Committee to suggest '21 campus at ND next year, close source says

By MARK WORSCHE

Enforcement of a 21-year-old drinking age on campus is the recommendation that the Committee on the Responsible Use of Alcohol is planning to present to Provost Timothy O'Meara next week, the observer has learned.

A source close to the committee said last night that there will be some form of a '21 campus next year.

Father E. William Beauchamp, chairman of the committee, refused to comment this week on the report's recommendation. "Until the report's done and made public, I don't have anything to say," he said.

"We're not playing coy. If the trustees want to see it, they want to see it first, then they have a right to see it first," said Beauchamp. "If I could make it public tomorrow, I'd make it public tomorrow."

"I would say yes, it definitely a prime consideration," said Student Body President Brian Callaghan, a committee member. "There will be an age restriction definitely as it appears now," he said. "Though it wouldn't be more specific."

Callaghan said students should not be surprised by the possibility of a '21 campus. "At each of the battles that have been mentioned, age restriction is a prime consideration," he said.

But Callaghan also said, "It leaves so many options open. It could go very lenient or very stringent. A lot depends on enforcement or the nature of the report."

Beauchamp echoed Callaghan, saying the proposed alcohol policy should not be a shock to any student body government.

"In terms of moving off campus, students have already taken that into consideration," said Beauchamp. He does not believe that many students are getting the report released before deciding to move, but he added, "Maybe I'm wrong on that."

The committee still hopes to make the report public by April 1, five days before the deadline to resign housing contracts for next year without losing the $50 room deposit and incurring a $30 fine.

"The run-off was necessary because of the lack of a majority in both the ballot box and in the student body government," said Patty Cisle, secretary, as do all four candidates.

The winning Sophomore class candidates are Dave Honeywell, vice-president; Anne Jennings, vice-president; and Rich O'Brien, O-C Commissioner. Director of Admissions John T. Goldrick commented, "We only expected 400 or 500 applications. The performance of these applicants was substantially higher than that of the regular pool."

The new plan was initiated so that applicants would be able to know if they are accepted earlier. Goldrick said: "We initiated this so that students would be able to spend their time over the summer and not waste it."

Flanner President Jack Seiler said this would have been an ex cruciatingly difficult thing for Flanner to do since there were six candidates from the dorm. "The idea is to be fair to everyone," he said. "The idea is to give everyone an equal chance to be accepted."

Callaghan, Judicial-Board Chairman Dave Grose said he had made sure that the problem had not originated in Flanner. He questioned O'Boyd's handling of the situation, saying, "You have to wonder how they found the ballots all of a sudden and why they were separated in the first place."

While Seiler expressed satisfaction with O'Boyd's work "after we informed them of the new plan," the source said, "the new plan has to be satisfied with their junior year SAT scores because there is no chance for them to take them again. Also, they shouldn't need their first semester senior year history in order to strengthen their applications."

Presently, students applying under the regular plan must have their application and all supporting documents on file by March 15. Applicants meeting the criteria received this year Goldrick commented, "There were criteria received under the regular plan were on "the nail" at 10 a.m. and April 10. When comparing the applications received this year Goldrick commented, "That is the regular plan must meet the criteria applied to all applications."

"It means that between 6,000 and 6,700 students are applying. The total number of applications under both plans will be about 2,500. About 80 percent of those applying are accepted. 500 more students will be put on a waiting list. As those originally accepted under the regular plan are up by about six to seven percent. Men who drink: the equivalent of one can of beer a day, or more, are three times more likely than non-drinkers to get cancer of the rectum, according to a new study. The research also found that consumers of wine and whiskey are more likely to get lung cancer, but gave no indication why. Several studies have shown a link between cancer and use and cancer of the mouth and throat, but the evidence associating alcohol with other kinds of cancer has been conflicting. — AP

Billy Joel's $2 million mansion was broken into yesterday according to police. The accused, John Andrews, 25, of Deer Park, told police he was not a fan of the singer, but "knew it was Joe's home and felt the need to be there," said Detective Scott Forst of the Suffolk County Police Department. The officers found the front door open and Andrews sitting at the bar drinking a beer. — AP

The Abiogenesis Dance Collective will present as spring concert, "Rhapsodic Repressions," today and tomorrow at 8 p.m. at the Hagar College Center, Saint Mary's. The group of seven dancers utilizes elements of jazz, modern and improvisational dance. Through the use of creative black and white costuming, dramatic mime-type make-up and a stark dance space, the group will evoke the rhapsodic repressions seen in everyday life. Music will be by such contemporary artists as Gary Nutan, Berlin and Thomas Dolby. The performance is free. — The Observer

Mardi Gras: A perfect party mix

A group of college students parades down a Mardi Gras parade route carrying plastic pipes adorned with newspaper and plumber’s helpers. This so-called “Krewe of Plumbers and Broken Pipes” struck a responsive chord with New Orleanians who suffered in late December, when plunging temperatures caused pipes to burst and water pressure to fall citywide.

The floats of the Rex parade slowly move through the streets. The 13 parades held in the New Orleans area climax the carnival season bringing to an end weeks of parades and parties.

Escaped convict captured in South

Associated Press

MARION, N.C. — Police captured yesterday a dangerous escaped convict from Tennessee, hours after officers killed his partner, a double murderer who had eluded police in a shootout at a nearby police officer's home.

The fugitive, James Clegg, "is in custody," said North Carolina Highway Patrol Capt. Jerry Wilks. Details of the arrest were not immediately released.

Fellow escapee Ronald Lee Freeman, 41, was killed earlier yesterday in a gunbattle with police in an abandoned house. Police trailed him with bloodhounds from the blind couple's home, where Freeman had broken in earlier. The woman had a heart attack and one of the people who came to her aid called the police.

Freeman broke down the door of a blind couple, Russ and Molly Harvey, before dawn and demanded food, said Jerry Knighton, the woman's son-in-law. Mrs. Harvey, 63, suffered a heart attack about one hour later and was later taken to Marion General Hospital in critical condition, said Assistant Administrator JoLea Bonnell.

While Clegg was still at large, residents of a Marion neighborhood voluntarily left their homes so police could search every house.

The two men, both "armed and dangerous," escaped from a Tennessee prison last month and had vowed not to be captured alive.

"We think Clegg is by far the most dangerous of the two men," said McDowell County District Attorney Alan Leonard.

Deputies shot Freeman at the couple's home and was shot with a .22-caliber gun by the man who lived there, but police were unsure if it was Freeman, Clegg or someone else.

Bloodhounds led to an abandoned house, where Freeman was killed by a police shotgun blast who stormed it after he said he would not surrender, said Leonard. Three other residents were wounded.

The state Highway Patrol was wounded in the shoulder by a bullet fired by police who tappped Freeman. The blast came through the wall and hit the woman, who was standing outside, said Leonard.

Freeman and Clegg escaped from Tennessee's Fort Pillow State Prison Feb. 16. On Feb. 21, officials said Freeman and Clegg walked out of woods near Brownsville, Tenn., and shot to death a man grilling steaks in his backyard. They took his wife and released her unharmed after telling her they wouldn't be captured alive.

Clegg was serving a life sentence as a habitual criminal and Freeman was serving a 198-year sentence for the 1970 murders of his pregnant wife and her stepdaughter.

SMC student government evolving

The restructuring of the Saint Mary's University student government, which began last year will continue, according to Student Body President-elect Lee Ann Franks.

"We are restructuring certain positions," said Franks, "basically so we can have a more efficient and cohesive board."

The vice president for academic affairs, which is now a "free-form position," according to Franks, will assume the duties of the alumni commissioner, the speaker commissioner, and the development commissioner.

"It will give the vice president some actual duties to perform," said Franks. "These three positions were interrelated and it would be more efficient to combine them."

Franks, who is currently vice president for student affairs, felt that there were areas where more representation was needed, so three new positions were created.

To the Board of Governance, a public relations commissioner will be added. Her duties will be to put out student government newsletters, which will go out "two or three times a semester," according to Franks, to inform the students.

A resident assistant representative will also be added to the Board of Governance. This representative will aid communication between the student government and resident assistants.

On the Programming Board, the position of graphics/publicity commissioner will be created. Her job will consist of designing publicity and assuring that publicity posters are put in every dorm according to Saint Mary's guidelines, and to insure that the publicity is effective.

Franks also mentioned another change she hopes to make — the broadening of the athletic commissioner's job to athletic/spirit commissioner. A new emphasis would be on "helping support our varsity teams," said Franks.

The role of the Christian life commissioner is "still up in the air," according to Franks. She is proposing that one Christian life commissioner remain on the Board of Governance, with three other students delegated to assist her without sitting on the board. One student would be in charge of spiritual affairs, another responsible for social justice, and the third working on volunteer services.

"There won't be any big differences," said Franks. "We took the areas that were weak and cut down and changed positions to make them more efficient."

Any changes made will be put to a vote before the Board of Governance and the Programming Board at an emergency meeting before school starts. In the Student Government Handbook, said Franks, said Saint Mary's students had a voice in the changes. "Students always have a say in anything we do because the meetings are always open, although right now I don't think many students are aware of that fact."

"Anything that happens at the Board of Governance or the Programming Board goes back to hall and class meetings. If the students are opposed, it would come back to us."

The changes will be taking place on April 1 when the new officials take office. Applications for the commissioner positions will be available March 20. Applications are due to the Student Government Board. The deadline for returning them is Friday, March 31.

the trustees of the University for their comments.

The University's current rules governing the consumption of alcohol are listed in the Student Government. The rules are as follows: "The use of alcoholic beverages in moderation is accepted at this University. Alcohol may be consumed in private rooms in the residence hall and in other rooms in the halls but only in accord with guidelines established by the Office of Student Affairs.

Individual student rooms as well as hall party rooms are considered to be private by the University. In addition, the guide says students must be of age to consume alcoholic beverages, to consume it, or to transport it on a public highway. (A minor in Indiana is a person under the age of 21.)"

Shamrocks Against Dystrophy is a traditional campaign established by the Muscular Dystrophy Association to celebrate St. Patrick's Day and benefit those affected with muscular dystrophy and related neuromuscular diseases.

A canister drive on campus has been organized by George Jordan, current representative of the South Bend Office of the Muscular Dystrophy Association. Jordan organized a committee of approximately seven students for the purpose of planning a drive in conjunction with the Shamrocks Against Dystrophy campaign.

Letters were sent to each dorm's social commissioner asking them to plan dorm events to raise money. Only a few dorms replied positively. Therefore, Jordan is stressing the canister drive as the campaign's main event.

Approximately sixty volunteers will collect money in the dorms starting Thursday, March 8 through Tuesday, March 13.

The money collected will go to the South Bend office where the fund use will be determined.

Jordan did not want to set a collection goal to avoid pressuring students to reach a specified amount. He hopes that this will encourage everyone to give what they can. Canisters will also be placed around campus to encourage non-students to contribute. They will be in the bookstore, the Huddle and Oak Room Cafeteria, the barber shop, and the Irish Gardens. Canisters will also be placed in the Hagar Center and the dorms of St. Mary's.

Permission for the drive was obtained from the Student Activities Office. The event was presented to the HPC and received their support.

- Chickens are proud of our showing for four guys from Flanner without a platform and without an goal we thought we did pretty well.

- In the Sophomore class election, Domagalski received 54.8 percent of the ballots cast. The ticket of Jeff Martello received 45.2 percent of the vote. Again both candidates carried their home dorm events. In addition, epidemics carried Carroll, Lewis, Zahm, Webb and St. Ed's respectively.

- This election was extremely pleated with the results, "We want to thank all the people who supported us. We took a personal approach to the campaign. We knocked on more doors than any other ticket and explained our platform. We felt this convinced many people.

- Martello commented, "I want to thank everyone who supported our ticket. Without them we couldn't have gotten even this far. It was a learning experience and we enjoyed meeting and conversing with everyone. We thank everyone for their time and effort and we wish the Domagalski ticket luck."

- Ombudsman reported a 66.9 percent turnout at the polls.

- In the off-campus committee election, Honeywell defeated Hagan, 50.6 to 46.4 percent. Although voting in the dorms was relatively even, Honeywell carried the off-campus vote by a 2:1 margin. Neither Honeywell nor Hagan were available for comment.

- Ombudsman Director Andy Tucker, who was in charge of the election, commented on the election turnout: "Theloff elections historically have a smaller turnout," but added, "I can't understand how people can avoid passing through the lobbies of their dorms and take a minute to fill out a ballot."

- He was pleased with the off-campus turnout of 72, which was 40 more than last year. "They took it seriously this time."

- Tucker was impressed by the 102 percent turnout of Zahm juniors for the Senior elections. "Anything else has not seen since he has been working at Ombudsmen. There was an alleged 128 percent turnout about six years ago and this was understandable.

- Tucker credited the smooth operation of the election to the work of the hall judicial boards and the vote counters at Ombudsmen. He asserted that their hard work was invaluable.

- The hectic days of posters and handshaking in every dorm are over for another year.

- Tucker with a smile, "It's over."

- problem. "Shinn and I were not pleased with the way it was handled."

- "They were too sure," he said. "But I wouldn't be having anywhere else. But I heard that St. Ed's had run out of ballots and that three juniors were turned away. This charge was unverified.

- Shinn also expressed doubt that Obad actually found the missing ballots. "The final vote," he said. "seemed just proportionally to the old." In addition, Obad reported two more votes than he had counted as being cast.

- Tucker downplayed the situation, saying: "If all the missing votes would have gone to Shinn, Tucker noted, 'then it would've mattered,' since that would have given enough votes to make the run-off election instead of a by-election.

- Tucker added: "We checked a little more carefully tonight (in the run-off balloting)" but added, "I thought 130 on Monday and 72 more today, it only happened once."

- Obad automatically recounts elections which are closer than 10 votes. Tucker said he was dissatisfied and in those cases there is usually only one vote different.

- Shinn said he thought "for a major university, it's something wrong with the voting system here, especially when the candidates are so close." Of the situation, Green noted, "maybe it gives credence to the idea that the Student Council should count the votes" instead of Obad.

An Tostal Beer Garten to leave Saint Mary's

By P. A. CIMINO
News Staff

The An Tostal beer garten will be at Notre Dame this year or not at all according to Saint Mary's An Tostal organizer Mary Sue Dunn.

According to Lee Ann Franks, vice president of student affairs at Saint Mary's, this year's An Tostal garten is at Notre Dame's turn to host the beer garten. Saint Mary's An Tostal commission covers the campus despite Saint Mary's being the traditional haven.

"After last year's beer garten, it was decided that each campus would alternate years," said Mary Sue Dunn, one of the Saint Mary's students involved in An Tostal planning. Dunn also stated the administration felt last year's beer garten was crowded. Saint Mary's refused to assume responsibility for any accidents which might occur and also suggested this year's beer garten be held at Notre Dame. "We will still play host to the other Thursday events," continued Dunn. "But, it made it clear that the beer garten was too be held at Notre Dame or nowhere at all.

Notre Dame's An Tostal chairman Dave Jakopin said all the plans for this year's beer garten had been arranged and a proposal had been sent to Dean of Students James Roemer. "I expect a reply in about two or three days," said Jakopin.

The proposal called for use of the senior bar area and surrounding grounds. Jakopin noted, however, he would not go into detail because he did not want to jeopardize the proposal's chances for approval.

Dean Roemer also refused to make a comment. "I have looked at the proposal and have prepared a response," said Roemer. "However, I feel it would be discourteous to that person (Jakopin) if I reveal it without first talking to him."

When asked about earlier beer gartens Jakopin noted: "The turnout has always been superb." He also mentioned that there would be two tents set up, one for alcoholic beverages and one which would house a musical group and all non-alcoholic beverages. All in all, he expressed high hopes for an event that would be both well run and acceptable to the administration.

CHALLENGE SERVE GOD AND HIS PEOPLE AS A PRIEST WITH THE SOCIETY OF AFRICAN MISSIONS

FR. JOSEPH FOLEY, S.M.A. S.M., PRIESTS DEDHAM, MA 02026

THE CHALLENGE

In 1946, the Society of African Missions was founded by a group of 13 young English men who had been formed and moulded by the Society of Jesus. They were sent to Kenya to do missionary work. They were soon joined by a number of young men from Africa and other parts of the world.

Since then, we have been involved in a wide variety of work in Africa, Asia and Latin America. We have been involved in education, health care, development work, and social work. We have also been involved in the formation of young men for the priesthood.

We are a community of men who are committed to the service of God and his people.

Our work is funded by donations and by the sales of our books and other products.

We are always looking for new ways to reach out to the poor and the marginalized.

Eavesdropping

MARG: What are those packages of cookies, some stamps and some writing paper?
CHRIS: They were sent to you a hour ago.
MARG: Well, you don’t have any, do you?
CHRIS: No, I don’t. But I told my mother that I’d lost my gloves. She said she’d send me a pair.

MARG: Well, she did. Where are the cookies?
CHRIS: They aren’t gloves! They’re mittens!
MARG: Oh, Oh, Oh! But some of them are broken. If she wrapped the mittens around the cookies, there wouldn’t be any broken ones. You can tell her that for the next time.

CHRIS: Mittens are going to be a new thing next season.
MARG: Better they’re cold hands! And you know, mittens are actually warmer than gloves.
CHRIS: How’s that?
MARG: Since mittens keep all your fingers close together, they retain warmth much better. Only your thumb is a lout in a mitten.

Golden things need not glitter

Timothy Gianotti

Guest Column

The first line, also the most important, goes something like this: “All that is gold does not glitter.” It is a powerful statement in a society such as ours. Savage tares, the Jordache look, Mercedees, since coaches, Calvin Klein, Brooks Bros., etc., are the images of beauty in our world for us Americans, the glitter is more than the gold. Understand all of this commercial mass-market, I wonder if there is any gold at all. America desperately needs an education. Particularly in the discipline of beauty, we are an illiterate nation.

“All that is gold does not glitter” — sure, it sounds profound enough, but how many of us actually believe it? How many actually have the ability to recognize gold that does not glitter?

We naturally, or rather, unnaturally, expect beauty income in finely wrapped packages. We are more realistically, in tightly fitting designer jeans, are more unusually demand that our faces be young and unwrinkled, and that is fine. We have a right to own our preferences and opinions.

I have no intention of criticizing the people and industries our Western preference demands. Rather, I intend to point out the people we exclude — those persons whose beauty is not immediately noticed.

I raise my voice on behalf of those who fall into our cruel axe of fear and ignorance. But let’s not get lost in abstraction and metaphor.

Earl Norgard is a veteran of World War One and is sixty-eight years old. His wife, Harriet, is of the same age (although she did not fight in the war). Both are intelligent, witty and delightful persons, but they do not receive a fraction of the attention that the girls next door do.

There is one reason that there is a problem. The couple must be socially defective in some way. The fact is, the Norgards lack the quality expected by our society: the beauty. Earl Norgard has all but disappeared of time caring for Harriet, who is confined to a wheelchair, and visiting his buddies, who share the common deficiency. But perhaps not everyone is such a beauty.

They are tucked away neatly in the top cupboards of society where we can forget about them. They are imprisoned in so-called “homes for the elderly,” “adult communities” and “rest homes” where most of them are miserable.

We, as a people, at least in our states, do not strike us as pretty. I chuckle at the thought of Earl trying to squeeze his comfortable pants into a pair of Calvin Klein, and I doubt that any woman in her mid-twenties is up to appearing in the swimsuit issue of Sports Illustrated.

Thus, American logic in its purest form leads us to conclude that these people are of no use to us. We push them aside, and should be God forbid — to deal with them, we talk to them, and to them, and in baby talk.

Earl Norgard would burst out laughing because he was delighted to befriend ignorant, prejudiced youths such as ourselves — no matter our age — and just friends.

Their gifts, drawn from a wealth of experience and an old eye for life, can enter our minds and heart just as our gifts — the emotional ups and downs, the mousy, the liberty of points of view — challenge them to be alive.

Let a sparkle in an old man’s eye be your reward. This is the gold that Tolkien talked about, that intricate, mysterious stuff crafted by the gods.

Earl and Harriet Norgard are two real people who reside in a real house in Portland, Oregon. They are our next-door neighbors.

Race over?

Dear Editor

Before Michael Hany invests in tickets to the 1985 Reagan Bush Inaugural, he would do well to remember that the popularity with the American electorate is a notoriously fickle and unpredictable phenomenon.

Last Tuesday’s New Hampshire Democratic primary election produced the latest object lesson in the peculiar whimsality of the American voter. On Feb 7, an ABC, Washington Post poll showed 41 percent of New Hampshire Democrats favoring Walter Mondale, and 10 percent behind Gary Hart. Yet, barely one week later, Hart launched Mondale, winning 59 percent of the vote, while Mondale could muster only 27 percent.

This election was right over a century ago, when he scoffed at “the bubble of pophey.” Yes, but he is no more without merit and lost without crime.

The Democrats are “without any major candidates and in a party without a Reagan” he was putting us on. Ronald Reagan has saddled this country with the largest federal deficit in its history. The American trade deficit stands at a crippling $70 billion. The president has promised to try and carve up entitlement programs if he is re-elected.

He has effectively ruined the legal services Corporation taxes owed by the rich have been slashed, while the ranks of the truly poor continue to grow. The American prestige in Europe, the Middle East, Latin America and the world.

The statement of the world snicker directly at an American president who can actually “minimize himself” does off at international conferences, and seems unable either to grasp the major issues or even to ut a simple declarative sentence.
Michael Hany ought not to “tune out” the campaign so early. The American people will have plenty to think about before November.

Synchronize

Dear Editor

Saturday, I planned to be a dinner theater date at the dinner hall at 5 p.m. (on the dot). Since it takes five minutes from the time I leave my home to get there, I left my clock (set to the time the telephone operator gave me) said 4:55 p.m.

I was neither hampered nor hurried on my way and was surprised to find I arrived seven minutes too early. (according to the clock in the dining hall) I became confident when I realized that I was actually 20 minutes too late for my even table scrag (a different clock in the dining hall said it was now 6:00 p.m).

The bizarre incident is not a new one. The clock in P.W. is six minutes too fast, the clock on O’Hag differs from the one on Sacred Heart.

Dear Editor

Dear Editor,
I am glad the University is going dry, since this most certainly will solve all the social and alcohol related problems we now have.

Just think of how much the social life will improve without weekend parties. For those who are left to be merry, they can take advantage of the world-famous South Bend.
Behind the Catholic mask

The administration and Board of Trustees have perpetrated one grand marketing scheme. They have painted the face of this small midwestern university with the mask of a great Catholic institution.

This facade has, in a large part, been a byproduct of the personality and charisma of one man, Father Theodore Hesburgh. Though Hesburgh has been responsible for vast improvements in the quality of facilities, faculty, and scholarship, he has failed to produce a great Catholic university.

This argument does not contest the greatness of Notre Dame, although that could very well be done. Rather, it questions the Notre Dame character as a Catholic institution. The way the University's finances are run, its treatment of the current alcohol controversy and its involvement with the military through ROTC, is a surefire question Notre Dame's "Catholic" label.

A glaring example of how Notre Dame undermines its right to be labeled "Catholic" is its investments in segregated South Africa. The university's position on this issue reflects a businesslike attitude, not a Christian one.

Investing in the economy of South Africa is paramount to affirming the moral legality of the apartheid system. If apartheid is morally wrong, then so is investing in the economic community which supports it. Somehow a Catholic university should have a higher call on it.

In the current alcohol controversy, the administration has created the perception that alcohol abuse by students is the primary issue. In view of the administration's past performance, this is a difficult position to accept.

A more believable explanation of the alcohol controversy is that the pressure being felt under the Golden Dome, from both the Indiana state authorities and from the liability guidelines stemming from recent lawsuits, have finally become too severe to ignore.

Why can't the administration just do us all a favor and say that the risks involved in allowing underaged drinking on campus, have just become too great? Why can't they blame it on the legal system? It would be so much easier. Why are they trying to fool the students into thinking that they are doing things out of concern for them?

Many students at this university are enrolled in the ROTC program. They are taught hatred toward other human beings, and using a wide assortment of weapons. Since Hesburgh, defined a soldier? That was not in the New Testament. How is the knowledge to kill of Christian value?

Jesus Christ abhorred violence. He denounced militant Jews who voiseded the messiah as a great general, as someone to lead the Jewish people to resist against the Romans.

Jesus Christ would never kill another human being, not even in self-defense. Jesus Christ died on the cross because it was part of his character, the Christian character.

How does a Catholic university justify its involvement in the ROTC program and in military research, while at the same time bearing the charge for nuclear disarmament? This implies that while nuclear weapons are morally unacceptable, M16 rifles are.

Notre Dame should start realizing that there is more to being Catholic than being run by an administration made up of priests, without federal subsidies.

A Catholic university should be one which does something because it is the Christian thing to do, not simply because, as the author says, "anything Catholic with Christian? I though that Catholicism implied Christianity.

Making the impossible seem possible

"If you vote for me the country's future will be in your hands. If you vote for me the country's future will be in your hands. If you vote for me the country's future will be in your hands. If you vote for me the country's future will be in your hands. If you vote for me the country's future will be in your hands. If you vote for me the country's future will be in your hands. If you vote for me the country's future will be in your hands. If you vote for me the country's future will be in your hands. If you vote for me the country's future will be in your hands. If you vote for me the country's future will be in your hands." "Vote for us. We have the experience."

There are common statements right now and they remind us that it is campaign time at Notre Dame and also out in the "real world."

Mark Boehmighausen

is the time of year professional politicians and budding student politicians bombard us with their qualifications and new invigorating ideas.

As has been said, "politics is the art of the possible." It seems, however, that campaign politics revolve around making the impossible appear possible.

If we recall the 1980 presidential election, then-candidate Ronald Reagan promised to cut taxes and increase defense spending substantially while at the same time balancing the budget. Through his unique communication skills Reagan made this impossible task seem possible to a majority of the American electorate.

One cannot, though, confuse this campaign style to the Republicans. In presidential candidate Walter Mondale we have the quintessential campaign politician. From all we hear about his campaign, it appears Mondale has promised everything under the sun to every interest group in the regular Democratic coalition.

Most of his money for education, protection from unfair foreign imports, a strong but leaner national defense, and more money for government social services are but a few of Mondale's promises. He will do all of this, of course, in large ROTC program all seriously increases and while at the same time cutting into the ballooning federal deficit.

Stated like this, Mondale's platform appears impossible, but wrapped up in campaign rhetoric it somehow comes across as vaguely possible.

When we leave the national scene and turn to class officer elections on campus the stated goals are less far reaching but they are very interesting and in may instances quite entertaining.

One particularly fascinating promise appears on almost every class officer ticket. The goal as described on these ticket's posters is "to promote class unity."

What is class unity? Is it a special feeling we are supposed to possess? When we stumble out of bed in the morning should we experience a special karma between ourselves and the rest of our classmates?

For some reason it is hard to grasp the concept of class unity. It must be a terribly important goal if almost every class officer ticket endorses it, but it seems anything that is impossible to define would be even more difficult to promote.

Besides this general theme of class unity, a specific slogan by a class of '85 ticket caught my attention. At the top and bottom of this particular poster is the bold statement: "The Imp" Never Fades."

Obviously the senior class officers are important as the people elected organize reunions and are responsible for keeping track of the class members, but this slogan in a bit pretentious.

I don't know about the rest of the class, but 15 years down the line I think the impact of who I voted for or who was elected might start to fade. Indeed, when I am married and have two or three kids, a house in suburbia U.S.A., and two cars (one, of course, being a wood-paneled station wagon) the impact, for me anyway, could begin to fade.

Such exaggerated statements, though, are part of any campaign and they do add immensely to its entertainment value.

Another part of campaigns, although maybe not a very interesting part, are the articles that appear concerning a particular campaign. These pieces increase as a campaign goes on and even after an election is over. In fact, readers often wonder if these pieces ever end. Yes indeed, the campaign season — making the impossible seem possible.

Interhall playoff action continues

Off-Campus defeated Sorin Hall in interhall basketball action last night, 49-43, to force a second championship game in the double-elimination tournament.

Jeff Jones led all scorers with his 18-point performance for Off-Campus. Jones hit six of seven free throws, and 12 of 13 overall. As a team, Off-Campus hit 14 of 19 foul shots — an astounding 88 percent. Sorin was able to connect on only 9-15 from the line.

Tom Willis helped the effort with 11 points for Off-Campus, while Tim Beardsley had 11. Sorin's balanced attack was led by Rick D'Olier's 12-point effort, while Pat Gillis and Steve Beuerlein added nine apiece.

Off-Campus led for the entire game, jumping to a 9-2 edge after the first quarter and holding a 19-12 advantage at halftime. Sorin's quick, pressing defense began to show results in the third period, but cold shooting at the offensive end kept them down by a 29-24 score going into the fourth quarter. Off-Campus hit the crucial free throws, keeping at least a four-point lead through the rest of the tightly contested game.

In Division B action, Morrissey got by Grace, 48-38, to send that playoff to a second game as well. Dave Place led all scorers in the game, tallying 13 points for the Rams. Morrissey and Grace were tied after the first quarter and held a 19-12 edge after the first quarter.

The other matchup at 160 saw Joe Beatty beat southpaw Eric Witte on a unanimous decision. Witte didn't seem to know how to handle Beatty's right-handed style and often appeared to be running away from Beatty. Witte received two standing eight counts during the fight and was hit with a forceful shot to the jaw at the end of the bout.

If there was a feature bout it had to include Angelo Perino. Perino is vying for his third championship in the Bengals, and his win tonight over freshman Ed Hughes got him to the finals. The match was stopped at the 1:34 mark of the second round.

A gutsy John Chiare took successive blows to the face and midsection from John Gurganus in his loss in the first 175-pound fight. The fight was stopped at the 1:36 mark of the first round.

Ken Munro upset defending champion Dave Packo on a split decision in the other fight at 175. Munro was a winner in this year's novice tournament.

Defending champion Mike Cray defeated freshman Jim Ackerson when the referee stopped the 185-pound bout in the second round. Cray will take on Dennis Hill in the finals of the 185-pound weight division.

The first heavyweight bout was all Larry Andreni as he forced the referee to stop the fight at the 45 second mark of the second round. Andreni's opponent, Kevin O'Shea, was given a standing eight count in the first round and was knocked down before the fight was stopped.

Jim Seith, a 220-pound sophomore, was defeated by a much lighter Byron Abraham in the other heavyweight bout.

Rucker's career parallels Irish

By THERON ROBERTS
Sports Writer

It has been a season of ups and downs for the Notre Dame men's basketball team — after winning six consecutive games at home, it dropped five of its next six. The squad also lost four of its last five games on the road.

So also has been the story of Cecil Rucker's career with the Irish. It began with much promise of future success, but ended only with fits and starts. He could have scored more had he more playing time, or he could have been a better player if he had played more consistently.

When Rucker came to campus, he brought with him the high expectations that accompany any Notre Dame recruit. Being from the same high school as former Irish standout Austin Carr and Don "Duck" Williams, and the fact that the Washington D.C. area has been a hotbed of basketball talent, Rucker had to endure even more pressure.

Many saw in him the image of Orlando Woolridge as a freshman, since Rucker also had a lanky build and relied more on size than speed to score his points, much as the current star for the Chicago Bulls began here.

His first year in South Bend, Rucker was relegated to the bench, having to watch the likes of Woolridge, Kelly Tripucka, and Tim Andreec from the sidelines. He had to wait his turn, as freshmen must.

Then during his sophomore season, the opportunity came for him to get into the action. The Irish played with a short lineup — often dressing only eight scholarship players, and Rucker saw the chance to make a name for himself.

Still, Rucker played on a limited basis at times, as he battled with a recently recognizable Irish team inconsistency.

The students, who had taken a particular liking to him, were not about to let Rucker down. The fans may have been quiet when he was playing poorly, or not at all, but when it came time for Rucker to report into the lineup, one could always sense the crowd's excitement.

"I always appreciated the students supporting me," Rucker says. "It feels good when people cheer for you, and when you have a lot of people who want to see you do well, it makes you go out and play hard."

The crowd was often disappointed, however, since Rucker still had to endure even more pressure.

"I enjoyed my role during sophomore year," Rucker recalls. "I think I stacked up well against some of the better teams."

Looking back on the first half of his career at that point, one would conclude that Rucker had a pretty good start. Maybe he wasn't in contention for Player of the Year honors, but he still had a good chance to put together two solid years before he graduated.

Looking at this season's Notre Dame basketball team, one could say that the team and Cecil Rucker suffered similar fates. Neither lived up to its potential.

When Rucker was a junior, five talented freshmen entered into the scene, while only one player graduated.

"There were some changes, and I had to deal with them," says Rucker.

The most obvious adjustment was playing only 56 minutes a game, usually going in after the game's outcome had already been decided.

In that regard, this season has been easier for the senior to deal with. Rucker again was used sparingly at the beginning of the season, and then not at all after the trip over Christmas break to the Northwest.

"I assumed the role of being Digger's doghouse, that's why I didn't get to play. As a player, I wish that I could play more, but I have to make the best of the position I'm in."

Rucker still would like to get an opportunity to play basketball in the future. However, like the Irish team, which will settle for the NIT instead of the NCAA tournament, he probably will have to settle for joining Tim Andreec in Italy playing in the European leagues.

But Rucker does think that he has learned some things about basketball and life while he has been here.

"My whole career has been a learning experience," he says. "I've had my share of tough times. Getting through them is supposed to make you a tougher, better person, and if that's the case, I should turn out to be a heckuva guy."

Michigan squeaks by Irish

By ED KONRAD
Sports Writer

Little Dave gave Goldie a slap in the head, but victory was not meant to be.

The University of Michigan, last year's Big Ten champ, left the ACC reeling, but victorious. The underdog Irish tennis team kept their semi-final hopes alive as the Irish went up 3-1 against Jim Najarian who was sidelined due to an injury. Jim Dolan adjusted his game to pick up where he left off. The Irish lost quickness and experience this weekend, but they still cruised to a 5-2 victory.

Jim Najarian lost the lead in the final set, 6-4, 7-6. But Cohen held his ground, and the Irish, and Ghidotti came through in the clutch with an emotional 6-2, 6-4 victory.

I was serving and returning really well. Ghidotti said, "I changed pace a bit, mixed my shots well, and it just worked for us." He was frustrated the whole match.

Ghidotti's victory gave the Irish a 5-1 lead.

Joe Najarian fought a good match against Jim Sharton, but Sharton's serve was just too powerful, and he closed out the match with a 6-4, 7-6 (7-5) and the tie score at 5-5.

The longest match of the day was next as UM's Rob Schreiber defeated Jim Noonan 6-2, 6-5. The score does not reflect the intensity of Noonan's play as uncharacteristic errors marred his effort.

"I felt I was scoring more points all through," said the junior Pangborn. "It's an excellent boxer. I couldn't have asked for a better opponent," he said.

Leykso took on junior Jeff Herrmann last night, and the Irish seemed to confirm their weakness in the final round and was knocked down twice. The match was stopped at the 10:15 mark.

"It might have been stopped a little early," commented Leykso. "I guess the referee figured I had more points, but he could have called it when I was leading 5-2," he said.

Bengal semi-finals a crowd hit

By JOE BRUNETTI

The excitement started early and so did the crowd at last night's semi-finals of the Bengal. They were so excited, they ran onto the court and started cheering.

In the first half of the night, the 150- pounder Matt Pratt capped a big match against John Royer, who had never fought before. He showed up to the fight and was the underdog for the underdog.

By Sunday's match on a unanimous decision, and Doug Pratt was the upset machine prior to his injury. Jim Dolan adjusted his game to pick up where he left off. The Irish lost quickness and experience this weekend, but they still cruised to a 5-2 victory.
