Faust, Irish all set for Michigan

By KELLY SULLIVAN

Notre Dame marketing majors have made a small fortune selling T-shirts this week that read, "The Irish do it in the dark." No question about it, the lights around Notre Dame's Stadium tomorrow night will be the focus of attention — until kick-off. Then it will be time for Gerry Faust and his team to show everyone just how much they've learned since they last took the field.

"In some ways, I'm a little bit more at ease than I was before our first game last year," says the second-year head coach, "because I know the whole scope of college football much better now.

"But on the other hand, I'm more nervous because we're going up against a highly-ranked team right off the bat. Either way, I'm just anxious to get started again. We're a better football team, but there's no way to prove that until we play."

But according to the Irish coaching staff, Michigan, too, is a better football team than the one that embarrassed Notre Dame 25-7 a year ago.

"Jay Robertson (defensive line coach) coached at Wisconsin last year when they beat Michigan," Faust says. "We sent him up to watch those two play last week. He felt that Wisconsin had a better team this year, but Michigan really handled them. They have all the ingredients to be great this season."

Tale of two quarterbacks

"Junior quarterback Blair Kiel won the job in spring practice, but Kiel hasn't been an effective passer ... and Faust wants to pass a lot more," Sports Illustrated noted the youngsters as "Junior" this year. "This year Kiel's a different guy. As a sophomore a year ago, quarterback Steve Smith got off to a rocky start..."

"Smith gained 2,255 yards, but not the Michigan fans' favor. He scored often — in spring practice, but Kiel hasn't been an effective passer against the enemy... and Faust wants to pass a lot more.

"Great talent is always waiting to be discovered. Before attaining glory, though, the talented individual invariably has to "pay his dues."" — Phil Richards, South Bend Tribune.

"Somewhere in the college football world a great talent is always waiting to be discovered. Before attaining glory, though, the talented individual invariably has to "pay his dues."" — Phil Richards, South Bend Tribune.

"Marcas Allen did it — in a blocking fullback for Charles White — before he went on to win the Heisman Trophy himself. Scott Zettak had to live through two years off with major knee surgery before attaining All-America honors in his senior season."

This weekend at Notre Dame Stadium, two junior quarterbacks — each of whom has been "paying dues" — get a chance to display the talent and gain the glory. On national television, no less. Blair Kiel and Steve Smith have not overcome the disadvantages of injuries, positions or physical injuries. But the two have had to overcome the mental aspect of trying to gain acceptance and respect from the press, as well as over zealous fans and alumni.

"Respect and acceptance were the least of the quarterbacks' problems when they arrived at their respective schools in the fall of 1980. Just about every scout in the business listed the youngsters at the top two blue-chip prospects at their position. Honor and glory at tradition-laden football schools seemed certain.

Kiel completed his three-year career at Columbus (Ind.) East High with 4,977 yards of total offense and 54 touchdowns (passing and running) to his credit. In his senior year he led East to a 13-0 state and the Class AAA state championship. "But on the other hand, I'm more nervous because we're going up against a highly-ranked team right off the bat. Either way, I'm just anxious to get started again. We're a better football team, but there's no way to prove that until we play."

Irish must stop Carter

By DAPHNE BAILLE

"This Anthony Carter is something else! Nobody in the United States of America could have imagined that pass from getting into Carter's hands."

This was the commentary of an exuberant Michigan announcer two years ago after the little sophomore receiver made a spectacular catch for the Wolverines.

"Now in his senior year, Anthony "The Dar- ter" Carter is still stopping hearts and electrifying crowds with his dazzling play. He has been called everything from "the human torpedo" to "the 161-pound touchdown machine," and Sports Illustrated says he "runs so fast it's tough to catch him even on film."

"Spectacular," "explosive," and "dynamic" are terms his schem- becher likes to use when describing his star receiver. The Michigan head coach has even said, "Anthony Carter is without question the most exciting player in college football."

These descriptions may sound biased or exaggerated, but in the case of Carter, they are well deserved. The two-time All-American has amassed statistics impressive enough to make him the only receiver considered in line for the Heisman Trophy this year.

In three years at Michigan, Carter has caught 118 passes for an amazing average of 14.2 yards per reception, and he has taken fully one-fourth of these passes into the end zone. Before the 1982 season began, he was already Michigan's leader in touchdown receptions (29), reception yards (2,123, and kickoff return yards (1,246).

In his three games against Notre Dame, the wide receiver has nabbed six passes for 152 yards — an average of 25 yards per catch. One of these was a 71-yard touchdown play that aided in the Wolverine victory last fall.

Figures like these are enough to frighten any secondary, but Notre Dame defensive backs feel prepared to handle the human dynamo. "We realize that Carter is a great receiver," notes free safety and senior tri-captain Dave Duerson. "It's a challenge to be able to defend against a receiver like him — but in no way are we in intimidated by him. We will have to be very conscious of every moment he's in the picture."

Even if he's on the field, a receiver cannot automatically pile up the statistics. He often faces double coverage, and he's always at the mercy of his quarterback. Carter will have to contend with these problems against the Irish.

Duerson explains, "Carter is a great one, but to be great somebody's got to put the ball in his hands. We're going to poll a strong pass rush on (Michigan quarterback) Steve Smith so his passing won't be as effective."

"We're going to be a more offensive defense. We're not going to sit back and see what they do — we'll be more explosive." The Irish defensive backs are ready to explode, especially when they recall last year's humiliating 25-7 defeat at Ann Arbor. In that contest, Carter grabbed three passes and scored two of them, accounting for 99 of Michigan's 113 passing yards.

"Last year was an embarrassment," remembers Duerson. "We put all that behind us now, but that feeling is still in the back of our minds. The Michigan loss was the start of the turmoil."

Although the Irish will have their hands full with the likes of Carter and Smith, the going won't be exactly easy for the Wolverines either. The Irish secondary was ranked in the top twenty last season, and it boasts some stars of its own.

Duerson has started 27 games in three years and has played at every spot in the secondary. He is backed up by Senior Red Bowser, who is used frequently in nickel defense situations.

At the corners, Stacey Toran and Chris Brown are ready to defend against whatever comes their way. Toran has been a starter for years, and Toran-Brown has recovered three fumbles, intercepted five passes, and broken up ten passes.

"We're not going to sit back and see what they do — we'll be more offensive defense. We're going to poll a strong pass rush on (Michigan quarterback) Steve Smith so his passing won't be as effective."

MUSCO: a bright idea for football

By LOUIE SOMOGYI

Sports Writer

The next time you hear what you think is the same old, constant suggestion for your career advancement, listen closely.

Joe Crookham, president of Musco Sports Lighting, Inc., can tell you as well as anyone that sometimes it's what seems to be an absurd thought that leads to prosperity. Back in 1979, when his company was just getting by in the business world, someone suggested a portable that would be mounted on tracks.

"It was all a big joke at the time," recalls Crookham.

But the joke eventually began to intrigue Crookham and Myron Gordin, a mechanical engineer for the company. Preliminary plans were drawn up — and received with enthusiasm by network television executives in New York, who quickly saw a major profit possibility for the future.

The big moment for the Oskaloosa, Iowa, firm came in 1980, when a major test at the University of Iowa was successful. With that, Crookham, the networks, and colleges across the country adopted a phase made popular one year ago—"Let there be light!"

Today, the laughter that was so prevalent three years ago at the Musco Corporation has been replaced with smiles of sweet success — for huge profits.

The company, with its new portable light- ing system, has been transformed from an industry that had annual sales of $972 in 1968 into a $10 million business.

Of course, without a quality product, there would have been nowhere significant in profits. In the 1980 test at Iowa, ABC TV engineers needed only one look at the Musco lighting system — and were totally convinced that a new wave of television coverage was on the horizon.

"The difference between sensational and above," says Crookham of that test run.

The steadiness of the portable lights, which are placed as heights of 120-160 feet, has also raised some questions — not to mention fear — on the parts of skeptics, but "not onetorrentious play has shown the holes to be very sturdy," says Crookham. "They could stand through a hurricane if they had to!"

The brightness of the resulting light was questioned by many as well. But Crookham quashed those doubts.

"To put it in perspective," he says, "these lights are so strong that if you placed each of four trucks around a softball field, but one mile away, it would still be bright enough to play a game." With organizations competing among the NCAA and several networks, college football has entered a new era, "The Boat" and "Fantasy Island" will soon have strong competition, and there are plans for college doubleheaders almost every Saturday.

This fall on CBS and ABC, as well as night games on Ted Turner's superstation in Atlanta. Fourteen Saturday night games and five Thursday night games will be featured on WTB during the next two years.

Even the National Football League has made some inquiries of Musco. There has been some talk of playing the 1985 Super Bowl in mid-5,000-seat Stamford Stadium at Palo Alto, Calif.

It just goes to show how one dumb suggestion has been able to bright up the lives of a lot of people.
A power transformer explosion and a false fire alarm resulted in the Notre Dame Fire Department being called to the campus shortly after 7 p.m. The false alarm was later determined to be a prank by a student. Local and Notre Dame Fire Department personnel were dispatched to the dormitory area, where the student who made the prank call was residing.

The Notre Dame Fire Department subsequently received a call from the University's Police Department, which had been called to investigate a suspicious packages in the area. The packages were later determined to be empty, and no further action was taken.

Night game complicates security

By PETER CIOITA

Notre Dame's historic night football game has complicated security operations for both the Notre Dame and surrounding South Bend communities.

In an attempt to limit the access of outsiders to Notre Dame residence halls, students will be required to present guests with hall rectors. Admission to dormitories will only be permitted if I.D. cards have been shown to security monitors, who will be stationed at entrances from 7 p.m. until 2 a.m.

Tailgaters may be set up on Notre Dame property at 9 a.m., but cannot begin before 1 p.m. Admission of tailgaters has been prohibited.

Variations to the potential problems and to security measures were voiced by rectors, administration officials and students.

As has been policy for the past ten years, maintenance personnel of residence halls will serve as security monitors in their respective dormitories.

Because of the heavy influx of people expected on campus, hall rectors voiced mixed reactions concerning these monitors.

Father Thomas King, rector of St. Mary's, said he was comfortable with the monitors in their halls.

"We realize that security is under-staffed, however, and feel it is good that our janitors know our people," King said.

"We are comfortable with the situation.

"If maintenance people do their job and residents cooperate, Holy Cross Hall Rector Brother Francis Rosenau thinks it will work.

"I regret this exceptionally," Schmidt said. "For I am afraid that people will only look to today's crisis to be the end of a long struggle. Holy Cross Hall Rector Brother Francis Rosenau said: "We should get by." "We're doing what we have to do," Rosenau said. "If it doesn't work, more serious measures will have to be taken in the future.""
Education Minister Heiji Ogawa has pledged to restore to recently revised history textbooks accounts of the Japanese imperial army's massacre of Okinawan civilians, a government official said yesterday. Ogawa said the corrective measure will be made when the books come up for revision in 1983, the official said. Okinawa prefecture officials had protested the deletion of a passage saying the Japanese army, during the battle of Okinawa in 1945, killed 800 civilians because they were an obstacle to military operations. Japan's textbook revisions in recent months have strongly criticized by China and South Korea, which objected to what they said were distorted accounts of Japan's conduct before and during World War II. Japan has promised to amend the controversial passages. — AP

Common Market countries, angered by cuts in Soviet long-distance telephone service, asked Moscow yesterday to restore normal telephone links to Western Europe. A statement by envoys of the 10-member European Economic Community accused Soviet authorities of "creating difficulties" for businessmen, correspondents and private citizens by eliminating all automatic dialing to and from the country on Sept. 2. The statement, delivered to Deputy Foreign Minister V.F. Smolkin, came about six weeks after the Soviet government halved the number of telephone circuits to the West for what it termed "technical reasons." Soviet authorities said the circuits would eventually be restored to the normal number. The envoys said the removal of automatic telephone exchanges with the West was a "new unilateral measure" by the Soviet Union. "By allowing for no prior notification of consultation on this occasion the U.S.S.R. Ministry of Communications showed a remarkable lack of willingness to cooperate in a normal businesslike way," they said. — AP

Laos will continue its search for more information on Americans killed in Laos during the Vietnam War, the official Laotian radio said Friday. The announcement came after a visit to Laos by a four-member delegation from the National League of Families of American Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia. The group visited the site of the crash of a U.S. aircraft in southern Laos and found human remains which have been turned over to the U.S. government. The delegation is now visiting Vietnam in search for more information on missing American servicemen. — AP

Former Secretary of State Dean Rusk says he favors a temporary freeze on nuclear weapons production while the United States and the Soviet Union seek reduction of their nuclear arsenal. He also cautioned on Thursday that unilateral disarmament would be "tempting thieves." He said the Soviet Union was most concerned when Western allies let their defenses down, just before and just after World War II. Rusk, 73, spoke at the Westmin­ter Presbyterian Church's Town Hall in Minneapolis in a broadcast on Minnesota Radio. Rusk was secretary of state during the Democratic administrations of John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson. — AP

Vermont's 180 legislators will be warmed by wood this winter. The huge boiler that heats the Statehouse has been converted from oil to wood, a move that will save $25,000 annually. It has been about 70 years since wood has warmed the Statehouse, which was built in 1857. Coal and oil have been the heat sources since 1915, according to state officials. "This is one more step in our continuing efforts to reduce our dependence on foreign oil," said Gov. Richard Snelling at Thursday's dedication of the $25,000 heating system. — AP

Karen Jean Hewitt of Indianapolis made a frightening discovery when she flushed her toilet and it burst at her Mrs. Hewitt's husband then discovered what had been making the toiler so hard to flush. In the water tank was a 4-foot, 3-inch snake. "I noticed this head peeking up over the edge and its tongue going in and out," Mrs. Hewitt said. "I started yelling for my husband as loud as I could. It's a wonder the neighbors didn't hear me." The couple resides in a townhouse, and they called as employee. SOUTHFIELD, Mich. (AP) — United Auto Workers officials from Chrysler announced yesterday that the union's executive board had narrowly voted yesterday to recommend a tentative contract which pegs pay increases to company profits and the cost of living.

John Byers, of AFL Local 1208 in Belleville, Ill., said the council voted 51 percent to 47 percent in favor of the pact. According to Marty Willich, a dock foreman, the votes were local 1208 in Trenton Heights, Mich.ystem, the rolls were voted 262 to 262. He said such delegites get into vote for every local — not just the one in the region.

Wilhelm said the council spent much of its time in the five-hour meeting discussing contract provisions on wage increases, absences and worker job classification. "I don't understand the initial strong feelings (against the pact) on the part of our members," said Stepp. "We've done our best for our members."

The Chrysler executive team will now sit down to confer with the company to determine if they will throw down the draft to the company, especially since what we have now achieved will last only one year," he added.

Stepp would not predict by what margin rank-and-file workers would approve the new agreement, reached by bargainers early yesterday, or that they could not remember when a big Three council had ever voted against a tentative contract. Rank-and-file voting would begin within a few days after the council meeting, the UAW said, and could take 10 days to two weeks.

If approved by union members, the contract offering resumption of workers' job protection and wage increases based on profits would cover 45,200 working U.S. autoworkers and some 40,000 others on indefinite layoff.

UAW president Douglas A. Fraser said after announcing the new pact that it might be difficult to get the contract passed because it offers only slightly higher pay.

The tentative contract calls for a one-year agreement on wages and fringe benefits and a two-year pact on non-economic issues. It calls for a joint committee to drop $10 million out of Chrysler's more than $500 million health care program and a joint program to curb absences.

The union also would keep its one voting seat on the board of directors.

Bomb blast injures five seriously

PARIS (AP) — A bomb ripped through a diplomatic car near the center of Paris yesterday, seriously injuring a woman passenger and slightly injuring about 20 people. The explosion site, French officials said. "There was an unmistakable indication of responsibility for the bombing, on the eve of Rosh Hashana, the Jewish New Year," a police official said. "This is a clear act of terrorism." For the second time in two weeks, French authorities said the most severely hurt were two young passengers-bystanders and the occupants of the white Peugeot 504, an unmarked Israeli embassy vehicle. The Israeli mission said it was motivated by the increasing nationalistic feelings against the draft to the company, especially since what we have now achieved will last only one year," he added.

Hesburgh supports reduction

Notre Dame President Father Theodore Hesburgh yesterday joined 55 academic leaders, representing 25 colleges and universities from throughout the country, in calling upon President Reagan to "seek seriously and rigorously" alternatives to nuclear war.

In a letter signed by active and retired presidents and board chairmen of private and state colleges and universities, Reagan was asked to rule out first-strike commitments in planning, negotiating and cooperating to establish, effective and immediately acceptable alternatives to nuclear war.

While supporting the President's proposals to reduce nuclear arsenals as "a useful step," the academicians did not propose a permanent or unbalanced trust of the Soviet Union.

According to Hesburgh, the letter was motivated by the increasing concern of those who are the "custodians of the knowledge and wisdom on which civilizations are based" about the "catasrophe that major nuclear war would represent to the American people and to all civilizations."

Israelis crush leftists, seek Lebanese talks

(AP) — With tanks and house-to-house searches, Israel continued its last major leftist militia stronghold in west Beirut yesterday and tried to ease a confrontation with the United States by calling for talks with Lebanon's army on taking over the Muslim half of the city.

The forces in Tel el Hiss called Israel's plan "a positive step."

France, meanwhile, denounced Israel's fury and called for an immediate pullout. Another conflict worried at the Soviet Embassy in west Beirut, with Russian diplomats claiming the Israelis had occupied parts of the mission for nearly two days. Israel denied it had taken the embassy.

In another development, the Reagan administration filed a vigorous protest over an Israeli officer firing a shot Thursday at an unmanned Marint guard atop the U.S. Embassy in west Beirut. It said the shot missed the Marine and Israel apologized, claiming it mistook the Marine for a leftist militant.

The U.S. government demanded Thursday that Israel withdraw immediately from west Beirut. It said the incursion, which followed the assassination Tuesday of President-elect Bashir, was "we're not in a position to say at right M.A.P.

Washington (AP) — The House and Senate are reactivating as penny-wise and pound-foolish the Reagan administration's plans to give taxpayers less help in filling out their tax returns at the same time tax-collection efforts are being beefed up.

The congressional Appropriations Committees have written 1983 money bills for the Internal Revenue Service that require the IRS to provide the same level of taxpayer assistance that is available this year.

President Reagan's budget would require the IRS, starting Oct. 1, to stop answering taxpayers' telephoned questions about tax laws. The actions of the Appropriations Committees, which are expected to be ratified by Congress, mean that the service be continued, at a cost of about $50 million a year.

"The committee feels it is a false economy. At a time when we are having difficulty getting taxpayer compliance, it is out back only to the barest essentials, assistance in helping the taxpayers with their returns," explained Bob Mills, aide with the Senate Appropriations Committee.

The administration's decision to cut back on the toll-free telephone service had been roundly criticized in Congress, by tax experts and — in a private letter — by IRS Commissioner Rossie Egger himself.

If the agency stops answering questions by phone, Egger wrote last Oct. 29, "over 27 million taxpayers will have to look elsewhere for tax law assistance."

In a letter to Deputy Treasury Secretary R.T. McNamara, Egger urged the administration to reconsider the budget proposal. The administration refused and, at a Senate hearing last March, Egger went along with the decision because of budget constraints, saying many of the telephoned questions could be answered from IRS publications.

The IRS has toll-free telephone lines which any taxpayer may call for answers to tax questions. The administration proposal would keep the telephone service working, but IRS employees would be allowed to answer only clerical questions, such as matters as why a tax refund had been delayed.

In 1981, nearly 45 million questions were put to IRS by taxpayers, includ ing 50 million by telephone.

Bendix Corp. (AP) — European royalty and kings and queens of Hollywood gathered yesterday for the funeral of the woman whose life bridged both worlds, Princess Grace of Monaco.

In the crowded heads, long-dried bloodshot anorexia, film celebrities and business power brokers jostling in at the ceremony in Monaco's cathedral to follow Solari's funeral of former movie star Grace Kelly.

Twice-ten years ago in that spot, a similar glittering crowd witnessed her marriage to Prince Rainier III. Tragedy intervened in the classic romance last Monday morning when the automobilist Princess Grace was driving herself to the scene of a car crash in a stormy revenge that eventually killed her.

Dubinsky dies in New York

NEW YORK (AP) - David Dubinsky, liberator of the sweatshops and master builder of the International Ladies’ Garment Workers’ Union, died yesterday of complications from hip surgery. He was 90.

Dubinsky died in St. Vincent’s Hospital where he had been admitted in early July, the hospital said. A private funeral was planned. A memorial service was scheduled for Sept. 26 at the David Dubinsky Auditorium of Manhattan’s Fashion Institute of Technology.

Dubinsky was a man of genius, imagination, daring and creativity,” said Sol C. Chakin, president of the ILGWU, contacted by telephone while on an AFL-CIO mission in Johannesburg.

“He was a great leader of the garment workers and a great leader of the American labor movement who pioneered in extending labor’s vision beyond bread and butter issues to include civil rights, community needs and international affairs.”

AFL-CIO president Lane Kirkland said Dubinsky, “as much as any man, helped to write a vital chapter in the history of the modern American labor movement. We have lost a leader of national stature in all of the social and economic struggles of his time.”

Those struggles began 75 years ago in Lodz, in Russian-controlled Poland, where he joined in a strike at a bakery owned by his father. They ended in 1966 when, having built the ILGWU from a bankruptcy union with 45,000 members to a multimillion-dollar enterprise with almost 450,000 members, he announced his retirement.

“I didn’t have a life,” he said. “I had a union life.”

During his career, he expanded labor’s interest from the meat-and-potatoes issues of wages and hours to health and welfare, low-cost housing and the cultural life of the worker.

Fernando Herrera demonstrates his home computer program in New York last week that he designed two and a half years ago in Lodz, in Russian-controlled Poland, where he was born with cataracts. “My First Alphabet” also walked away with a $25,000 grand prize from Atari, Inc. for the best new program of 1981. Crossword puzzle contest offers mansion as prize

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Anyone with a sharp pencil, a sharp wit and the $250 entry fee can take a stab at living like a millionaire at a unique crossword puzzle contest.

"It's E-S-T-A-T-E, what I'd call it," said William Ellis, promoter of the crossword giveaway. And that's the letter answer is the only one Ellis is willing to divulge in a contest that has a $1.4 million man-size as the prize.

Ellis, president of Jamon Corp., has spent more than a year trying to sell the four-acre, 19-room estate that was built by a mining tycoon in a ritzy southern West Virginia community near Beckley.

"We advertised in exclusive publications across the country but nobody was willing to pay what it is worth," the realtor said. "So, we decided to make it the grand prize in a contest based on skill."

He made it a skill contest rather than a game of chance, he said, because West Virginia law forbids lotteries.

Entrants in the crossword contest must put up $250 if and when Ellis gets 5,000 entries, for a kitty of $1.25 million, the contest begins. If he doesn't get enough entries, he said he would refund the fees already collected.

"So far we've gotten about 10 percent of the entries we need. However, we've only been collecting entries for three weeks, and the contest brochures just hit Charleston on Thursday," Ellis said.

He said the price, which is in the community of Glade Springs, was built for $1.4 million during the coal boom of the 1970s by mining tycoon Alexander "Zan" Campbell. Later, when the coal market began to sour, Campbell mortgaged the house to the Hat Top National Bank at Bluefield for more than $1 million. Now Campbell hopes to unload the mansion and pay off the mortgage.

He said the puzzles had been designed by a free-lancer in New Jersey, who has often worked for a national crossword puzzle syndicate.

"Each one will be a certified, original, previously uncorrected puzzle," he said.

Those people, however, would have to be volunteers, students felt the majority of problems will come from outsiders.

"There will not be many problems from students, we live here and understand that if anything serious goes wrong, we have to live with the consequences," a South Bend resident in the immediate Northeast neighborhood warned of a "greater possibility of vandalism" due to the unusually heavy flow of traffic at night.

The student added, however, that night football is an exciting event for the community near Beckley.

Son missing in Korea

White family continues vigil

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The American flag which used to cover the window of Joseph T. White's second-story bedroom is gone, packed away in a closet by his grieving parents. Gone, too, are the posters that adorned the walls and a picture of a girlfriend.

One floor below, Kathleen and Norval White spend anxious days by the telephone, waiting and praying for some word about their son, an Army private who disappeared Aug. 28 while standing guard duty in the Korean demilitarized zone.

"My husband can't swallow his food and I'm having trouble eating too," said Mrs. White, nervously ligging another in an endless chain of cigarettes.

"He had a few hours of prayer. I think she'd be in the mithouse," added the missing soldier's father. "And so we do. North Korean officials say White, 20, crossed the border into North Korea, denounced the foreign policy of the United States and asked for political asylum.

Although the United States has requested a face-to-face meeting with the soldier and asked other foreign governments to intervene, the North Koreans will not allow White to meet with American officials or call his parents.

"We're just totally confused," said Mrs. White.
Responsibilities of Pacifism

Nuclear disarmament has become one of the most compelling issues of our day, and the mass demonstration in favor of arms reductions held earlier this summer in New York left little doubt that the movement enjoys considerable national support. Yet despite the great excitement over the recent developments of "nuclear pacifism," there remains good reason to doubt both America's dedication to disarmament and our honest desire for peace.

Mike Mazzoli
Guest Columnist

Just a few days before the June rally, the New York Times published a poll which seems to indicate a fundamental lack of commitment among Americans to true disarmament. When people were asked if they approved a freeze if it would result in parity between the U.S. and the Soviet Union, and conditions were verified if any such conditions were removed, that broad support fell to less than 20 percent. The poll shows a support for disarmament both widespread and profoundly shallow, and suggests that American priorities ultimately concern the spirit of arms reductions. We may put on parity before reduction forever; we have an arms race to achieve precisely that equality. But if, by some miracle, we and the Soviet Union could attain an exact parity, and if both sides should agree honestly and openly to disarm, would the prospects for peace be any better? In fact, assuming that miracle might occur, it does not seem to have the chances for disarmament be any better?

Archbishop Raymond G. Hunthausen, one of the most eloquent and insightful spokesmen for disarmament, stated in a speech delivered last year that America would have to surrender no less than its position of advantage and luxury in the world before we could even entertain the thought of arms reduction. "Nuclear arms protect privilege and exploitation. Giving them up would mean our having to give up economic power over other peoples. Peace and justice go together. On the path we now follow, our economic policies toward other countries require nuclear weapons. Giving up the weapons would mean giving up the reason for such terror — our privileged place in the world."

When one man takes advantage of another, he makes himself an enemy, the rules of life are that simple. And if one makes enemies as a common practice, his strength becomes a matter of survival. The finest hope of the nuclear pacifist may be the elimination of nuclear weaponymy, but the question remains could a powerless United States survive in a world of enemies? And are we prepared to make the sacrifices to live in a world without exploiting our neighbors? To many, Archbishop Hunthausen might seem to advocate an economic suicide, and surely the example of Armageddon is something we should not do in any case. But in fact he speaks of "privilege" and we privilege could be relinquished without suffering economic ruin. To give only one example of such privilege, the United States and other developed nations fix high tariffs on processed goods, imported textiles, imported from Third World countries, to protect our own industry. This is a practice that we as a country might one day find it necessary to abandon, and thus to become a world without exploitation. But I believe that this is something we can live with.

In the midst of these past tragic five days, but it seems to me that the death of Kevin Finnler shows the necessity of such a sacrifice. Kevin Finnler was a student here to live, to play, to take risks in a way that we all have wanted to do at some time unless it is the time of our death. Perhaps his actions are avoidable. Perhaps they are avoidable. Perhaps this is how we can do it. Perhaps we can live with less peace. The actives' slogans shall remain empty, and the great demonstrations symbols of nothing.

Artists: Indiana-New York Connec­tion

The Snite Museum of Art is cur­rently hosting three exhibitions in its galleries. In the Print, Drawing and Photograph Gallery, until Oc­tober 10, is Sculpture Drawings. In the O'Shaughnessy galleries until September 26 are the shows Women Artists: Indiana-New York Con­nection and the annual Faculty Exhibi­tion.

Perhaps the most exciting of the three shows is Sculpture Drawings from the Museum of Modern Art in New York. The show is a collection of the drawings of forty-three late 19th and 20th century sculptors. These works explore not only the stages of a sculptor’s work, but his plastic concerns as well.

Two prominent, early sculptors included in the show are Henri Matisse and Auguste Rodin. Marine’s pen drawings, “Madeleine,” “The Back I” and “The Back II” give the viewer a look at the earliest stages of a series of four monumental bronzes that will end in highly simplified, abstract expressions. Rodin’s pure and simple, watercolor and pencil drawings, “Crushing Figure” and “Reclining Figure” radiate the same potential energy that his work seems to possess.

Other innovative works that appear are those of Robert Morris and Alice Aycock. More architectural than sculptural, these works are drawings for large scale environ­mental sculpture.

Women Artists: Indiana-New York Con­nection is a selection of works by nine artists from each of those states. An attempt to illustrate that there are female artists in Indiana of the same caliber as their New York counterparts, the show emphasizes the innovative aspect of their art — the most obvious of which is their desire to reach beyond traditional media and sub­ject matter and employ media and subject matter more suitable to their uniquely female situation.

The decorative arts, such as weaving, embroidery, and tapestry, are here raised to the fine arts level. In the works, “Zig Zag Stick” and “Flying Carpet,” artists Anne McKenzie Nickolson and JoAnn Giordano have removed these crafts from the sewing room and placed them in the artist’s studio.

Joan Semmel’s “Double Breasted Ar­ch” provides a personal, intro­spective and very sexual look at a subject matter that has been employed exclusively by males for centuries — the nude. By painting a highly detailed nude and a loosely painted image of the nude, Semmel allows the viewer to become part of the picture and view the body as if it were his own.

Two works whose female author­ship has no specific artistic impact on them are Cynthia Hall’s “Darling Can’t You See We Have Company” and Selina Trieff’s untitled work of a woman seated with two pigs. Hall’s work provides a new look at a time honored genre — still life. Her work leads the viewer into intense ex­aminations of odd combinations of objects through dramatic lighting and intense color. Trieff’s work represents a woman whose physio­nomy closely resembles that of the two pigs on the floor next to her, suggesting the sad and humorous relationship between the animal and human worlds.

Herefore the innovative direc­tions taken by these women have been worthwhile. However, this is not entirely the case. Because various female artists were able to capitalize on characteristics par­ticular to that gender certainly does not mean that any female association in a work will elevate it to the level of art.

Harmony Hammond’s arch shaped constructions of wood, cloth and plastic serve as an example. Hammond’s assumption (in the catalogue to the show) that the incor­poration of female hair and female clothing will add “their per­sonal power” to her pieces is absurd. Instead of creating a natural, self­sustaining art form, Hammond presents us with a work that depends on female hair and clothing for its success. Unfortunately, her work fails. The work creates no more than an impression of a female “sexual presence” (as she calls it in the catalogue) than they do McDonaldland arches.

Faculty Exhibition R2 by neces­sity has only one coherent theme — it affords the student a look at the various artistic currents represented by the faculty at Notre Dame. Here is one rare opportunity for the student to be the judge instead of the judged. Outstanding among the works is Thomas Fern’s “Self Portrait.” This difficult subject matter is treated with great attention to detail by Fern. The large 4 1/2 x 6 1/2 foot canvas depicts the artist at his easel in an outdoor setting. Fern’s atten­tion to detail and the subtleties of color dictates the work’s domina­tion of the room in which it is placed.

Perhaps what is most interesting in the work of Douglas Kinsky is his emo­tional relationship that he es­tablishes between the primary and secondary figures in “Ballad I” and “Ballad II.” Each presents a guitarist in the foreground and one or more figures in the background. In the fur­ner case we see a couple, flooded with intense light, sitting on a bed, presumably talking. In the latter we see a woman whose gesture and fa­cial expression suggest ecstasy. Here Kinsky has transformed the typical group portrait into an inter­esting, somewhat metaphysical scene.

Other faculty works which can be viewed are Bill Kremer’s works in stoneware and porcelain, Marla Goffrin’s paper and wood sculpture; Frederick Beckman’s collages; George Turen’s graphite drawings; Richard Gray’s series of color seren collages; Dick Stevens’s salt paintings; Don Vogt’s woodcuts, serigraphs and acrylic paintings; Fr. James Flanigan’s charcoal drawings and chapel furniture; Holly Howard Martin’s vestments and Robert Leader’s oil paintings.

Robert Mackie’s sculpture, “Fossil Florencence,” is a study in light and form that, unfortunately, looks very much like a science fair project. However, in this case it is not the limitations of the artist, but of the museum that force the work to suf­fer. The work, a light sculpture, demands a controlled environment in order to achieve its given effect. The environment in which it is placed is quite the opposite. Flooded with incandescent light as well as natural light, the armatures supporting the sculpture become obtrusive and the light bulbs no lon­ger have any of the desired effect. In­stead of the subtle interplay between light, form and space, we see the elimination of a sculptor’s potential.

Twins 5, Royals 4
MINNEAPOLIS (AP) - Team Brunsmanny and Gary Ward sat two runners home after two were out in the seventh inning, leading the Minnesota Twins to a 5-4 victory over the Kansas City Royals last night.

Brad Havens, 9-1, earned the victory, giving way to reliever Tom Davis with one out in the ninth inning. After getting Ceremonios and Pena to fly to the left, Davis gave up a two-run home run to George Brett in his 14th appearance.

The Twins grabbed a 4-2 lead in the seventh inning on Frank White's two-run homer. The Twins' first baseman, who has returned to the starting lineup following a three-game absence, homered for the second time in his last five at bats.

Kansas City's two-game lead over the California Angels, who lost 6-2 to Arizona.

With two out, John Casino singled and was replaced by pinch runner Kent Hrbek. Hrbek then walked and Ward belted his 10th home run of the season, giving the Royals a 6-2 lead.

Randy Marti, 10-9, scattered six hits in 2.1 innings for the victory. Lee Smith, 0-0, got the save.

Soccer team loses to Buckeyes
Ohio State rallied from three first half goals and withstood a valiant Notre Dame surge through the final 30 minutes as the Buckeyes dumped the Irish 3-1 in college soccer action last night at Carter Field.

The Buckeyes drew first blood on a penalty kick goal by Jeff Reardon with just 3:29 to go. The visitors pushed their lead to 3-0 on a brakeaway goal in the last minute of play in the opening half.

Notre Dame freshman Tom Dalgety got the Irish on the board just over 12 minutes to play when he smoked a bullet past goalkeeper Tony DeRosa from 25 yards out. From then on the Irish pressed the attack out of the breaking minutes that almost got the hosts back into the game.

But a pouring rain and a treacherous field slowed the Irish enough to allow Ohio State to hold on for the victory.

Notre Dame's record falls to 2-2-1.

Waters is glad Michigan State is playing Ohio State early in the season because they will fall into what they do best as the season progresses.

Michigan State lost its opener to Illinois 23-16 but the Spartans impressed Ohio State Coach Earle Bruce.

"Even though they lost the game, they gained 453 yards," noted Bruce. "They have a fine passing attack, some fine receivers and they are running the halfback better than they have the past two years."

The Spartan passing attack features quarterback John Leister and receivers Otis Grant, Dave Tur­ner and Ted Jones, considered by many as the finest trio in the country.

Purdue lost its opener to Stanford and passing ace John Elway 35-14 while Minnesota opened with a 57-3 walloping of Ohio University.

Purdue will be facing another fine passer in Minnesota's Mike Hoben­see who completed 17 of 28 passes for 322 yards but Coach Joe Salmon said "Mike had a good day but not one of his better days. He made some mistakes."

Salem refused to see Elway's successes as any weakness on the part of Purdue's pass defense. "Elway has a feel for the game and he'll throw against anybody. His first two touch­downs were perfect strikes. Purdue was in control of the game in the second half."

Indians 5, Orioles 3

Baltimore (AP) - Von Hayes drove in four runs with a homer and a single to back Rich Sutcliffe and the Cleveland Indians to a 5-3 victory last night over Baltimore, snapping the Orioles' six-game winning streak.

Rearmester Dennis Martinez, 1-4-2, entered the seventh inning with a four-hitter and a 2-0 lead, but never retired another batter. Mike Hargrove opened the inning with a single off wayward reliever Rich Dauer's glove. Hayes followed with his 14th homer, a drive into the right field bleachers. Two pitches later, Rick Manning homered to give the Indians a 3-2 lead. It was Manning's eighth homer of the year.

Sutcliffe, 1-5-6, gave up just four hits in eight innings, walking seven and striking out six, but Ed Glynn came in to pitch the ninth after Sutcliffe had thrown 152 pitches. Entering the game, Sutcliffe had thrown 16 straight shutout innings against Baltimore, including a three-hit shutout last Sunday.

Detroit 5, Boston 1

Detroit (AP) - Right-hander Dan Petry won his first game since Aug. 25, and Chet Lemon and punkie Mike Laga hit home runs as the Detroit Tigers defeated the Boston Red Sox 5-1 last night.

The win was only the third against Boston for Petry, 1-5. He struck out three and walked five in 8 2/3 innings.

Detroit took a 1-0 lead in the first inning when Lou Whitaker singled and moved to second on an error late in the inning. Whitaker broke for third on the throw and was hit by the right side by center fielder Fred Nixon, the ball rolling into the Detroit dugout. Whitaker went home on the error, and Johnson moved to third before Larry Herndon singled him home.

Laga hit his second homer of the season in the fourth inning off Brian Dettmer, 2-2, and the Tigers made it 5-1 in the sixth on Lemon's two-run homer, his 15th.

Saints trade Manning to Houston

By MIKE EMBRY

The Houston Oilers are trading quarterback Archie Manning to the Houston Oilers for offensive lineman Leon Gray. The move will not only save the Saints $217,500 but it effectively eliminates one of the most dangerous weapons in the NFL.

Manning has been a consistent performer for the Saints for the past six years, leading them to six playoff appearances and two Super Bowl berths. His clutch performances have earned him the nickname "Manna." He has thrown for over 3,500 yards in each of the past four seasons and has a career record of 37-31-1.

The Saints are expected to use the money saved from the trade to invest in their defense, which has struggled in recent years. The Oilers, on the other hand, are hoping to create some cap space to sign their own free agents and potentially make a splash in the NFL Draft.

The trade comes just days after the Saints made a blockbuster deal to acquire quarterback Drew Brees from the New England Patriots. Brees has emerged as one of the most productive quarterbacks in the league, leading the New Orleans Saints to two Super Bowl appearances in the past five years.

New Orleans Saints receiver Joe Horn said of the trade: "It's a big deal. Archie is a big deal. I'm going to miss playing with him. But it's a business, and I understand it. I'm just happy for Leon."

Leon Gray, who is 28 years old and has spent his entire career with the Oilers, is expected to start at offensive tackle for the Saints. He has played in 131 games over the past eight seasons and has started in all 16 games in each of the past three years.

Oiler head coach Bum Phillips said of the trade: "I think it's a good move for us. We've got a lot of young players coming up, and we need some money to sign some of them. Leon is a good player, and he'll be missed."

The Saints are looking to improve their record after finishing 3-13 last season. The Oilers, on the other hand, are hoping to solidify their roster and compete for a playoff spot in the tough AFC South division.

The trade is expected to be announced later today, and both teams are scheduled to report to training camp later this month.

Fischer rebounds from spring illness

By TED HAUSSLER

The late winter of 1982 was no kind to Notre Dame center Mark Fischer. After missing half of his first season at center for the Irish, and reaching peak condition with an excellent weight training program, the 6-4, 253-pound senior from Massillon, Ohio, contracted mononucleosis and pneumonia. Fischer's bout with mono not only kept him miss the entire spring football program, but also caused his weight to drop by 40 pounds, from 245 to 205.

Any other player entering the final stage of his college football career may have thrown up in the towel, but for Mark Fischer, the battle might have been just beginning.

"I wanted to come back after last year's 9-4 season," says Fischer. "I couldn't end my collegiate career after that last game (Miami)."

So, with the advice of his coaches to work out as much as possible over the summer, Mark Fischer got right to work, moving to center because of his size, and returned in the fall as an effective blocker possessing both good technique and good size.

Strike possible

NFL owners reject latest proposal

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Football League Players Association dropped its intention to strike this week, closing the door on the possibility of a lockout during the upcoming season.

The owners quickly rejected the proposals of the players association to negotiate for 55 percent of the gross revenue of the league, an increase from the union's at $35.5 billion over the next five years. The TV money amounts to 60 percent of that figure, $2.1 billion.

The union's four-year proposal places a cap on salary costs each year. It also calls for creation of a compensation fund, to be controlled by management, that would be funded half from network TV revenues and the remainder each year by the clubs.

In addition, 50 percent of any increases in the league TV revenues over and above the current network contracts would also be paid to the players.

The union's initial proposal for 55 percent of the gross revenue over a five-year period would have cost the owners $1.92 billion, according to union figures.

AN ARBOR, Mich. — On Friday night before football Saturday, Michigan linebacker Mike Boren could be found peacefully lost in thought. He may look completely at ease, but in reality he is playing a violent, hard-hitting game. He is playing out the next day's game in his mind.

On play, he'll make a bone-crunching tackle that will jar the ball loose from some hapless tailback who has dared trespass his area of responsibility. On another play, Boren will leap into the air, snare an errant enemy pass, and ramble towards the goal line, look for six points and certain glory.

"You have to play the game in your mind the night before," says Boren. "If you can't visualize a play in your mind, you can't make it." Boren must have visualized a tackling step before "A". Boren could not have played the conversion attempt that followed in his mind.

On game day, he'll be in on a lot of plays. As usual, Boren was in on a lot of tackles (15) last week, but it was not enough to stop the3-0 Buckeyes to win 20-9. Boren intercepted one pass and recovered one fumble last season.

"I want to get more big plays," he says. "Last year I tied the team in tackles, but I wanted to get more big plays." Boren intercepted one pass and recovered one fumble last season.

"It was a big play and we lost our second consecutive game. Boren intercepted one pass and recovered one fumble last season.

"I didn't expect to do it that way," says Boren. "I was really pleased with my performance. I didn't think I had a couple of runners who I thought would have a better game." Boren ran against Lehigh.

"I thought we would win but I didn't expect to do it that easily," says Boren. "I didn't think I had a couple of runners who I thought would have a better game." Boren ran against Lehigh.

But quarterback Kiel was 6 for 26, and threw a key interception deep in Hawkeye territory. Michigan lost 9-7.

Kiel had difficulties as well, while alternating at quarterback with Kiepig. Of his first 21 passes, Kiel completed only 7, and five were intercepted. The Irish started off 2-5.

The second part of the season was better for both teams. Iowa, Smith went on a four-game tear, averaging 11.4 yards per pass attempt. He racked up 340 yards of total offense and six touchdowns against Illinois, and earned the AP's "Midwestern Offensive Player of the Week" award.

Kiel improved his statistics as well. Averaging 16 yards per pass completion, and throwing six scoring strikes, "So what?" became an all-too-frequently-heard expression among fans of both teams, however.

First of all, the opposition was not the most formidable for either team. Secondly, more credit was given to the two small but explosive split ends, Joe Howard and Carter, for having made their quarterbacks seem better.

The final chapter for both quarterbacks featured season-ending, nationally televised embarrassments.

The dues have been paid.

The challenges, however, will always remain.

Smith was 9-for-26 and had three passes picked off in a 19-9 home loss to bitter rival Ohio State. Six days later Kiel was out through a 10-25, 25-yard interception performance in a 37-15 loss to Miami (Fla.)

The disappointments of 1981 remain with them. The critics come back to haunt them.

Through it all, Kiel has been able to hang on to his dignity, politeness, and sanity.

"I can't be concerned with what people say or write about me anymore," he admits. "Everything that can possibly be said about me — the good and the bad — has been said. I have reached the point now where I believe that if I can't get the job done, I want the coaches to get me out of there and put somebody else in there — for good — who can.

"Right now, though, I'm not in the least bit worried about my position. I'm just going to go out and do my best, and I don't expect to do any better than I did in the past. The light has been on me, however, and that's a position I have grown mentally stronger. I'm very confident and relaxed right now. It's high time now to go out on the field and play the kind of football I know we are capable of."

Smith too, has gained confidence and relaxation as a result of the trials.

"I don't like to be embarrassed," he says. "I'll improve. I've got to improve. I was a little nervous, I know what to expect now, I feel confident, the butterflies are gone.

"He's come along as we expected," says his coach, Bo Schembechler. "It was a mental thing to take over the leadership role with 100,000 people watching you. It's tough. If it were easy, who would you see guys take three or four years to learn to play pro ball? The defenses are so much more complex these days. What you ask a college quarterback to do today is like night and day compared to what you asked him to do five years ago.

Their dues have been paid. Now, for the first time in their collegiate careers, they have some peace of mind about themselves and their roles. The challenges, however, will always remain.

"This is the biggest game of my career without a doubt," admits Kiel. "But there will be a lot of important games for us this year. Pressure is just something that you have to deal with all your life."

In a game that forever will be remembered as the one when the Irish showed brightness of Notre Dame Stadium, two quarterbacks who have been in the dark are hoping to shine even more.

Wide receiver Anthony Carter is the Wolverines' star, but he's certainly not the whole show. Quarterback Spee Smith is what Faust calls "a double threat — he runs a quick option and he's developed into a top passer." Lawrence Nicks is another in the long line of quality Michigan tailbacks — he's coming off a 145-yard performance against Wisconsin. On defense, the Wolverines return their top two tacklers in linebackers Mike Burren and Paul Girga.

"Maribel Michigan did lose some names from last year," Faust says, "but they always have people who get the job done, that's the bottom line."

"We have 18 starters back, but that's not real significant when it comes from a 5-6 team," he joked. "Michigan got all the advantages on us — they've played a game, tested new things and gained momentum from a win. We just have to go out and execute better than they do tomorrow."

Much of the expected improvement in the Irish should come from a slightly revamped offense — one which emphasizes the short passing game and eliminates the wingback position. That will afford quarterback Brian Kiel and Co. a better chance to move the football.

"The most encouraging thing about our offense this fall has been the play of Brian Kiel in quarterback," confirms Faust. "He knows he's the man and he believes in his ability to do whatever is asked of him for success."

Having Tom Hunter set at right end figures to be another plus for the Notre Dame air attack. "We think he can really be a consistent threat at that position," says Faust. "And we'll also involve our running backs a little more in the short passing game — our philosophy will be based on the high percentage completion.

Kiel has plenty of targets to aim at — the decision on who the wide-owns will be will be still in the evaluation stage this week, though it's a sure bet quarterback Joe Howard will be one. Freshmen Mike Jackson and Van Pearsall are the top names for the open slot, but Mike Haywood and Chris Stone are still contesting.

Senior tight end Phil Carter and junior Greg Bell still are just about even at tailback — with freshman speedster Allen Pinklein on their heels. "I wouldn't hesitate to put Pinklein in," Faust says. "He's really shown us a lot this fall, and he's made Phil and Greg both better backs."

Senior Larry Moriarty will get the nod at fullback, but expect senior John Sweeney and sophomore Mark Brooks to see duty, too. Sweeney may play some tight end in short-yardage or goal-line situations also.

Whatever carriers or catches the ball Saturday will do so behind what Faust expects to be a better and stronger line. "Anytime you put a couple of solid teams like Michigan and Notre Dame out there, what happens in the trenches makes a big difference. Michigan just dominated the line of scrimmage all day long last year in Ann Arbor and they never let us establish anything.

"We've got to become more dominant up front or we'll have problems moving the football, that's all there is to it. We don't control the line enough often last year, and that's a major focus point for us ever since the season ended."

The offensive line will list Mike Kelle and Larry Williams at the tackle positions, regular Tom Therer and Randy Ellis at the two guard spots and Mark Foscher at center.

Defensively, the line is solid up front withreturnsmen Kevin Goff, Jon Haury, Bob Clancy and sophomore Mike Gann on the list.

Tri-captain Mark Zagaymin joins Mike Larkin and Rick Naylor in the linebacking corp, and Dave Dauphinau, Joe Johnson, Clint Brown and Stacey Toran will start in the secondary.

Faust has split kicking chores between senior walk-on Mike Johnston and freshman Hal Van Wyl. "Mike will handle kickoffs, extra points and field goals inside the 25-yard line," he explains, "and Hal will probably kick any field goals longer than that.

The Irish are in good shape physically — offensive tackle Mike Shumer and split end Mike Ewens are the only regulars who won't dress and mentally as well. Faust says the team won't use the revenge factor to motivate itself for Michigan.

"We'd really like winning an emotional roller-coaster all season if we looked at opponents that way. Last year was last year — it's over. We just want to attack each game one at a time and play the best football we can."
