Anthony Thomas of Richmond, Va., and Kathleen Curtis of Utica, Mich., have been named valedictorians of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's, respectively.

Thomas, an accounting major, plans to attend the University of Virginia and, with the Financial Accounting Standard Board (FASB), which establishes the rules for accounting an A residence of Zion for four years. Thomas has maintained a 3.98 grade point average as of last semester. Thomas has been a trumpet player with the band for four years and this year served as its president. It's been a really good Notre Dame experience, and looking back, there are many things I would love to go back, he said. He also noted that Notre Dame students are "serious about academics and serious about having fun.

Mr. Thomas has been a trumpet player in the University Band, the Senior Class Band, Please, and in the Big Sister/Little Sisters Program.

Curtis is of Saint Mary's nursing major. I received a good education but the major (the but major) is very demanding. I put a lot into it and get a lot out of it.

Curtis is pleased with the education. She said at Saint Mary, she had to change college majors, and I think Saint Mary's most definitely. "I have given me a basic education in addition to my major. I have a broad background in areas like English and history. Most importantly, I feel I can draw on my experiences in terms of social and curricular activities.

Notre Dame students are employed in the tutoring program. The tutors spend three to four hours a week with their students. In most cases, the students do not know any English. It's my job, as an English major, to help them improve their language skills.

The second recommendation is that the proposed surcharge would require an additional $1.25 million per year, or about $11 million by 1990, the report suggests that the money be obtained from one or more of three sources.

First, the Senate suggests that the university consider spending endowment funds for scholarships at a higher annual rate than the current 6.5 percent. This option is cited as the least attractive of the three.

Second, Van Orman of the Faculty Senate and a professor in the philosophy department, pointed out Notre Dame's traditionally conservative policy on endowment spending. He believes there would be strong opposition to any substantial increase in such spending for fear of jeopardizing future endowment growth.

Third, Notre Dame has an endowment of $200 million, roughly 15 percent of which can be used for graduate education, including scholarships, said Joe Russo, Director of Financial Aid. In view of this fact, the report suggests that only an additional one half percent of the endowment be set aside for use on a "as-needed" basis to keep the scholarship program going.

The second recommendation is that student tuition income be used to subsidize scholarships. Unlike most other private colleges and universities, Notre Dame has never practiced this policy, the report said. The general idea would be to raise tuition high enough to fund a substantial number of additional scholarships.

McKim believes the academic quality of Notre Dame's undergraduate programs would be higher if more financial aid were available.

"If you could offer more individual aid at the top of the pool more scholarship support, then more of them would be able to come," McKim explained. "Then you wouldn't have to accept so many of those for lesser endowed pool."
The 100th birthday of the internationally famous author of "The Prophet," Lebanese poet Gibran Khalil Gibran, will be celebrated in a piano concert given by Walid Hawrani, Sunday at 3:00 p.m. in the Annenberg Auditorium. Hawrani, born in New York City and reared in Beirut, is a graduate of the Central Music School in Moscow and holds a master's degree from the Tchaikovsky Conservatory in Moscow. He won the Trumpet and Multiple Easterners and has been highly acclaimed in Le Monde of Brussels and Le Courier des Arts of Cairo.

The full circle had been established, completed in my own attempt to emulate Dad and choose that perfect woman. And then the rivalry began. Mom said she liked my stepdaughter, but I wrongly sensed she was a bit apprehensive about my goals and moods. I felt uncomfortable when Mom wanted to know more about the family and friends of the girl of my dreams.

The ties to Mom, which had begun to mend themselves in the arms of my girlfriend, once again broke because I was too impatient to listen to Mom's heart-felt concern. I wanted to decide freely who the best woman was. Any advice was suspect. But after some months of separation from Mom's soothing words, I realized that she did perceive my own longings for independence. What I had seen as aggressive acts were only subtle hints by which she hoped to communicate that she only wanted what was best for me. After all, she was my "perfect" son, her baby. She knew my strengths, but she had struggled too.
Unclaimed laundry to be donated to HC mission in Tennessee hills

BY KEVIN BINGER
News Staff

When the student body disperses at the end of this school year, they will leave behind an estimated 600 pounds of clothing in St. Michael's Mission in Harriman, Tennessee. The students send in articles of their clothing, but the clothing lost during the school year will not go to waste.

Thanks to Brother Ivan Dolan, the clothes will go to a Holy Cross mission in Harriman, Tennessee. Dolan said that a better financial situation, the same prison that houses the population. Because of international politics, Dolan now sends the clothes only to Tennessee. The brothers run a clinic and a series of operations.

The students' clothes are never lost; however, because Dolan will not return to the state of Iowa, but has 33 times the population. Because of international politics, Dolan now sends the clothes only to Tennessee.

The clothes go to five Holy Cross brothers there. One of them is a doctor who also works at the nearby state prison to help support the mission. The other, the same prison that houses James Earl Ray, convicted murderer of Martin Luther King.

The brothers run a clinic and a thrift store where the clothes are sold. If you make them something, you feel that it isn't charity," said Dolan. "It makes them proud of the fact that they bought it."

"The people in Tennessee live in the hills," said Dolan. "Many of them have completely run down shacks as houses. Some live in old automobiles and old trucks. Medical facilities are practically nil, except for what we're doing for them."

The contributions from the laundry are a small part of the effort of the Holy Cross brotherhood around the country.

The laundry will pick up clothes from the dorms for the last time on Tuesday, May 10. The last day that clothes will be picked up for summer storage is Saturday, May 14. Also, the facility will be open the following two Saturdays to accept summer storage.

Muller also has new plans for next year. The days that the dorms drop off and pick up laundry will be changed and rotated each year.

"One of the most frequent comments I get," said Muller, "is why does Grace, Flanner and Pangborn always get screwed and have to wait so long to get their laundry back?"

"So we'll change it every year. At the end of five years, everybody will have had their laundry drop off and pick up on a different day. That way nobody gets the short end of the stick."

McKim said that a better financial aid policy would also make the student body more ethnically and economically diverse. Minority recruitment could increase, and Notre Dame could lessen its image of being a school for the upper middle class by making education here affordable to families with lower incomes.

Although both McKim and Russo agreed that it is too early for an extensive response from the administration to the report, Russo's immediate reaction was favorable.

"I think that this is a good stepping stone," Russo commented. The visibility of the problem has certainly increased because of it (the report).

Professor Michael K. Sain was named the Freimann Professor of Electrical Engineering last night at a ceremony in the College of Engineering. The Freimann Chair was established in 1971, and is named for Dr. and Mrs. Henry Freimann, pioneers in the electronics industry, and served on the University’s Advisory Council for Science and Engineering.

Henry Freimann, Vice President of Corning Glass Works, was given the 1983 Engineering Honor Award for his outstanding work in executive and engineering positions. Freimann was cited for his strong leadership in the Corning Glass Works in research, design, and quality manufacture of specialty glassware and optical materials. He has also been a teacher at Notre Dame and several other universities.

John Massmann was also a recipient of the 1983 Engineering Honor Award. He is the President of Massmann Contracting Company, and was cited for "outstanding achievements in the engineering and construction of complex structures, dams, water supply and flood control systems.

Massmann has also served on the college of Engineering Advisory Council since 1974.

Students seek new and exciting study areas

By CATHY PAX
Senior Staff Reporter

Regardless of where the lazy student runs to escape from his work, he will find others here over his books, and he cannot suffer a new york attack of a guilty conscience.

With final exams approaching, many students have become resigned to tedious studying. Many have realized, however, that an interesting location can add interest to an otherwise dull materiaL

Many students embark on an even-ning migration from their dorms to the library. The library is far from the student-populated upper floors because it is a common haven for bookworms. The library isn’t worth the effort. Jenny Pasquerilla, a senior from Stanford chooses the second floor of the library as his haven for hitting the books because it is quiet. "Most times I don’t want to waste time looking for a seat upstairs."

The second floor, which has been called "the party floor" adds needed excitement to studying, he said. "I don’t mind the opportunity of getting up and walking around and seeing people I know sometimes."

Laura Scwicki, a junior from Pasquerilla East, agrees that the second floor is not as quiet as the upper floors. "It’s more active; a lot of people walk around and talk, but I usually get a lot of work done." Scwicki chooses second floor main-ly because of the good lighting. Jane Panzerca, a Pasquerilla West junior, chooses to migrate up to the eighth floor because of the white desks which are only located there. "The carrels with the dark wood are too solemn," she believes.

She also likes the eighth floor rather than the engineering student-populated upper floors because "the calculations up there make too much noise."

The LaFortune lobby is also a common haven for bookworms. Melinda Moser, a Radix sophomore, chooses to study here because of the active surroundings. "If you are studying, people won’t come up and talk to you," she said, "but if you look disinterested, they’ll come up and start a conversation." She added, "It’s a good way to meet people."

Darby’s Place, located in the base ment of LaFortune is another popular studying place. Bill Rompf and Caroline Woudt often study in Darby’s because of its convenience. "We live off campus," said Rompf, "and the library closes too early so this is our only alternative.

Woudt likes Darby’s because of its club atmosphere. "It’s a good mix between socializing and studying," she said. "There are also a lot of dark corners and benches to take naps on," said Rompf.

Rompf and Woudt have spent nights studying in a more unusual location: the Howard Johnson’s restau rant. "They bring you a pot of cof fee and let you stay there all night," said Rompf. "It’s the most fun place to study."

Other students are less scientific about their methods for choosing a study environment. Bob Guthrie, a senior from Stanford chooses the thirteenth floor because "I’m superstitious."

For some people, the trip to the library isn’t worth the effort. Jenny Canwell, a Farley freshman, migrates down to the Farley study lounge. "I can’t study in my room," she said. She prefers to remain in the dorm instead of the library because "I usually fall asleep at the library."
U.S. bishops to meet over war, peace letter

By TIM BUCKLEY

The Observer

In the midst of commotion, controversy, and criticism, the U.S. bishops will meet May 2-3 to discuss and debate the third draft of the Pastoral Letter on War and Peace.

In the letter, Father Richard Warner, Provincial Superior of Holy Cross Priests and a member of the Bishops' Special Committee on War and Peace, said that there are three "signs of the times" which serve as reasons for addressing the nuclear arms issue:

1) The world wants peace and needs peace.
2) The arms race is the greatest curse on the human race.
3) Unique dangers and dynamics of the nuclear arms race present qualitatively new problems for traditional moral principles.

In response to criticism that the Catholic bishops, as moral leaders, overstep their authority when they engage in political affairs, Warner stated "... there is no human concern which doesn't have moral dimensions."

According to Warner, each bishop

Caucus receives office, plans for more services

BY CECILIA LUCERO
Senior Staff Reporter

"Education about women's issues and different viewpoints" on those issues is the objective of the Notre Dame Women's Caucus, said Mary Ellen Sternitzke, the organization's founder.

The Women's Caucus has continuously expanded its services and activities since its registration as an official group last February, Ster-nitzke said. The organization plans on expanding its services next year.

"A friend and I were talking about how we wished there was an undergraduate women's organization, where anyone could get information
(on women's issues)," Sternitzke said.
She and Elizabeth Feely, a junior sociology major from Badin, decided to form a group to accommodate others who were interested in similar concerns.

Sternitzke differentiated between the Women's Caucus and the Women's Advisory Council, whose membership is limited to one representative from each dorm. "We wanted something that more women — or anyone who is interested — could belong to," she said. "We're open to men and Saint Mary's members also."

This spring, the Women's Caucus has set up an office in the basement of LaFollette to make themselves more accessible to students, Ster-nitzke said. Beginning next year, the office will establish regular evening hours, as well as provide phone information service to let people know about scheduled events such as movies and lectures.

Services to be made available by the Women's Caucus in the future include referrals for volunteer work in the South Bend community and a resource library on women's issues.

The Women's Caucus has co-sponsored with other groups lectures on topics and issues regarding women. These have included
Elizabeth Fiorenza's In Memory of Her: A Feminist Reconstruction of Christian Origins; Being a Man: The Paradox of Masculinity by Doctor
Donald Bell; and God as Female and Male: Were the Shakers Feminist?
by Marjorie Proctor-Smith.

Another speakers' series is planned for next year. Topics include women's health, violence against women, and women and the law, Sternitzke said.

The Women's Caucus has also set up an office in the basement of LaFollette.

Ramón mentions another advantage the program offers the tutors. "It's a great feeling to be able to really help someone who needs
it," he says. "Without my help,
Eduardo might never learn to read

The program, up to this point,

If you're going to Europe this summer, don't see it from a expensive than a European rail pass. And it costs even less when you share the ride with a friend. Plus with a Hertz car, there's never a charge for mileage.

By renting from Hertz, you can reserve your car just 7 days before renting, you don't have to pay in advance, and in many cases there's no drop-off charge. And unlike some rent-a-car companies, Hertz's minimum renting age is 18

the dollar fluctuates, our rates won't.

Hertz also saves you money when you're off the road. We Would Jesus throw a grenade?

Editor's note: This concludes a three part series examining the role of ROTC at Notre Dame.

Kevin Walsh

Guest Columnist

Commonly heard justifications for ROTC at Notre Dame are: "There’s a need for both Catholic and/or Christian leaders in the military" and "Christian values are a part of Notre Dame’s heritage." Does Notre Dame present as a Catholic institution like Notre Dame in command of military forces and making military decisions rather than some non-Christian (pagan!) military leader? Where is the central premise of this series concerning Jesus and the gospel’s message of peace, then these often-repeated rationalizations are absurd. Two possible scenarios which demonstrate their absurdity involve the logic which underlies these justifications, since at some point, such logic breaks down.

The first scenario involves Jesus Christ, our pacific teacher, on some front line in a war zone, with a gun in hand, leading the battle cry and firing thousands rounds against the "enemy." Can one truly imagine Jesus saying, "Christians defend!" Such nonsense.

Another scenario, even more absurd than the first, involves Jesus at the control of the inaudible "red button," deciding the fate of life on a scale previously not imaginable. "Religious" JUSTIFICATION for this role of the Christian is that the role of Jesus is to save the world (and possibly the annihilation of it) by means of his death on a cross. Children and adults, however, are just as incapable of making a decision of this magnitude as is Jesus Christ. This plan of decision involves the logic which underlies the justifications, since at some point, such logic breaks down.

Saint Mary's coverage

Dear Editor:

The Observer claims to be "the independent student newspaper serving Notre Dame and Saint Mary's." We, the undersigned, would like to respectfully request clarification. In particular, we feel that the interests of Saint Mary's students are neglected in The Observer's coverage of Saint Mary's athletics, and, as paying customers, we feel that we are entitled to fair coverage on the events that take place on our campus.

We feel that we are left in seven varsity and five intramural sports. Coverage of these has been inadequate, delayed, and, more often than not, erroneous. Articles on Saint Mary's sports have been deleted in order to fill space with stories that are of more interest to Notre Dame students. We are left with day-old summaries relegated to "Sports Brief," and our achievements are unfairly pushed aside to make room for events and activities that take place at Notre Dame.

To compound this problem, by focusing too much interest on the competitions that take place between Saint Mary's and Notre Dame women, The Observer staff promotes Notre Dame's athletics. By showcasing Notre Dame, we feel that the accomplishments of Saint Mary's women are depressed.

Notre Dame's athletic superiority will result in an attitude that Notre Dame women, who are innocent or defenseless, can take away others' humanity and freedom. Mr. Walsh's assertion that the presence of the ROTC doesn't belong at Notre Dame doesn't belong at Notre Dame. Who doesn't have a ROTC program? The ROTC program isn't the only position supported by the Catholic Church. The Institute of Seafaring Men doesn't belong in the United States, but Notre DameCommunity, shielded away in his corner are willing to cooperate in an effort to get this program on our campus.

We feel that the Observer has not shown its independence. We feel that the Observer is not representing the interests of the Saint Mary's Community.

The Observer has passed over by those who read your paper. The athletes, coaches and athletic staff concerned about the situation which we, as paying customers, find to be unsatisfactory in its present state. Mention of these programs is not made in The Observer's publication. We are writing this newspaper to give us the coverage to which we are entitled.

Walsh myopic

Dear Editor:

Kevin Walsh's assertion that the presence of the ROTC at Notre Dame is incompatible with Catholic teaching is fraught with moral inconsistency. In the nature of the Christian teaching is fraught with moral inconsistency. In the nature of the Christian Church states that service in the military and this influence should be continued.

Catholics can provide a good, moral influence upon a situation which we, as paying customers, find to be unsatisfactory in its present state. We, as paying customers, feel that we are entitled to fair coverage on the events that take place on our campus. Notre Dame Community, shielded away in his corner is incompatible with Catholic teaching.

Saint Mary's pride

Dear Editor:

The year is drawing to an end. If the college community has reached its goal, each of us should be a little wiser and more mature. Unhappily, I believe that this year has been one of the most difficult in terms of Saint Mary's and Notre Dame relations. The same immature stereotypes and accusations that were thrown around at the beginning of the year can still be found on the pages of The Observer.

On April 25, three comments printed in The Observer were at the expense of Saint Mary's students. On page 16 Mike Sullivan wrote, "I've mellowed some during my ten years at Notre Dame..." On page 9, Kevin Walsh quipped, "...it wasn't hard to see why the Notre Dame truckers haven't many problems with the Saint Mary's varsity." On page 7 Sarah Hamilton quipped, "...I knew it was my role to grit my teeth at the very sight of a three-inch windshield of my car. I was lucky, however, had that same creative mind decided to throw the knife a fraction of a second later, the knife would have probably lodged itself in my skull or my heart." We have laughed at stereotypical images in reality I graduated ten years ago. I shed a few tears and cried when I heard of the Kent State killings my freshman year. My colleagues, my brother and sister students, were shot by Americans in the United States. It could have been me.

For the first time in my life, something important concerned me. School was secondary. My priorities were now my priorities. On that May morning in 1970 I first sat in the armchair window for the entire night watching the news.

The ducks on Saint Mary's lake were my only companions by 3 a.m. As a screens became dusty, I prayed that a peace Talks would end, that the world would return to the darkness where I knew a lake entertained those ducks. That night I cared not about grades or races, or careers, or recommendations. I began formulating my life's values.

We are a separate institution with a separate identity. We should not be considered an enemy, a challenge or a threat to Notre Dame.
The month of May is fast approaching, and with final exams, graduation, and the end of another school term, comes the beginning of the lucrative summer season for Hollywood's movie makers. The onset of the 1983 summer will witness the debuts of many movies, among them, Superman and Star Wars, along with other different, and interesting features, such as Steve Martin's latest, The Man With Two Brains.

The new chapter in the Star Wars saga, Return of the Jedi, concludes the middle of the three part space adventure series, which creator and producer George Lucas conceived as three trilogies set “a long time ago in a galaxy far, far away...” Drawn from fairy tales, myths, and myriads cultural influences, the film promises to be as great a phenomenon, in the world of cinema, as its two predecessors.In Jedi, the leading cast members return to do battle once again in the ongoing struggle between the heroes of the Rebel Alliance, and the evil Imperial Forces of Darkness. Mark Hamill returns as Luke Skywalker, with Harrison Ford as Han Solo, Carrie Fisher as Princess Leia Organa, Billy Dee Williams as Lando Calrissian, the Stooges C-3PO and R2-D2, Chewbacca, Obi wan Kenobi, and Yoda. Together, they oppose the towering, black-robed villain, Darth Vader. An amazing array of new intergalactic denizens, many of exotic origin, also populate Jedi, the republic Admiral Ackbar, the pig-like Gamorra Guards, Jabba the Hutt, the semi-human Bib Fortuna, and many more, including the cosmic musical trio of Max Rebo, Sy Snootles, and Droopy McCool.

The special effects are even more special this key to the impressive adventure. As the result of Lucas's technical and creative wizardry, the story once again comes to life. The Millennium Falcon again soars through space in the company of new Rebel and Imperial ships. Jabba the Hutts' bizarre Sal Barge skits above the sea of darkening sand both squash and flash and burn. And the illusion of deep space and sparkling stars magically and convincingly fills the screen.

Action in The Return of the Jedi ranges from Empire's space port to the secret planet Tatooine, to the many forested moons, Endor. The plot follows the attempts of the Rebel Commanders to plan their attack on the evil Galactic Empire. For the first time, they concentrate all the war ships in the Rebel fleet in a single, giant Armada. Luke and Princess Leia, meanwhile, make their way to Tatooine, to try to rescue their carbon-frozen friend Han Solo from the clutches of the vile gangster Jabba the Hutt. However, the prospect that the Rebellion is doomed is discussed, for the Galactic Emperor orders the construction of a new armored Space Station, many times more powerful than the dreaded Death Star. All these prodigious forces as...

exorbitantly concentrate upon one another. I provide the thrilling conclusions to previously unrealized questions of the earlier chapters of the saga. The finale provides an end to a tale which has filled the screen with adventure, romance, and entertaining wizardry, since the original release of Star Wars in 1977.

The next chapter in the Superman series promises to become a great success this summer, if the performance of two of its successors are any indication. Superman II and its sequel, Superman III, have both earned over $200 million worldwide box office thus far. Apparently the Man of Steel has made a triumphant return to the comic book to the silver screen. Now, Superman Pictures and Warner Bros. have purveyed a new wave of the Superman franchise and producers hope to create a bonanza onscreen. Remaining are the originals from the first movie, Christopher Reeve as Clark Kent (Superman), Margot Kidder as Lois Lane, Jackie Cooper as editor Perry White, and Marc McClure as boy wonder, Jonathan. Annette O'Toole emerges to complicate Clark Kent's life as his high school sweetheart, Lana Lang. Richard Pryor, in what appears to be a great role for his comic talents, portrays a bumbling genius, who is plucked from the obscurity of a low paid employment line to create the ultimate weapon.

The difference between this kind of movie sequel and the Star Wars saga is, while one can trace a continuing and evolving story throughout the three Star Wars films, each Superman movie is entirely self-contained. However, the producers made sure that each succeeding film plot built itself upon the previous films' premise and their continuity. Superman III, in this way, deals with problems different from situations than either of the two previous films. Thus, the producers hope to guarantee viewer attention by offering the familiar characters and format in an entirely different plot and setting.

It was a quest for something new, exciting, and different that led to the story line's evolution. Superman battles against a mixture of villany and modern technology: a criminal, insane computer, and a psychic force diabolical in strength to literally terrorize Superman apart. The evil computer is controlled by Pryor who, in turn, is employed by tycoon Vaughn in his attempt to take over the world. Billed as the ultimate battle between man and machine, Superman III is yet another in a possibly endless, successfully-continuing series of films concerning the superheroes.

An example of a different sort of film that will be released this summer is Steve Martin's The Man With Two Brains, a bizarre medical farce in the Martin comedic tradition. In it, he portrays an outrageous neurosurgeon, Dr. Michael Huh- huhh, (I can't pronounce it either), who becomes involved with a bizarre scheme involving mismatched brains and bodies. This film is in a se- quel of sorts, as it reunites the acting, producing, and directing team that starred in The Jerk, and bombed in Dead Men Don't Wear Plaid. The Man With Two Brains represents the latest effort of comic genius, Carl Reiner, it remains to be seen whether it will be of the same, high caliber of slapstick humor that so evident in the Jerk. Steve Martin's reputation as a uniquely bizarre funny man is well-established on stage and TV, but, given his inconsistent performances in past major motion pictures, the most charitable comment to make about his current movie is that it potentially should be experienced, not pre-judged.

Return of the Jedi, Superman III, and The Man With Two Brains, are only three examples of the summer movies being released in May. For the movie-goer, each offers diverse and enjoyable entertainment for their prospective fans.

Once Roemer had found students interested in organizing a group, she sought students who would be interested in participating in these groups. This was done by contacting other students who had expressed an interest in this sort of get together, and suggestions from other people. A nice camaraderie builds up between the members, says Roemer as she organizes a diverse group — that's important. We don't want a group of students just involved in social justice, or just student government, we want a mix.

Sue Fleck, who helped to organize another group, agrees. "The idea is not to know everyone in your group, so you get to know them. The way we chose our groups was totally random, we had the names of the students that Mary Ann had suggested, plus others, and we just pulled them out of a hat." We called them to see if they were interested, and if they couldn't do it, then we used suggestions from other people.

Sometimes it happened that students were interested in belonging to a group, but were not contacted through the above methods. These students gave their names to Roemer saying that she would be interested in if any other groups were formed. Some students, such as Ann Butler, told Roemer that they would like to organize a group themselves.

"I went to Mary Ann Roemer and told her that I'd like to start a group," says Butler. "She gave me the names of a bunch of other students, and she also gave me the name of Kate Clinton, who works in the Administration Building and had told Mary Ann that she'd like to host a group. "Everything has worked out great," continues Butler. "Kate is great — she's young and dynamic and lots of fun. This whole group has been really neat.

Most of the seniors involved in the reflection groups seem to think the experience has been beneficial. "I was very pleased and interested in the depth of the discussions," offers professor and group hostess Elizabeth Christman. "I'm impressed with the way people are willing to open themselves to one another."

"Sometimes there's a tendency to let the group go and not meet," says Roemer. "At first I was tempted to push them, but it's the students' group — they can get together when they wish."

"Overall, I think we've started something very good," Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students who will be seniors next year and would like to be in a group, please call 239-5259 or stop at the Center for Social Concerns to sign up. There will be ten groups starting in the fall.
There are other athletic events tomorrow on campus besides the Blue-Gold game. The Irish baseball team, traveling to the Midwest, will have Conference playoffs, and there will be a doubleheader against MCC for Butler at 1 p.m. on Jack Kline Field.

The lacrosse team plays Obiton tomorrow on Alumni Field if it rains. In that case, the game will be played on Carrier. Also, the Saint Mary’s track team will have Little State. — The Observer

Noonan, Novatny "Crazy" doubles team gets along fine

By MARK B. JOHNSON
Sportswriter

"They live an exciting life," says Coach Tom Fallon of his No. 1 doubles team composed of Irish products junior Tim Noonan and sophomore John Novatny. "I guess the secret is to keep them high, but under control." According to Noonan, "We (John and I) are not exactly the quaintest team in the world, but we try to keep it to a minimum." Confirming Noonan's opinion is Novatny. "We are both crazy and are probably the two wildest guys on the team." With wildness as a consideration, Noonan and Novatny are probably the two most compatible Notre Dame doubles players, and, although their 15-12 season record is not too impressive, these two men certainly make up for it. Their individual games are about as wild as their personalities, as they both like "to hit the ball" rather than play a finesse game. "When they are working well together, they are awfully tough, but then they get a day where they try to knock the cover off the ball, and they run into problems," stated Fallon, a firm believer in a finesse game. Defending their style of play, Noonan commented, "It boils down to enjoyment as it is a lot more fun to hit the ball. If you can win and beat the ball, why not do it. I think that we would rather hit the ball hard, and in the big matches that we have won, we were hitting the ball hard and hitting it well." In addition to doubles, Noonan holds a 22-6 record at No. 6 singles while Novatny stands at 23-9 at No. 4. Although they are more successful at singles, both men enjoy doubles because it is really more of a team sport. "I have always done better in doubles because I have taken it more seriously," stated Novatny. "I get more fired up for doubles since I enjoy it more." With Novatny's feared slice serve and his southpaw play combined with Noonan's strong forehand and net game, the pair is a natural combination. "It was pretty obvious that if Noonan and Novatny could blend together personality wise, they would make a formidable doubles team," said Fallon. With their combined talent and competitive ness, Noonan and Novatny have caught quite a few No. 1 teams by surprise as few expect a team of No. 4 and No. 6 to be much of a challenge, and, after working out most of their minor problems this year, they look to be "a team to be reckoned with" next year according to Fallon. "The competition has vastly improved their game this year, and the only direction they can go is up." According to Noonan, "We are both pretty competitive as far as doubles go, and we do not like to lose." With this competitiveness, the pair gets intense in every aspect of the game, and occasionally overly so, but as they play the same type of game and work well together, they compliment each other and are truly a team. "When we win, we win as a team," explained Novatny. Although these individuals are a couple of the "more radical" Notre Dame students and are actually quite different from each other, together on a tennis court these unique players become one, and whether playing individually or as a team, Tim Noonan and John Novatny are truly a couple of impressive people.

A tough road to hoe

The ‘Notre Dame game’ tops 11 slates, but for Irish, four games to decide rate

By MIKE RICCARDI

The Notre Dame game.

For defending national champion Penn State as well as a Michigan State team coming off a miserable 2-9 season, it’s the big game of the year.

“Of course, in the Notre Dame week... we’re already booked up for it,” he said. “It’s a year you’re going to have to have with respect and respect for both teams. It’s a two-way street. The team that will be the object of all this attention will not be facing the gauntlet that was last season’s run. However, the 1988 slate is no cakewalk.

The traditionally talent laden squads from USC and Pittsburg will provide the Irish with two “power” games in three weeks at the stadium here.

And looming over the horizon after those battles on home turf will be Joe Paterno’s always-powerful Nittany Lions.

The Lions, Trojan, and Purdue coaches have a lot of senior talent from last year, but are sure to have more than adequate replacements.

But it’s the teams like Michigan State, Purdue, and Notre Dame... —that seek to bounce back from disappointing seasons, of which the Irish must remain wary.

They may not be Top Ten material, but they have outstanding personnel in the states.

Here is a look at the 1983 schedule:

PURDUE at West Lafayette — Ignore the Boilermakers’ 1982 record of 4-6-3, for West Lafayette is a rugged opening test,Seven of the last 12 times the schools have met at Ross-Ade Stadium, the Boilermakers have won. This includes the last two meetings down there. Quarterback Scott Campbell may be the best at his position in his system’s history. He’ll be +-iing another team that has to play answers.

The explosive Boilermakers are vulnerable on defense, allowing over 400 yards.

But it is the teams like Michigan State, Purdue, and Notre Dame... — that seek to bounce back from disappointing seasons, of which the Irish must remain wary.

They may not be Top Ten material, but they have outstanding personnel in the states.

Here is a look at the 1983 schedule:

PENNSYLVANIA STATE at Purdue — Joe Paterno’s Penn State is a lot better team than was last year at the same time, but it is not too much of a threat.

This is a game that the Irish and Notre Dame have to win.

Again. Nothing would mean more if it were a win over a team in the same class as Notre Dame.

The Irish can be thankful that this game is not at Michie Stadium in West Point, but it is one of those games where the Irish may be spent — just when the opponent is ready to add to its won.

USC at Purdue — The second key to the national championship.

After five years of frustration, this may finally be the year the Irish can upset the Trojan machine.

The Irish defense has a score to settle with the Trojans, who had Notre Dame nosed out in 1982.

The Trojans are hungry and ready to go.

Ohio State at Purdue — the Buckeyes have developed into a force to be reckoned with.

Here is a look at the 1983 schedule:

PENN STATE at University Park — The defending national champions, like USC, and Pitt, lose many All-Americans including quarterback Todd Blackledge, running back Curt Warner, and split end Kenny Jackson on offense, and linebacker Walker Lee Ashby on defense. Besides last year’s USC game, the two most frustrating losses in the FBS era have been against the Nittany Lions.

TENNESSEE at the University of Michigan — The Volunteers are the tough team this year.

They have an opportunity to go 20-0 and win the national championship. They have an opportunity to go 20-0 and win the national championship. They have an opportunity to go 20-0 and win the national championship.

Just a couple of questions
Spring practice over, Faust and Irish left with mostly pleasant problems

By STEVE LABATE
Sports Writer

An old baseball adage holds that "hope springs eternal in April." Much the same can be said about college football.

Although the first buds on the campus trees have not yet blossomed, tomorrow is April 50, the date of the 53rd annual Blue-Gold game. For the past five weeks Gerry Faust and his coaching staff have labored through this extraordinarily damp and inclement spring so that they could get an early look at the 1983 Notre Dame football team. Tomorrow the public and the students get a chance to see for themselves what a portion of the Irish will look like next fall.

The contest will be the third for Gerry Faust since leaving Moeller High School to come to Notre Dame. In 1981, a crowd of over 35,000 people attended the scrimmage to watch the game. Eight months later, the contest was answered, and the Irish were five in the win column and six in the loss.

One year later, the media outside of South Bend got hold of the game and decided to televise it. But once again the following fall the Irish suffered through a mediocre season, this time they went 6-4-1.

Now it is spring once more and optimism abounds at ND, since the Irish are loaded with talent. Allen Pinkett has asserted himself as the starter coming off his freshman season, but injured Greg Bell has yet to don his cleats. Although he does not know who will be the starter at either the tailback or fullback position, Faust says, "All four players will see lots of playing time next fall regardless of who the starters are." The depth at tailback is provided by Ray Carter, Lester Flemons and, incoming Moeller High School star Hawkwa Alexander. Carter appears to have made a move for the third string spot. "Ray Carter has looked great and has impressed me," remarks Faust. "Lester Flemons came on at the end, the last week or so, and then he got injured." In any event, tomorrow it will be Pinkett.

 Tight end - As of now this spot belongs to Mark Bavaro. Bavaro however is inexperienced and so are his backups Brian Behmer, John McCabe and Mark Shiner. None of the fourmen was ever on a varsity team. If there is one spot where a freshman can come in and get a quick chance to play it may be here.

Wide receiver - Another area of pleasant problems for Faust for there is talent here now and talent on the way in the fall. At split end Joe Howard is beating out Milt Jackson but Faust warns that Howard does not have the starting spot sewn up. Van Pecary ran track this spring and his status on the depth chart is uncertain.

At flanker Mike Haywood and Mike Favorite are currently ranked one two. Along with Howard and Jackson, these two will each see a lot of playing time. However on the way are a pair of thoroughbreds by the names of Alvin Miller and Alonzo Jefferson who will have something to say about who starts in the fall.

Defensive line - This much is for certain with regard to

When we last left the Notre Dame soccer team back in November, they had just completed one of their usual fine seasons with a record of 16-4-2. But once again, they had missed out on their perennial goal — an NCAA bid. Once more, the culprit was an inability to beat the big teams in their region. Could next season finally be the one?

That is one of many important questions facing Head Coach Rich Hunter now that spring practice is over, and the players are preparing to head home for three months. The number one question, though, in many people's minds is if Hunter himself will be around to lead the team come September.

"I plan on being here," Hunter says. "Of course, I'm a non-tenured professor, I want job security. Then you consider that I work for the Athletic Department for free — this is strictly a volunteer job that I intend to stay around. My teaching is my source of income."

Hunter may be around, but for most fans of the 1982 edition of the Notre Dame soccer squad, his may be one of the few familiar faces. Gone will be seniors Mario Manta, Gerald McCarthy (team Most Valuable Player at goalkeeper), fullback Larry Smith, and a whole starting midfield of Mike Sullivan, Jay Schwartz, and Steve Berry. Add to this the transfer of promising freshman Joe Hold and sophomore Dave Miles' studies in Rome next year, and one can understand why Hunter's primary description of next year's team is one word — youth.

"We'll probably start at least five sophomores next year, and about two or three juniors. So it could easily be a struggling year, unless the team matures more quickly than I've anticipated. Beyond that, we should have around fourteen freshmen coming in. I'll be frank on that matter. A lot of players don't end up coming here just because of the finances of a university like Notre Dame."

"And that just goes back to the problem of having no scholarships, as I've mentioned before, we are the only Division I school which does not grant soccer scholarships. Here, it's quite a credit to have been so successful in Division I, being in that situation, but just think how much better we could be if we had scholarships."

"Hopefully, we're making progress in that area," he continues. "Mr. Corrigan (Athletic Director Gene) seems a lot more open to that prospect now, he talked with our seniors after the end of the season last year, and I think he realizes its importance to us."

The schedule runs from September 6 to November 2 and includes 24 games, 12 home and 12 away. As usual, the high point of the season will be the game against the defending national champions, the Indiana Hoosiers, on November 25.
1983 volleyball preview

Newcomers will help with hard slate

By MIKE SULLIVAN
Assistant Sports Editor

There’s this rule in volleyball that says only six players are allowed on the court at one time. handy Vanlager’s Notre Dame volleyball team will have seven scholarship players next year. Throw in a few talented non-scholarship players and it’s not hard to see that Vanlager and her assistant, Dan Anderson, have a nice problem.

“We’re returning nine players and the three incoming scholarship girls,” says Vanlager, “we’re going to have a lot more time.”

The volleyball squad can’t get much deeper in talent. Besides current scholarship players Karen Bauters, Mary McLaughlin, Josie Maternowski, and Mary Jo Hensler, and non-scholarship stars Terese Ilten and Tracy Banning, who will return from last year’s 25-9 team, there will be three highly-touted newcomers to add more flexibility to the lineup.

The presence of these three players has the coaches excited about the possibilities for improving both the offense and defense. Already, they’ve begun putting together plans for each of them.

The first recruit, Mollie Merchant, from Laguna Beach, Calif., has been prized as a setter. The 5-6 veteran of the Junior Olympics and Junior Nationals decided to attend Notre Dame instead of USC, which is the second-best team in the country. Her 24-inch vertical leap without a weight training has impressed her new coaches.

Merchant’s teammate in high school, Kathy McKeown, is also bringing her talents to the Midwest, despite being recruited by Stanford, the fourth-rated team in the nation. McKeown also has an untrained 24-inch vertical jump and is expected to help out mostly as a setter.

The last recruit to commit to Notre Dame, Karen Sapp, will provide help at the net. The temperamental, Mich. native has physical capabilities that drew the attention of many college coaches. Her standing 27-inch vertical jump is what got the attention. Because her high school season ran late, though, Vanlager and Anderson were able to get a head start recruiting her, and won the recruiting battle over almost every school in Michigan, Indiana, and Ohio.

“All three of these girls play excellent defense, both at the net and in the back row,” says Vanlager. “That’s the key with these players. Offensively, we’re going to be tougher, but we’re going to concern ourselves with building the defense.”

An improvement on both offense and defense will be necessary if the team hopes to compete with a schedule that is much tougher than any previous schedule. The team will no longer be able to beat up on the Bethels and USFs as next year’s schedule includes numerous top-ranked teams.

Teams like Georgia and Purdue (fifth in the country last year) will visit the ACC Pit and its new wooden surface. Things will be even tougher on the road as the Irish will travel to Louisiana State for a tournament over fall break. In that eight-team tournament are seven teams that were ranked in the Top Twenty, Notre Dame is the only team that was not. A probable move into a conference will make an NCAA tournament bid possible. The conference would include many of the teams in the Midwestern City Conference - in which some men’s teams compete - plus teams like Dayton and DePaul.

With seven scholarship players and nearly all of the players from last year’s successful team, Vanlager and Anderson have the potential to join the country’s elite in a very short time.

Saint Mary's honors its athletes

By JUDY MCNAMARA
Saint Mary's Sports Editor

The Saint Mary's sports department honored its athletes last Monday night during its 1983 Sports Banquet held in the campus dining hall. Awards were given to members of each of Saint Mary's seven varsity teams and special mention given to the four recipients of individual awards, which the athletic department distributes at the end of each academic year. Swimming sensation Gail Casey walked away with Athlete of the Year honors thanks to her outstanding performances all year long and her fine showing at the nationals held last March. Casey was named an All-American in five different swimming events as well as being mentioned by three different sports organizations. Casey was also recipient of her team's MVP award and proved herself a true student-athlete by receiving Academic All-American honors from the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics.

The Scholar-Athlete Award which is given to the senior varsity athlete with the highest cumulative GPA was awarded to swimmer Nancy Lorenzetti.

The last special award given by the sports department was the Helen Holland Voit award for excellence in intramural athletics; this honor went to student athlete Holli Lingowski.

The Basketball team named Cindy Short its most valuable player as well as litey Ebert her most improved. Ebert also won the Coach's Award. The team's center, Missy Van Ort was named all-district honorable mention for her play on the court this season. The Volleyball team saw fit to give Marianne Voit its most valuable player award and to give sophomore Ann Button the Coach's Award. Rookie of the Year for the team was Molly Baker.

Fencing gave honors to Ellen Mendez as MVP and Teresa Shults as the Coach's Award recipient. Scott Trees' swim team named Julie Meier and Ann Cushing as it's most improved athletes and gave Nancy Lorenzetti the Coach's Award. The tennis team, still involved in playing it's split season named Deb Lauer its MVP and saw Allison Peter as most improved. Coach John Killeen named Maureen Fitzgerald the winner of his Coach's Award.

Jean Kerich's track team named denominator Annette Aschen's MVP and named freshmen high jumpers Lis Johnson as Rookie of the Year.

And finally, the softball squad and head coach Scott Beisel named sophomore Irish Nolan as it's MVP and pitcher Annie Day as most improved. The experienced slugger Barb Theiss his Coach's Award. This has been an outstanding year for Saint Mary's athletic teams. Four of the seven varsity teams qualified for national championship tournaments and the tennis team added yet another state championship title to Saint Mary's athletic history.

Since television executives and NCAA members alike are currently waiting for a court decision concerning the legality of the NCAA's role as negotiator for television contracts in collegiate football, they cannot be specific on the future role of cable television in collegiate sports.

Wensler suspects that if Notre Dame was free to negotiate its own television contracts, "somebody could walk up and offer Notre Dame somewhere between 25 and 50 million dollars" for its football package.

The Far Side

By the way, we're playing cards with the Hobbs tonight. And that's it if you print out the strip this week. Many promises not to bring you regrets.
By CHRIS NEEDLES
Sports Editor Emeritus

Donald Royal, a 6-7 swingman from random Mount Carmel High School in New Orleans, has signed a national letter of intent to attend Notre Dame next year, The Observer learned yesterday.

Because a quick-moving border, averaged 12 points, 14 rebounds, and four assists a game as a senior in pacing St. Augustine to an unblended 35-0 record, the Louisiana state championship and a No. 6 national ranking by USA Today. Royal was a 53 percent shooter from the field this season while hitting 70 percent of his free throws.

The signing of Royal completes The Class of 1987 recruiting season for Irish coach Digger Phelps, who also accepted a 6-10 forward from Hills of Indianapolis and 6-8 forward John Bowen of Warrens, Pa., while failing to land Ed filmed of Notre Dame.

"He has tremendous quickness and he's a great leader. He's a sleeper, in the same way Orlando Woolridge was when he came to Notre Dame. And he could very well end up a first-round draft choice before he's through, the same way Orlando did."

Although Royal was not listed among the nation's top 50 high school players in the preseason by Street and Smith's, he received offers from over 30 schools from a number of publications, in addition to Notre Dame.

For those interested in some anonymous phone calls - mostly negative and mostly at the weirdest hours of the night. I was included in a skit at the rally, not a household word.

That's why I worked more than 40 hours a week at this job, traveled coast-to-coast visiting your beloved teams, and reported the sometimes-gory details - I took it all seriously, in hopes that you would, too.

One crank caller - obviously drunk - once asked me, "Do you hate Notre Dame?" No, believe it or not, I like Notre Dame. A lot. It's not paradox, as many alumni claim, but if I had to do it over again, I'd come here."

The best thing I've found about Notre Dame is its people. The students make this university what it is. Despite the accen tant cold weather, an oppressive administration and a depressing location, we always manage to have a good time.

There are also a lot of class people in the athletic department. Digger Phelps, Mike Delbartino, Gene Corrigan, Lethy Smith, and especially Garry Faust - unfortunately, it was not my duty to judge Garry's personality, just his football team.

But it's not how it is reported. And under anyone's Code of Ethics - a journalist's, a Catholic's, or whomever - the No. 1 rule is to tell the truth. So I did.

Unfortunately, some people couldn't face the truth, and couldn't bear to see it in print. Ironically, the year before, many accused The Observer of being a "happy news" newspaper, accentuating the positive during a dismal 5-6 football season.

This year, I vowed to tell the truth, be it good or bad. I couldn't see the point of writing about Notre Dame get embar rased by Air Force - a team the Irish outweighed 50 pounds per man on the front lines - and say "Notre Dame lost 30-17, gee, they gave it a good try."

That's a non-journalist's lie. And it serves no purpose anywhere, especially in sports.

Throughout this year, with all of the praise and the putdowns, only one thing still sits me - those people who say to me, "Why all the fuss? It's only a game."

How about you, Mr. Peanut, in the future? I can tell you, Mr. Peanut, in the future. I can tell you.

One great thing about being one of the best college football teams in the world. We're winners once again, and then you will see how great this University can be.

"It's been a great four years with lots of memories, and I have much respect for you, although they are too numerous to mention here."

And as if he were reflecting on a crazy four years of triumph, conflict and controversy, the biggest and best wonder of all, the most surprising of all, there comes word, that for 1983, The Sporting News will choose Notre Dame, for the last two years, No. 1 in the preseason college football poll.

I can't think of a more fitting ending.
