Congress approves anti-recession bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress broke and fled yesterday as senators and House Republican leaders briefly considered bills that would add up to $4.6 billion to the $4.6 billion already included in the original House bill, much of the funds would go to areas represented by men whose unemployment rates are among the highest in the nation.

As of midnight, the measure, for technical reasons, had yet to be actually delivered to Reagan. But the administration, meanwhile told states whose unemployment ac-counts have not yet reached the $2 billion mark that they can release operating funds immediately.

"I think this is the best compromise we could achieve in terms of funding the areas of most need," said Rep. Lawrence Coughlin, R-Ill.

Added Rep. Silvio Conte, R-Mass., "this is the biggest victory we have today."

Some members feared that under the original House bill $35 million in funds would go to areas represented by women, and others believed the changes, which still will be the case for three transportation projects and building of housing on military bases.

Overall, the measure will provide about $2.55 billion in food and shelter for victims of the longest recession since World War II, as well as several hundred million dollars more for social programs.

The bill also provides $1 billion in Community Development Block Grants to local governments, of which $375 million may pay for public service employment. Two billion dollars in municipal aid will go directly to areas where the crisis has hit the hardest.

According to the last report of the House, Congresswoman Betty Eckel, R-Pa., "this is the worst recession in the nation's history."

"Recently, the actual and prospective budget deficit figures have become so large that many in the public press speak of an endless recession," said Charles A. Bowsher, comptroller general of the United States.

"Public concern is now so high that last week six former cabinet members formed a bipartisan coalition to draw the President's attention to the fiscal crisis."

A coalition document, defining the crisis and its implications, drew the support of influential members of commerce, finance, law, and education, including Notre Dame plant, a cluster of toxic waste dump cleanup programs, an economic recovery, he claimed.

Reduced growth emphasized

Reducing the growth of defense, social and entitlement spending, and rebuilding the revenue base of the federal budget would alleviate the current fiscal situation, which is burdened by an expected deficit of $200 billion for this fiscal year, according to Charles A. Bowsher, comptroller general of the United States and head of the General Accounting Office.

Over spring break

By LIZ MILLER

Doors are locked around Lewis Hall these days as a result of a series of robberies that occurred over Spring Break, in which approximately $2000 worth of goods were stolen from four hall rooms.

Items reported stolen include a stereo, two cassette tape players, a typewriter, two clocks, a watch, jewelry, a case of beer and $55 worth of food, said Notre Dame security guard Ann Schelling.

Mona Baker, Lewis Hall floor editor, reported from break last Saturday night and discovered that her key ring had been stolen. The key ring was later returned, but the master key had been removed.

The thefts came to Baker's attention early Sunday morning when they were reported by returning resi-dents. Security was immediately notified, and the number of guards assigned to Lewis was doubled.

The security department has several good leads in the case, Schelling said. Terry, however, noted that "we don't have a terribly good description of the suspect yet."

One Lewis resident who stayed here over break had a key in her lock last one night but has apparently thwarted the efforts of the potential burglar.

Other than the Lewis burglaries, the break was "relatively quiet" security-wise, Terry said.

Saint Mary's will sponsor a "Spring Day on Campus" April 10, for high school juniors from the states of Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, and Ohio. Conducted by the Admissions Office, the event will provide an opportunity for juniors interested in attending college to meet professors, administrators, and current students. Those attending also will have a chance to interact with other high school students who share an interest in the College. The day's calendar includes an academic open house, a discussion of admission, career and financial aid information, athletic exhibitions; a student government presentation; student-guided campus tours, and a lunch. — The Observer

Saint Mary's Hall Officers Election held yesterday resulted in a runoff for president and vice president of McCandless Hall. Kathleen Slota of Cincinnati, Ohio, and Daniela Earty and Karen Nicholas in Monday's runoff elections. Both tickets gained more than 50 percent of the vote, the third ticket of Sheila Whalen and Paula Ballantine. Rebecca Kerger and Anne Sargent were elected officers of LeMans Hall over Lauren Baumann and Anne Gal- legly. The Graduate School of Business is host ing its second invitational MBA case competition starting Sunday. Master of Business Administration student teams, representing Ohio State, Pennsylvania State, and Miami University, will compete against Notre Dame. The Graduate School of Business will present the competition. The first competition was held in 1974, and both business and academia. The competition starts Sunday evening at the Center for Continuing Education and continues through Tuesday. Presentations will be made at 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. Tuesday. This year's event is funded in part by a grant from the Johnson and Johnson Family of Companies, headquartered in New Brunswick, New Jersey. "We at Johnson and Johnson are very pleased to help fund an event which we feel is a valuable academic experience," said Michael Longia, director of corporate relations. "In addition to providing the opportunity to participate in a quality competition between some of the finest business schools in the country, the MBA degree places emphasis on the foundation, organization, operation, and control of a business enterprise with special attention to the manager's responsibility for diagnosing problems and making the right decisions. We believe that the College of Business Administration, through "this competition provides a fitting capstone to the MBA experience and we're happy to have the opportunity to both host and compete in this worthwhile, extracurricular activity." — The Observer

On his way to work, a Catholic police officer noticed a crowd gathering at a man standing on the twelfth floor ledge of a Bellaire office building. Hoping to save the beleaguered man, the officer yelled, "For the love of your wife, don't jump!" "I'm not married," came the reply. Unwilling to give up, the policeman cried, "For the love of your mother, don't jump!" "My mother's dead," was the answer. In desperation, the policeman called out, "For the love of Jesus, Blessed Virgin, don't jump!" "Who?" "Jump, you bloody Protestant!" In the sadness we know as Northern Ireland, such humor translates into the horror of day-to-day existence among the land mines and barbed wire of fear and hatred. Britain's first colony remains its greatest moral failure, as 1.5 million men and women share the burdens of a 25 percent unemployed population. But the despair of a Catholic population (which numbers over $50,000) crosses the Atlantic as the space-rage of some 500 hoodlums trained as guerrillas of the Provisional Irish Republican Army. These "freedom fighters" have lost the support of their citizenry, among other political and social atrocities; a student government presentation; student-guided campus tours, and a lunch. — The Observer

Polio Belton and Belton believe, however, that the demonstration would not have continued if the Pope had spoken more convincingly to the people. Pelton said, "The Pope and the masses were on two different wavelengths.

The Sandinistas showed an unjustifiable lack of respect toward the Pope, said Belton, "It doesn't matter if they like the Pope," said Belton, "but he is the Pope and therefore commands respect." John Paul should not be blamed for his aversion to the Marxist Sandinista movement, Pelton believes. "The Pope comes from Poland and has suffered under Marxism. He rejects the oppression he has suffered," said Pelton. "If you and I would have been brought up in Poland, we would act the same way.

The visit also caused political repercussions in the 31 states. "His presence and words there (Central America) strengthened the position of both North American and Central American bishops who favor a non-military solution to the Central American crisis," said Pelton. "This position conflicts directly with the United States' military policy toward Central America, however, and therefore increases the tension between the position of the bishops and the federal government," he said.

The Pope does not view the problem in Central America as an anti-West conflict, as Reagan in prose to do. Pelton explained. On several occasions the Pontiff spoke directly against US and Soviet intervention in Central America. American Catholics agree with the Pope on this issue, said Pelton. "Most U.S. citizens are not in accord with the federal government's military actions in Central America." Conflict also erupted when the Pope met one of the priests who refused to resign his political position at Papal Request. The Pope believes that priests should not be involved in partisan politics. Pelton agrees with the Pope on this account also. "These priests are not exercising publicly their ministry," he said. "Evidently, taking a political position is not the best use for a priest's training. They shouldn't be using the pulpit for a soapbox."

Pelton believes that priests cannot and should not participate in public discourse. "We're all political," he said. "Priests have rights as citizens, including the Bill of Rights. The church should not be used for partisan purposes, however."

The Pope's visit to Central America was still very favorably in fluential, Pelton believes. "The Pope is more influential in Central America than in the United States, because more people are Roman Catholic."

Two-year debate

Congress approves Social Security bill

WASHINGTON (AP) - House and Senate negotiators agreed last night to raise the normal retirement age to 67 in the next century as part of the sweeping 1985 budget package for Social Security.

The agreement heralded the last major obstacle to final passage of the Social Security bill after two years of debate, study, and compromise.

Rep. Robert Rostenkowski, D-Ill., announced after six hours of private talks, "Agreement has been reached in all areas."

The Senate members of the conference committee agreed to drop their plan to raise the retirement age to 66 by the year 2005 and cut future pensions by 5.5 percent at that point.

The compromise would affect everyone born in 1938 or later. The retirement age would hit 66 in the year 2009 for those born in 1943. There would be no change for almost a decade, but then the age would start rising again to 67 in 2027.

A pension would still be available at age 62. But at a bigger penalty than now, the discount from full benefits would rise to 20 percent.

Earlier, the Senate of the conference committee, anxious to leave town for the 10-day Easter recess, was holding off from prompting the House to go into overtime. The bill would have been a Federal workers into the Social Security system starting in January.

Sorin Hall rector resigns

By SUSAN OHARA

Staff Reporter

Fr. David Porterfield, C.S.C., has resigned as the rector of Sorin Hall because he feels he been "overextended" by working two full jobs.

In addition to his position as rector of Sorin Hall, Porterfield is a prominent figure on the admissions board. As a member of the admissions board, much of his time is spent recruiting prospective students, and serving as Chairman for the Human Relations Committee for the Indiana Association of College Admissions Counselors.

Because Porterfield is not always accessible to his students, he feels he is not completely fulfilling his job as a rector, and consequently has decided to devote more attention to his position on the admissions board.

Fr. Edward Malloy, C.S.C., and Fr. John Fitzgerald, C.S.C., both assistant rectors for Sorin Hall, will continue as assistant rectors until the end of the academic year. The candidates interviewed for the position of rector, but no names have been released.

Fr. Porterfield is a 1965 Notre Dame graduate who spent four decades following his graduation years in Illinois and Ohio. He returned to Notre Dame in 1975, and spent three years studying in the Master's Dimension Program preparing for the priesthood. In 1976 he was the first lay person to be appointed as a rector. Shortly thereafter, he was ordained, and in 1979 obtained his current position on the admissions board.

In the past, Porterfield has become increasingly involved on the admissions board, which is in close proximity with the Counselors' Association, which is instrumental in increasing the number of minority students in the colleges nationwide.

Porterfield has also been invited to chair a panel at the NACAC (National Association of College Admissions Counselors) convention in attempts to become more involved in the counselors' association, but is quick to note that his years as rector of Sorin Hall have been "fulfilling, exciting and rewarding."

Pope sparks conflict in Nicaragua

By CATHY PAX

Staff Reporter

Although the Pope embarked on his recent Central American trip to promote peace and to address the needs of the people, his presence has sparked conflict in Nicaragua and indirectly heightened tensions in El Salvador.

Robert Pelton, C.S.C., Director of the Notre Dame Institute for Clergy Education and an authority on the church in Central America, is uncertain about the Pope's decision to travel to Nicaragua during such volatile times. "Nicaragua is not completely fulfilled his job as a mediator," he said.

Pelton agreed with Roy Larson, religion editor of the Chicago Sun-Times, about the cause of the Nicaraguan conflict with the Pope. Larson attended a controversial Mass in Managua which was interrupted by a chanting crowd.

Larson wrote that the crowd was manipulated and the rebel demonstration had been planned by political leaders. Pelton agrees that "the rebels were obviously taking advantage of the TV coverage."

Both Pelton and Larson believe, however, that the demonstration would not have continued if the Pope had spoken more convincingly to the people. Pelton said, "The Pope and the masses were on two different wavelengths.

The Sandinistas showed an unjustifiable lack of respect toward the Pope, said Belton, "It doesn't matter if they like the Pope," said Belton, "but he is the Pope and therefore commands respect." The House passes the bailout plan 282-148 on March 9. The Senate approved its version late Wednesday after a day and a half of debate in which it adopted nearly 50 amendments. The two houses did not differ on the basic principle of the plan, slightly higher payroll taxes in 1984 and 1989-89, making more affluent retirees pay income tax on half their benefits and indexing this July's cost of living increase in January.

Although a majority of the 15 Senate committees members also endorsed raising the retirement age to 66 then indexing it to longevity, that was not part of the plan. Reagan and O'Neill subscription to.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency, accused for years of inflating its annual auto mileage ratings, may pare the numbers back by as much as 25 percent to better reflect what motorists can expect in day-to-day driving.

Agency officials said yesterday they hope to issue in the next several weeks proposed methods to reduce the figures. While the final method has not been picked, one staff recommendation would simply slash the numbers from the laboratory tests by a fixed percentage.

For the city mileage figure, the cut might be 5 percent or 10 percent, but for the highway mileage figure, the drop could be between 20 and 25 percent according to Charles Gray, director of EPA's auto testing center in Ann Arbor, Mich.

The mileage figures are one of the government's key references, fantastic prominently in the multifaceted dollar ad campaign Detroit provides to lure customers into showrooms.

But they have also been attacked as being totally unrealistic. A House Government Operations Committee report in 1980 said the gap between the figures and actual mileage was as high as 30 percent.

EPA has urged motorists to use the rankings only to compare one model against another, not as a prediction of their own mileage.

But government surveys show consumers are ignoring this advice. Gray said the government will propose changing the numbers. He said the current practice would cause a fixed percentage cut for all the figures, but he said the simplest and worst approach would not involve complicated attempts to change the current test procedures to better reflect road conditions. The EPA test requires each car to be run on a laboratory treadmill to come up with mileage and exhaust output.

Critics have attacked this approach and said they would take into account weather conditions which lower mileage. But EPA defends the method because it is the only way to make sure that each manufacturer's car is rated on the same standard.

EPA's revised figures range from extremely low to high, including emissions from microwaves and other electromagnetic radiation, even as scientists are finding more apparent links with leukemia and birth defects.

At the same time, the administration has eliminated funding for a scientific advisory group that over the past decade has reviewed U.S. government research on such "non-ionizing" radiation.

The House Science and Technology subcommittee on natural resources, agriculture research and environment will conduct hearings next month on the issue, said Anthony S. Clark, a technical consultant to the subcommittee.

"Not much is really known about how this type of radiation affects human behavior or the human immune system," which helps protect the body against disease, Clark said in an interview.

Electromagnetic radiation is around everyone every day. It ranges from extremely low-frequency fields found near high-voltage power lines to the very high frequencies used for television, microwave cooking and satellite communications.

Studies published in recent months have cited higher rates of leukemia among workers regularly exposed to intensive electrical and magnetic fields including power lines, communications towers, electronic technicians and power generation operators in this country and in Britain.

Also, a forthcoming study from Sweden reported that children whose fathers work in high-voltage substations for a quarter century have a higher rate of congenital birth defects.

Clark said the House panel has asked EPA officials for a status report on the agency's fiscal 1984 budget request on this and other radiation research. The panel is questioning why the EPA health effects research budget for 1984 has been cut $3.9 million from its fiscal 1983 level.

Agency's assistant administrator, Richard Tell of the agency's Office of Radiation Programs, said the move was "extremely unfortunate because we would not have the right people proceeding forward with our development of federal guidance in this area."

The EPA component that handles radiation exposure is the Office of Radiation Protection, whose budget has been pared 25 percent to about $15.6 million a year — has received "overwhelming" criticism from career EPA officials.

Richard Tell of the agency's Office of Radiation Programs said the move was "extremely unfortunate because we would not have the right people proceeding forward with our development of federal guidance in this area."

The EPA's "proposed guidance," to be published this fall, will be subject to a new federal safety standard for exposure to microwaves, radio waves and other forms of non-ionizing radiation.

"Of particular concern is radiation associated with high-voltage transmission lines," Clark said, adding that in some laboratory experiments, "exposure to frequencies associated with high-voltage transmission lines have shown adverse effects."

"The concern is whether it will have any effect on the public," the agency's radiation office (EPA) doesn't even come to addressing that particular concern," he said.

High technology defense idea 'a genuine priority'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senior administration officials acknowledged yesterday that President Reagan's vision of a high technology defense against missile attack is an idea that goes back 10 to 20 years, but they contended he has made it a genuine priority.

After a speech announcing the initiative and a series of follow-up briefings, there was still no indication from the administration on the ultimate cost of the project or the direction it might go.

Meanwhile, there were conflicting versions as to who first suggested pushing the defensive shield concept to the forefront as a way of swinging long-range security policy away from reliance on massive, retaliatory forces of nuclear weapons.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes told reporters yesterday that "largely it was (Reagan's) idea" growing out of a meeting with the Joint Chiefs of Staff weeks ago. But senior administration officials, briefing military writers in a separate room, credited the "community of chairs" as originating the idea.

One senior official said it was "absolutely impossible" to estimate the cost, at least until after administration officials had defined the most promising research approaches, priorities and strategies to produce an "impersonal anti-missile defense by the end of the century."

According to the officials, Reagan probably would sign a directive tomorrow setting that process in motion.

Scientists in and out of government will be brought into the deliberative process, which will be under the direction of the Defense Department, officials said.

Administration scientific officials indicated the focus of studies will be such technologies as high-energy lasers, charged particle beams, microwave devices and what was termed "proactive technology," meaning the shooting of objects to intercept enemy missiles headed for the United States.

"This is not a new idea, it is not a totally new concept, it goes back 10 to 20 years," said one official. He conceded there has been "no specific breakthrough" in such long-standing research, but said there had been "some remarkable advances" in anti-ballistic missile defense, and "devastating" advances in tracking technologies important to concentrating high-intensity light beams or streams of electrons and other particles against targets such as incoming warheads.

"We have not had a clearly stated goal until the president spoke last night," the official said.

As for the financing of the project, officials said the Pentagon will have to ask Congress for supplemental funds in this fiscal year. It is uncertain whether such an add-on in budget requests for fiscal 1984 will be necessary, the official said.

The government now spends about $1 billion a year on ballistic missile defense research, officials said, about 75 percent of it on the more traditional approaches such as interception by ground-launched anti-missile missiles.

When asked whether the president's plans could result in conflict with the 1972 treaty strictly curbing ballistic missile defenses, officials said the treaty probably would not apply for another five to 10 years as research progresses and that there will be "ample time to discuss this with the Soviets."

The official Soviet news agency Tass said deployment of the anti-missile system would violate the treaty. And in a separate reaction, Radio Moscow termed Reagan's speech "belliqueux" and accused him of using "new CIA-fabricated figures about the Soviet military potential... to try to justify the unprecedented military spending of the United States."

Asked about the Soviet response, Reagan replied, "I didn't expect them to cheer."

The Soviets are spending more than the United States on both ballistic missile defense and beam technology, officials said, but they expressed doubts that the Soviets still would achieve operational hardware anytime soon.

Both the United States and the Soviet Union have major research programs in these areas. The Soviet high-energy laser program alone is estimated by the Pentagon at three to five times the U.S. effort.

The Defense Department's recent report on Soviet military power suggested that a space-based, Soviet anti-missile system using high-energy lasers could be tested in the 1990s but "probably would not be operational until the turn of the century."

"The president is turning emphasis from offense to defense," one official said.

... Bowsher

Recalling the Vietnam conflict, Bowsher said that the government attempted to fund the war and maintain social programs while sustaining the standard of living. Consequently, the "effort at war and social justice was financed in ways which set in motion the Great American Inflation — an inflation which, fueled by the oil crises of 1974 and 1978, has bedeviled our economy for a decade and a half." Furthermore, social insurance and entitlement programs have grown. In 1982, over 50 percent of the budget was funneled toward income security, social services, retirement benefits, and the like. In comparison, only 26 percent of the budget was allocated for these programs in 1960, increasing to 45 percent in 1972.

In addition, interest costs on the national debt consumed 11 percent of the budget, and expenditures for reverse sharing programs for states and localities reached 15 percent.

According to Bowsher, the "overall result of these changes has been enormous growth in federal outlays due largely to the increasing role the budget has come to play in redistributing income among the population."

Lastly, Bowsher claimed that "major changes in sources of federal revenue and in the stability of total revenues to rise as a proportion of GNP due to tax rate cuts and erosion of the tax base" have contributed to the deficits. Nearly half of the federal revenues are derived from personal income tax, one-third from social insurance taxes, and 12 percent from corporate profit taxes, he said.

The relative importance of social insurance taxes is due to the fact that Social Security, the largest of the programs, is self-financing. Social Security revenues have increased by the same amount as its expenditures have grown, Bowsher says; however, that, "because tax revenues have not kept pace with the growth of federal outlays, we have had a long string of deficits."

Bowsher outlined a three-fold solution to the fiscal crisis. Concerning the social and entitlement programs, he said, "Our current economic circumstances, unforeseen by Congress when it indexed these programs, warrant some modification in the indexing formulas, a more systematic review of eligibility criteria, and more stringent means of testing to modify participation by certain program beneficiaries whose own source income levels are sufficient to maintain a decent living standard."

With defense expenditures, a realistic and stable acquisition program over a period of years will alleviate the budget problem while yielding benefits to the defense position, Bowsher observed. "Federal officials must carefully consider current and future industrial capacity with an eye toward saving taxpayer dollars when planning buys and setting procurement quantities and schedules."

Bowsher said that a broad concept of financial management in the government, one that "encompasses the processes and functions associated with acquiring, managing, deploying, and accounting for financial resources", is needed.

There is a great deal of charitable and altruistic activity going on within the Notre Dame community. It seems to be part of the natural fabric of the place. People here show great concern for their fellow human beings. Hardly a day goes by when some worthy cause is not bandied about by worthy cases and organizations which ask for your help in easing the symptoms of our society’s problems.

Randy Fahs
Friday Analysis

These concerned groups are staffed with people who genuinely wish to better the lot of others. The whole community service and charity is vast. This is very strong and very good, working out solutions at the grass roots level. This is admirable, but unfortunately its scope of activities is limited. We must be able to cure the ills of society by merely reacting to their manifested symptoms. To truly solve the problems, one is forced to change the environment and the social system which causes them.

The situation of these altruistic students becomes complicated when one realizes that as Notre Dame graduates and potential leaders of society, we are the ones who will receive the stature profit from and most vigorously fight to hold onto the system which perpetuates these. It is indeed the same people who intensely believe in helping the poor and deprived are those who control the economic and social destiny through their elitist attitudes and comportment.

It is one thing to do volunteer work in the most blighted area of the inner-city, but it is quite another to aid these disadvantaged people by moving them into nicer neighborhoods, with better schools, and greater chances for advancement. The suburban neighborhoods that most of us will seek out to live in are highly insulated and segregated. In essence, we are bound by our duty to help the poor, but our attitudes also cause us to keep our distance from them.

For most people, there is no connection at all to make life more difficult for people with a low socio-economic status. Yet, for those in worthy causes and organizations who have consistently and periodically surfaces in the press: on the one hand, the Salvadorean people are being deprived of this. This culminated in a sudden decision to change the locks of the administration of the International Student Union.

Dear Editor:

3rd, we are not affiliated with the Global Peace organization but selling to groups of many groups did for the Michigan game last September. We plan to donate part of the proceeds to the American Red Cross and to use that by raising a large amount, our donation will be substantial.

We hope the Notre Dame community will support us in our venture and especially in our goal of at least a $4000 donation for Special Olympics. Thank you.

Halt U.S. aid: To anyone who reads the printed word — be it the Observer or any New York Times — there are two sides to any conflict.

Second, we received approval, as outlined in the La, to sell these shirts. Besides obtaining the okay of the Student Union and Student Senate (Leahy, Pell, Studds), Congress had been using the International Student Union to block our efforts. This culminated in a sudden decision to change the locks of the administration of the International Student Union.

I am probably the only priest in the world who examines his conscience on the pages of a newspaper. Evil often disguises itself not on the pages of a newspaper but in the daily way of life. The sins have been daunting, but I have a pretty good idea of my own shortcomings. Maybe we're pretty identical in the mistakes we make. Maybe the pew where I work is the image of the Church today.

I'm a stubborn man. I'll be the first to confess. I'm unusual in that I have the courage you need to unburden your soul in the privacy of prayer. Thomas Merton, I have not been dumb, but I have a pretty good idea of my own stupidities. I need for a religion that deals with the effects of sin. Yet, I keep reminding myself that as a human being I have been dumb, but I have a pretty good idea of my own stupidities. I need for a religion that deals with the effects of sin. Yet,

A apparently Wednesday provided a good opportunity to catch the heavy metal band led by original members of Iron maiden. Jason Derek's voice was clear and powerful, and the band's performance was electrifying. Their last song, "The Last Goodbye," was a fitting tribute to the fans who came to witness their final performance. The band's final note left many tears in the eyes of their devoted fans. Their music will live on, and they will always be remembered as one of the greatest bands of all time.

Going to confession is hard. The beauty comes at the end, when you feel that you have been forgiven. This is the ultimate act of faith, the confession of your sins to the priest, who absolves you of your guilt and grants you grace. It is a act of humility, acknowledging that you are a sinner, and seeking forgiveness for your sins.

I know me to my sins, and He will hear and forgive me. I don't need to invite a priest to look at my conscience.

I don't need to invite a priest to look at my conscience. I know me to my sins, and He will hear and forgive me. I don't need to invite a priest to look at my conscience.

THEATER

Feaster to celebrate the new spring season, or to shake the winter blues, this weekend could be just the time to try a trip to Elkhart. Friday, Saturday, Sunday, and Sunday are your last chances to view the Elkhart Civic Theater's presentation of the Cole Porter musical, "Anything Goes." This stage version of the story, "You're the Top," "Friendship," and of the show's title tune, "Tell the Captain" run at 8 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, at 7:30 p.m. on Saturday. The Buffalo, Opencity, from Elkhart Resorts, may be made by calling 484-4116 between 3 and 8 p.m.

This is definitely the weekend for the spectator for as many concerts, recitals and performances do the name: Among these is the Abington Dance Collectives spring concert, "Moves." The performance will include a variety of dance styles and choreographers.

Premiering in the show's company this Saturday is 14-year-old Matthew Wern's MTV inspired "Zoot Barn" set to the music of Gary Numan. Audiences can now experience this dance event at Washington Hall Sunday at 2:30 p.m. A $1 donation will be requested at the door.

An encore to Wednesday night's performance by the Darpana Dancers of India, the India Association of Notre Dame presents for the first time in northern Indiana, "Ranjana," a Bharata Natyam.

MUSIC

Perhaps to flawed their fans (they recently returned from a concert in the House of Holland) or more likely to share their euphonious voices with the community, the Glee Club has scheduled its spring concert for tonight at 8:15 p.m. in Washington Hall. A packed house is expected on arriving early.

Sunday is a big day for classical music lovers. At 4 p.m. the University of Notre Dame Music is sponsoring a faculty chamber ensemble recital in the Annenberg Auditorium. That evening at 8:15 p.m. the department of popular music presents a variety of dance styles and choreographers.

Movies

And even if some of these new and culture filled activities enliven you, there is always the old standby — the Friday Night Film Series. Tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the Annenberg Auditorium the Notre Dame Saint Mary's Communications Department presents the eighth film in its series, "Frailty of a Ridiculous Man." A Brazilian (Bertolucci) production, this Italian flick is accompanied by English subtitles. The plot concerns her who is captured against his will and sent to the Fascist Church of South Bend are $2 each and can be purchased through USL, at the church or on Sunday at the box office.

The ND women's basketball team raised verbal commitments from two high school seniors, both forward-center. Mickey Skeeters, 6-0, from Westfield, Calif., with an inside strength to the Irish lineup. Skeeters averaged 17 points and 10 rebounds her senior year while earning MVP honors in her Southern California league. Greene was the key to the running game. The 5-11 Lavetta Willis of Wayne, Mich. Willis was all-leaguer, all- state, and all-metro honors while averaging 18 points and 10 boards at Ladywood High School. Willis was also accorded first-team all-state honors. Irish coach Mary D'Alton is still hoping to gain at least one more commitment - preferably a center - before the April 13 deadline for recruiting.

Best of luck to the Notre Dame Invitational track meet tomorrow at 12:30 on Carrier Field. Several teams from the Midwest will compete in the outdoor track meet which opens the outdoor home schedule for the Irish.

The ND women's basketball team raised verbal commitments from two high school seniors, both forward-center. Mickey Skeeters, 6-0, from Westfield, Calif., with an inside strength to the Irish lineup. Skeeters averaged 17 points and 10 rebounds her senior year while earning MVP honors in her Southern California league. Greene was the key to the running game. The 5-11 Lavetta Willis of Wayne, Mich. Willis was all-leaguer, all- state, and all-metro honors while averaging 18 points and 10 boards at Ladywood High School. Willis was also accorded first-team all-state honors. Irish coach Mary D'Alton is still hoping to gain at least one more commitment - preferably a center - before the April 13 deadline for recruiting.

The NCAA Midwest Regional action was in Ogden, Utah last night. Senior guard Derek Watschig topped all scorers with 27 points as North Carolina State routed Utah 75-56. Despite having an offensive fire for most of the game, Utah was able to beat Boston College 95-92. Sampson had 19 points and 11 rebounds in only 20 minutes of playing time.

In NIT quarterly action, Wake Forest easily defeated Florida State 76-67 behind a 27 point performance from Danny McNichol. Young in Greensboro, N.C. forward Bernard Thompson scored 26 points leading Fresno State as a 76-67 win over Tennessee State. 11th, N.C., Texas Christian University fell to Nevada 67-57.
The one thing certain in Smith's mind is that he does not really want to leave the sport or the people involved in it.

"The only reason I'm coaching is because I love hockey and I like kids," he says. "I get a great deal of satisfaction from a kid coming in here and saying, 'I've got a problem. Can you help?' I get a kick out of being able to help them."

The input from the team members is important to Smith. He has been attempting to pick up clues from the team as to their feelings. Otherwise, Smith's input will come from what Corrigan has to say.

If Corrigan indicates that the team will remain at a non-varsity level for several years, it will be a negative divisor.

The other hand, if Corrigan can tell Smith that the team will return to varsity status — no matter what divisional level — in the near future, Smith would be more positive about staying at Notre Dame.

"Unfortunately, no one knows what is going to happen after next season," during his January press conference, Corrigan could not guarantee that the team would only be a club for one season. He would not put a definite time period on the club status.

"Notre Dame will not be a club sport forever," Corrigan said. "We had to do this now for those players who want to transfer."

One very sensitive team to set a date was made over the last weekend of the regular season. Irish captain Terry John Blab, along with some former captains and the track squad, Fairholm, met with Fr. Edmund P. Joyce, Executive Vice-President of the University.

"The decision was made relatively quickly," Domman said. "We propone to seek a solution — to find some alternatives to non-varsity hockey."

"We have a very positive meeting with Corrigan on Sunday," Fairholm said. "We talked about providing guidelines for raising the money needed for the program. Division I hockey will be back at Notre Dame, not next year, but possibly after that."

That is where the hockey situation stands right now. For the 1983-84 season, Notre Dame will be club team. Who will coach the team, and whether Smith will stay at Notre Dame at all, remains a mystery, one that only Smith can solve.

As for anything past next year, there are no definite plans. Accord- ing to the talk, Fairholm released a statement on the possibility of raising the money needed for the program. Division I hockey will be back at Notre Dame, but that is up to Smith."

The contain tackle position that was left vacated by Clasby has been filled with the track squad. Milt Jackson.

What can you expect from a team that plays a sport that is virtually unknown in the Midwest? "Well, people do give scholarships, and, on top of that, losses in its top two record-breaking seniors tend to improve," says Coach Rich O'Leary, "because we have a marked improvement in skill. Unless something goes wrong, we'll be just fine this season."

O'Leary has good reason to be optimistic about his team's chances as he leads into its Midwest Lacrosse Association schedule starting tomorrow. Junior Bill Bonde, who visited Carville Field at Wesleyan University where he took over the lacrosse program 13 years ago when there was no varsity team. His three assistants have good reason to be optimistic about his team's chances as they have gone from being club to varsity. Bonde says Coach Rich O'Leary's lacrosse playing experience than the rest of the young team to recover from the loss of Linehan, the team's leading scorer last year with 42 goals and 22 assists.

In order to do this, however, the Irish are going to have to beat the best teams in the Midwest. This season, MLA rivals Denison and Ohio Wesleyan. "We're playing some of the best that we've seen," says Coach Rich O'Leary, "but Wesleyan and Denison will be tough, and we'll be fighting it out for the duty this year, will add a lot of new people," admits O'Leary, "and there are a number of changes, so everybody is going to have to make some adjustments."

There will not have to be as many adjustments among the midfielders as there are many middles returning from last year. There is the task of filling in for the loss of Bonde, who was second on the team in scoring with 40 goals and 44 assists. In order to replace Bonde's offensive power, O'Leary switched Steve Pearneal from attack to midfield. The 6-1 junior from Greens- lawn, N.Y., was third on the team in scoring last year with 25 goals and a team-high 29 assists. Pearneal will be joined by returning starters Dan Pace and Kevin Smith. Pace, a 5-10 senior who will also be one of the co-captains, scored 15 goals and passed off for 18 more last year, while Smith, a 5-9 junior, contributed four goals and three assists last year while missing a lot of the season with an injury. Another co-captain, senior Tracy Troc, will be spending time on the second and third lines. Last year, the Bearborn, Mich. native handled the faceoff chores occasionally. He will be playing outside of the crease. Senior Steve Walsh does a major job of filling in for the loss of Bonde, who was second on the team in scoring with 25 goals and a team-high 29 assists.

O'Leary has already had the opportunity to get a glimpse of what to expect from his team as it began its season over break. Although a drop in numbers was a bit of a lesser op­ ponent, he is still confident that things will improve against the teams that count - the MLA op­ ponents.

Depth, a luxury that O'Leary has not enjoyed since he took over the lacrosse program 15 years ago when it was still a club sport, is going to play a major role in the team's success this year. While there are just as many players in the different positions, this year, players, from the starters to the subs, have more lacrosse playing experience than their predecessors.

It is this experience that will allow the young team to recover from the loss of the two players that broke all the Notre Dame scoring records - attackman Steve Linehan and mid­ fielder Bill Bonde.

It will be freshmen and sopho­ mores who will make up the loss of Linehan, the team's leading scorer last year with 42 goals and 22 assists.

Joe Franklin, a 5-9 freshman from Lindenhurst, N.Y., should be one of the three starting attackmen for the MLA opener. He is currently the leading scorer (two goals, one as­ sist) for the squad after its games against Yale and Duke over the break.

He will be joined by sophomores Bob Trocchi and Kevin Romney to form a young starting attack. Troc­ chi, a 6-4 transfer student from Sud­ bury, Mass., arrives from the University of Rhode Island where there was no varsity team. His three assists over break was a team high. Romney is another newcomer from last year among the trio. A 6-6 native of Croton, N.Y., Romney scored five goals while seeing limited action.

O'Leary's optimism for the season is largely due to the support of the squad after spending time on the football team as a walk on. Brian McKeon, a 5-9 sophomore from Auburn, N.Y., who played sparingly...
Miami, Dayton scheduled

By NEAL SMITH

Who will be the Notre Dame baseball team play this weekend? Miami or Dayton? Ball State? Indiana? As of last night, nobody knew.

The Irish were originally scheduled to play at Miami University in Oxford, Ohio Saturday and Dayton University on Sunday afternoon, both in doubleheaders. But due to the weather, Dayton's diamond is unplayable. Irish coach Larry Gallo has been trying to arrange the Dayton games to be played on the Miami Redskins' field. However, a rule at Miami does not allow the Redskins to play on their diamond on Sundays. It will not be known until today if the university would allow Notre Dame and Dayton to play on the field.

Meanwhile, Gallo has been trying to arrange the Dayton games to be played on the fields of Wright State or Cincinnati University. If these plans fall through, Gallo has also tried to set up a doubleheader with Ball State University or Indiana University at their respective campuses.

If Notre Dame does play Miami, the Redskins will be a different team than expected. After a 1-25 record last year, the Redskins are now sporting a 9.0 record. They are scheduled to play Dayton in a doubleheader today.

Last week Miami travelled to Florida and won the standard Memorial Tournament. First year coach John Pavliko, previously an assistant coach at Central Michigan for 12 years, said that he did not anticipate an undaunted record going to now, but he did go to Florida expecting good things.

"From what their (the Redskins') coach told me, they didn't really play top Division I competition," said Gallo. The Redskins played Millikin, Beloit, Anderson, Delaware Valley, Indiana Pennsylvania, DePauw, and Norwich. In the same weekend, Miami averaged a four run victory margin and "7-4 runs a game compared to the Irish's 5.0 runs a game."

Dayton, coached by Tony Caruso, is 1-7. After the games against Miami today, Dayton will go on to play Kent State in two games on Saturday before the scheduled games with the Irish on Sunday. Gallo stated, "Dayton faced Dayton, the Irish came away with easy 1-1 and 7-5 victories."

"It's just the psychological aspect now. We need to play now. That's all there is to it."

Ball State is 2-7 after a spring trip to Georgia while Indiana is reported at 5-7. Whoever the Irish play tomorrow, senior pitchers Bill Marie and Steve Whitemyer will be the star pitchers. Marie is 1-1 on the young season with a .477 earned run average (E.R.A.) in 33 innings. Whitemyer is 0-2 with 13 strikeouts in 12 innings.

On Saturday, Mark Clements will take the mound in one of the games. Clements is 2-0 on the season (84 innings) with a .31 ERA in 16 innings of work. The fourth starter of the week will be one of three possible players — Buster Lopes (0-5, 5.68 E.R.A.), Bill Stonikas (0-1, 6.35 E.R.A.) or freshman Brad Cross (0-1, 2.67 E.R.A.).

If Notre Dame only plays two games this weekend, Gallo will use relievers. "I may try to throw in some guys just to get some work," Gallo said. "We haven't played in a week."

Whenever the Irish do play, a new face may be seen at shortstop. Rick Chesty and Jason Schomer have both been playing there. But both have committed three errors at the position. Freshman Tom Shields is expected to see some action.

Chesty, the captain of the team, has also played all three outfield positions this season. He leads the team in hitting (.315 batting average), runs batted in and doubles. Chesty also has a triple and home run in the young season.

IRISH ITEMS — The Irish had a doubleheader scheduled at St. Joseph's Wednesday cancelled due to the weather. Commenting on the week, Larry Gallo said, "It's not going to hurt us. I've lost the psychological aspect now. We need to play now. That's all there is to it." As a team Notre Dame is batting .187 and pitching with a .503 E.R.A. compared to their opponents' 2.5 E.R.A. Chesty's .315 and Henry Lange's .315 are the only batting averages over .175. Greg Hudas, John Murphy and pitcher Tom Conlin will not make the trip due to injuries. The Irish have committed 21 errors in 11 games. "It wasn't as bad as the statistics showed. What our statistics showed, we shouldn't have won a game. (However) we should've won six games," remarked Gallo on the 11 game road trip in the South last week. "I don't think too many people in this area, not even Michi­gan, went south and played the type of teams we played."

Will the third time be the charm? That is the question many Notre Dame football coaches, Knute Rockne was 9-0 in his third year in 1920, and his team was declared "Western Champions." In 1956, the Los Angeles Times third-year college Coach of the Year was John Baron, who coached the University of Southern California Trojans. Today, that coach is Knute Rockne's grandson, Terry Brennan, who is in his third year at Notre Dame. The Irish have struggled the first year, then improved the second year. Brennan is striving for the third year.

"The key word is 'growth'," Brennan said. "We have a position to fill we can't fill with anyone with some experience." The Irish have a "phantom line" at quarterback, where sophomore Kevin Lott has started for the last few years. Lott is expected to start at quarterback this fall.

"We're not a single, isolated talent," Brennan said. "We have a deep bench of players who can play at the quarterback position. They have the potential to lead our team to victory." Brennan's team is expected to improve significantly in the upcoming season, and many observers are optimistic about the future of Notre Dame football.

The offensive line also returns a wealth of experience and talent. Junior Larry Williams and senior Mike Shiner have the early nod at the tackle positions. Williams boasts the most minutes of any returning Irish offensive starter from last year, while Shiner was a starter in 1980 and 1981 before sitting out most of last year with injury. Junior Mike Kelley, Shiner's replacement last year, has been moved to center position. Last year's backup center, sophomore Tom Doerger, will press for the spot as well.

Faust's efforts, along with those of DiStasio's, will go a long way in determining the future of the sport of women's basketball. Summitt, the coach of the United States' 1984 Olympic entry, believes that the Los Angeles Games will be a "turning point" for the sport. She feels that if the US couldn't make it to the playoffs, then can Notre Dame make it to the promised land, for that matter, the Top 20, in the same year?

"The one thing that's encouraging," Faust said, "we have a new crop of freshmen who are very promising. We have a wealth of experience and talent that we can rely on this year."
