Hart expected to take Connecticut

Associated Press

On the eve of the Connecticut primary, Gary Hart accepted Walter Mondale yesterday of having a Central American policy that would lead to U.S. bloodshed in the area. The Rev. Jesse Jackson promised to end poverty in America in three years by diverting funds for weapons. Democratic presidential candidates spent yesterday last-minute campaigning in Connecticut, with 52 delegates at stake in today's voting.

Virginia Democrats, meanwhile, were set last night to complete caucuses that began Saturday. Jackson surprised Democratic leaders there with his slim lead in the popular vote in weekend voting, although Mondale held a slight delegate edge. The caucuses allots 68 of 76 delegates. In Connecticut, polls put Hart in a strong position to win the state and thus make a clean sweep of New England.

The New York yesterday, Hart lumped Mondale's Central American policies with those of President Reagan. "If the Mondale policy or the Reagan policies are followed, not only will this country light a fuse or continue to ignite a fuse leading toward an explosion in that region. I am absolutely convinced in this decade we will see the loss, the rather large loss, of American lives in that region."

He cited what he called Mondale's late call for withdrawal from Southeast Asia in the 1970s, saying Mondale's view of Central America "is part of a pattern stretching back to the Vietnam War, with a willingness to walk into the region with no clear strategy and with no clear exit."

Mondale, in Manhattan, said the United States should central American make their own choices. "Forces of all the big powers should get out of there. I'm not going to pick sides."

"Half the U.S. troops out of the area. Mondale says they should be reduced, but U.S. military presence helps in talks with Nicaragua."

References to John Kennedy cropped up again, but now it was Mondale who invoked his name. Hart has been accused of imitating JFK's style.

Mondale said he would follow Kennedy's lead in working for new weapons testing treaties; "John Kennedy did something unilaterally temporarily in halting tests of nuclear weapons in the atmosphere. "It worked. Within two months we had a test-ban treaty."

Nuclear non-proliferation subject of town meeting last night in CCE

Can the United States trust the Soviet Union?

This and other questions on how to survive in a world with nuclear weapons were raised last night at a town meeting on nuclear non-proliferation at the Center for Continuing Education.

"How to live in a world with weapons over centuries, not just years in one of man's greatest problems, which is why we must be concerned about nuclear non-proliferation," said Dr. Lewis A. Dunn, assistant director for Nuclear and Weapons Control of the United States Arms Control and Disarmament Agency. Dunn was the key speaker at the meeting which was sponsored by the South Bend League of Women Voters.

Dunn said he believes nuclear arms control is more than just arms limitation agreements between the U.S. and the Soviets; nuclear non-proliferation is also an essential element of nuclear arms control. "It is important that non-proliferation doesn't become a less important part of arms control," he said.

Dunn said the greatest threat of nuclear weapons stems from the possible spread of the weapons to conflict areas. The world is concerned about Iran and Iraq as examples of a conflict

Fifty cases of AIDS in 10 cities have been traced to a single man. A sexual assault by this man may have been a carrier of the disease, spreading it across the country without knowing he had it. The man had sex with eight victims of acquired immune deficiency syndrome — or AIDS — in Los Angeles and four in New York, according to an investigation by the Centers for Disease Control. Those eight in turn had contact with others, and the chain of contact ultimately spread to San Francisco, Florida, Georgia, Texas, Pennsylvania and New Jersey — 10 cities in all. Identification of the AIDS carrier is further evidence for the belief AIDS is caused by an infectious agent, said William Darrow, the head of the CDC team that tracked down the cases. — AP

Middle-aged men who are heavy smokers will suffer an average of 500,000 each in extra medical bills and lost earnings during their lifetimes, according to a study of the hidden costs of cigarettes. Making up this loss for all smokers would require an additional tax of $5 on every pack of cigarettes, the researchers calculated. "We thought every smoker to be a gambler," said Gerry Oster, a medical economist. "And we wanted to estimate how likely amount of money every smoker should expect to lose in the lottery that he or she is playing with her life." The study conducted at Policy Analysis Inc., a Brookline, Mass. firm that researches health cost issues, was presented yesterday at a meeting of the American College of Cardiologists in Dallas. — AP

In Brief

Belle (bel) n. a pretty woman or girl.

Weinstein's definition may be generally accepted, but it doesn't tell the whole story. Unfortunately the word belle not only describes a pretty girl or woman, but also the name of Saint Mary's athletic teams. Both Notre Dame and Saint Mary's can be accused of clinging to archaic ideas and stereotypes, most of which students are well aware of. However, perception seems to be driven by traditions. For example, the nickname "belle". Yet few have commented on this nickname, surely one of the most obsolete customs at Saint Mary's or Notre Dame. The word belle has absolutely nothing to do with athletes or Saint Mary's college in general. For most people the word belle conjures up images of Scarlett O'Hara lookalikes from down South. Since this happens to be the heart of the Midwest, not Atlanta, Georgia, that description does not make much sense.

One could try to be cute, as many do, and refer to the old Bing Crosby movie, "The Bells of Saint Mary's." However, this is in 1948. Bing Crosby has nothing to do with Saint Mary's and never did. In fact, many poor, misguided souls around here have never heard of the movie.

So, why not a name change for Saint Mary's teams? Such a change could cause Saint Mary's athletes to breathe a collective sigh of relief.

It is difficult to be taken seriously when one is playing as a "belle." Come on, how intimidating can an athlete who calls herself a "belle" be to other teams?

Just imagine the other teams in their locker rooms: "Boy, those belles look tough tonight!" or "Hey, remember to watch out for belle number 12."圣 Mary's has long suffered from its stereotype as a college for husband-hunting females. Administrators and students deny this, and few put much stock in this sort of nonsense. Most Saint Mary's women would be very upset, and with just cause, if accused of being primarily concerned with how they appear to males.

"School promoting professional, practical and superior education for women, calls its athletic teams a group of "pretty women or girls." Would Saint Mary's athletic teams consider themselves better — looking than other teams, why does their name convey that? It comes across as a bit pretentious. Why should our teams be saddled with a name that seems to promote them as the best-looking team? — The Observer

Belle's of Saint Mary's sound out of tune to some

Theresa Guarino
Assistant News Editor

Inside Tuesday

What kind of image does this present to other schools, and to Saint Mary's students themselves? They are constantly told they are the women leaders of tomorrow, future heads of business and industry. Some- how pretty women or girls as a lone description does not convey this idea.

Saint Mary's is not the only team suffering with a name which has nothing to do with the team or school itself. How about the Purdue Boilermakers, Old Dominion's Monarchs, or the Akron Zips? The name "Fighting Irish" can be called unusual or interesting if nothing else.

But what if the Irish were called the "Fighting Beaus." You laugh, but it happens to be the male equivalent of belle.

The biggest problem with the name Saint Mary's Belles is the lack of respect it commands. Saint Mary's athletes work hard, and they certainly deserve respect, especially since the Saint Mary's community generally gives them little attention. A name change will probably not prompt a change in students' attitudes, but it can only help.

Saint Mary's athletes and non-athletes alike should band together to choose and demand a suitable new name. There are many possibilities: name contest, prizes.

The name belle is one archaic tradition that deserves to die a quick, painless death.

Four immigrants sentenced despite protest as barroom rape trial ends

Associated Press

FALL RIVER, Mass. — Four men convicted of gang-raping a woman on a barroom pool table were sentenced yesterday to 6-12 years in prison by a judge who said they "brutalized a defenseless young woman and sought to degrade and destroy her human, individual dignity."

The victim's lawyer said afterward that the 22-year-old mother of two feared for her safety and had moved permanently from the area.

"There were five sentences in this case — one of them excise," said the lawyer, Scott Charnas.

Superior Court Judge William Young imposed terms of 9 to 12 years on Daniel Silva, 27, Victor Raposo, 25, and John Cordeiro, 24. Young sentenced Joseph Vieira, 28, to 6 to 8 years. Bristol County District Attorney Ronald Pina sought a lesser sentence for Vieira, saying he had no prior record and that the woman's testimony that he was directly involved in the rape was not corroborated.

The maximum penalty for aggravated rape is life imprisonment.

Several hundred stood quietly outside the century-old courthouse. The silence erupted into shouts of "Let them go!" The defendants, all Portuguese immigrants, are backed by many in their community who feel they were treated unfairly because of their national origin.

All the sentences will be served at the maximum-security Walpole State Prison. Under state law Vieira must serve at least four years, the others face at least six years before being eligible for parole.

Earlier, the elections council put the number of eligible voters at 2.5 million and predicted a turnout of 1.8 million. The difference of 700,000, the council explained.

The United States, chief backer of El Salvador against the rebels, gave $475 million to help pay for the country where the average annual income is $475.

The victim's lawyer said afterward that the defendants, all Portuguese immigrants, are backed by many in their community who feel they were treated unfairly because of their national origin.

NIT Roundup

Springfield, Mass. — For the first time in the tournament, Notre Dame had to play away from home — something which the team had not done very well this season. The game at the “neutral” site of Springfield Coliseum matched the Irish and their “Beef” Tim Kempton, against a troubled Boston College squads, whose two-year captain, Martin Clark, had recently quit the team.

The Eagles, led by the high-scorer duo of forward Jay Murphy and guard Michael Adams, had been ranked as high as sixth in the nation this season and entered the game at slight advantage. However, Boston College coach Gary Williams and his team were not ready for the two latest additions to the Notre Dame attack, a healthy Kempton and an credible accuracy from the foul line. Kempton scored 20 points in just 27 minutes of playing time. Williams, while Irish, who had been averaging a weak 65 percent from the line, missed all 34 of his attempts.

“We tried to pound the ball inside, which Tim Kempton did,” said Irish cog Dickie Phelps after the game. “We knew Kempton, we’re 16-3. Let’s out him, we’re 3-6. That’s all I can say about how important he is to the team. They come in here shooting 65 percent from the line and make 95 percent tonight,” said a frustrated Williams after the game. “It’s just so disappointing to outscore them from the field and lose.”

Not only did Boston College score more points (38-32) from the field than Notre Dame did, but also the Irish scored more points from the free line (34) than they did from the field (116).

The key point of the game was the Irish free throw game in the second half. Notre Dame had fallen behind by seven, 59-52, and seemed to be floundering. However, Kempton and Tom Sluby quickly put the Irish in front by scoring 15 of the next 17 points. The Eagles grabbed their final lead, 61-60, with 3:05 left, but the last 15 foul shots blew to blow the cold shooting (32 percent) Eagles.

Once again, it was Tom Sluby and Kempton who led the Irish. Sluby scored a team-high 18 points, while Kempton scored 13. However, it was the performance of point guard Joe Howard that provided the biggest boost, as he scored 15 points, most of them late in the game.

The Irish outscored Pitt 94-71 in a 16-7 lead early in the game and led 51-28 at halftime, largely on the scoring of Clyde Wesley. Howard and George Allen, who had 24 first-half points between them. However, the Irish quickly turned the game around in the second half by outscoring Pitt, 11-1, in the first four minutes of the half.
Come to Paradise, come to Notre Dame

In a world of changing values, few things remain constant. The one constant among the many things that have not changed at Notre Dame is the philosophy that this man cannot walk without his crock.

Rampant cheating?

Dear Editor:
I am writing in response to The Observer's article on cheating which appeared on the front page of the March 15 issue. I feel that this article grossly exaggerated the amount of cheating which occurs in Dr. Hofman's Chemistry 115-116 class.

The survey of students done by Mr. Nebl must have been extremely incomplete to give the impression that a majority of the class has cheated at least once. The article which appeared in The Observer was a public humiliation of Dr. Hofman, a man who has devoted his life to Notre Dame. I feel that Dr. Hofman deserves a public apology from not only the author of the article, but also the editorial staff, who allowed the article to be printed.

Sluby leads team past SLU, 65-59

NEW YORK — It was a classic case of the familiar and the unfamiliar. The Southwestern Louisiana and Notre Dame basketball teams, as the Irish stopped SLU 65-59, in the semifinals of the NIT. Notre Dame now faces Michigan, who stopped the Louisville Cardinals in the first half of last night’s doubleheader, in the championship game on Wednesday afternoon (5 p.m. — USA Network).

Returning to the Notre Dame team playing which it rebounds against opponents after game, but this was the same Notre Dame team shooting free throw. While most fans will remember the poor foul shooting of the Irish, in addition, last year the Irish rebounded off the offensive end.

"Their offensive rebounds were a definite key," said Bobby Paschal, who had 15 points. "They were one of the better rebounding teams we played this year."

"But you can look at other things that made the outcome in the game. We did not execute well at all on the offensive end, and we were impatient there. We also missed some key free throws, and they only beat us on all of those at crucial times."

Neither team was able to do much in the first half, as the lead changed hands six times. The Irish were able to score at will on the offensive end, and the 40 percent shooting from the field in the initial period beause of the Cavins could manage but 29 percent themselves. The shots just didn’t seem to be falling for either team. In the second half, though, that situation appeared to change.

"We just tried to get better shots," explained Notre Dame coach Rick Sluby. "We shot the free throw. I had problems early. Maybe I was just a little nervous."

"I think I was rushing my shot," Coach (Digger Phelps) just sat me on the bench to see things more clearly, and I settled down," continued Sluby, who ended up with 26 points on the night.

From its 24-19 advantage at the half, Notre Dame was able to increase that margin to 52-21 to open the second half. The Irish then were able to control the game tempo the rest of the way.

Southwestern Louisiana was forced to foul down the stretch, and, of course, Notre Dame had little trouble controlling from the gift line on the ensuing one-and-one.

Terria Foy of Southwestern Louisiana was forced to foul down the stretch, and, of course, Notre Dame had little trouble controlling the Irish from the gift line on the ensuing one-and-one.

"I think that maybe we thought we could coast after we got up by 11, but we just regrouped out on the floor and then dug in again," Tom Sluby, assistant coach, said.

The Irish came back to take charge of the contest.

"I think that maybe we thought we could coast after we got up by 11, but we just regrouped out on the floor and then dug in again."

Although the task of finding replacements for graduating players is always a goal of spring workouts, the appearance of the three new defensive coaches took top billing this time.

Andy Christoff, the new defensive coordinator, and coach of the defensive backfield, has a throng of players trying to secure defensive backfield positions vacated by Tomaran and Brown.

"With the score 58-53 in favor of Notre Dame, we had the chair in the backcourt by Larry Golic and junior Rick DiBernardo. Although DiBernardo did not start in 1983, he did see considerable action. So, the backup will be senior Joe Burns and sophomore Robert Banks.

The defensive tackles will be under the guidance of Nick Lanzo, who came to Notre Dame via Georgia Tech. Senior Mike Gann, junior Greg Dingens and sophomore Mike Griffith all have the spots up for now, with support coming from junior Eric Dorney and senior Jerry Weinle.

George Kelly, the only returning defensive coach, may have the most luxuries at the inside linebacker spots. Junior Tony Forunissi, the top Irish linebacker last season, and sophomore Mike Kvok will have a shot at those spots, and our biggest worry is that margin to 32-21 to open the second half. The Irish then were able to control the game tempo the rest of the way."

Southwestern Louisiana was forced to foul down the stretch, and, of course, Notre Dame had little trouble controlling from the gift line on the ensuing one-and-one. Notre Dame continued to the finals of this year's tournament. The Irish lost to Virginia Tech, 92-91, in overtime for a second-place finish in the 1973 tournament. Virginia Tech fell just a little short.

Notre Dame football team begins spring practice

By THERON ROBERTS
Sports Writer

Notre Dame's three new defensive coaches got their first look at the 1984 Irish football squad minus the incoming freshmen in the spring practice season opened yesterday at Cartier Field.

Counts, who enters his fourth season as the Irish head, led his players through position drills with the offensive and defensive units, and for three of those coaches, it was time to get acquainted with their troops.

The roster is missing a few notable players as the Irish prepare for the upcoming season. Longtime captain Brian Seale, quarterback and captain; four-year senior Brian Pohlman, defensive end; junior Mike Johnson, nose tackle; All-AFC first team selection; senior Brian Johnson, center; junior Greg Smitherman, kicker; Mike Johnston, defensive tackle and Jon Aurty, linebacker; and junior John Mosbdy, fullback, with help coming from classmates Mark Brooks.

Steve Beuerlein looks to go into his sophomore campaign as the Irish signal caller after an impressive freshman season. Scott Grooms will be back for his final season to provide assistance, as will sophomore Joe Felisvsky.

Receiving Beuerlein's passes will be senior Joe Howard, who will have to wait for the NIT to end before starting football practice, along with junior Matt Jackson and sophomore Allen Miller.

The kicking game is another thing that Faust would like to have settled, because replacements for both Kiel and Johnson are needed.

Faust was fairly pleased with what he saw in the first practice, although he admits that it is too early to make judgments.

With 17 returning starters, the Liberty Bowl triumphs, and the improvement Faust has noted over his three years there, there is much reason for optimism for the 1984 season.

The spring practice session closes with the 54th annual Blue-Gold game, which is slated for Saturday, April 28.
