggressive" campaign to dump coal reserves to reduce a $3.8 billion debt incurred when it bought ConocoCo., industry analysts say.

The company's plan is to unload coal reserves while holding onto its reserves of more valuable low-sulfur steam coal used to drive power plant generators, they say.

Earlier this week, Du Pont officials said the Delaware-based chemical giant planned to sell about $32 billion of its "natural resource assets" in the next three years to reduce the debt incurred in buying ConocoCo. last summer.

Du Pont's acquisition of the nation's third largest oil company cost $6.8 billion, including $3.8 billion in cash. Du Pont Chairman Edward W. Jefferson said the deal raised the company's debt to an unsustainable level.

When it bought Conoco, Du Pont gained control of Consolidation Coal Co., West Virginia's largest coal producer and the nation's second largest. Analysts said Du Pont probably would try to keep Consolidation's valuable, low-sulfur coal reserves of West Virginia, but one analyst said the company might find it hard to reach its financial goals by selling just high-sulfur coal reserves.

Low-sulfur coal usually costs an average of $1 to $2 more per ton than higher-sulfur coal because it burns cleaner and requires less pollution control treatment, says Terry Ide, vice president of administration for the West Virginia Coal Association.

Du Pont Vice Chairman Ralph E. Bailey said some of Conoco's coal assets, held under its Consolidation subsidiary, would be included in the sale.

We intend to pursue an aggressive asset disposition program with coal reserves exceeding 14 billion tons, and we would look to sell reserves for which we have no development plans in the foreseeable future," Bailey said on the last day of a two-day seminar on financial analysis at Du Pont headquarters in Wilmington, Del.

Industry analysts said they were not surprised by Du Pont's announcement. "They obviously don't need 14 billion tons of coal," said Leonard Bogner, a research analyst with Baush Halsey Stuart Shields Inc., a New York brokerage house.

Mark Cohen, an analyst with Kidder Peabody and Co., another New York brokerage, estimated that Du Pont could sell about 12 billion tons of coal reserves without touching its operating mines or those planned for the future.

"The committed coal properties are far more valuable than the uncommitted reserves. They probably have limited profitability," Cohen said.

This would mean that Du Pont would seek to dispose of properties for which it had no immediate plans while holding onto active mining operations and those close to development.

Cohen said he believes Du Pont would try to hold onto its West Virginia and Pennsylvania reserves. An estimate of the company's valuable, low-sulfur Appalachian coal, those are the gems that 'Don't that going to go,' he said.

Another analyst thought Du Pont would have trouble if it tried to sell low quality reserves while keeping its more valuable assets.

Ohio investigator calls drug story 'a hoax'

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) — An Ohio investigator says a scare about drug-laced stickers being distributed to Midwest school children is a hoax.

In a copyright story in yesterday's editions of The Fort Wayne News-Sentinel, Jack McCormick of the Ohio Bureau of Criminal Investigation called the LSD-stickers story "the biggest rumor I've ever heard in my life."

McCormick said the story started last summer when a memo he wrote about the possibility of such stickers in Delaware state schools was interpreted by the press and broadcast by out-of-state reporters in Columbus, Ohio.

The investigator said parents in the town of Delaware, Ohio, had heard rumors about the stickers and thought the stickers were being circulated in their town and not in the state of Delaware. McCormick wrote the memo after checking out the town of Delaware and finding no evidence of the stickers.

"We checked it out," McCormick said. "First of all, no one ever wrote me originally about the state of Delaware, not the town of Delaware. Second, it was just a rumour."

Shortly after the memo was written, McCormick said, "I got a call about the report and asked the police found 5,000 tabs of blister acid in the case (of a man arrested in Columbus) Ohio. The blotters were covered with cute little blue stars.

"The reporter wanted to know if this bust didn't confirm the rumors that was what this investigator said, adding that the stories doesn't contain any LSD.

Officials in Muncie, Gary, Indiana, Port Wayne and Hammond have warned parents and children that the stickers, possibly laced with LSD. The stickers were said to be in the design of Walt Disney cartoon characters like Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck, as well as in a blue star design.

Ray Golan, an administrator for Hammond schools said be originally received a letter from the Michigan and Chicago school administrators who had received a letter from them that Hammond narcotics detectives told them they had confiscated some of the drugs.

"The stickers are a hoax, " said Golan. "We have found out that the stickers are a hoax."

Jimmy Lawson, the Hammond detective who said the drug stickers had been confiscated had not been reached for comment yesterday.

The News-Sentinel said the drug stickers were reported in Indiana, Michigan, Ohio, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, and other states.

"It was true that they were, but I worry some fluoricate will read will all the newspaper stories about feeding acid to school kids and decide to try it themselves."

McCormick told the News-Sentinel.
DODGING THE REAL WORLD

The Observer

For most undergraduates at Wake Forest University here, "current events" would seem confined to the upcoming holiday basketball tournaments and midnight exams.

Such matters as the opening round of U.S.-Soviet arms discussions in Geneva, China's next budget show-down in Congress would draw Hartley Smith and Elizabeth Hinds, 20-year-olds from the South Bend campus. "Civic illiteracy" threatens our democracy like never before, Hartley Smith says. But Wake Forest students are nowhere better prepared to deal than to foster "These are among the complicating matters as which we will understand, we are unable to claim or unable to do anything about..." the free press, bearing a reliable guide in the authority of the magisterium and the consistent public not a reasonable one to hear what the faithful have authority to decide definitively and infallibly upon the truth of certain doctrines and thus to have them to decide which individuals are inadmissible to teach the Catholic Church. That is not to say that the Church might not disapprove of that which is not in the name of Catholic theology on this campus, nevertheless, the Church cannot be a watching for all abuses. But in the case of Hans Kung, a man who has caught the public eye and who publishes a great deal which departs from Church teaching, the teaching must make clear to the faithful that this man, a Catholic priest, is not a reliable guide for Catholics in matters of the Faith.

In capacity, then, is Father Kung speaking on this campus? He remains a Catholic he speaks on theological matters. Is it not right to view him as one who speaks as a Catholic theologian? Was he invited so that we might see that his views are false? A debate format would have been appropriate for this purpose the question and answer period conducted on a random basis before the anniversary, with a tardy response with a well-labeled, a familiar, but also a vehement political candidate. While we're on the subject of Tom Jackman above — a typically popular editorial page feature — I would like to respond to another response with a final note: Virginia's Marshall Coleman is certainly the most plausible and the fact that he does not meet Miller's Godwin's definition of "real segregationist" does not disqualify him in the least. Similarly, Chuck Robb, while not a leading liberal (as I noted) can hardly be labeled a conservative, though his political ideals are subject to constant shifts. Happy reading!

Professor questions Kung

To the Editor:

Hans Kung was invited to Notre Dame to speak about theological matters. The editorial page of the student newspaper of the Catholic University and one might think that a Catholic University would teach Catholic doctrine. Is it proper to do by inviting speakers determined by the Church to be teaching contrary to Catholic doctrine? As most know, the Catholic Church has said that some of the positions which Hans Kung holds on theological matters are incompatible with Catholic doctrine; i.e., that they are false. Why then, Kung to speak at Notre Dame?

Some might think that all viewpoints must be heard — especially in an academic setting. Yet is this an absolute principle to which there are no exceptions? Would we allow a racist or one advocating on this campus? We would invite one who argues that the earth is flat? We would not invite proponents of this view to speak because they hold views which violate known truth; i.e., and the gospel and the earth is not flat. Grammar and theology are not always as easily accessible as truth as moral matters and as we see that Kung is not a reliable teacher of Catholic theology. Finally, there is little evidence that Notre Dame holds as an absolute principle the position that all viewpoints must be heard; how often can one hear an invited speaker on the Notre Dame campus who recognizes the authority of the magisterium and who speaks in support of the teachings on campus: why should she not invite dissenting theologians as well? Obviously, members of other religions do not speak for the Catholic Church — all those who hear them are aware that have no power to define Catholic doctrine. But do we hear other Catholic speakers who speak against Church doctrine very often on this campus. The Church, however, has not pronounced on their fitness to teach Catholic doctrine. That is not to say that the Church might not disapprove of that which is said in the name of Catholic theology on this campus, nevertheless, the Church cannot be a watching for all abuses. But in the case of Hans Kung, a man who has caught the public eye and who publishes a great deal which departs from Church teaching, the teaching must make clear to the faithful that this man, a Catholic priest, is not a reliable guide for Catholics in matters of the Faith.

Reality loses out to Finals Week

Features

The task of designating the "top ten" films of 1981 proved to be a rather difficult one, since a vast number of films were released, making it hard to choose from. Many of the most popular films were those that had been released earlier in the year, and it was difficult to decide which ones to include. In the end, I narrowed down the list to ten films that I believe are the best of 1981.

Film 1981

Pat Mulligan

Unfortunately, a majority of the American film-going audience seemed to share my disinterest in the fine and more subtle films that were released this year. The most successful films were those that were most entertaining, those that were just a little more exciting than life itself. The box office appeal of such films continues to be strong.

Five Quality Films of 1981

Atlantic City

(Juan Malle director)

Malle has directed a string of superior films in the last seven years. "Lacombe, Lucien, Mariner of the Heart," and "Sissi" are the three most recent that come to mind. City further enhances his reputation as a film maker. This tale covers the life of a woman with despair in the title town represents an extraordinary exercise in style and atmosphere. Bert Lancaster deserves an Oscar nomination for his performance as a lonely man living off of the dole.

Breaker Morant

(Brian Yuzna director)

Though produced in Australia in 1979, this film was first released in 1981 and was nominated for two Academy Awards.

Questions of Christmas

Second Thoughts

also -- regarding the trivial and the profound, with friends and strangers. Last night, while watching the snow fall outside the Norfolk pine at the end of Christmas, I decided to play it again. "Why Christmas?"

That phrase is new to the "Christmas" word association game that I have been playing for years. But never have I been so heavy with reminiscence about this time of year. Perhaps the answers are too obvious.

Perhaps all of this is rather platitudinous. I thought so until I discovered how much I hate regrets and paper-cuts. I recognized the slow pace of the bitter cold outside and within. I could have watched reality as it was unfolding. But I didn't have caught myself or been human enough.

What if I had been human enough? I wonder.

What if's are only good for forcing us to become human enough. They are like paper-cuts. They remind us of realities we have let slip by or have taken for granted. They jolt us out of "tommorow-living" and plop us into "today-living." They require that we be human enough to want the regret of the "what if's" or the pain of the paper-cut to cut us.

Kristina Finken ningu

Friday, December 11, 1981 — page 10

Though not in the same class as those listed above, several films deserve honorable mention:

Although there are many who prefer a New York—style Christmas, I am faced with the physical pressures of school. I neglect to be human enough to act on my human desires. The other half lives in today's, in being human enough. Communication consists of the five senses, the intellect, and the lyric awareness of our direction and goals. In our pursuit of mundane...
The cup I left behind me

The cup I left behind me was the chalice I used at Mass. It is my gift to me on my birthday. I could not imagine it being taken or damaged. I didn't expect it, when I became a priest, to have a chalice. But one day I got some on the altar from the Rev. Robert Griffin, which I found to be magical. I loved the chalice. I was given it as an appointment. I used it every day, rubbing it carefully with a flannel cloth after each Mass to keep it gleaming. The wine I used to hold in the chalice, and was in perfect service of the altar.

Chalices, in those days, were specially made. Before becoming a priest, I came to care deeply about the liturgical service, for it was considered a great honor for a chalice to be used as a vessel of the Sacrament. It would be the cup used to wash the feet of the disciples of the daily occasions when the wine poured into it would be blessed as the Precious Blood of Jesus. There was a golden plate that matched the chalice called a paten; it was used for the Eucharistic Bread. It was lovingly made as the chalice, and was in perfect service of the altar.

I loved dearly the chalice I was given as an appointment. I used it every day, rubbing it carefully with a flannel cloth after each Mass to keep it gleaming. The wine I used to hold in the chalice, and was in perfect service of the altar.

A confessional day comes in marriage, they say, when couples discover that the honeymoon is over. For priests, the first few hours, the first week, begin, and the fending with pain starts for the rest of a lifetime. You can blame yourself, you can blame the world, but something unchangeable has happened, and experience has no incessant. You cannot say: "The highlight of my day is to offer Mass." You need victories more than sacraments, and the hurdle may be, you face it as you face a small few, as the saying goes.

Every chalice has a personal symbol for the owner. None of us expect the Holy Grail. We may even doubt that there is any magic at all, having such an identity of it, that it would appear in mystical vision to pure-hearted knights. Without believing the folklore themselves, they know its in-nificance. You cannot say: "The highlight of my day is to offer Mass." You need victories more than sacraments, and the hurdle may be, you face it as you face a small few, as the saying goes.

The chalice might represent his experience that seemed like innocence, and his participation in the mystery of an ancient story, whose truth is part of our hymns. My chalice, I always felt, would always be a young priest's chalice, no matter how long I lived. I would have been the second of the sons of the springtime in the year I was ordained, when I woke up in the morning, happy with the promise of the day.

At my ordination, I was given as an appointment. I used it every day, rubbing it carefully with a flannel cloth after each Mass to keep it gleaming. The wine I used to hold in the chalice, and was in perfect service of the altar.

It will be only the second time the two teams have met. The last time the Irish met the Tigers was in the NCAA tournament at Lincoln, Neb., in the spring of 1980. Mizzou eliminated Notre Dame from the tournament that day with an 87-84 overtime win.

The Tigers return seven lettermen, with top players at each of the three positions. 6-5 forward Ricky Fraser averaged over 16 points per game last season, but he'll be challenged by Mark Dreesler, the 6-7 junior who singlehandedly dismantled the Irish in Lincoln. Dreesler missed the entire season last year with a knee injury, but is healthy now and probably will start. Steve Stepanovich is the Tigers' big man on the boards. The 6-11 center averaged well over seven rebounds a game last year, and will be a force with which to contend un­derneath.

from Kansas City the Irish travel cast for games with Lafayette in the Philadelphia Palestra and Virginia in Maryland's Capital Center.

Lafayette lost four starters from last season's squad, and will go with less experienced players in a rebuilding attempt by Coach Lefty Ervin.
7-1 center Tom Peitroski is the block on which Ervin is building his team. The junior averaged just un­der eight points per game last season, and was a tough rebounder.
He is the only returnee from last year's starting lineup that went 14-15.

After the Monday night game in Philadelphia, Notre Dame will take on Virginia's Cavaliers in the second half of a home-neutral and home-neutral series.

Last year's game was a classic, as Orlando Woolridge hit a 10-footer with time running out, and the Irish upset the unbeaten and top-ranked Cavaliers.

The story of this team is, of course,
Ralph Sampson. The 7-4 center could be the best player in the col­lege game today.

Gone are Jeff Lang and Lee Raker, prime forces in the Cavaliers' Final Four entry of a year ago. But Orsell
Wilson, a 6-6 guard, and Jeff Jones, his 6-4 backcourt mate, are coming into their own. Both men averaged over six points per game last year, respectively the presence of Raker.
The five-game trip winds up on the west coast, where the Irish take on one of the country's most un­derrated teams, the San Francisco Dons. Coach Pete Barry returns four starters, including Quintin Dailey, one of the nation's best guards.
Dailey, who averages just under 25 points per game, leads the back­court with senior captain Ken McAlister, himself an 11 points per game scorer.

Up front, the Dons are led by a couple of Gary, Indi., products.
Wallace Bryant, a 7-0 center, is one of the top rebounders in the country, pulling in 10 per game.
John Hegwood, like Bryant, a 16 point per game scorer, pulls down eight rebounds per contest himself.

All in all, it will be a tough road trip for Notre Dame. As Phelps says, it is quite probably the toughest road trip of his career here, and could well be the toughest trip any team takes this season.

Big Ten basketball teams, showing only a 24-14 edge against international opponents, swing into a stream of holiday tournaments before opening the conference season Jan. 7.

Indiana and Illinois start the tournament rush Friday night.
The eighth-ranked Hoosiers host the Indiana State Classic, and Illinois hosts
the Illini Classic.

Colorado State, Penn State and Southern Methodist will participate in the Indiana Classic while Texas A&M, Army and Oklahoma City have been invited to the Illini Classic.

Indiana and Illinois are favored to win their respective tournaments, thus taking the sting out of their recent losses to ranked teams.

Indiana was humbled Tuesday night by No. 2 Kentucky 89-69, while Illinois was dropping a 78-68 decision to No. 14 Min-souri. The losses were the first since Wisconsin and Illinois.

A number of other Big Ten teams will be in action this weekend beginning with Chicago State at Northwestern tonight. Tomorrow’s schedule, in addition to the Indiana and Illinois tournaments, finds Northern Iowa at Iowa, Cincinnati at Michigan State, Ball State at Wisconsin, Michigan at Western Michigan, Ohio State at West Virginia and Purdue at Oklahoma.

Currently, only No. 6 Iowa and
No. 8 Minnesota are undefeated, and the Hawkeyes would like to add a per-fest record to the conference race if they can get through the Bluebonnet Classic at Houston Dec. 18-19.

After that, the Hawkeyes take on Drake and then journey to South Carolina before meeting Purdue in the Big Ten opener Jan. 17.

Minnesota might find it tougher to start the Big Ten race with a perfect record. The Gophers play at Mar-quett Dec. 19 and at Kansas State
Dec. 21 before hosting their own tournament Dec. 28-29 against Arizona, Army and Montana State.

MARQUETTE, Mich. — As if the Notre Dame hockey team didn't have enough to worry about in facing second-place Northern Michigan here last night, the Irish also had to overcome some shoddy "homer" officiating.

It proved to be too much of a burden. Notre Dame battled hard, despite losing three players to disqualification and killing off 11 out of 12 short-handed situations, but dropped a 5-2 decision to Northern Michigan in a penalty-filled contest before 2,354 at Lakeview Arena.

How bad was the officiating? "We were deeply concerned when we joined the CCHA," said an incensed Notre Dame Coach Lefty Smith, "about their officiating standards. They were suspect in the fact that they often use local referees."

"Tonight, we had a local man (the head referee was a Marquette resident) and he was extremely incompetent."

The bulk of the penalties came in the second period, which was highlighted by a five-minute-long fight between Notre Dame's John Higgins and UNM's Jeff Tassoff. Both players were ejected from the game at the 11:14 mark, but Higgins was given the greater amount of penalties. The unseen game official received 17 minutes of penalties for high sticking, intent to injure, fighting and grabbing the face, mask, white. Tassoff received only the major for fighting.

But the concerns were not over by any means. In 26 seconds of the middle period, Notre Dame's John Schathauser rotated to the ice by the Wildcat's 'barrie Jamieson who wouldn't let the Irish defenseman get to his feet. As so often happens, the referee saw only the retaliation, which was unfortunate for Schathauser.

Out of frustration, Schmidt stopped on Lundeen, and was ejected immediately and given a five-minute major penalty for kicking.

In all, the Irish were shorthanded for an incredible 17:09 straight in the second and third periods, but the Wildcats were able to score only one goal in that time period.

But that one goal in that one period, the Wildcats' third goal of the wild game, put the Irish behind 5-1 after two periods. UNM tallied two goals in the first 2:25 of the period, before any of the nervous crowd with Schathauser and Schathauser lighting the lamp for Mogumb. It was his league-leading 22nd goal of the season.

Freshman Brent Chapman scored his first of the season with 7:12 left in the game, after ND finally had regained sufficient strength, to make it 5-2. But, to be honest, just as the Irish were about to make their final push, ND defender Bob Rist was nabbed for slashing to end the threat.

But the blunder, the one bad call that especially set Smith off, was the disqualification of Bill Rothstein with 55 seconds left for spearing. Notre Dame's third dismissal of the evening. As a result. all three players — Higgins, Schmidt and Rothstein — musn't set on tonight's rematch.

Smith was well aware that his post game tirade might not sit well with CCHA officials. "I know I'm not supposed to say these type of things," Smith said. "But there comes a time when you have to say what you want to be said — the officiating was incompetent."

Unlike the referees, the goaltenders sparked in the heated contest. Notre Dame's Dave Laurion blanked 37 saves, including all 20 of UNM's shots in the third period. The Wildcat's Bruno Campese stopped 24 Irish shots in upping his unblemished record to 8-0-0.

Despite the defeat and the recurring threats of a breakdown in the second period, Smith was pleased with the effort. "I have to say," he commented, "I've never been prouder of a group of guys than I was of our team tonight."

The same, it is certain, was not said of the refs. IRISH ICERS. Rothstein scored Notre Dame's first goal at 6:18 of the middle period, stop shot by Jim Brown to close the Irish with- in 2-1. . A total of 64 minutes in penalties were called, 45 of those against ND. . The same two teams go at it again tonight at 8:00.

After a No. 3 preseason ranking, Notre Dame dropped a notch after Alabama won the 1981 championship with a win over Louisiana State. The following week, the Irish took their turn against LSU and the point total dropped the Tigers to 0-2. That win, coupled with losses by top-ranked Michigan (at Wisconsin) and No. 2 Alabama against Georgia Tech, is a lackluster performance by third-ranked Oklahoma against Wyoming, propelled the Irish into the top spot. Notre Dame’s loss in Michigan in Week 3 quickly pushed Greg Faust’s team downward (to 13th), and the one-point loss at Purdue the following week removed the Irish from the Top 20 for good.

Hesburgh addresses ethics

By MICHAEL ORTMAN

Sports Editor

Notre Dame President Theodore M. Hesburgh called on his fellow university administrators around the nation to take charge in cleaning up collegiate athletics. Hesburgh, however, was not known for being involved in the athletic arena himself. In fact, the last night's Notre Dame football banquet in the ACC.

"It is difficult to keep up with the schools that are on disciplinary probation," Hesburgh admitted. "All allegations of cheating, rules violation, improper recruitment, academic irregularities in admissions and in receiving credit without attending class—all of these are far too many.

Addressing athletics is something I don't know how to handle, but as his tenure as university president he has referred virtually all athletic matters to his vice president, Fred Edmund P. Joyce. But Hesburgh acknowledged that he is "filling in" for Joyce who is touring mainland China.

Hesburgh emphasized the fact that coaches are under tremendous pressure to produce winning teams capable of raising large sums of money into university coffers. But he added that "next year's football team will not come through the ACC.

Then, in what can be construed as a measure of cooperation, Defenders against Notre Dame coaches in all sports, Hesburgh asserted, "It is in the secure coaches who cut corners. Their position and tenure should not be at the mercy of last year's score or the vagaries of a single season. They should have reasonable security in their jobs, and the full confidence and support of the administration. Alums should not badger them, nor should the coaches.

"Of course, they will suffer a certain amount of pressure. But those who bud we lose anything less than total victory as a dismal failure. But the Muncie, Ind., native is the job of the university president, according to Hesburgh, to ease that pressure first by placatingathletes in their proper perspective, and then supporting their athletic programs whenever possible.

"A president must . . . not yield to the pressure from the students, or the coaches. But this was the first coach was said to have done, "What do they think it is, a game?" It is a game, but not a very good one.

The 1981 football season officially ended with last night's awards dinner, where talk concerned the return of coaches and players in 1982 has already begun.

Though he emphasized that rumors about the firing of any of his coaches are premature, Jerry Faust will not deny the possibility that changes may take place among his staff in the near future. The implication that shake-ups might occur has been printed in several newspapers recently, however, Faust insists that no decisions have been made as yet.

At this point, "yes, we are assessing the situation," he admitted yesterday.

"But nothing's been done about it.

"And nothing may be done," he added.

The intentions of Faust and his assistants have been turned towards recruiting and the upcoming spring practice. No formal announcements have come from his office in the last four seasons, but speculation centers around changing the assignments of some assistants, and replacing others. Several reports indicate that administrative assistant Joe Vento, the defensive line coach for 17 seasons, may be ready for the return of coaches and players in 1982 has already begun.

"If we have a long road ahead of us, but we have to make the most of it. This may be the toughest road trip Notre Dame has had since I've been here. We play some of the top schools in the country between now and the time the second semester begins. It is the time for us to grow up and become the basketball team we know we can be.

Juniors Phil Carter, Dave Duerson and Mark Zavagnin have been elected tri-captains of the 1982 Notre Dame football team, it was announced at last night's football banquet honoring the 1981 squad. All-American linebacker Bob Crable, offensive tackle Phil Ponderac and cornerback John Krinnis shared the top honors for the 1981 season.

Carter will be serving his second season in the leadership role. Although injuries have hampered his three seasons with the Irish, the halfback now stands third on the Notre Dame career list with 1,649 yards. Duerson has started 27 games in the Notre Dame secondary over the last two seasons including all 11 this season. The Muncie, Ind., native led defensive back in tackles this season with 56 and picked off two passes, returning one 88 yards for a touchdown at Miami.

Zavagnin, who many feel has been living in Crable's shadow for three seasons, finished second only to Crable in tackles this year with 94. He led the Irish in interceptions in 1981 with three.

"There are a lot of problems with the team right now," Phelps admits. "But we are making improvements, he said. "Every game we get a little better in some areas. We've got to improve a lot in a number of areas if we want to succeed over the next month.

"Most of all, we have to keep up our intensity. Mental mistakes are hurting us at times. That, too, is a matter of inexperience. We have a very inexperienced ball club here.

"We've got to improve underneath and on the boards. We still aren't getting the offensive rebounds we need to be competitive.

"Northern is patient, as well. We have to control the game tempo and the boards against them. Again, controlling the boards will be a key. We haven't been able to do that all year.

"That's our big concern. We're not at all pleased with the way the team played in Monday's loss to Murray State, and had heavy problems in rebounding.

"In the game against Murray State we did everything we possibly could. We were concerned about Saturday's game. We have no confidence with short hands.

"The goal for the Irish playing in the ACC, then take Valparaiso a week from Tuesday in the last home game before the long road trip.

"No northern is a very deceptive basketball team," Phelps said at his press conference yesterday. "They play very well. They've got good athletes. We are concerned about Saturday's game. We have no confidence with short hands.
