MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) - Police stormed a house and killed seven religious fanatics early today in a little attempt to save a fellow officer who had been taken hostage overnight before he was slain, authorities said.

A police assault team lobbed tear gas into the modest residence of a former mental patient, opened fire with assault weapons, and burst into the house shortly after 3 a.m.

Killed in the shootout was Lindburg Sanders, 49, an unemployed construction worker who the mayor said described himself as "the black Jesus," and six other members of a religious group that believed the end of the world was coming to an end. Authorities said the group also thought of police as "anti-Christian agents of the devil."

Also found dead was patrolman R.S. Hester, 34, who had been taken captive by Sanders on Tuesday.

Police Director John D. Holt said the decision to assault the house came after police with electronic eavesdropping devices heard someone inside the house say, "The devil is in the house."

Police said they were met by gunfire as they approached two of the three-bedroom house whose windows had been nailed shut with the doors barricaded with furniture.

Authorities believe Hester, who was married but had no children, had been killed several hours earlier.

"The battered body of the police officer was found just inside the front door," Holt said reporters. "His hands were cuffed behind his back."

A patrolman, who asked not to be identified, knew Hester for years. After what they did to him, I couldn't recognize him. We waited too long," he said.

Holt said Hester suffered numerous wounds and police sources said the patrolman could be heard crying for help after he fell.

Several police officers had been killed several hours earlier.

Administration considers higher taxes on energy

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Reagan administration is considering a broad-based tax on energy consumption as an option for raising $40 billion or more in fiscal 1986 if it is needed to reduce the government's swollen deficits, an administration official said yesterday.

The sources said energy taxes are high on Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan's list of possible revenue sources that would "trigger in" after Oct. 1, 1985, if required to keep the government's red ink below $100 billion.

Regan disclosed Wednesday that he had proposed several contingency tax options to the president, including an income tax surcharge. But he refused to identify any of the other proposals, saying the president had not yet made any final decisions.

A decision may come soon. Reagan must submit his budget for fiscal 1984, which begins next fall, to Congress by the end of January.

The sources, who requested anonymity, said Regan had several variations of energy taxes and income tax surcharges in mind.

The energy options include a fee on imported oil, a tax that could be extended to domestic oil as well as imports; a so-called BTU (British thermal unit) tax that sets taxes levels based on the heat content of coal, hydroelectric and nuclear power, natural gas and petroleum, and a "windfall profits" tax or a severance tax on natural gas that would be tied to removal of federal price controls in 1985.

Students relocated to new housing

BY SANDY VALENZUELA

Social space is now available in McCandless and Holy Cross halls as a result of the relocation of students who were temporarily housed there.

The admissions department usually accepts a few more students than they can actually provide housing for, anticipating that some of the students will choose to attend another college. According to Sister Karel Jackowski, director of residence life, however, this year's dropout rate was even lower than the already low dropout rate. The students temporarily housed in the Holy Cross parlor were relocated to a quiet. The students in McCandless temporary housing chose rooms that were vacated in LeMans, Regina, and McCandless.

"They knew that they would have to move so they didn't expect to stay there," said Jackowski. At the beginning of the semester, the students had signed release forms which stated they would move when space was made available. "These areas are fairly isolated and they appreciated being placed with other students, especially in McCandless," she added.

According to Jackowski, off-campus housing is an issue that is being discussed. Students living off campus have had this man advantage as an option for raising money.

Administrative areas are in the process of coming together of these offices.

Keenly Weigert, assistant dean in the College of Arts and Letters, has resigned her post after 3 1/2 years, according to sources as assistant director for social analysis in the Center for Social Concerns.

"Although I have thoroughly enjoyed being an assistant dean," said Weigert, "I am certainly looking forward to the challenges involved in retirement."

The recent merger of the Center for Experiential Learning and the College of Arts and Letters has created the need for an administrator who could help to coordinate these two programs.

According to Weigert, she has accepted a "brand new position which was a direct result of the coming together of these offices."

Weigert calls her resignation "technically a lateral move from one position to another, and she believes that by working with both faculty members and students we will be able to help to develop many educational opportunities in the area of social concerns.

Weigert's office will operate in the former WNDU building. The relocation plan was established by a restructuring of the Center for Social Concerns. She will assume her role as assistant director Monday, and hopes to help create a "central place for students to go in order to help serve her and the university."

Because of the separation of her job, Weigert says that her opportunities "are wide open, and therefore, they can be used to create new many programs."

Weigert's vacation position will be filled by Father Robert Ausgen.

The papers of the late Father John Cavanaugh, president of Notre Dame from 1946 to 1952, will be catalogued with the support of a $25,000 gift from Charles M. Regan of New York City, a close friend of the late president. Cavanaugh died on December 26, 1949, at the age of 86. Prior to becoming Notre Dame's 14th president, Cavanaugh served as the university's 13th provost and chairman of the Faculty Board in Control of Athletics, as campus prefect of religion, and as assistant provincial superior of the Congregation of Holy Cross. Father John M. D. Regan, president, who succeeded Cavanaugh as Notre Dame's president 30 years ago, paid tribute to him in a recent eulogy when he mentioned Cavanaugh's predecessor, Charles Regan's gift. He said, "behold the great affection and admiration which we shared for a splendid priest and great university president. The University and I are grateful to him." — The Observer

The number of Catholics in the nation's House of Representatives is up, but the number of Notre Dame alumni is down. According to America, the national publication of the Union of Catholic Men and Women, the age of Joseph Gaydos (D-Ky.) and Joseph McDade (D-Pa.) is up, but the number of Notre Dame alumni is down. Gaydos, who is in his second term, is on the House Appropriations Committee and the House Committee on Education and Labor. McDade, who is in his first term, is on the House Committee on Government Operations.

The parents of a 3-year-old rural DeMotte, Ind., boy who was fatally beaten in August were sentenced to 20 years in prison today. Police Duane Daugherty of Jasper Circuit Court sentenced Larry and Lucy Lonadier in connection with the death of their son Bradley. Lucy Lonadier was given the 10-year sentence, with nine years suspended. With good behavior, she will be out of Jasper County Jail in 10 years.

Larry Lonadier was given the 10-year sentence, but with seven years suspended, with good behavior, he will be released from the jail Feb. 5, 1984. Bradley died Aug. 6 following a beating Aug. 2 by his father, court records show. TheLonadiers testified earlier that Steve Jackson, leader of a religious cult at their home, had urged them to beat the child as a way of disciplining him. The Lonadiers testified that Jackson controlled the members of the Community Covenant Fellowship. Daugherty sentenced Jackson on Jan. 5 to 20 years in prison for his part in the death. He is being held in the Lake County Jail pending an appeal. — AP

The Kremlin said today that the resignation of U.S. nuclear arms control chief Eugene V. Rostow was another sign of the "serious political vacuum" which is surrounding the Reagan administration. This is the most reactionary American circles who oppose any agreements with the United States, he was pressured for Mr. Rostow's resignation," radio Moscow said. The official Tass news agency said Rostow quit because of "serious differences with Reagan's people concerning the problems of arms control, the tactics," the Americans in the nuclear missile reduction talks in Geneva. In resuming Wednesday, Rostow said, "in recent days it has become clear that the president wished to make changes. In response to his request, I have tendered my resignation." He submitted his resignation apparently after losing a battle with Senate hardliners who were displeased with his initiatives and with his handling of arms control negotiations. — AP

A nation of nudnicks?
Ryun Ver Berkmoes
Managing Editor

A nation of nudnicks? America, land of the free, land of liberty, land of the brave, but a land of the nudnicks? I'm beginning to think so. While the world continues down the road to economic ruin, most people in this country have some hope that they will be there because they are "Americans." They labor under the delusion that "here in the United States things are always better."

Unfortunately, this probably isn't true. All around us are signs of a national crisis. On the great track field of civilisation, the United States is stumbling. The most popular comic strips were Superman and Popeye. Together the Man of Steel and the Man of Spinach prove that "Truth, Justice, and the American Way." The boxes displayed qualities of honor and modesty.

Now look what is the most popular comic strip in the country. It is about a lasagna, a fat, ill-tempered cat. Each day a record number of Americans eagerly turn to the latest episode of Garfield, a repulsive, bug-eyed creature with no embodiement, so much of what is wrong with this country. And what will I say on Garfield Day (the 4th)?" In order to diet the are the die, the predators day ahead.

Recently while in bookstores I overheard a customer saying to other customers "I bought the latest collection of this dreck today Garfield because I can understand him. All those other comics try to be clever and I hate to think. You have it, humor reduced to the level of the illiterate. Garfields more than just an exercise in inanity, it is a good example of the faddish"

The pursuit of荒诞 can find a book that not only encourages such nerds but urges the reader to live life wasteful and self-denying mental masturbation. Rather than deducing a problem and taking action, we ponder it. Rather than pursuing progress and a better life for all, we pursue ourselves. Are we to become a nation of Garfields and Cathys?

Dance marathon to highlight Mardi Gras

BY CATHY PAX
Staff Reporter

This year’s Notre Dame Mardi Gras may not overtake the gala festivity in New Orleans, but many exciting events planned will lure in the first week of February.

A snow sculpture contest is scheduled to kick off the festivities. "We provided we have snow by then," said Karen Klocke, Mardi Gras chair.

Students are encouraged to sign up in groups from their hall to compete. Door prizes will be awarded to the two dorms with the best creations.

On Thursday, Feb. 5, Shenanigans and a student jazz band will perform Dixieland and Mardi Gras music in the Nazz to help create the spirit of the New Orleans celebration.

A talent show will be held in the Nazz the following night.

The biggest event according to Klocke will be a twelve-hour marathon dance contest in the South Dining Hall on Saturday, Feb. 6, scheduled to last from 1 p.m. to 1 a.m. There will be a variety of door prizes for the best dressed couple as well as for their dancing ability. Couples can enter the dance contest as half representatives or in the dining halls as a part of their residence hall. Students who sponsor a couple are admitted to the dance between 9 p.m. and 1 a.m. and will receive a coupon for Barnaby's pizza.

Dancers will be selected at 12 each as a sponsor in order to participate in the planned events and "support something that supports themselves," said Klocke.

This is the second year of a non-gambling Mardi Gras, the result of a 1981 ruling by Bishop William McGovern of the South Bend Fort Wayne diocese, which prohibited gambling in the diocese. The 1981 festival, the last before the ruling, was a non-carnival celebration which primarily focused on the fun that day and sponsored booths in Snep Center. This was a very successful means of raising funds for charity.

Last year's total earnings estimated between $3,000 and $5,000, was much lower than figures from previous years. Klocke hopes to raise $16,000 this year. "Hopefully, since this is the second year of the new Mardi Gras, it will be more popular with students," said Klocke.

KIRYAT SIMUNA, Israel (AP) - Pressure from President Reagan broke a three-week deadlock yesterday as Israel and Lebanon agreed to negotiate simultaneously the withdrawal of Israeli and other foreign troops from Lebanon and on future relations between Israel and Lebanon.

Despite agreement on a compromise agenda giving priority to neither issue, the two governments made clear that in the negotiations each would put its primary concern first.

Lebanese officials in Beirut said when the Israeli, Lebanese and American negotiators get down to business at their next meeting Monday, their delegation would propose a comprehensive plan for withdrawal of all Israeli troops from Lebanon.

Israel Defense Minister Ariel Sharon said he was sure the negotiators "will arrive at security arrangements and normalization in the first stage to peace between Isra­el and Lebanon.

Through four semi-weekly meetings in this northern Israeli town and the south Beirut suburb of Khaldc, the Israelis insisted that the negotiations first agree on normalization of relations between the two na­tions, while the Lebanese demanded priority for withdrawal of the estimated 60,000 Israeli, Syrian and Palestinian troops.

At the fifth meeting Monday in Khaldc, both Lebanon and Israel accepted special US envoys Morris Draper's proposal for concurrent negotiations on all the issues, but each demanded changes. Agreement finally came at the sixth meeting after Philip C. Habib, Reagan's chief Middle East envoy, arrived from Washington with word that the president was growing impatient and wanted an end to the deadlock.

The Lebanese concessions included an agreement to negotiate a for­mal end to the state of war between Israel and Lebanon. Previously Lebanon argued that no state of war existed, and that the announcement machinery dating back to the 1948 Arab-Israeli war could handle border problems.

Another Lebanese concession was agreement to the inclusion of such peace-making elements as trade, open borders and an end to hostile propaganda.

Israel compromised by dropping its demand that "normalization of relations" be included in the agenda. Lebanon rejected the word "normalization" because it feared this would alienate the Arab oil countries from which it wants reconstruction money.

They said the withdrawal plan the Lebanese would propose at the negotiating session Monday in Khaldc would include a timetable and would declare Lebanon ready to negotiate security arrangements to facilitate the pullout of the esti­mated 25,000 Israeli soldiers in central and southern Lebanon.

They said Lebanon would also pledge to negotiate withdrawal of the estimated 40,000 to 10,000 Palestinian guerrillas in northern and eastern Lebanon before the Israeli pullout and to negotiate withdrawal of the estimated 50,000 Syrian troops in eastern and northern Lebanon simultaneously with the Israeli withdrawal.

British Prime Minister returns from Falklands

LONDON (AP) - Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher returned home today after a five-day tour of the Falkland Islands. The South Atlantic islands, from which British and Argentine fought an undeclared war last year.

The prime minister's Royal Air Force VC-10 jet touched down at Heathrow Airport today after reluctantly returning to London from his Falklands tour. The Falklands. Thatcher visited British military installations and spoke to in­dividually with half of the 1,800 British desecended islanders.

Argentina invaded the Falklands last April 2 to assert its claim on the islands, 250 miles off its southern coast.

Natural gas prices to rise again

WASHINGTON (AP) — Natural gas customers, already struggling with price increases of 24 percent this winter, could see their monthly bills go up by as much as 2.5 percent on top of that this spring under a federal agency's decision yesterday.

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission said its decision could mean a price increase of $112 a year for the average residential customer, whose bills for 1983 are expected to total about $657.

The action, approved in a 5 to 0 vote, comes in settlement of a lengthy dispute over what prices producers should be allowed to recover for the cost of gathering and compressing natural gas for shipment on pipelines to local distribution companies.

The 1978 law decontrolling natural gas prices in step through 1983, the reason of this winter's 25 percent increase, also provided for extra charges for the cost of preparing gas for transmission. The commission's action yesterday settles what those charges will be.

The full 2.5 percent would apply if producers will be able to pass all extra charges permitted by the commission's decision in a black market. However, commission officials said they thought competition would hold down the increase.

The ruling will allow for increases from all consumers, residential, commercial and industrial, of $5 billion a year until 1985, when an annual figure will drop to $1.8 billion. The higher charges in the early years permit the producers to recover preparation costs since 1980, when the case first came before the commission.

While commission officials said they were just carrying out the law, consumer groups blasted the decision as totally disqualified in light of the 150 percent price increases natural gas customers have had to shoulder since Congress began the decontrol of gas in 1978.

Commission General Counsel Charles Moore said consumers would not begin seeing the increases in their bills until May because of the time it will take to implement the decision.

U.S. refuses to return Chinese tennis player

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is preparing to inform Peking it cannot return a star Chinese tennis player who defected last July and has spent "months of sleepless nights" worrying about her fate, sources said yesterday.

China has been demanding the return of Hu Na, apparently on grounds that a U.S. decision to grant her political asylum could open the way to a series of similar requests from other Chinese visitors, mostly students, who number in the thousands.

But "we would never send her back," a top U.S. official said. "We would never clam her in and send her back to the manacles." and both he and other officials, who asked not to be identified, said a state department advisory opinion was sent recently to the Immigration and Naturalization Service, which has ultimate responsibility in the case. The department's immigration service normally reflect the views of the State Department.

Meanwhile, the U.S. has told the Chinese they have their best to keep herself in hiding, with the promise that "we would never send her back to the manacles."

The State Department is eager for the Immigration Service to move quickly in the case. An early decision would limit the impact of the case on the scheduled visit to Peking by Secretary of State George P. Shultz early next month, officials said.

Graduates at mid-term are not "left out in the cold," as some parents have complained, and undergraduates awarded degrees at the end of the fall semester were invited back to the official commencement exercises in May.

Father Robert Griffin, University Chaplain, observed that it was sad not to celebrate the Keenan Hall class at the end of a college career. He indicated that around eighteen years ago, while he was the rector of Keenan Hall, he came up with the idea of holding a special Mass and dinner for early-graduating Keenan students.

When Griffin was named the University's rector, he said it would be a good idea to expand the program to include all mid-term graduates.

Griffin pointed out that the dinner committee and the student affairs committees encouraged the program. In recent years Griffin has had to discontinue his practice. There was a time, he said, when the senior class picked up part of the expenses for the meal. Now, without the support of the senior class and with rising prices, it would be difficult to continue the event.

Even though many students received degrees at the end of the fall semester, not all of them were able to participate in the May 1983 graduation ceremony. Sullivan pointed out that students receiving degrees in seven semesters could return for the May 1983 commencement exercises. Students receiving degrees after nine semesters of study attended the May 1982 graduation ceremonies.

Sister John Jones, the assistant provost, described the policy on early graduation.

"Early graduation is self-selected," she said. "The university neither promotes nor discourages the practice." Jones also pointed out that the student who returns for the May commencement exercises is not deprived of anything. "(Those who come back) have the same priviledges as the rest of the Keenan class. They receive the same number of guest tickets, we served the same meals, and have the same access to reduced rate housing for relatives and guests," she said.

Griffin added that finishing college early can be advantageous. "The student saves a semester's tuition and has a head start on the job market," he said.

Soviet satellite
Officials claim little chance of harm

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top Pentagon official said today "there is a very small chance" that hazardous nuclear fuel aboard a tumbling Soviet spy satellite "would survive intact to the surface of the earth."

Dr. Richard Wagner, special assistant to Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger on nuclear matters, said the "much more likely" prospect is that the nuclear fuel will, in effect, burn up in the atmosphere and showered fragments on an area in northern Canada.

Wagner, who said he took part in the 1978 search for the satellite debris, told a briefing that the only nuclear material that fell to earth was "smaller than flakes of pepper."

This material dispersed and there was "little or no hazard" from the few small pieces he described as "somewhat radioactive."

Under questioning, Wagner said that it would be "life-threatening" at a distance of about 200 yards if the nuclear fuel, enriched uranium, came down to earth intact without shielding.

But, he stressed, he considers this "extremely unlikely."

Wagner said the United States has given the Soviet Union a detailed list of questions to determine, among other things, whether there have been any changes in the construction of the satellite and its reactor that could alter the dispersion of pieces raining down on Earth.

It is too early yet to expect replies, Wagner said.

He gave his opinion that there is a very small chance that it will disperse its debris in a populated area.

He described as "unpredictable" the time and place where the remains of the satellite will reach earth. He held to a prediction made previously by the Defense Department that it will occur probably in the last days of the month.

Reagan proposal
Commerce president replies to idea

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new chairman of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce brushed aside yesterday President Reagan's appeal for each business to hire one unemployed worker, saying it is "probably a good idea, but nothing more than a good idea."

"I guess," said Robert T. Thompson, "the president made the proposal for good faith." But he dismissed any thought that his board would endorse such a program for the chamber's 250,000 member firms.

"This gives the press something to chortle about," Thompson said of the Reagan appeal. His remarks came in a pre-arranged session with reporters.

During a Dec. 23 press briefing at the White House, Reagan was asked what he planned to do about the post-Democratic-controlled 104 per cent unemployment, which has left some 12 million Americans out of work.

He suggested that the business community could contribute mightily if only each firm would hire one unemployed person.

"I know that there are some businesses that, themselves, are faced with troubles and cannot do this," Reagan said. "But there must be others that could probably take even more, if one." Reagan was asked at his nationally broadcast news conference last week what kind of response he was getting to his idea.

"I cannot say that I have suddenly received, well, it has not been long enough to receive mail — that I have received a flood," he replied. "I have had comments made to me by people who approved of that. And I have had some from businessmen who have said that it has caused them to think, and that they are going to give that some thought."

Presidential counselor Edwin Meese III had said in December, when Reagan first broached the idea, that the hiring program would be one begun by the Rev. Leon Sullivan, founder of a job training program called Opportunities Industrialization Center in Philadelphia.

"It's been a tremendous success (in Philadelphia) and it's now moving from there to many other places," Meese said at the time. "While I don't know that it would wipe out unemployment, it certainly would make a real dent and would provide a lot of jobs, and most companies could do that."

... Taxes

Another strong opponent of energy taxes is House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass. O'Neill and other New England lawmakers have supported taxes that add to the cost of heating fuels, on which the region is heavily dependent. However, congressional tax researchers have noted that a tax law could be written in a way to impose an oil levy on gasoline and exempt heating oil.

The congressional tax experts have estimated that an oil import fee of $9 a barrel, which translates into 12 cents per gallon of gasoline, would raise about $10 billion a year. The estimated program would total $21 billion if the fee were to cover domestic oil supplies as well.
Lung cancer to continue rise

NEW YORK (AP) — While death rates for most major cancers level off or decline, lung cancer is on a "spectacularly counter to trend" and will kill 111,000 Americans this year, 6,000 more than last year, the American Cancer Society reported yesterday.

In its projections for 1983, the society said lung cancer's "relentless rise" would lead to an estimated 155,000 new cases.

Cigarette smoking causes more than 75 percent of all lung cancer deaths, the report said, 85 percent among men and 53 percent among women. While the society noted the number of smokers is declining, it said government statistics show smokers are smoking more heavily.

Only 9 percent of all lung cancer patients live five years or more after the disease is discovered and diagnosed, the society said.

The society said only 14 of the 57 forms of cancer for which it makes annual forecasts are expected to result in more deaths this year than last.

The only other cancers with significant increases in the number of expected deaths are cancer of the large intestine, expected to rise by 1,000 deaths to 49,600; and prostate cancer, expected to rise by 800 deaths to 23,500.

Projected death rates increase for other cancers ranged from "small to negligible," according to a fact sheet accompanying the society's updated reference booklet "Cancer Facts and Figures.""}

Breast cancer, the leading cause of cancer death in women, was expected to result in 57,300 deaths in 1985, 200 more than in 1982. For two forms of cancer — non-Hodgkin's lymphoma and invasive cancer of the cervix — the society...
What's a Lackawanna?

Randy Fahn
Friday Analysis

Lackawanna was the home of a major Bethlehem Steel plant for over seventy years. On December 27, 1982, the corporate heads of the steel company gave more than 7,000 workers the worst Christmas present that they could have dreamed of: news of the plant's closing. The repercussions of the closing will mean the loss of an additional $10 million in property taxes. (And similar sums in other major communities) Bethlehem Steel occupied most of the city of Lackawanna and paid it $6 million in property taxes, almost half of Lackawanna's annual budget. The closing of the plant was the city's mainstay and it employed 20,000 people at its peak during the 1960s. Soon, all that will remain of the once thriving industry will be cold blast furnaces standing idle as an industrial monument in industrial history. It will be a deserted and broken down memorial to a golden age passed. Lackawanna is similar to many other towns in the Rust Belt that have been marked on high taxes, high labor costs, and cheaper prices of foreign imports. The fingers are being pointed at the corporate heads of Bethlehem Steel, but if they want to find the villain, they have to do it in the mirror. Government is being blamed because of high taxes. It is true that 86 million in property taxes (and similar sums in other cities with major plants) does seem to be a large sum of money to pay out in one year. But when you consider the fact that Bethlehem Steel lost more than $400 million in the last quarter alone, the property taxes are simply a drop in the bucket.

Labor unions are being blamed for this cutback. The average steel worker does make a pretty fair wage. This wage is higher than the steel workers in other nations, but in recent years foreign wages have crept steadily upward. The recession is not enough to account for the fact that they can make steel abroad and ship it across the ocean at a lower price. The effect of foreign competition is being cited as one of the causes of the decline of the steel production (as well as the decline of many other American-based industries). Many foreign companies receive subsidies and other aids directly from their governments, but U.S. companies fail to mention their own tax and business incentives from the government.

The main difference between foreign and domestic steel manufacturers is production efficiency. Forbes, Fortune, and John Burke in an area of American producers are quick to point out that we build more slowly and work more efficiently than ours. They are newer and more modern than our plants, but the American manufacturers are making steel with these original factories, they would still be using machines that were built in the 1800's. They point out the fact that they are right up to date because of the continued reinvestment of corporate profits to maximize production efficiency.

American steel plants, like Bethlehem Steel in Lackawanna, are using machines and methods, for the most part, which are about fifty years old. The new corporate heads of Bethlehem Steel's Lackawanna facility are nearly seventy years old. This state of the plant continues the corporate heads of Bethlehem Steel blamed on the profits from their plants for the better part of this century. The stockholders want to keep the profits flowing and the time will come that the hill because many of these profits were reinvested is not a matter of cause to encourage reinvestment. This never occurred and that is why American steel manufacturers made money for years and suddenly found themselves with plants so far out of date that they lost billions of dollars and a large share of the marketplace.

This whole explanation brings me back to my original question: What's a Lackawanna? A Lackawanna is a victim of many years of corporate greed and conscienceless business practices. Profits were maximized in the long run, but now the whole thing has come to a grinding halt. Don't worry about the corporate heads. They've made lots of money and they'll go into other managerial positions elsewhere. The problem is what to do with the unemployed steelworkers in Lackawanna and other cities across the nation. Maybe we should ask how we can help a Lackawanna and prevent a repeat of its plight in the future?

1983: TV news boom

It was no surprise when NBC officials said that the new show, a new show more, if not terrible ratings— we've all heard that before. But it did come as somewhat of a shock when they said that it might last a whole year. If track record is any indicator, "Monitor" will be, at the very least, revolutionizing the way news is reported. Over at CBS, officials have apparently decided what to do with some of their spare talent. Bill Moyers and Charles Kuralt will team up in a prime-time show of their own. Actually, there will be two, but I'm sure we'll hear about the second back-to-back. Moyers will reportedly resurrect his popular "Journal," which won high praise at PBS, and Kuralt will expand his "On the Road" segments. And there was word out of New York that another local boy has made good. We all know that sports announcers like NBC's Don Cronin and CBS's Tom Young got their start at our own WSN. The stations most famous alumnus is undoubtedly Don Meredith. He was a student at Central Michigan and now anchors the network's new "Monday Night Football." He's even gotten a name to the list. NBC News' Boston-based correspondent, and a former WSN station manager, is now in the same job. This is the first case of anWSN correspondent. He'll be, in the words of the school's public relations director, "covering "news developments throughout the United States."

So welcome to 1983, the year in which the news gets bigger and, hopefully, better.

University Village tenant challenges note

5. Much Bob and Beth have been told by Father Heppen that they cannot have their own business, providing services not to clean the halls but to clean the hall on their own. They would like to do this do at any given time, and as most of you know, you have quite enough to fill their schedule. Bob and Beth have asked the appearance of the grounds and soon they'll be throwing down. The heat is now in on the corridors. Therefore, we ask you to keep Bob and Beth from doing repairs, not making the cleaning the maintenance crew. Notice makes it seem as if we contracted to them" clear. We did not sign a lease with them. They are here by the grace of the University. If you want them to keep the halls cleaned when there is a constant battle to keep them clean! Most tenants will refuse to clean the halls. I, for one, will clean and scrub my area, as I have done for the past two years, but I will refuse to maintain common areas and regularly clean only my own space. One tenant or another (and low rent is no compensation) will be the low road. The University's only concern is rental income, not the tenants themselves. Why is it that there is no concern for the housing of students every year, nominal funds have been put into this place. Father Heppen expects the Villages to maintain the halls. As our students cram and no replacements are provided, we expect them to clean! Forget it! Last year he candidly suggested carpeting the halls — perhaps we should have. I guess they need the money to pay for athletic buildings punted by unruly students. I am angry because of the notice. I think it very impudent. I could write more, but I wouldn't want it. And don't waste my time. I feel sorry for the Burke because I know that the reparation I God that I am no longer Village Manager.

On the Media

The Entertainment and Sports Programming Network just announced that they will launch an "Award Show Program" that will air twice every weekday morning. The first show will star William Wolff, a former deputy editor at Business Week, will join one of the ABC News' early evening shows called "Business Week." ESPN executives says the new program will generate higher advertising revenue for the network, which has lost money since its inception. "Although we're losing money, I fully expect to break even in 1984," says ESPN's senior vice-president, Roger Weism. "We're certain this will generate additional advertising revenue for the network."

So much for "the total sports network." At both CBS and NBC, there are plans for new network magazines. Not coincidental failures with shows like "Weekend," "Prime Time" and "Monday Night Football," and "NBC Magazine," the network will try again. This time, Lloyd Dobyns will get the assignment, with a program tentatively called "Monitor."

The Irish fencers will wind up their eastern trip this weekend as they face Penn State in University Park, Pa. this afternoon and travel to Philadelphia to battle Penn and Rutgers at The Palace. — The Observer

The Irish raise their sights a couple of notches Sunday when they face the Crimson Tide in an after­noon game at the ACC. The contest, set for 12:30 p.m., is the first for three Notre Dame women's games to be included in the men's weekend package offered to the general public. The others are featuring North Carolina (Feb. 11) and Indiana (Mar. 9). The Tide will begin its Mid­western swing tonight against DePaul. "They're a very new team," says DiStanislao. "(Alabama coach Ken) Weeks has rebuilt his team with junior college transfers and freshmen." Only two players returned from last year's 11-7 Alabama squad, and Weeks brought in three jaco players and four freshmen to give his team an entirely new look. "They're a group of very good ath­letes," the coach said. "They're going to be doing a great number of things." Alabama's strength may be Notre Dame's weakness, he says. Alabama likes to play the type of fast break that DiStanislao feels has given DaStanislao's team trouble so far this season. "They may be the key to a resort to a slow-down, however," warns DiStanislao. "So we don't really know what to expect from them. We're improving consciously in our ability to control the tempo of a ballgame. It's important to not let Alabama establish the pace." One of Weeks' transfers, 5-11 forward Cassandra Crumpton, leads the Crimson Tide in rebounding. She has scored 29 points a game. Teaming up with Crumpton at forward is Terri Hilliard. The 5-11 Southern Conference post player has received the statistics categories last season, adds 15 points as an average. "(Hillard) runs the floor well, as well as any post player I've seen," says Weeks. "Along with Crumpton, they give us a very explosive frontcourt." Lining up against Hilliard will be 6-2 freshman Carol Smith, who has piled up 29 rebounds so far this season as well as added 14 points.

Tennis player Martina Navratilova finished second with 21 votes and golfer JoAnne CARVER was third with 9. The 1981 winner, tennis player TRACY Austin, failed to receive a vote this time.

NFL fix

NEW YORK (AP) — A public television documentary quotes a gambler as saying that he was involved in the 1982 National Football League games between 1968 and 1970 when he paid off a coach, a quarterback and the defensive captian at each of one unidentified team. The documentary also suggests that Carolina Panthers owner J. B. Richardson was the Los Angeles Rams, who drowned in 1979, was murdered. Screened here Thursday, it will be shown next Monday as the opening offering in PBS' "Frontline" series.

Neither the players, the coach, nor the team or teams involved in the alleged fix are named. And the reason stated for the players' decision to speak is the restriction that the headline men in the case, Keenan and Beavers, will not be shown next Monday as the opening offering in PBS' "Frontline" series.

The gambler, interviewed in person, said he was part of a group of four NFL games each season in 1968, 1969 and 1970. He said the players involved no more than $300,000 plus 10 percent of what the games paid. He said the players did not try to "rig" the games. He said he paid the biggest payoff was $800,000 and he actually saw it when money changed hands.

Many athletes fail new test

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The National Collegiate Athletic Association is strictly voluntary between two major teams to benefit participants in a perfect score is 1,600 on the ACT test. The rules also require that an incoming student have a C average in a core curriculum that includes three years of English, two of math, two of social sciences and two of natural sciences. Few coaches took exception to that.

But Coach Lou Holtz of Arkansas and Coach Tom Osborne of Nebraska both echoed coaches and administrators at black colleges that the new requirements are culturally biased and will affect blacks far more than whites.

"I don't think there's a correlation between test scores and success in college. I think it's more important how many get out of college, not how they get in," said Holtz, who said somewhere between a quarter and a third of the athletes in the Southwest Conference would have been ineligible as freshman in the new rules.

"I feel it's discriminatory," said Osborne. He saw as many as a third of the athletes in the Big Eight would not have met the standards.

The preseason football game, to be known as the Collegiate Kick-Off Classic, will play out at Giants Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J. — this year's date will either be Aug. 27 or Aug. 29 — guarantees each team a minimum of $550,000.

The New Jersey Sports & Entertainment Authority, which operates the stadium, has guaranteed $1.625 million a year for at least three years. The money will be divided among the participating teams, the Hall of Fame.

The teams will be chosen around July 15 by the executive officers of many schools recognizing that this event represents the first time assistant coaches, while eliminating their own part-time assistants.

They also turned down a provision that the coaches' employment may be suspended or terminated if he violates NCAA regulations.

They passed a measure requiring schools to include in coaches' contracts a provision that the coaches' employment may be suspended or terminated if he violates NCAA regulations.

Representatives of the National Football Foundation sought to alleviate fears of some postseason bowls by emphasizing that this would not be a bowl game or a national championship game, although such matchups as Penn State and Southern Methodist — the 1-2 teams from 1982 — would not be out of the question.

The teams will be chosen around March 1 and no team would be allowed to play in the game more than once in five years. In addition, over a seven-year period at least seven different conferences and two independents would be offered an appearance. No invited team has to participate.

There also would be no matchup of the previous year's bowl opponents, no pairing of a regular-season game to be played later that year and no match between the Big Ten and Pacific 10 conferences, whose champions play in the Rose Bowl.

The $1.625 would be guaranteed regardless of any television contract.

During your last two years in college the Navy pays for uniforms, NROTC textbooks and an allowance of $100 a month for up to 20 months.

"You might have two individuals with the same basic intelligence. If one had not been in a good school system, had not been in a home where there are books, where a certain kind of vocabulary is in use, that person will not do as well," Holtz said.

Another football coach, Leon Hart of Purdue, said some of his players wouldn't have been eligible and estimated that a number of other Big Ten schools were in the same boat.

Gary Horton, director of player personnel at the University of Illinois, said that of the 65 to 70 prospective recruits the school is counting "probably several" would have to be scratched from the list under the new guidelines.

"The thing the SAT and the ACT tests won't tell you about is the kids' character. I think we often know better than the people who give the tests how well the kid will perform ... and we recruit accordingly," Horton said.

Other college coaches and administrators said the new guidelines would have little effect on their programs.

Prentice Gautier, assistant commissioner and academic advisor to the Big East and the first black to play college at the University of Oklahoma, said: "I don't look at it as black-white. I think the chief executive officers of many schools would have had to do it. And they said the buck stops here."
Irish take Western, N. Central Illinois

By JEFF BLUMB

The Irish Middle West Classic weighing heavily on their minds, the Notre Dame wrestlers were beaten by Western Illinois 11-1 and North Central Illinois 85-3 last night in the ACC pit.

Throughout the night, the Irish wrestlers abandoned from fluids in order to make an early morning weigh in down in Indianapolis.

At one point, Notre Dame coach Brother Joseph Brown, C.S.C., had to tell his team to focus its attention on the two men going on and to forget about weights, as the effects of not drinking fluids began to show.

Captain Don Heintzelman led the Irish last night with two impressive second round pins. At the time of both pins, Heintzelman held large leads.

Heintzelman remained one of the team's winning leaders as he raised his season mark to 15-7.

Senior Mark Fisher in turn lifted his season record to 19-5 by winning with a first round pin and by forfeit at 125.

Sophomore Louis Caranese won a hard-fought 6-7 battle against his W.I. opponent in a match that remained undecided until the final seconds. Caranese moved his season mark up to a lofty 19-8.

Versatile freshman John Krog, replacing injured co-captain John Caranese at 177, continued to impress all, posting a pair of victories.

Krog, who had been wrestling earlier at 190, whipped his North Central opponent twice, 16-2. Continuing to wrestle in his first league, Krog shut out his Western for 10.

Now 15-9-1, Krog will continue to hold down the 177th weight class for the Irish until Caranese returns from a broken bone in his hand in two weeks.

Last season's win leader Phil Barry lifted his season totals to 12-1-3 with narrow 2-1 and 5-4 victories.

Although rather disappointed with his team's start last night, Coach Joe Bruno remained very pleased with his squad's performance in terms of the whole season.

"You have to remember that our team is mostly composed of freshmen and sophomores and that we're wrestling teams made up of juniors and seniors," said Bruno. "I have to be impressed with the way that our young guys have come along, and at this point in the season would give them a grade of A or A on a scale of 4 to 1."

Over the holidays the Irish gave Bruno plenty of reason to glout. On January 3 the Notre Dame grapplers rolled over Carthage College 91-0 for the season's first, and only, shutout.

Last Saturday at the Olivet Invitational, a number of Irish wrestlers placed highly. Fisher took first at 120 and Louis Caranese second at 158. In addition, Eric Brown and Phil Barry took their thirds at 118 and 161, respectively.

The Notre Dame wrestlers now face two triangular meets at home before heading out to California the first week of February for a quadrennial and a tournament.

But first, the Irish must now focus their attention on this weekend's Midwest Classic in Indianapolis.

SMC roller-coaster hoping to reach top

The Saint Mary's basketball team hopes to reach the Roller Coaster race in the next five days before a four-team tournament next weekend.

The Belles haven't played since dropping a 64-41 decision to the Michigan Dearborn Bears on December 15 to wrap up a two-game winning streak. The Christmas lay-off's been Head Coach Mike Rouse's biggest worry.

"They've been playing all along and not coming out of a break. That's the only thing I am worried about," says Rouse.

Rouse says Southwest Michigan College, the Belles' opponent tonight at the Angela Athletic Facility, tip-off is scheduled for 7:30.

The Belles will travel tomorrow to Lake Forest College in suburban Chicago and head for Manchester College on Tuesday.

"Winning one or two of these games would be a good way to get back into the swing of things," says Rouse.

The Belles will have to do it with the services of Missy Van Ort, Saint Mary's leading rebounder and No. 2 scorer. Rouse hopes that Van Ort will be ready for Tuesday night's contest. Rouse prefers that Van Ort start in Van Ort's place.

"It hurts our depth," explains Rouse. "We'll rotate Chip (Ayotte), Trish (Nolan) and Phil (Barry)." We'll have to be wise.

"We've really been working on our defense. But you need rebounding. It really hurts without Missy being there."

Ayotte has been slowed by a recurring knee injury and that hasn't helped the SMC depth picture.

"Never knowing her situation puts a strain on our depth," says Rouse.

Even with the loss of Van Ort, which Rouse feels costs SMCC theDearborn game, the Belles still figure prominently in the recently released NAIA statistics.

Forward Elaine Suess ranks in the Top 20 nationally in individual scoring with a season-high close to 19 points a game. She also is fifth in free throw shooting, capturing 65 percent of her shots. Despite coming off a knee injury, Theresa McQuinn is among the top 20 in field goal shooting, connecting on 64 percent of her attempts.

The Belles rank among the nation's leaders in scoring margin and points per game. With the aid of two 100-plus games, St. Mary's boasts a scoring average of over 80 while holding its opponents to just 55 points a game.

Despite the accolades, the Belles up and down season has resulted in a 5-4 record to date, but Rouse thinks the Belles are on the right track.

"I'm pleased with where we're at," says Rouse. "I judge our performance rather than record.

"You can be a "0" or a "5" depending on who you play. Our worst defeat was 10 points against Franklin and it was probably our best game."

Rouse also announced that Saint Mary's was invited to place in the National Catholic Basketball Tournament in Dubuque, Iowa next year.

The tournament is a five-day affair similar to the NIT. The championship game will be broadcast nationally by ESPN.

Not pretty but,
Notre Dame women rout Augustana, 87-66

By MIKE SULLIVAN

It was not one of the better performances for any Notre Dame women's basketball team, but some excellent individual performances allowed it to rout Augustana, 87-66, last night in the Convocation Center.

The Irish, coming off a loss at Maryland Saturday which broke a 13-game winning streak, got back on the winning track on the strength of an offensive explosion by forwards Carrie Bates (24 points) and Tenes Keys (19 points), and center Mary Beth Schnier (16 points). In all, five players scored in double figures for Notre Dame as it set a season mark for team scoring.

Bates was especially impressive as she set a career best with her 24 points. It was the highest single-game point production for the season and led the Irish by 15 points.

The sophomore soared to 24 points in a Notre Dame uniform and a couple of others - emphasize athletics and academics in that order. And, at a lot of places, such a perception of priorities will never change. But at every school in the country, academics should be at least a secondary to athletics, which would still ensure that the vast majority of student-athletes would still earn their diplomas.

Admitting athletes who cannot or simply refuse to meet the NCAA minimums is a concession that the school has no control whatever that its athletes receive an education. From the very moment such an athlete signs a letter of intent, that institution's president, its director of admissions and its coach know full well that the athlete has about as much of a chance to leave with a degree as the 16-year-old kids on the playgrounds of Chicago's West Side have of reaching the NBA.

It is much easier to sympathize with an athlete who, through no fault of his own, simply can't obtain even the remotest minimum scores set by the NCAA. And possibly, if such an athlete has made an honest and consistent effort to learn and improve during high school, an exception could be made. But then again, any other high school student who can't earn those scores and doesn't happen to be gifted enough to run a 4 40-yard dash or score 30 points in a game in basketball would more likely be left out in the cold by college admissions offices as well.

Certainly, many of the nation's inner-city school systems are in such a state for reasons that far exceed their students' ability to compete. But at every school in the country, academics should be at least a secondary to athletics, which would still ensure that the vast majority of student-athletes would still earn their diplomas.
