Disarmament running out of time: Hesburgh

By TIM VERCELLOTTI
News Editor

University President Father Theodore Hesburgh said that time is running out on the possibilities for disarmament, a conclusion that he and 14 other religious leaders reached at a recent conference in Vienna, Austria.

"We don't have a whole lot of time," he said at a press conference yesterday noting that talks did not progress enough and that "verifiable reductions far from being set in stone".

"If the Church doesn't speak out on this matter we are creating a situation where we can very well get ourselves in a danger area," he said.

He added that if, in the next few years, there is no progress leading to the elimination of nuclear weapons, a "bilateral situation, because we want agreement to move in the other direction, not just one way" will develop, and that this will lead to "a mutual mistrust and hostility, which is considered a danger to the basic health of American security, it would be better to keep everything in a bilateral situation, because we want both to be talking, not just one side".

The Vienna conference was the sixth in a series of Hesburgh-initiated international gatherings of religious and scientific figures on arms issues. The United States president said that the next step would be meetings with leaders from the Islamic, Hindu and Buddhist faiths, possibly in Cairo, New Delhi and Tokyo respectively.

Hesburgh defended the role of religious leaders in calling for an end to the arms race.

"If the Church doesn't speak out on nuclear matter, and show leadership in this matter, then it will definitely affect our security. We believe this is necessary and I quote,$^2^, we must all do everything in our power to bring our children up to the standard of our fathers."

He added that "the Church will be prepared for the next fiscal year will increase no more than the rate of inflation -- in other words, the federal government will hold the line on real spending."

After the reality sunk in, Mr. Kennedy said, "we all need to take steps to ensure that the government will continue to put the interest of the American people first."

He called for constitutional and economic measures to increase the federal budget to over 20% billion over the next five years. But the government will hold the line on real spending, if needed to curb the deficit."

"America is on the brink," declared Reagan in an address which outlined several midterm shifts in an economic course that has produced a record 20% deficit.

"We have never before in the history of the United States experienced a period when one is downcast and unhappy," Kennedy commented that the first reaction one has to a crisis is a period when one is downcast and unhappy.

"We feel we have no choice but to challenge the United States government with a nationwide television and radio broadcast."

"If" was followed by "anger towards the U.S. government. The most common word was "anger".

"If we are not able to eliminate our whole species, if we are not able to avoid that possibility, and called "We must all do everything in our power to bring our children up to the standard of our fathers."

He explained that while a "creative, hard-headed thinking into this whole dilemma, because there are problems that could be done right now, without in any way affecting our security."

"Unless we start the nation downward, we can't have a great deal of hope," he said.

The federal government spent $17.9 billion more than it took in last month, pushing the federal deficit for the fiscal year's first quarter to $68.3 billion, the government said yesterday. That put the three-month figure at more than half the record deficit of $111 billion for all of fiscal 1982. The October-December deficit was $20.2 billion, but some of that was due to a change in fiscal 1982, keeping the government squarely on the road to setting yet another quarterly fiscal record. The December deficit was actually less than the $19.5 billion for the same month one year ago. But it followed record and near-record monthly deficits in October and November. - AP

A fiery explosion demolished a building at an Interstate Chemical Co. plant southwest of Lehi, Utah, yesterday, killing four people, authorities said. Ralph Combee, a dispatcher for the Utah County Sheriff's office, said the four unidentified people were working inside the building at the time of the 11:30 p.m. explosion, and all were killed. Authorities had not determined the cause of the blast. James Parcell, a state boiler inspector, said he was working at the six-building plant complex when the explosion occurred. He said about 3,000 pounds of explosives went off in the building when he was 150 yards away. Parcell said that after a fireball and a massive concussion subsided, he went outside to find the building demolished. The plant is located about 15 miles southwest of Lehi, which is 25 miles south of Salt Lake City. - AP

Harmless traces of cyanide were found in the water supply in Hammond, La., yesterday, while a continuing rash of accidents at a large pleasure-boat officials to turn off the taps in four more Louisiana towns. Health officials said they could not tell whether cyanide found in the Hammond water was a naturally occurring trace of the substance or had been introduced deliberately. Since the first threat last Thursday in St. Gabriel, more than 30 towns in four parishes have been across Louisiana warning of poisoning in public waterworks. The tapwater for at least 220,000 residents has been disrupted. The calls — many presumably from "tough guys" promised state officials yesterday to urge local officials to keep the water flowing unless the tests find it to be contaminated. - AP

Imagine this scenario: A major Catholic coeducational university heads toward the 1980s without a sufficient student center for campus life...

As an old, large building stands in the middle of the campus. This building is often referred to as the student center, but, except for its campus location, it isn't the center of anything but controversy. The old building is poorly used. It provides a fast-food restaurant which serves only starch foods, a few student offices, and a poorly-game room containing a few pool tables and a couple of old Singles arcade games.

Needless to say, the students of this respected institution are upset. They cannot understand why the University does not provide a place to them to kill time between classes, fail miserably in this case. The University's faculty begin to voice their opinion. According to many of the faculty members, a new "student center" is needed to unite the students and faculty. Many faculty members never enter the old building. Therefore, student/faculty interaction is often negatively affected.

Many people agree that a new facility is needed. Discussion of this subject goes on and on. The administration, which can ignore the topic no longer, hires a committee to investigate the situation. The committee recommends that an expanded student center be built as soon as possible to alleviate the growing problems. As part of a larger development program, the University's faculty begin to voice their opinions. The students, faculty and architects are consulted in the planning of the new building, which will be located next to the old building...
Women's Opportunity Week lecture

Alumna says women need direction

By ANNE MONASTYRSKI
Senior Staff Reporter

Though aware of "how trendy it has become to give advice," Mary Harris Veeder said during her speech last night that "women are desperately in need of direction."

The 1964 Saint Mary's graduate returned to her alma mater last night to deliver her speech, "Working Out and Working For: Advice Across the Ages," as part of Women's Opportunity Week at Saint Mary's.

Veeder cautioned women against the "culture pressure" created by the extremist's view that says a woman's career must come first in today's culture. According to Veeder, the view implies that a woman is "nobody unless she has the perfect job" — one that's tailored to a woman's formal training.

"Smart people can begin from any number of positions," she continued, advising women to remain open to possibilities.

"Though goals differ, we all go into the same working world," Veeder added.

Her own career exemplifies these views. Currently Associate Professor of English at Indiana University-Northwest, Veeder is the author of two books. She also reviews children's books and writes a column for a local newspaper.

Veeder was able to assume these roles by remaining "fairly flexible and persistent," she said.

Veeder noted several generalizations about life which she has discovered and termed "Veeder's Laws," laws not unlike Murphy's.

One law states: "Disturb all myths, especially those about women." Veeder elaborated by saying that not all doors are open to women and that resentment toward professional women is prevalent.

Veeder summed up her laws by saying, "Things won't go toward any preconceived plan, but they can proceed.

"But, I am not prophesying passive acceptance (to disappointments in life)," she emphasized.

Veeder continued by describing the tone of the "self-improvement" culture of today which conditions people to believe that everyone can turn his or her life around. "It worries me. It's so incredibly optimistic and programmatic," she said.

"Be sure you're doing what you want to do," Veeder concluded.

Women's Fair scheduled today in LeMans Hall

By LAURA HARTIGAN
News Staff

At today's Women's Fair, two color consultants from Beauty For All Seasons, a local firm which analyzes skin tone and suggests which shades of makeup one can wear, will be on hand to suggest something in basic green.

These are two of more than a dozen organizations that will be in the LeMans lobby today from 10 to 4 p.m. to assist Saint Mary's and Notre Dame students in exploring their opportunities as women, the goal of Women's Opporunity Week.

Peggy Phillips and Barbara Kracher will be representing Beauty For All Seasons.

Other displays in the Women's Fair will include the Holy Cross Vocations Ministry and the Alumnae Association from Saint Mary's.

Portant coping mechanisms one can have in crisis. "When the going gets rough, keep your humor going." Humor gives psychological as well as physical strength to those in crisis situations, she said.

By coping with a crisis, Kennedy feels that one can gain self-confidence, insight and independence, and also learn to take the world so seriously.

Kennedy contrasted the hostage crisis and the trauma of death. She felt that after a death there is a period of grief and mourning, but during the hostage crisis, "we were in limbo, there was nothing we could do."

Kennedy acted as spokesman for the Family Liaison Action Group (FLAG), representing the families of the hostages. She felt that the group was "very much needed by the time it was started," because the State Department could not give all of the vast amount of moral support needed by the hostage families during the crisis.

FLAG was, for Kennedy, "a way to draw together. Nobody should be in a crisis alone." In a time of crisis one should never be afraid to seek help in coping, she concluded.

HPC fights to save hockey

By MIKE KRISKO
News Staff

Approving of Keenan Hall President Brian Callaghan's proposal to "these students make a written commitment to purchase hockey tickets now," the Hall President's Council agreed that the president should try to market hockey in each of their dorms. HPC President Mike McAuliffe proposed a letter be sent to Father Edmund P. Joyce, proposing the funding of the hockey program on the basis of bringing ticket sales to the dorms, having hockey parties with possession of a game ticket a condition for getting into the party and bolstering support by having coaches and players speak in the dorms.

Callaghan argued that these commitments weren't enough. "If we split the season into two ticket packages, and if we can get students to sign commitments to purchase tickets, we would be showing Father Joyce that there is concrete support for the hockey program," he said. Morrissey President Ned Legere supported Callaghan's proposal. "What happened before would have little or no effect on the hockey situation. (Callaghan's) proposal isn't a puppet movement. It has tangible effect," he added.

After brief discussion, McAuliffe said he would look into a procedure for getting this type of commitment, and that the council would take it from there. Hall presidents were encouraged to look into forming ticket committees in each dorm. On another topic, Tom Merriman addressed the council on the issue of the Farm Labor Organizing Committee's boycott of all Campbell's and Libby's products. He said that the University voted to support the boycott in 1980, but "due to the turnover of students at the University, it seems only appropriate to re-vote the issue to let the present student body decide whether or not they too want to support the migrant farm workers. What you say (the council) to do, is to attend the Conservancy and CFA debate and to decide if the council can endorse the FLOC's cause."

In other business, Mr. Ken Hendricks announced to the council that the Recreations Department from the Northern Indiana State Hospital is holding an aluminum can drive in order to buy funds for purchasing a new van with adaptations for handicaps. The dorms contributing the most cans will receive a keg on Green Field for the first home game.

McAuliffe announced that Father Michael Hennessy, director of student residences, will not fine on-campus housing applicants who, following standard procedure, sign a contract, but decide to move off campus if they are denied R.A. status.

Mr. Neil King also announced the opening of his South Bend picture service. He said that his service will cover "informal candid party pictures, sport team groups, dorm floor groups, and organizations."

prepared ourselves for the wall," meaning execution, as the months dragged on, a feeling of boredom replaced the feeling of terror. The problem of being in constant company with merely one on-the-other_knowing.

The former hostage's methods of dealing with this ranged from writing to playing cards to finding humor in the situation itself. The fact that the abductors did not want to be bothered by the captives and that the hostages did not want to be there anyway was a cause for hilarity, said Mr. Kennedy.

Now as executive director of the Cathedral Peace Institute in New York, Mr. Kennedy sees a need to form a basis for international peacemaking. Believing that all humans have Original Sin, they are all therefore capable of evil. The motives and means behind the hostage crisis were not unique to Iran. "All of us are guilty, all of us are violent, all of us shoot prisoners of war," he said.

What is needed, therefore, Mr. Kennedy, is a mutual understanding of various international manners of thinking and living. He also says that Americans are not instinctively good negotiators, that we all want to be winners. But "in international affairs, there are no winners any more. There will be no winner in the next war," he said.

Applying this to contemporary issues, Mr. Kennedy expressed apprehension about the current freeze movements on weapons. Revealing his doubt that the Russians will pull back their armaments, Mr. Kennedy emphasized the pressure needed for negotiation. Inherent to the success of this negotiation is the understanding of each other's
In Memoriam

To Our Beloved Notre Dame Family:

It is the expected thing to do.

To thank you; to tell you our appreciation for all you have done in easing our shared pain; to send you heartfelt gratitude for your prayers, Mass offerings, phone calls, letters, your deeply felt sympathy in our common loss of Michelle and Rita. We do feel exactly so. As never before, we are in solidarity with you as the school of "Our Lady."

To say only the above would be acceptable by common standards. Yet, at least to the thought of our Murphy family, it would be a semi-sterile pro forma statement.

We love Notre Dame. Sacred Heart Church and dormitory chapels, Chris within; present and former students and faculty; N.D. traditions and a famed, insulated, indefinable spirit; the Grotto, the lakes (Notre Dame du Lac), the serene beauty of the campus (even in harsh weather or during examination week); these have left indelible imprints on the lives of the father and three brothers who preceded Michelle and Rita to our school. We simply say "thank you" for your outpouring of love would be an inadequate expression of just how deeply we feel.

We must go beyond amenities; necessary as they are, in our search for meaning or the mistaken notion that it is obvious.

We weep for all who have left us, and rejoice in their memory. Yet, it is our sincere belief that we have not enough time to be in your place.

We love Notre Dame. Sacred Heart Church and dormitory chapels, Christ and the views of their authors. Column space is available to all members of the community and the free enterprise system, through letters, editorials, etc. (219) 239-5303

Notre Dame basketball coach Digger Phelps has confirmed last night that sophomore guard Ron Rowan has been suspended for the remainder of the 1982-83 season. Phelps, in an exclusive interview with The Observer late last night, said that he decided to suspend Rowan after the latter had apparently initiated transfer procedures with the Pennsylvania State University, which is closer to his home in Beaver Falls, Pa.

"We talked about it over Christmas," said Phelps, "and I told him he'd be foolish to make a decision like that. He's a young man, and he's balanced his life with the Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League, and the best you name it. Turnovers from-behind victory.

The Little Giants were giant killers last night to the Pitt as Wabash edged Notre Dame in wrestling, 20-19. The night was not a total loss, though, as the Irish rolled over the Wabash in the world of the University of Washington and the #5-6 in the other half of the triangular meet.

It was the second consecutive meet that Notre Dame had lost to Wabash. This time, however, it was a little closer than last year's 34-12 drubbing.

Leading Wabash 17-14 with two matches remaining, the Irish pitted their hopes on Louis Carnesale at 135 and Mark Stamm at 190. Carnesale won a 14-2 superior decision over his Cincy foe, needed an escape move worth one point as time ran out to salvage a 4-4 tie with a tough Wabash opponent. Each team gained two points for the draw and the score stood at 19-19 in favor of Notre Dame as the crucial match, but soon fell behind as the result of a series of turnovers. Turnovers have been a big thing for them.

The two double-doubles for the Irish were a big defensive football team. We're just going to do whatever we have to do to win."
