Hindu tribemen butcher villagers

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Hindu tribemen wielding butcher’s knives, spears, machetes and cold flame burnt 600 to 1,100 Moslem villagers for defying an election order and leaving their homes. The toll to date is 1,000, witnesses reported yesterday. The latest accounts reaching New Delhi from the remote northeastern state said the tribemen rampaged through 17 villages in the Nell district of central Assam on Friday, stabling, shooting and mutilating helpless victims, identified as settlers from neighboring Bangladesh.

Estimates of the killing varied widely. The government has banned foreign journalists from the area, and communications with Assam are spotty because saboteurs have wrecked telephone lines, dynamited roads, bridges and railways.

The death toll from 18 days of political and ethnic violence sparked by the elections had been placed by Indian news agencies at more than 450 before the carnage in the Nellini district. Official reports listed 60 more election-related deaths yesterday in Assam, outside of the Nellini district, and said three of the victims were ritually shot by policemen.

Sitting India newspaper reporter for the Indian Express news service, said the Nellini victims, “mostly women and children who had been run back to death.” He said “feared tribal honed” were responsible.

“There are few without staff wounds.” Gupta wrote in a dispatch from the main Assam city of Gauhati.

“There are women and children with disfigured faces — children bumbling about with gaping wounds in their heads, clothes and hair all interwoven between Nelli and the affected villages are strewn with thirsty and exhauster wounded, their wounds smeared with mud.

About 6,000 survivors of the villages, many in state of shock, crammed into three relief camps in the area, the United Nations of India said. It quoted one of its reporters as saying relief crews helped 67 corpses, mostly women and children, in a single pile and dog mass graves.

The government deployed soldiers in the area yesterday to quell police forces attempting to stop the violence. Prime Minister Indira Gandhi also announced she would tour the state today. The prime minister's aides said reporters would not be permitted to accompany Mrs. Gandhi.

Most of the violence stems from a widespread movement among Assam’s predominant Hindu population to drive Moslem farmers and expel more than 1 million Moslem settlers who have emigrated since 1961 from neighboring Bangladesh, formerly East Pakistan.

Yesterday's accounts from the area 450 miles north of Calcutta said the Hindu tribespeople were angry for the Moslem villagers had defied a boycott of the elections.

“We will kill all these foreigners they have made us foreigners in our own country” news reports from the area quoted the attackers as shouting.

The government deployed thousands of paramilitary troopers to quell the in Assam, an attempt to enforce order during a three-stage election that had been scheduled to end yesterday.

Because of the widespread violence, however, voting in 10 districts was postponed until today.

The election is for 126 state legislative seats and 15 Parliament representatives.

Mondale to announce candidacy today

WASHINGTON (AP) — Walter Mondale is set to formally announce his 1984 presidential candidacy today.

Mondale, 55, has been regarded as the best known, best organized and best financed of the party's candidates.

He was elected vice president on Jimmy Carter's ticket in 1976 after falling to the presidential ticket last week.

Mondale is expected to formally announce his candidacy before the Democratic National Convention in San Francisco on Sept. 6.

Mondale is best known as a senator from Minnesota and as the Democratic whip in the House of Representatives.

He began preparing for the 1984 presidential contest after Vice President Walter Mondale's nomination himself.

Fredrick Dickinson of Lebanon, Indiana, is the fifth Notre Dame student in recent years to win the Japanese government’smono-shoshoaward. The 1983 competition was open to students of Japanese language in all American universities and was announced after the successful completion of a three-hour examination. Dickinson’s selection entitled him to free tuition and fees at a Japanese university to be designated by the Ministry of Education, training and livelihood allowance of 160,000 yen or about 8600. The scholarship lasts from 18 to 24 months. Notre Dame’s last recipient, in 1979, Kenneth Lucey, was admitted to Tokyo University and will receive a degree in science last year. Memorial services will be conducted tomorrow for Thomas Murphy Jr., a former public works commissioner and well known Notre Dame football player, who died last week. He was a 1925 graduate who appointed public works commissioner in 1955 by Gov. Abraham Ribicoff, a post he held until his retirement in 1967. Before joining that department, he served as director of the Connecticut Federal Housing Administration. The Bridgeport native was best known in the early 1920s as a star on the University of Notre Dame’s football team. He was one of the so-called “Seven Mules,” who blocked for Notre Dame’s popular “Four Horsemen” backfield. After college, Murphy coached the Freeport (Long Island) Farm Club, a pro football club. From 1953-57 he was a Hartford Ryder, a semi-pro team. Murphy died of heart failure at his home in West Hartford shortly after leaving the airport last Thursday. He was survived by his daughter, granddaughters and great-grandchildren. A funeral mass will be held tomorrow morning at St. Brigida Church in West Hartford. — The Observer

The anti-recession drive kicks up momentum this week in the Democratic controlled House, where committees begin writing bills to provide humanistar aid, public works jobs and extra unemployment benefits. In other recession related busi-nesses, the House Banking Committee will hear two days of testimony about the growing number of home and farm mortgage foreclosures. The anti-recession campaign, according to the House Banking Committee, has been one of the most successful in recent political history, the House Appropriations Committee chair, Mr. Wittern, whose committee draft the legislation, is certain to be less successful by adding money for rural programs that he favors and social programs favored by House Speaker Thomas P. O’Neill Jr., of Massachusetts, and other party leaders. Murphy has spent the last week, March 25-26, working out a compromise with the students and faculty. — The Observer

A new born infant found in an alley beneath a dis-carded Halloween decoration was found in critical condition on Tues-day, but hospital officials say she is improving. Two Indianapolis child welfare workers, Janie Doe before her husband, were walking on the west side of the city on Saturday morning. Despite the 40-degree weather, she was naked, and her umbilical cord still was attached to the placenta, said authori-ties, who believe the child was found about two hours after she was abandoned. The infant was rushed to Wishard Memorial Hospital, then transferred to Riley Hospital for Children, part of the Indiana University Hospitals complex here. “The child is doing better,” Roger Hunt, director of hospitals for IU, said yesterday. “She is still in critical condition, but the condition is stabilizing.” The child is on a ventilator to assist her breathing but is looking generally bet-ter and is expected to recover. Hunt said that in his 29 years of success, this has been the second best freeze? — The Observer

The intentions of campus groups backing a bilateral freeze resolution may be good, but are they the right intentions? The resolution reads “to improve national and inter-national security, should the United States and the Soviet Union adopt an immediate, bilateral, mutually verifiable freeze on all further testing, production and deployment of nuclear weapons, and of missiles and new aircraft designed primarily to deliver nuclear weapons” on the question March 15. Why the sudden push for a bilateral freeze resolu-tion? Well, there is the upcoming Notre Dame con-ference, “The Nuclear Future,” to be held March 25-26. It would be convenient to have campus approval of a bilateral freeze on the books before the conference.

Also, in the aftermath of the unilateral freeze vote, are Notre Dame students “setting” for a bilateral freeze? Is approval of a bilateral freeze better than nothing? These are the reasons for mount- ing a campaign, he said. Fortunately, they appear to be some students’ rationale for冻 the freeze. The good timing or the face-saving value of a bilateral freeze resolution should be the last reason for its support. Approval of a bilateral nuclear test ban on its own merits should be considered on its merits, and its merits are many.

With a freeze, both the United States and the Soviet Union could seriously negotiate arms reductions. Reducing talks can only be fruitful if the super-powers can agree on the preventative logic of “building up to down scale,” creating bargaining chips to be traded at Geneva. That sort of scenario was avoided in 1968. The arms buildup has come to a halt on both sides of substantial reduc-tions are coming in.

The bilateral element makes the freeze more practi-cal. There is some risk in one party agreeing in a freeze while the other party will follow through. The risk that both the U.S. and the Soviets have agreed to a freeze will decrease the fear and paranoia that has fueled the arms race since its begin-ning.

In addition to the strategic points, there are economic benefits to a freeze. — The Observer

On the funds could be used to revitalize American industries, making them more competitive with their foreign counterparts, while sending unemployed Americans back to work.

Not only more money, but brainpower would be released if a result of a freeze. If, however, a freeze is not doing research on defense projects could use their gifts to more productive ends, not only in industry, but in agriculture and medicine as well.

A second-best freeze?

WASHINGTON (AP) — India has begun producing and stockpiling weapons grade plutonium at a nuclear reprocessing plant, according to published reports.

The Washington Post, quoting unnamed U.S. and international sources, reported yesterday that India is stockpiling separated plutonium at a rate that would enable it to build about 20 atomic bombs a year if it pursues a nuclear weapons program.

The plutonium is separated from spent fuel by atomic power plants at the Tarapur reprocessing facility near Bombay, the Post said.

According to the International Atomic Energy Agency, the plant went into large-scale operation last November. Previously the plant had been used to reprocess only small amounts of fuel, the newspaper said.

A State Department official said the United States had expressed concern on numerous occasions about the spread of nuclear reprocessing facilities, especially in areas of potential instability such as southern Asia.

"The New York Times* reported in today's editions. "We have had a long and unpleasant history with India on this subject," the undated cable told the Times.

The U.S. position is that these facilities should be confined to countries with advanced nuclear programs, such as Japan and members of the European Economic Community. Many developing nations repudiate this position as being related to second-class industrial status.

The Challenge to be pro-choice

Dear Editor:

Not living in a utopian society, we must concern ourselves with the rights and injustices of other persons’ lives and how our decisions can alleviate social distresses. Pro-lifers fail to realize that the lives of the children, as the entire family.

Instead, they seek to impose their view on our lives, along with the father of the woman. Had we the right to make the decision. The consideration represents an alternative, to be decided as where our social distresses.

Whatever its position on the abortion issue, religious organizations must respect the rights of others to believe differently or to retain the freedoms of our democratic pluralist society.

I urge you to consider the pro-choice, pro-family argument.

1. To make abortion illegal will not eliminate it, but only make it more expensive to obtain. Abortion is nine times less hazardous to a woman’s health than childbirth during the first trimester. Even by the third trimester abortion is still less risky than childbirth. Health risks due to the woman’s medical diagnosis or present health condition warrant attention.

2. These cases involve prior traumatic deliveries or hemorrhaging, after the last delivery, as well as those in which the woman is over thirty-five or under sixteen years of age, or is pregnant, has high blood pressure, or heart disease.

3. If you sincerely concern focuses on helping the desperate needs of the poor, we should encourage the relationship of their economic disregards which additional offshoring create.

We should seek to limit family size for those persons who can afford to or unwilling to continue the child, and love necessary to secure their child’s future.

5. Parents seriously violate their responsible when they bring into the world a child for whom they cannot provide love. Human parents is distorted when it is unwanted, and unwilling, it is better to stop life or promote the psychological suffering and tremendous anxiety of an unwanted child’s existence.

6. Many of these cases involve women who are forced to bear children, and the psychological suffering they cause, are the result in the birth of a child.

When does this life begin and thus should be protected and given rights? Catholics believe at conception. Other Christian denominations believe at the point of viability. We believe in the womb as capable of existing independently of its mother. Most Protestants and Jews recognize ‘life’.

In the same publication, a competing company bragged that it could use a viral display to demonstrate a topic, and not confuse the issue with new words. But language itself is the source of our thoughts. We need words to talk. We need them to capture those abstract concepts which define our human. To becandidates in social and computer decisions it is dangerous.

We are faced with an Orwellian situation.

We had, my folks want to know why I want to go to Florida just to see us, their sons and daughters, and to meet and mingle with our friends' hare parents.

We, the juniors, struggle through the endless introductions at crowded gatherings and help our parents as they engage in that inevitable small talk representative of our first freshman dance. But despite our occasional fits of forgetfulness, those awkward silences, and our distant table at the President's Dinner that was almost on the ice rink, a good time was certainly enjoyed by all. We were even told that Father Hesburgh gave the keynote address although we could see only a white-strobed spec across an imposing ocean of humanity. (Perhaps an exaggeration. It was more like a large pond of humanity.)

Sure, JPW is a rare opportunity for the University to welcome a sometimes-forgotten element of the Notre Dame community and for the students to express a bit of gratitude to their parents. But what is the real purpose of Junior Parent's Weekend? I think I may have stumbled upon the carefully hidden reason the University encourages the staging of this annual event. My suspicion is that JPW is actually an administrator's dream of a tool used to discover prospective contributors and silence potential troublemakers.

" Ridiculous! " you say.

"Absurd! " you cry.

"Just journalism! " you believe.

I think not.

Saturday night at the President's dinner, someone at our table mentioned the possible housing lottery that might affect us juniors. "How do you think most of the crowd did not find out about the lottery when our food finally did arrive? I'll bet you can guess who served chow, " one of their parents our friends resembled. But while the food was attentive service was probably a facade designed to keep them in their place. (The well-tinished pyros used by University agents. Will you, my dear unconfirmed friends, be among them this time, not to mention the hundreds of others who were present?)

My dear mother was being a particularly vociferous objector to the idea of a housing lottery. In fact, she proceeded to push the point even further, advocating that one gender of people could be moved into the other's dorms if more than enough of one gender were to join the other. She didn't care who moved, as long as there was a housing lottery. But I assure you that this is just one of the many prevented by the University.

She didn't care who moved, as long as there was a housing lottery. But I assure you that this is just one of the many prevented by the University.

The group opened to the bright glow of lighted Bic's, the cracking sound of lead guitarist Gary Richrath's high notes, and the drowning out of lead vocalist Ken Cronis's voice for the first number, "Good Trouble." It turned out to be a really nice show. But it's really a house party.

The crowd, about 85 South Bend residents, were charmed by the concert. The group opened to the ACC about three and a half years ago, and it would be safe to say that most of the crowd did not know who REO was back then.

But since then, the awesome Decade of Rock and Roll, the multi-platinum hit "Infidelity," and the follow-up "Good Trouble" have taken a much younger set of fans by storm.

These were the majority of fans that were at the ACC, expecting the hits, as fond as possible, with as nice a show as possible. And they were not disappointed. It was nice show, guys.

The group played 18 songs. Six from Good Trouble, most of High Infidelity, and a Chuck Berry tune. But there were two songs notably missing — "The Single Life" and "18," a Riverside Avenue. "Also missing — an Alan Gratzer drum solo, a Neal Doughty solo that wasn't already recorded on vinyl. Imagination, inspiration, rock and roll, you get the picture.

But it was a nice show, guys.

"Darla, would you like me to swing you?" said J.P.

"No, Aliffah.

But, I'm sorry, what about the He-Man Women Haters Club?"

"Sorry, Spunky, but a man's just gotta live his own life."

Darla's charm turned Aliffah and thousands of other young men onto the wonders of females. Infidelity, REO used those same words to turn young male onto the wonders of bubble gum rock. With these words, the females lasted screaming, and as the first riff of "Tough guys" rang andrang inside the ACC, they jumped up and started dancing.

The Son of the Last Mohican meets

Son of the Last Mohican meets

The Son of the Last Mohican appeared suddenly on Friday night. Standing from the reasonably slimy South Bend night, he entered Senior Bar without J.P. Keyes bar shopping

"Nice show, guys, but..."

Pay no heed to what he asks for his money. If he had, he probably would have spent it in his socks, in acid credibility with the local police force for responding such an insult. The Son of the Last of the Mohicans had to review "Detroit's Hottest (Bar) Band," and he hates to review bar bands.

The band was called either "Adrenalin" or "Detroit's Hottest Bar Band," or "the best band we've ever had in Senior Bar," or "what a bunch of bums," depending on whom the Son of the Last of the Mohicans was standing beside. "What causes this great ambiguity of description among the members of the audience?" wondered the Son of the Last of the Mohicans about his audience.

To aid himself in unravelling this subtle mystery, he checked the band's portfolio for pertinent information, and this is what he found:

"Adrenalin attacks the story board," according to Steve Kosnin of WRIF Radio.

"Adrenalin consists of Mike Romeo and Frank Haley on guitars, Mike's brother Jim on sax, drummer Brian Pastoria, bassist Bruce Schaefer, and singer Mark Gilbert.

According to Arthur "Baby" Penhallow of WRIF Radio in Detroit, Adrenalin is "the best performing group in Detroit." (Apparently, Detroit is without an opera company, a symphony orchestra, or a baseball team.)

Adrenalin has recently released an album and two singles. And now their "juice is starting to flow again."

The Son was not happy.

First of all, his ears had begun to bleed from the extreme volume of Detroit's loudest (bar) band. Secondly, he was hearing something original in the bar's original songs, which was both the rest of the group came back for a encore, and the crowd was appeased. Maybe that was the foreshadowing?" Adrenalin is the best band ever."

But I didn't have time to worry about that; the song started. "Ravin' the Worm Out. " Everyone got up. Everyone was singing, everyone knew the words, and everyone knew the solos because it was exactly like it was on "Festival of Rock and Roll."

The well-tinned pyros pleased the young girls.

Nice show, guys.

They played a couple of encores, and the story was the same, as well as the studio versions of the songs. For a few minutes, the room was filled with a manic rhythm. Time was at a standstill. "The Fire in My Soul," the first song of the night, stopped at the ACC last Saturday night.

You could tell it was the songs you heard on the radio, because they sounded alike. Exactly alike. Not even close, alike.

It was a nice show, guys.

There were three major perks to the concert. First, they played the new album, "Hottest Bar Band," which is a real treat and the first time for years that anyone has actually heard the last Mohican meets. Second, they played the new album, "Hottest Bar Band," which is a real treat and the first time for years that anyone has actually heard. Third, they played the new album, "Hottest Bar Band," which is a real treat and the first time for years that anyone has actually heard.
Edward Abbey: southwest passage

Editor's note: It was mentioned in Friday's "Slouches" Edward Abbey has replaced Mary Robinson on the sophomore literary festival roster. Mike Duggan provided the following piece on Abbey's work.

Edward Abbey is more than an aracne-obsessive of the American Southwest; he is an author deeply committed to preserving what little of open space, green air, and flowing water is left in this world. To those who have spent their whole lives in the heartland of America and have not seen the changes that have degraded the West's quality of life, Abbey's position might seem unimpressive. But from the viewpoint of one who has grown up and been weaned on the landscapes of Arizona, Abbey is a hero.

Not much fine literature has come out of the Southwest; there is little to compare with the likes of Faulkner in the South or Fitzgerald in the East. But Abbey's has an excellent try at rectifying this situation. His 1966 work, Desert Solitaire, is a small classic, having been compared to Thoreau's Walden and Leopold's Sand County Almanac. But comparisons are unfair; each of these authors is unique and has done his own thing. Abbey's thing is to bounce around Ford Fairlanes across the Australian Outback, float six bucks of beer down the Colorado River (in his belly or his ice chest), and put a good deal of distance between him and the nearest urban sprawl. Unfortunately this good fun is getting hard to find. And Abbey has been forced to spend his time fighting off the encroachments of well-funded bureaucracies like the Federal Governments that would like nothing better than to pave a highway to every last corner of the map, bringing with it new facilities, new regulations, and a new view of money-regulating nomads traveling in their air-conditioned "motorized wheelchairs."

Abbey's writing centers on the conflict between values of the Old West and the mechatronic, automated, bureaucratized society that is supplanting it. A recent novel, Goin' News, portrays a confrontation, set in Arizona in the not too distant future, between the last remnants of a band of people that would continue to live on, struggling to maintain their nature and the local governments or attacking the vested interests therein, has become a target of verbal and actual assault and criticism. Many may wonder if he can cast himself as a classic American. But like a modern day Robin Wood of the West, Abbey's interest is in protecting those very rights and liberties in which we define the term, American. He is fighting for his own rights and those of the true residents of the American Southwest. Beds and river rats included.

Usually, acknowledgement was about as far as it ever got. Every once in a while, though, Woody would introduce me to someone who would happily raise an issue. In my first band, for example, was captured largely through my friend's enviable charm. So Woody, was in a large sense, the world's answer to loneliness for me.

I even wrote a short story about him for an English class. The story began as a bit of a satirical piece about the whole business. After all, Woody was virtually nothing without me — I had even gone so far as to get him brown eyes to replace the fluorescent orange eyes which were his original equating that, if I had shaved some of the black gloss off of his nose to make it look less like hard plastic. His wit was mine, except that I couldn't do what he could do by talking, speaking for him. He was a beast, and could be expected to behave as such.

I don't know how he knew, which included playing various air instruments, playing hard-to-get, and playing the field. He could be sey or aggressive, depending on my assessment of the person drawn to him at a given moment.

He was nothing without me, but without him I never put so much personally into play. No one was ever drawn to me without this new warm and jelly. I grew hopelessly jealous of a stuffed animal. I took this as indicative of a severe character flaw.

I did my best to grow out of it. I stopped taking Woody with me to bars and parties. In fact, I only took him with me for company on long trips.

I moved into less likeable lifeforms of koala paraphernalia — notably, like, Christmas cards, statues, posters. I worked slowly toward becoming comfortable again at the sight of a koala.

Now, after several years of growing up, I can almost bring Woody out in a companion rather than as an answer to emptiness. I try not to notice that he still attracts more attention than I do.

I watched how his hands flew and his face was, and he looks less lively than he once did, especially when compared to his new family. A friend gave me two stuffed koalas to keep Woody company. Victoria and Brisbane (Woody's nephews) have long arms with Velcro straps on the wrists, so that you can embrace each other. I wonder in my twisted way of making Woody as real as possible, if the idea of being about as attractive as those who watch Victoria and Brisbane in their enduring, unbelievable embrace. I wish I could feel the painting joy of watching others in love. Woody was excellently demonstrated some of the character I imagine he has. I wouldn't feel so badly about occasionally demonstrating more hollowness than he can muster.

When Woody and I met five years ago, we were fast friends. We went everywhere together in those first days of our friendship. He had an easy, animal charm that made him the hit of every party.

Woody was wiser than I could ever be, and he was comfortable saying so. I would never have taken an interest in me. My first band, for example, was captured largely through my friend's enviable charm. So Woody, was in a large sense, the world's answer to loneliness for me.

On first, that's how it worked. But as time passed, I began to feel that there was something more significant in the whole business. After all, Woody was virtu-

The hockey team, meanwhile, continued its show of improvement by splitting a series against the bottom team in the country, Ohio State. A split next weekend at the ACC against Illinois-Chicago, the CCHA’s worst team, will ensure the Irish a playoff spot.

By the way, next weekend will be your last chance to see the Division I Irish at the ACC. To the 99 percent of the student body who have never bothered to show up at an Irish hockey game, you owe it to the team to give them a fitting farewell next Friday and Saturday.

All season long, Digger Phelps has attempted to lead a crusade against Big Ten officials. He even paid a visit to Commissioner Wayne Buk's office in Chicago with proof of their incompetence on film, and claimed that "a lot of other coaches agree with me."

As the end of last season, Iowa State’s lambsbasted Big Ten referee Jim Ryan, saying he "should be put in jail" after calling a questionable foul against the Hawkeyes at the buzzer which cost them a game at Purdue and subsequently the Big Ten championship.

On Saturday, another coach—Indiana’s Bobby Knight—went on a tirade after his team’s 75-65 victory over Northwestern. And if you’ve never seen Knight get mad, rest assured it is not a pretty sight.

"Officiating in the Big Ten is the worst I’ve seen in 12 years,” Knight said. "It’s deteriorated so far it’s the worst basketball officiating of any conference. They’re incompetent. They’re making a travesty for the kids who play it.

“They’re paid more than anybody, but they don’t understand the game. They don’t know what to look for five times this season, I found they didn’t even know the rules.

Knight’s suggestion to send the referees to a summer camp, an idea proposed by Phelps several months ago, makes sense. Hopefully now that Phelps has supporters like Knight in his corner, maybe people will begin to take notice.

By winning twice on the road over the weekend, the Notre Dame women’s basketball team also put itself in an advantageous position for an NCAA bid. Mary D’s Irish trounced an 18-point deficit Friday night to beat Bradley, and then came back to win a crucial 48-41 decision at Illinois State, one of ND’s major rivals for a bid.

Again, looking ahead (which we got as trouble during Southern Illinois’ games), this women could finish as well as 20-9 — which could mean an invitation to the 42-team tournament, an incredible feat for a team in only its third year in Division I.

Notre Dame has two things going for them. First, they’re good. Second, and more important, since the ACC is the sting of the Midwest Regionals, the NCAA committee is trying to get Notre Dame into the tournament somehow. After voting over 10,000 people show up for Louisiana Tech, the committee sees dollar signs at the possibility of the Irish hosting their own regional.

If Notre Dame makes it to the Sweet 16, ND would be seeded in the bottom 16, and would have to win a first-round game on the road, probably against a Top 20 team, to advance to the regionals.

A tough task, indeed. But this weekend showed that the Irish can beat good teams on the road. And for Mary D’s squad, that’s a very encouraging sign.

Big weekend for women

Dougherty stars in pair of wins

By MIKE SULLIVAN
Sports Writer

NORMAL, Ill. — Three times Lauren Dougherty's shot bounded off the rim. When it finally fell through with nine seconds left in the game Saturday, the Notre Dame women's basketball team had its biggest win of the season, 67-47 over Illinois in U.S. Steel Field House.

The victory puts the Irish in command of the Big East Conference race for the NCAA Tournament bid. The Redbirds, who lost to host Louisiana Tech last week by only 15, were one of the major obstacles for a Midwest bid. With the loss, however, the officials gave the Redbirds no choice but to pull away to a good lead.

With both teams playing on offense, the game turned into a slugfest, both sides committing 18 fouls. In a second-half effort to edge closer to league-leading Ohio State's two-point lead, the Irish were given game misconducts.

This was the biggest win of the year," said Notre Dame coach Mary Dybas. "Maybe because this is an important time of year and a tournament bid is on the line. Also because we're coming off a tough weekend (the 42-point loss to Louisiana Tech) and we just want to win their final four games for a bid."

"The most important thing is that we're not happy. Almost immediately, Steve Mezzapesa brought in his teammates and had his latest three games to highly ranked teams - Old Dominion and Tech.

The Irish fell behind by 15 and would eventually lose 54-47. The Irish were given game misconducts.

After two weeks on the road, Notre Dame brings its 14-4 record home to the finish line of the ACC to face Division II power Charleston Southern College (3-0) on Saturday at 8 p.m. at the Convocation Center.

"Playing for the third time in four days against a team that has won more than 15-10 record, 7-5 in the Ohio Valley Conference (fourth place), and the nation's leading scorer, Joe Jakubick, into tonight's game.

But don't get your hopes up for a dream match up with Jakubick facing the ACC's top players. This season while connecting on 54 percent of his field goals — amazing since almost all of Jakubick's shots are from over 17 feet. Jakubick is also the Zip's lead in steals and assists.

"As the Buckeyes rank with the nation's best scoring machines," says Irish coach Digger Phelps. "He's hit double figures in 76 of his 83 career games. That's amazing. We have to put the clamps on him. But they have a lot of other people who can hurt you."

COLUMBUS, Ohio — The Notre Dame boxing team earned a split weekend in their series with Ohio State. The Irish were 6-3 victors on Friday, but a total turn-around on Saturday found the Irish on the short end of an 8-1 score.

Over-shading the entire weekend were penalties. A grand total of 64 penalties for 164 minutes were called against both teams. Notre Dame had 37 for 96 minutes, while Ohio State received 27 for 68 minutes. A large number of penalties were called against the Irish as the officials, in the second period, nothing seemed to go right. The problem was that Notre Dame had 37 for 96 minutes, dedicated to bowling Green.

After a 25-minute delay, order was restored, but not until players were given some misconducts. Gone from the game were State's Napierala and Tillotson along with Higgins and Ely, who had 15-10 record, 7-5 in the Ohio Valley Conference (fourth place), and the nation's leading scorer, Joe Jakubick, into tonight's game.

But don't get your hopes up for a dream match up with Jakubick facing the ACC's top players. This season while connecting on 54 percent of his field goals — amazing since almost all of Jakubick's shots are from over 17 feet. Jakubick is also the Zip's lead in steals and assists.

First round of Bengal Bouts over

The 53rd annual Bengal Bouts started Saturday, with force-acting dominating all of the weight classes. There were three fights in the 153 pound weight class, all ending in unanimous decision. Junior Mike Don- durant outlasted Mike Arello, a freshman, each after receiving a standing eight count. Tony Bonacci, a junior, ended with a flurry, as he defeated freshman Mike Cook. Round three was all Bonacci, as he landed a number of hard lefts to Cook's head.

In the 140 pound class, there were two more unanimous decisions, though both fights were very eventful. In a real slugfest, sophomore Ed Conaghan defeated Rob Destasio, and freshman Ed Hayford knocked down sophomore Ed Gavagan on the game's first punch and continued to do so throughout.

In the 151 pound class, freshman Mike Higgins defeated Mike Colan, a sophomore, and won on a split decision over student Mike Gavagan on the game's first punch and continued to do so throughout.
