Mock Convention nominates Hart

By MARK POTTER

Convention Reporter

Gary Hart was finally selected as the Democratic presidential nominee at the Mock Convention on the seventh ballot at 3 a.m. Saturday. Walter Mondale's concession and subsequent endorsement of Hart after the sixth ballot set the stage for Hart's victory one ballot later.

The convention, held in Stepan Center, saw a fierce political battle develop between Rosbin Askew, Hart, and Mondale after the other candidates dropped out of the race.

Initially there were seven hopefuls for the Democratic presidential nomination, Askew, John Glenn, Hart, Ernest Hollings, Jesse Jackson, George McGovern, and Mondale.

Father Patrick Sullivan began Friday night's session of the convention with the invocation. He was followed by Representative Romano Mazzoli (D. Ky). Mazzoli, a Notre Dame graduate told the crowd to get involved in politics.

The campaign chairmen then gave the nominating speeches for HART page 8

Senior Buddy elections alternative to Fellow

By DAN MCCULLOUGH

News Editor

As an alternative to today's Senior Fellow elections, Senior Buddy elections will also be held in the dining halls and the student center.

The Senior Buddy committee, which was formed last week, wants to "present a viable alternative," according to coordinator Oscar Osorio. He added, "This year the seniors' right to choose our Senior Fellow was prostituted."

The Senior Fellow committee last week decided to exclude Harold Augustine from today's ballots because "he fails to meet the criteria established by the committee," according to Committee Chairman Mike James. Nominees are required to have a tie with the Notre Dame community, have directly affected the lives of senior class members and provided them with inspiration to reach for higher ideals and have successfully incorporated Christian values into their lives.

James said specifically Augustine doesn't meet the second requirement. "Besides his statement on the alcohol policy, Harry hasn't really had any affect on the senior class."

Augustine first received notoriety after appearing in The Observer's Campus Comments section. Augustine answered a question about the alcohol policy with the now-famous quotation, "A wet campus is a happy campus."

Osorio stressed that he was not pushing for Augustine as the Senior Buddy, but rather just wanted the senior class to be able to choose for themselves. "Of course they are free to vote for him, but you are free to vote for whoever you want. The senior class is able to make its own decisions. The emphasis should be on the freedom to decide and not on any particular candidate," Osorio said.

Osorio added that he expects the Senior Buddy elections to put a damper on the Senior Fellow elections. "It will have to redefine itself," he said. "Because obviously the [Senior Fellow] committee sees itself as seniors."

James said he is not taking the Senior Buddy elections as a personal vendetta for Augustine. see BUDDY page 6

The Observer's 3rd International Festival last night to a near-capacity audience at Washington Hall.

The festival, a variety show completely produced by international students and free to the public, was under the direction of Winston Griffin. The Notre Dame International Students Organization presented its International Festival last night to a near-capacity audience at Washington Hall.

The festival, a variety show completely produced by international students and free to the public, was under the direction of Winston Griffin, a Korean student major from England, and de Mello, a junior from Kenya, described the festival as "our gift to the Notre Dame and South Bend communities. It is also our way of expressing our deepest appreciation to the host families."

They also expressed the hope that it "will mark the beginning of a greater interaction and increasing awareness of the world beyond the boundaries of state and nation."

Griffin commented that the emphasis of the festival has changed this year. "Last year, it was mostly cultural activities. This year, we said 'Do something to make the people think or laugh.' It was basically 'Do whatever you want.' There were political overtones and humor that was aimed at the student population."

Griffin also expressed disappoint-
When fraternal twins Mary and Ronald Pyke were young, their 10-year-old sister was the smarter one. The same thing happened to twins Douglass and Michael Beck. It was a tough question to answer then, and it's just as tough now. All four have won four-year National Merit Scholarships. The Pyke twins attend High- land High School in Highland, Ind. The Beck's go to Lake Forest High in Lake Forest, Ill. Although none of the twins has yet graduated to any school, Mary Pyke wants to go to Georgetown and major in international business; Ronald Pyke likes Purdue's computer science program. Douglass is looking at the University of Illinois for a prelaw program, and Michael Beck favors the University of Pennsylvania to study management and technology. — AP

Walter F. Mondale promised yesterday that the Three Mile Island nuclear plant would remain closed if he is elected president. The 10-member candidate campaign has united state workers and the late Jesse Jackson said he could "not" muzzle supporters even when they threaten violence. "I have no problem disavowing myself from violence or threats of it," Jackson said. Two days before Pennsylvania's presidential primaries but that attempt to impose remarks by a supporter, Minnesota Governor Farrahall, into his campaign was "a bit unfair." In a radio speech, Farrahall had threatened a black Washington Post reporter who disclosed that Jackson had had a reference to Jews as "hyenas" and New York City as "hymenoty." — AP

Israel jets Sunday bombarded a building in the central Lebanese town of Bhamdan in retaliation to a terrorist rampage in Jerusalem and Lebanon. Muslim and Christian factions traded heavy artillery fire in Beirut. The target of the Israeli air strike was a five-story wing of an abandoned hotel in Bhamdan, on the Beirut Damascus road, about 14 miles southeast of the Lebanese capital. All planes returned safely from the dawn raid, the Israeli command in Beirut said. The 1-st Amin Gemayel and Syrian President Hafez Assad arranged to meet in Damascus on Wednesday to try to speed up an end to the fighting, reports from the Syrian capital said. Estee Lauder field training representative Carolyn Starr will present a success seminar at 6:30 p.m. today in the parlors of the Hagar College Center at Saint Mary's. The seminar, sponsored by Estee Lauder, is entitled "How to Make the Most of What You Have." The seminar will offer tips on dressing for job interviews, make-up hints and suggestions on building self-confidence. Starr is a former school teacher and professional singer and musician. During her talk, she will offer insights to special problems women face in the business world. Two Saint Mary's students will model work fashions, provided by J.S. Senior Buddy: the alternative

When seniors file into the dining halls today to vote for Senior Fellow, they'll notice an interesting and worthwhile option set up next to the Senior Fellow booths — Senior Buddy elections.

Before seniors laugh off the last in a series of moves ranging from the Hagar-B. Augustine phenomenon, they might benefit from examining the roots of the new committee.

Senior Buddy was formed not to honor Augustine but rather to bestow upon seniors the freedom to choose the candidate of their choice to honor. The key difference between the Senior Fellow Committee and that of Senior Buddy is that "will truly reflect the preferences of the class," according to Senior Bud- dy Committee Chairman Oscar Ostero.

In Senior Fellow balloting, Harold B. Augustine received an overwhelming majority of nominations on two separate occasions, but the committee discounted the votes and, thereby, implied that seniors were "not responsible" enough to choose a candidate for themselves.

Augustine's name was struck from the ballot, or rather was never put on as a legitimate nominee, since he did not meet all of the qualifications established three years ago, according to Senior Fellow Committee Chairman Mike James.

James says that Augustine does not "provide (seniors) with in- spirational leaders of high ideals." Ideally, after the first ballot, James said he would have no qualms with Augustine's selection as Senior Fel- low had he been given a "responsible majority vote of the senior class." Apparently, the 89 votes Augustine garnered in the second ball (with the next highest vote getter receiving five nominations) was not enough of a responsible majority for the four-member commit- tee.

James later declared Augustine was only nominated as a symbol of class support over the proposed changes in alcohol policy and that the Senior Fellow should not be a political statement of the senior class. Wherever the true reason is behind the committee's decision, one fact is clear: the committee will steadfastly oppose restoring Augustine's name to the nomination ballot in any other matters since seniors feel otherwise.

Without usurping the power of the SF Committee, seniors have few options open to them except for looking at an alternate forum for honoring the candi- date they want as Senior Fellow. The logical solution votes inspired by other candidates are a far cry from a rewarding senior class endorsement.

The time for a change has arrived.

Little Sisters Weekend at SMC enjoyed by all

By JENNIFER BIGOTT
Staff Reporter

Big Sister/Little Sister Weekend at Saint Mary's was a success, according to Lauren Beans, chairperson for the event. "Everything seemed to work out perfectly, and a lot of the girls I've talked to said that they had a really good time," she said.

Beanen feels the weekend was well organized."I enjoyed being on the committee," she said. "I think we did a pretty good job." She said the only problem students and their sisters encountered was that not enough time was allowed for all the events, causing some to overlap.

The most popular event, Beanen said, was roller skating, which was open to all students, not only those who had their sisters over for the weekend. The least popular event, judging from attendance, was aerobics. "I think that the girls were too tired by then from skating all day," she concluded.

Overall, students seemed to enjoy the weekend. "They had a lot of good activities," commented Karen Hosinski of McCandless. "My sister and I really had a good time," added Diane Cancro, also of McCandless.

Window project studies injustice

By BARBARA HARDIN
News Staff

What can we do now?" is a common question among a group of Notre Dame/Saint Mary's students who have just completed a year-long focus on human rights violations in South Africa, Brazil, the Caribbean, and Chile.

Last Thursday evening the group, which is sponsored by the Justice Education Department, met in the Student Center parlor at Saint Mary's to discuss what action they could take to alleviate the injustices they have discovered.

Such action, according to Ewene Bellalta, chairman of Saint Mary's Justice Education Department, will be called the Student's Window Project.

According to Bellalta, the name was given with the intent that students will "open the window and let in some new light and hope" to those countries.

Bellalta said that the students will invite someone from an oppressed country to the United States for two or three weeks. This project would "give someone another view of life," he said.

Bellalta said that after experiencing a life in which his human rights are recognized, he may be able to work towards these conditions upon returning to his country.

Also present at the meeting was economics Professor Jerry McElroy, coordinator of the Student's Window Project under Bellalta. McElroy said that a project which would give someone a good experience to take back to his country as opposed to sending an American down to an oppressed country would be more feasible as well as more effective. He said The people who will change the world down there will be down there.

McElroy said, "With this project we will start on a small scale, and others will hopefully follow our example."

Bellalta said the project would basically involve raising funds to provide an air fare for one to visit and from the chosen country and to "assist him while he is here on a low-key budget." She said she would like to welcome any interested Notre Dame or Saint Mary's student to become involved in organizing the project.

The next organizational meeting will take place Tuesday, April 24 from 6 p.m. to 7 p.m. in the Haggar Student Center parlor.

Mondale turns tables on Hart in Wisconsin

Associated Press

MADISON, Wis. Walter F. Mondale, reversing the results of a non-binding primary earlier in the week, thwarted Sen. Gary Hart in Wisconsin's Democratic Party caucuses Saturday and captured another large group of national delegates.

The former vice president, who said in Pittsburgh he was "obviously very pleased" with the victory, led Hart almost 2 to 1 in the raw vote from the caucuses. Rev. Jesse Jackson was a distant third.

"We had anticipated a very close contest," said Mondale. "Although he noted that he has scored a number of victories in the past three weeks, starting with the Illinois primary, Mondale said he doubted the Wisconsin win would have much impact in Pennsylvania's primary Tuesday.

I believe that voters jealously guard the right to make their own choices, he said.

In the primary, Hart got 46 percent of the vote. Mondale had 43 and Jackson 10, but that was strictly a beauty contest.

It was the caucuses that determined allocation. 78 of the 89 delegates Wisconsin will send to the Democratic National Convention in July.

With 100 percent of the raw caucus vote counted, the totals were:

Mondale 18,169 or 54 percent
Hart 10,199 or 30 percent
Jackson 5,026 or 15 percent
Uncommitted 314 or 1 percent

The caucuses chose delegates to congressional district meetings in May in which national convention delegates will be chosen.

With 100 percent of those delegates chosen, Mondale had 58 percent, Hart 50 percent, Jackson 10 percent. 2 percent remain uncommitted.

Party officials said precisely what the breakdown would be in the national convention delegates, but Mondale clearly will have the largest single block.

National party rules contemplate that the percentage of local delegates selected in the first round of caucuses will be reflected all through the process to the final makeup of the national delegation.

That would suggest Mondale should get at least 62 convention delegates and Hart 25 and that they could divide the other 15.

It was uncertain whether Jackson would get any delegates because of a requirement that a candidate get at least 15 percent of the votes in any one caucus district to win representation on the subsequent level.

It is because of a 5 percent difference in the threshold requirement for winning preliminary delegates at the first level and the 20 percent threshold for winning delegates at the congressional district level that the final delegate count could vary slightly from the projection suggested by Saturday's vote.

A native of neighboring Minnesota, Mondale had powerful help from organized labor, teachers and many of the state's leading politicians, including Gov. Anthony Earl.

Mondale's Wisconsin victory came one day after his big win in the New York primary and only three days before the Pennsylvania primary.

James Johnson, Mondale's campaign chairman, said in Washington that the Wisconsin vote was a "spectacular victory."

Macintosh delivery running late

By JOHN MENEULL

Sat., 17

Nearly $150,000 of student faculty and staff money is earning interest in someone else's account because of the long wait to buy an Apple Macintosh computer.

Purchasers of the computers must sign a contract which says they agree to a contract between Apple and Notre Dame which they are not allowed to see.

The contract states, "I am buying a (computer name) under the terms of the Apple University Consortium Agreement in existence between the University of Notre Dame and the Apple Computer Corporation."

The Assistant Director of Purchasing, Rick Farrell, said the contract would "probably not" be released because it, "deals with things that deal directly with the university and not the buyer." He said it, like any of the university's other business agreements, is not released.

"From a legal standpoint Apple would normally have to allow us to release it," he said.

"The contract clarifies who can participate in the program, sets payment guidelines and deals with the fact that the buyer is entitled to only one unit on the Apple product line at this discount," Farrell said. "It puts the responsibilities on the university.

According to legal sources the contract is not definitely illegal. The agreement by the purchaser to the contract between Apple and Notre Dame does not directly affect the student. The point of the purchase agreement is to disallow the resale of the computer for two years. The agreement gives Notre Dame the right of first refusal in the event of a resale within two years.

"If the purchaser does not agree they don't have to purchase it," said Richard Spencer, the Assistant Provost for Computing. "I would suggest they don't buy if they feel forced. It was up to someone I wouldn't sign." He explained that the university was trying to offer a service to the students, faculty and staff.

Farrell explained the delay in the delivery of the computers. "Apple did not expect such a great demand for the computer," he said. "In March they put on a second shift at the plant and this month they are putting on a third. They will be working around the clock.

"Originally we thought the wait would be two to three weeks," Farrell said. After Apple is caught up General Micro hopes to have some Macintoshes on hand so students could conceivably pick up a computer on the day they bought it.

"The manager of the General Micro store, Rick Haley, said the total number of Macintoshes ordered was "more than 300." Of those, 168 have been delivered. If a computer was ordered today it would be "late May to early June before it arrived," he said.

Haley said that the money for the computers must be paid in advance to Apple when they arrive. We must be sure people are committed."

"The buyer can ask for a refund at any time," Haley said. "I really sympathize," Farrell said of the long wait for a computer.

Washington Hall work continues

By ERIK HICKEY
News Staff

The renovation of Washington Hall has started up again, according to Mitchell Lifton, chairman of the Department of Communication and Theatre. The work currently being done is in the second phase in the renovation, the first being last summer's revamping of the auditorium.

Work is being done now in several areas of the north wing of the building, including the stage and back stage areas, second and third floor facilities, and part of the basement. Lifton said the ground floor cannot be refurnished until the University is open.

The entire hall is scheduled for renovation when and where work will not interfere with student use.

New scenery and pulley systems are scheduled to be installed in the stage area. Lifton says the top story of the Northwest wing will hold smaller rooms to be used both as classrooms and for experimental theatre. The second floor will contain storage space, men's and women's dressing rooms, and off-stage areas. The ground floor, which the band now occupies, will eventually be converted to shops for scenery, costumes, and props.

These renovations were originally not scheduled to begin until after the semester ends, but Lifton expressed pleasure that the work is beginning early. He hopes that it may now be completed before school begins in the fall. The first phase of the renovations was not completed until after the beginning of last semester.

Lifton was unable to estimate the cost of the project and Physical Plant Director Donald Detrick, who coordinated the financing, was unavailable for comment.

Flooded out

Rescue workers transport residents of Lincoln Park, N.J. following last weekend's storms which flooded the northern part of the state. Over 6,000 residents were forced from their homes and Governor Thomas K. Keane estimated the damage in the six-county area at more than $35 million, but predicted that it would eventually exceed the $141 million in damage done in last week's coastal storms.

Shuttle fails to rescue costly crippled satellite

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Space shuttle George Nelson failed Sunday in three daring attempts to retrieve a costly but crippled satellite for repairs in space, and officials said the shuttle crew will make one last try Monday to grab it with a robot arm.

"Tomorrow is our day to succeed or not to succeed," flight director Jay Greene said from the Goddard Space Flight Center in Maryland to stabilize the satellite with commands to its computers but late Sunday afternoon, a spokesman announced.

"The bad news is we haven't been able to do anything of significance to stop the tumbling of the spacecraft as of right now," Jim Elliot added, "the general feeling in the Payload Operations Control Center here is that things don't look too good. We are going to need a lot of luck."

At the time, the satellite had a minimum of two hours of battery power left. Its electricity-producing solar panels were rendered ineffective by its tumbling. Electricity is needed to power coils around bars that act as a compass to steady the satellite.

The Solar Max repair was the main purpose of the 11th space shuttle flight. Another part of the mission, deploying an 11-ton cylinder loaded with experiments for a 10-month stay in space, was conducted without a hitch Saturday.

Greene said there will be no further space walk attempts on this flight to pull the satellite into the orbital repair ship because mission control has no confidence the docking device will work better a second time.
Chernenko pessimistic about U.S. relations

Associated Press

MOSCOW — Soviet leader Konstantin U. Chernenko said in an interview published Sunday that, despite “contacts with the American side,” the superpowers remained deadlocked on arms control with no sign of a breakthrough.

Chernenko painted a bleak picture of Soviet-American relations and the threat posed by recent escalations in nuclear arms. “The situation in the world is not improving. It remains very dangerous.” His statements were carried by the official Soviet news agency Tass and read over Soviet television. Soviet news media said they were answers to questions put to him by the communist party newsmaster Pravda and that Pravda would carry the remarks on Monday.

Chernenko did not specify what kind of contacts he had with the United States. He and President Reagan reportedly have exchanged at least four letters since Chernenko succeeded the late Yuri V. Andropov two months ago, and Soviet and US ambassadors in Washington and Moscow have had meetings with senior officials in their host countries.

The Soviet leader said a foreign policy speech Reagan delivered Friday at Georgetown University showed that the United States was not about to change its hardline stance toward the Soviets.

He blamed the United States for increasing world tension and criticized all aspects of U.S. defense policy, particularly the deployment by NATO of U.S. medium-range missiles in Western Europe. The deployment and the development of more advanced strategic nuclear weapons are part of an American “plan to break one way or another the existing parity of forces,” Chernenko said. "Our contacts with the American side also show how positive changes have taken place in the positions of the United States on these cardinal questions,” Chernenko said.

Chernenko dismissed his ignorance — or deliberate distortion — under speculation in the west that his government is waiting for the outcome of U.S. presidential elections before making any changes in its foreign policy.

If seniors do cast their ballots for Augustine in today’s senior fellows election the vote will not count. If less than 50 percent of the seniors vote no fellow will be elected. But a vote for Augustine will not count as a vote at all and will not go towards the necessary 50 percent. “Only valid nominees will be counted,” said James.

Whoever is elected Senior Buddy will speak at Senior Banquet. He or she will also be presented with a plaque.

Osario said the committee is talking about selling buttons to pay for the plaque but he added, “We still have to work that out.”

Osario emphasized, “The committee is not a protest against Senior Fellow. We’re just a movement to choose whoever we want. It might be seen as a protest against the Senior Fellow committee.”

The group now has “at least 20 members who will be working tomorrow taking the votes,” according to Osario. “So far we have received fantastic support everybody likes the idea. It’s definitely catching on,” he added.

Batman morality and a Latin American dream

My friends often ask me why Latin American countries are so unstable, so wild! Sometimes when I meet new friends and they learn about my nationality, they ask me about foreign policy. Are the people that live south of the Rio Grande blind to the American example of democracy, peace, freedom and order?

Santiago O'Donnell

stability? Why don't they put their act together?

Yes, there are many "blind" Latin Americans — in Nicaragua, for example. My roommate is a friend who lives in the suburbs of Managua. He has never seen an American, but he knows about this culture. Like all of us, he grew up watching Batman's morality on TV and swinging to rock and roll. He must have admired the huge buildings of the great American factories, with their appealing names and catchy TV commercials.

Today he writes, confused. He has just come back from the mountains, where he spent six months teaching a family of Indians to read and write. Jaime's friend lived for weeks without electricity, media exposure, clocks and the rest of the advantages of modern civilization. It was a sacrifice, but he was helping his new government to preserve the country's literacy from 16 percent to more than 80 percent in less than a year. He knew from Batman that education is very important for democracy.

When he went back to Managua he read in the papers (if he knew English he would have read it in the American papers) that his friend had died. He wrote: "A waste of time asking them to just give you a little this or that. Besides, with all of the noise in the dining hall, they either cannot hear what you say, or they just don't speak English. If you point to something from behind the glass to ask what it is, they go ahead and just plop it on your plate!"

"Ask for small portions if you aren't sure you will like it. How can I tell if I'm going to like it? I can't tell what it is! I'm tired of eating mystery meat and two-day-old ice cream!"

"Fourth, if you absolutely cannot eat the last cookie or donut, take it home as a midnight snack."

"Is it against dining hall policy to remove food from the building. I would hate to get caught by the food police taking food out of the dining hall for just doing my business of eating my own food!"

Mike James

of the committee to make the decisions at this stage of the selection process. At the time of our appointment on the committee by the next class officers, our responsibilities and decision-making guidelines were assigned.

Throughout the selection process we have received support for our decision-making prerogatives from the senior class officers and senior advisory council. We have applied our responsibilities consistently and conscientiously.

Further, Larry refers to the "real" reason, as did The Observer on March 30, for Harold Augustine being taken off the ballot. He was never taken off the ballot. He did not meet all of the qualifications, explained already, as did Michael Jackson and Larry "Bud" Mellett (who also received a considerable fraction of the vote). Additionally, nominations are not votes. Reasons for his nomination (which were expressed freely) did not substantiate him as a valid candidate.

I assure you that the decision for a 1984 senior fellow will be determined by the entire senior class at the ballot boxes today.

Turpen brings delegates to their feet, garners vice presidential votes

By MIKE BRENNAN
Convention Reporter

"Your job is to listen, my job is to talk. If you finish your job before I finish mine, please raise your hand and let me know.

Dynamic and inspiring Mike Turpen, Attorney General of Oklahoma, sharked the hand of a former competitor, Alan Sals­son, during a reception for the Democratic National Committee in New York. Between the men is Attorney General of Oklahoma, entreated 211 delegates in Stetan Center Saturday. "You are un­doubtedly the best and the brightest," he told the weary delegates, "so I guess I'm preaching to the choir but to learn politics and make a change, you have to get involved. You can't learn to swim by taking a correspondence course."

He told of his personal history, how he suffered from "malnutrition" while attending Notre Dame Law School, how he ran for Attorney General to be "a voice for law­ breaking people," on the $100,000,000. It's TURPEN-TIME."

"Sure it's silly. Yes it's ridiculous."

But it works."

Quoting Will Rogers, Turpen quipped, "I am a member of no organized political party, I am a Democrat."

He went on to spell out the differences between Democrats and Republicans. "If a Republican goes fishing and catches a big one, he brings it home and puts it on the wall. If a Democrat goes fishing and catches a big one, he brings it home and eats it.

"The Republicans say a woman's place is in the home, we say it's anywhere she chooses. The Republicans call a soup line a handout for the lazy, we recognize that there are hungry people who suffer from a lack of opportunity.

"Let's face it, a conservative is a liberal who's been mugged. As Winston Churchill said, if you're young and conservative, you have no heart. And if you're old and liberal, you don't have a mind."

Amid his humor, Turpen encouraged students "to forget labels," and make decisions on issue by issue. "Don't judge between right and left, judge between right and wrong. Before, it's the power of compassion and idealism. Idealism is the belief that good will conquer evil, right win over wrong.

"Politics is the use of power for service. I'm in it for the service. If I ever start to like power alone, then I'm out of politics."

"Sealed and interrupted by laughter and standing ovations, Tur­ pen's confidence and charisma brought the delegates to life. They had heard endless political speeches the last three nights. They knew this was special, that the best had been saved for last.

"He referred to Hubert Humphrey's belief that, "the moral test of any government is how it treats those in the dawns of life, how well it treats children. It is how well it takes care of those in the twilight of the life, the aged. And it is how well those in the shadows are provided for - the poor, the unemployed, the handicapped."

The delegates were up on their chairs for a five minute ovation, some of them chanting "V.P."

The delegates placed Mike Turpen on the vice presidential ballot, in which he received 30 of the 211 votes, second only to Lindy Boggs.

Mock Convention

The nomination speech inciting the greatest crowd reaction, both positive and negative, was the nomination speech for John Glenn given by John Sears. He began, "I am a member of the ARA "anybody" committee. Anybody But Askew," and concluded, "Don't vote for Askew!" His remarks were roundly boosed by the Askew supporters and wildly cheered by on by on by on of the other delegates.

Ted Sorensen, a former presidential aide to President Kenne­ ddy who is now the National Co­ chairman of Hart's campaign, flew in to give a speech on behalf of his can­ didate. He said, "The single most im­ portant task in 1984 is defeating Ronald Reagan," seemed relentless.

After a short recess the voting con­ tinued. On the first ballot out of 526 votes cast Askew finished first with 51 percent of the vote. Following him was Hart with 25 percent, Mondale with 14 percent, McGovern with 12 percent, Hol­ lings with 10 percent, Jackson with five percent, and Glenn with 8 percent.

The first ballot saw several un­ expected candidates receive votes for the presidential nomination. Keith Sauter, the chairman of the Florida delegation, voted for David P. Bergland, a liberal candidate for the presidency. Sauter voted for Bergland throughout the night because he feels Bergland would "provide a better direction for the country than any of the other can­ didates."

The Illinois delegation tried to cast 25 votes for Fast Eddie Vrydolyak, the Democratic Chair­ man of Cook County. The votes were not counted because those delegates were not actually at the convention at the time. Illinois also cast one vote for Tony LaRussa, the manager of the Chicago White Sox.

The Mississippi delegation was the first to cast a vote for Harold R. Augustine for president, taking him a step beyond his favored Senator Ted­ low candidate. Tea Salsson a Missis­ sippi delegate, said, "As far as we don't have any plans to do nominate Harold R. Augustine for president, but it's pos­ sible." Augustine also received several votes for the vice presidential nomination that day.

The state chairmen tried to oust each other in coming up with numerous introduction for their states. Chuck Hart, Kentucky's chair­ man, introduced his state as the one that "will always be on top of Tennessee." The Chairman of Texas, "Jim Coby, became famous for his tremendously long introductions Jackson conceded after the first round. Sonya Jones, chairman of the Jackson campaign thanked all of the Jackson supporters, telling them you have good morals by voting for Jackson. She then endorsed Mondale. The Georgia campaign also conceded after the first round of balloting and endorsed Mondale.

In round the second round Askew still led in the voting with 50 percent of the 515 votes cast. Hart was second, with 30 percent, Mondale captured 15 percent, McGovern and Glenn were tied for third, while Hollings bracketed the rear with 7 and 6 percent respectively. McGovern was the first candidate to concede after the second round of voting. Beth Sundersmeyer gave the concession speech for McGovern saying, "We never thought we'd do this so good, we are proud of how we did."

nominates Hart, Boggs

McGovern campaign did not en- dorse a candidate, Sundstrome said. "We have one hope, that one out there who voted for McGovern will now vote for us."

Jack Brogioli, Democratic chairman for HuPinga, conceded after the second ballot. "I wish we voted for a male," he said. "I was won, I stayed in two ballots more than everyone thought I could." He added, "I have a feeling the convention will throw my total support and endorse- me at once today."

"I didn't support Askew because he believed support for Askew is more for his husband and for any of his other stands."

By the third round of balloting Askew's support was slipping, yet he still had 23 percent of the vote. Mondale was at 27 percent of the vote.

"We're still dealing on the floor became intense. The candidates present. Mondale got 27 percent of the vote, according to Bill Healy, a Mock Convention chairman. Hagstrom did not en- dorse delegates present. McGovern campaign did not support Askew, because he believed Askew is a legitimate candidate because he dropped out of the national race, and no support is based on one issue."

There was a move to have the final and seventh vote be a voice vote, however the motion had to be taken to the committee on Monday, when all those in favor of the motion stand on chairs to be counted. The motion was voted down.

Before the final ballot McGovern was asked to support Askew, not to vote, thus preventing a question and forcing the voting to be continued. "We're not going to vote in block, because we felt the ballots were based on one issue."

McGovern conceded after the last ballot. "There is no such agreement, I feel I've going to concede or support either of you but for the sake of the leaders here with our heads held high."

Mondale gathered 65 percent of the vote, McGovern 35 percent, and 40 percent for his abortion stand than for any of our own president, Father Theodore Hesburgh, to Walter Mondale's son, former Senatorial aide to John Kennedy, challenged delegates of the Democratic National Convention today that Republicans and the party that meets the needs of all Americans, Sorenson expressed a grave concern over the escalating nuclear arms race saying that nuclear fuel was unavoidable if the arms race is not brought under control during the next four years. The unseen power of ads

by Chris Fraser

features columnist

I used to wonder about the power of advertising. I was never quite sure that all those commercials, billboards, magazines, and newspaper ads really altered the buying preferences of the American public.

Maybe I was skeptical because I never seemed to be buying the stuff they were selling, even on the commercials I liked. For instance:

- I never bought the after-shave despite their advertising campaigns in the '70s. (Remember "That's a spicy meatball." and "I can't believe I ate the whole thing"?) I still don't think Miller Lite although I love critical John Madden, Roddy McDowall, and the rest of their pals. And despite all the Federal Express fast-talking, I still use the U.S. Postal Service.

Maybe, I thought, there are some unedifying, gullible folks who fall into the traps of advertisers, but surely as a supposedly intelligent middle-class student, I was above all that.

I discovered I was wrong.

It began that I was a victim over spring break. My mother offered to pick up some toiletries for me while she was at the store. I requested shampoo, razors, and deodorant. Mother asked if I desired any particular brands of said items, to which I naturally responded "No, they're all the same, so buy what's cheapest." I was not about to be influenced by any flashy ad campaigns.

Upon her return, she presented me with shampoo and razors that were generic but quite adequate. The deodorant, on the other hand, was a well known national brand that happened to be on sale. One would think I would have been pleased with this. After all, here I was getting a widely advertised item for the same price as the drug store's own modestly packaged product. It should have been a moral victory since, at the low sale price, I wasn't paying for the advertising budget.

The problem was, the deodorant brand was Secret. Now you've seen the ads for Secret. The slogan goes, "Strong enough for a man ... but made for a woman." Their commercials show a manly husband complaining that his family doesn't need two deodorants and that if Secret is so good he will use it as well. The wife, however, insists that secret is for women only. The man claims he doesn't even mind the flowery smell but his wife will not let him use her Secret.

The aura around Secret is established. Women should want this product because it is the product of a marketing ploy, a product that brings a woman into the mysterious and personal world of feminine need, which a woman can retire to, a world where men are expressly forbidden. Secret's pitch is summed up in its name. It is a secret to which only women are privy and they must buy this deodorant to get into it.

Anyway, this is what I was up against when my mother handed me the all too familiarly decorated package of this particular deodorant. Actually, I didn't even use it. It was the same old story. "That stuff's for women," I told her. "Have you seen the commercials?"

"You don't really believe that nonsense, do you?" she asked incredulously.

I was a third hand. I prided myself on the fact that I was unswayed by advertisers' plays, that I ignored insignificant and artificial labels. But somehow this was different.

I turned to the other male members in my family for help. Men would understand what I was talking about. My brother came to my aid.

"Secret is for women," he declared. "It's supposed to combine with their different body chemistry or something. Why else would they say men can't use it?"

"It's just the same," my mother insisted. "They just want women to think they need a special brand."

I turned to my father.

"I think it really is for women," he said, opening the container. "Just smell it."

My mother still wouldn't yield.

It was time to take a stand.

"I don't care if it's for women or not. That stuff's for girls and I'm not using it."

So I went out and got my own deodorant. But I knew I'd been defeated. I knew I'd fallen prey to the influence of commercialism. No longer could I claim to be above the scurrying masses demanding something different.

But at least I was a man and I went ahead and spent the extra 50 cents for Brat deodorant, just to make sure.

The Pretenders have a leader but lack a direction

by Alex Szilvas

features staff writer

The latest effort by The Pretenders testifies to the emergence of Chrissie Hynde as the group's undisputed leader. Serving as the vocal focus of the band since their debut album in 1980, Hynde asserts herself as the conceptual leader as well as the visionary behind Learning To Cruise. Nine of the ten cuts on the LP were penned exclusively by her.

The resulting songs are reflective, in victory in previous Pretenders' material, but strikingly more personal. While her sassy criticisms are not as prevalent in this album as in the first two Pretenders' LPs, Hynde makes a characteristic social commentary in "Middle of the Road." From the middle of the road you see the darned things: There's corrugated tin shakes with kitty litter, and I don't mean a Humpestdarned nurses. But when you own a chunk of the bloody third world the babies just come to you and the cemetary.

In case one hasn't gotten her message by this time, Chrissie gets a little more explicit in "Show Me": Show me the meaning of being alive. Welcome to the human race -疾病 and brutality.

With the exception of these two cuts, the album offers no apparent thematic unity. In fact, some might argue that this is the problem. The Pretenders LPs have always seemed to have a tune with a country sound reminiscent of pop-ous. while Hynde's LPs have been a bit more experimental. Perhaps Hynde's LP's are a bit more experimental. Perhaps Hynde's biggest strength is that it doesn't have its brighter moments. "Time the Avenger" is a catchy tune in which Chrissie bemoans: "Back on the Chain Gang" is a melodic number which might make enjoyable listening for the fanatics of the Pretenders doing a "pop" song. The album essentially fails to hold the interest of the listener.

Hynde's writing is in response to numerous unrelated topics, her societal concerns, her relationship with the Kings' leader Ray Davies, and the deaths of original group members James Honeyman-Scott and Peter Farndon. This variety of influences provides tremendous diversity in the material making it impossible to develop and then maintain a mood for the duration of the record.

Take the album's first side. Dominated by the punchy and critical tracks, it is bisected by "Watching the Clothes" - the setting for which is (you guessed it) a laundromat. Perhaps Chrissie is showing a domestic streak after all. The second side contains "Thumbelina," a tune with a country sound more characteristic of anybody than The Pretenders; "Thin Line Between Love and Hate" which shows the pace markedly while introducing piano and male vocals to accompany Hynde; and "2000 Miles" in which Chrissie bemoans: He's gone, 2000 miles - it's very sad.

International students present talent and a message

by Lisa Marie Visingardi
features staff writer

Last night in Washington Hall the International Student Organization exhibited the variety of talent its members are gifted with at its "new" festival. Comprised of 23 acts, the show represented some 35 different countries. Performances ranged from folklore, songs, and dancing to national comedy, poetry, and political awareness statements. The highlights of the first half of the show was a documentary film produced by Daniel Moran. The 10 minute film provided many insights into the organization itself. Along with ISO activities like soccer games and happy hours, the film brought out the significant role the host families in the South Bend community play in the lives of international students. The film emphasized that the guidance and love provided by these families is an important aspect in adjusting to American life.

During Catherine Lee's piano performance an unexpected guest decided to accompany her. Lee had to be admired for the courage to continue performing in spite of the bat that boomed over the audience's heads competing for their attention. Fortunately a brave viewer was able to capture the creature during the next act, and to save the show from losing some fearful members of the audience.

Audience participation came with the Bahamian "Marketplace Scene" act which featured the songs "Da Oh" and "Da Woman Is Smarter." As the women in the audience enthusiastically joined in the singing, the men skeptically grinned.

One of the most intriguing acts came in the second half when Ivor Zwane portrayed a prisoner in a cell, battling his fears and potentials. Being both a native of South Africa, Zwane portrayed a prisoner in a cell, battling his fears and potentials. Being both a native of South Africa, Zwane portrayed a prisoner in a cell, battling his fears and potentials. Being both a native of South Africa, Zwane portrayed a prisoner in a cell, battling his fears and potentials.

The show did not end on such a low note, however, for in the final scene the entire cast and audience sang John Lennon's "Imagine." The show was given a new dimension. In addition to traditional cultural, folkloric and comedy routines, it explored other areas, and attempted to convey the message that one should not think only of how the world is but how it could be.

That ever-unreliable alarm clock

by Paul Aiello
features columnist

Contrary to what many parents and enthusiastic alarm clock thinkers may believe, life at Notre Dame is not a bag filled with all positive experiences. As a matter of fact, college life has introduced many of us to some of the hardest and most annoying realities of life. For example, a majority of us have had to come to grips with important decisions about relationships or what one will do in his and/or her life. Nevertheless, for another group of us (including myself), a simpler category of dilemmas have arisen in which daily events, like waking up, have become major crises.

Personally, I never had a big problem waking up in high school because of a human alarm clock called my mother. Every school morning at 6:30, I could sense her presence as she would slide into my room, open a shutter, stare at me for a second, and then leave without saying a word. Within fifteen minutes, she would always return, offering a few words of wisdom like: "isn't about time you got up?" By knowing from the tone of her voice that it was still early, I would never listen to her, and so lay still. Finally though, seven o'clock approached, an obsessed woman would storm into my room. With fire in her eyes and smoke spurting from her ears, she would holler the worst of all threats. "Hurry up or you'll miss the bus!" Resurrected by this plea, I would bolt to the shower knowing it was the right time to start my day.

At Notre Dame, I have unfortunately been unable to develop a system of waking up as efficient as the one I had at home. Maybe it is because alarm clocks are just not as effective as my mom. Sadly, they just ring, buzz or play music while lacking that certain personal touch. Granted, I must agree that alarm devices work for many people; however, they can be turned off and require resetting. On the contrary, my mother needed no setting and as for turning her off... well, my father is still trying to find a way after 25 years of marriage.

Regardless of the reasons, I have found myself at college becoming a great experimenter in search of the perfect way to wake. Within my first week of school freshman year, I had quickly learned that conventional warfare with a mere radio alarm clock was a losing, futile battle. All too easily I could turn over, hit a button, and return to my state of euphoria. Similarly, the strategy of moving the alarm clock away to another part of the room proved useless. For the desire to sleep can overcome many obstacles, including ordinary alarm noises.

Left facing a grave existential dilemma, I think all hope would have been lost and desperate measures taken if it were not for my discovery of the ultimate awakening weapon. This past summer, I came upon an old wind-up shock device that one of my sisters had used when she was in college. Looking at its poor condition, I thought as to why she ever used it. However, once I read the tab on the back of the clock which stated, "Warning, do not use around pregnant woman or people with heart ailments." I knew a great untapped potential lay in my hands. Right up to today, I still jump when I face a grave existential dilemma, I think all hope would have been lost and desperate measures taken if it were not for my discovery of the ultimate awakening weapon. This past summer, I came upon an old wind-up shock device that one of my sisters had used when she was in college. Looking at its poor condition, I thought as to why she ever used it. However, once I read the tab on the back of the clock which stated, "Warning, do not use around pregnant woman or people with heart ailments." I knew a great untapped potential lay in my hands. Right up to today, I still jump when I face a grave existential dilemma, I think all hope would have been lost and desperate measures taken if it were not for my discovery of the ultimate awakening weapon. On the whole, I consider myself one of the lucky ones. Unlike many of my classmates, I have had the good (or not so good) fortune of finding an effective waking device. Nevertheless, my personal success story does not infer that mine or anybody else's struggle to wake up can be won in the long run. For "if someone wants to sleep, they're gonna sleep no matter what."

three-run seventh inning rally. After loading the bases, consecutive walks to Nick Theodore, Drew Turek, and Drew drove in the runs that tied the game.
However, Notre Dame left the bases loaded, and the game ended extra innings.
In the top of the ninth, DePauw scored two runs. The run that produced the winning run came on a wild pitch by a batman. The Irish again rallied in the bottom of the inning, but could only score one run as the inning was cut short on a line-drive out.
Gallo was placed on second with the weekend, but pointed to a tough challenge coming up.
"Although I felt we could have won four out of four, anytime you win three out of four it’s nice," he said. "But our schedule coming up is going to be tough. We’ve got a chance to have a good year, but we’ve got to play in the upcoming games."

The team ends its homestand with a 2 p.m. game against Illinois-Chicago, and travels to Michigan Wednesday for a doubleheader.

The seeded Brickthrowers, led by Bob Michael's 9-11 (6 rebounds) and Greg Rose's 8-10 downed the Five Horsemen 21-1. With the crisp passing of point guard Dana Hoving, the winners took only 10 minutes to complete the task.

Father Edward "Mong" Malloy, assistant rector at Sorin, playing in his 11th bookstore tournament, led the Shooties over This Is Our Best Team Yet 21-19. Father Malloy (eight points, eight rebounds) suspended the winning goal from 30 feet away to end the game.

"We live from day to day," commented Monk who believes his team can advance further. "If the wind doesn't blow and we play together, we should win a couple of games."

We Can Beat You with One Hand Tied Behind Our Back was unable to hold time to their claim. Playing with their left hands tied behind their backs, they were downed by The Drillers 21-1 who were led by Brent Pashner's 7 points and 8 boards. Gay Guerrero was 4-4 with a rebound for the losers.

"Where's the Beef" and the Meat Mongers, led by Zahm Hall President Bob Johnson's seven points and 12 rebounds, easily overcame Five Hawaiians Hanging Ten 21-2.

Mike James was 0-16 but his team, Scholongers, knocked off the Wanted Knights 21-14.

John Kuhns grabbed 16 rebounds to go along with his eight points to help Naugles Memorial beat Morehull Four Plus One 21-9.

Finally, BVK with Greg Ripples (8-9) and Mike Boms (7-9) downed the Gang of Five 21-7.

Sloppy execution marks scrimmage

By THERON ROBERTS

It started off in a big way for the Notre Dame football team's second Saturday scrimmage, but somewhere along the way sloppy execution took over and never relinquished its hold on Coach Gerry Faust's troops.

On the second play of the day, sophomore tight end Tony Jeffer son-scrampered 57 yards for a score and the first offensive unit appeared to be too easy to take any defense it faced straight down the field.

However, the next two times that same offense faced the number two defense, the football changed hands.

Sophomore quarterback Steve Beuerlein was the gain on both occasions, twice throwing interceptions after they had been tapped by his receivers.

Sophomore Alvin Miller made a thirteen-yard grab before Jeffer son accounted for ten of the next eleven yards on the ground in two series. Beuerlein then lofted an over-the-middle pass to senior Chris Smith that slipped through the waiting arms of safety sophomore Scott Rogers.

On the next possession, a short pass to junior Mark Bavaro also dropped into Rogers' hands, giving him two interceptions, which were the

This spring, however, because the defensive unit tested the offense, linemen Mike Griffin, Greg Rogers, Faust's troops.

Marvin Greenfield, the twos ground up the offensive line, but Beuerlein was the number one on defense. Led by sophomore Hiawatha Jefferson, this spring, however, because the defensive unit tested the offense, linemen Mike Griffin, Greg Rogers, and Sunshine Promotions.

Indy Colts still have eastern ties

Baltimore city circuit Judge Marion B. Greenfield on Friday signed a 53-day restraining order, which can be extended to take the NFL from transferring the Colts' "certificate of membership" from the city.

The injunction also prohibits NFL officials from approving any contracts or broadcast sponsors and accepting television income "unless and until" the "home territory" of the city of Baltimore.

The story behind the 10K Calorie Champs Fast Feasts on Calorie Champs and other bookstore action is listed in Mike Chmiel’s article and listing with all the results and the schedule for today’s games follows the article Bookstore XIII begins TWL feasts on Calorie Champs by Michael J. Chmiel Sports Writer

The 15th annual Bookstore Basketball Tournament was held this weekend, an event which floods the Notre Dame campus with basketball fever for a period of three weeks every spring — tipped off Friday afternoon in front of a crowd seated with basketball and food junkies alike with the 1984 Bookstore Hall of Fame game. At court 9, behind the bookstore banking, last year’s runner-up — Tequila. White, Al Levesque was jumped on and rebounded, and shot all over the 10K Calorie Champs Fastbreakers. The highly partisan crowd which stood four deep around the outdoor court, boomed continuously as TWL ran off 6 unanswerable points to start the contest while playing a man short as freshman backcourt Steve Beurlein was delayed in getting to his feet. The 10K Calorie Champs Fastbreakers imported their own Little School eating contest, warmed up prior to the match with a light feast of oysters and vegetable soup to feed them as a side dish meal at the end of the court by nine waterers and a residence hall to share their food. They were, however, unable to profit from their claim — a Sunday pregame lay-up exercise during which the champs stuffed hard boiled eggs “home” could not benefit them enough. The champs, which munched on eg greets, spaghetti, and sandwiches throughout the game, brought the game to a halt after scoring their first basket of the game to close the gap at 6:1. With this hoop, the teammbaied with a Domino’s pizza delivered directly to center court. A Twinkie offense, in which each player swallowed a Twinkie while a shot was thrown up from half court, proved unsuccessful after the break. However, a diving half defense in which the champs used trays instead of their hands did not net one steal. With a 11-1 halftime score, the champs tried to rally with a box-and-one defense. Unfortunately, four defenders holding onto a box under the basket while the man on the court holding the territory was the wrong call as TWL nicked a shot from the corner. The champs were able to come back with two late baskets but fell short of the Irish to 4-3. A two-run single by Clark in the fourth pushed the Irish out to a 4-3 lead and the team capitalized on two walks and an error in the fifth to stretch the lead to 6-3. Although each team scored an unearned run in its final innin at bat, the outcome had been decided. Lopes took the win for the Irish, bringing his record to 2:1. Dee had two hits to lead Notre Dame, while Clark and Vuono each had two RBI. Gallo was especially pleased with Clark’s performance, but praised the team as a whole. "David played very, very well in both games,” he commented. “But I was pleased with our hitting as a team.”

The Irish broke open a 5-5 tie with a six-run outburst in the bottom of the sixth inning to win the second of the two-game series. With Vuono pitching a third-hitter in the opening contest to lead Notre Dame to a 9-5 victory. Western Michigan today

Irish extend winning streak to 5 By ED KONRAD
Sports Writer

The men’s tennis team blasted the three inferior clubs in their quadrangular last weekend in preparation for today’s matchup against rival Western Michigan.

“The teams were definitely a little weaker,” said Assistant Coach Tom Harttell. “But it’s going to be tough against Western Michigan. We would have liked a tougher match (this past weekend), but hopefully we’ll be ready for them.”

At times last weekend’s competition looked pathetic. The Irish dropped only one set all weekend, winning all three matches 9-0 against Wisconsin-Oshkosh, Indiana State, and Illinois-Chicago. However, the Irish didn’t set the standard. The tough Western Michigan team, which has beaten Notre Dame the last two years, will probably do the same. Western Michigan has a doubles team of Dakele and Herman who are nationally ranked,” said Head Coach Tom Fallon. “If they play according to form, and win their singles matches, we could be down 3-0 quick.

“To win, we need everybody playing at top ability. I predict that it could be a 4-4 match going either way — hopefully ours. We just can’t afford to lose too many easy points.”

“Everyone is really playing well,” said senior singles player Paul Najarian. “We’re at a good point to play Western Michigan. This will be one of the biggest matches of the year.”

It seems that the time is right for the Irish against Western Michigan. Fallon, the team rebounded for a 3-0 win over Ball State and a very successful Florida road trip.

Coming back home, they have quickly dispatched all their opponents except for a disappointing showing against Hawaii. They are playing their best tennis to date, and Western Michigan should be a severe test for them.

“People at Bowling Green and Ball State think that Western Michigan is the toughest in the Mid-American Conference,” said Fallon.

The match against the powerful Badgers will start at 9 a.m. at the Courteny Tennis Center or in case of inclement weather, the ACC. After Western Michigan, the Irish can’t get complacent, as they have a big weekend ahead of them. They face Butler tomorrow, Northern Illinois Thursday, and hold a triangular meet with Marquette and Purdue this weekend. All the aforementioned matches will be played at home, either at the Courteny Tennis Center or the ACC.

Baseball team’s wins not up for season record By ERIC SCHEUERMANN
Sports Writer

Although the Notre Dame baseball team may not have played its best baseball of the season over the past weekend, it played well enough to win three out of four games and even its record at 10-10. On Saturday, the Irish took a pair of wins from the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee in games played at Jake Kline Field. Notre Dame won the first game 7-6 in a see-saw contest. The Irish led by a slim 2-1 margin going into the bottom of the fifth, but when catcher David Clark rapped a three-run double to give the team a 5-1 lead.

But the Badgers were not through. They tied it up with four earned runs in the sixth, and took a 6-5 lead with a run in the seventh. Notre Dame batter Steve Powell. The Irish had come in, however. With one out, Carl Vuono doubled to score Tom Shields, and advanced to third on the throw to the plate. After Steve Passinault and Jackie Moran received intentional walks, pinch-hitter Mike Dornin singled to drive in the winner.

Reliever Jason Schriver received the win to win over his record at 2-2. Shields had three hits for the Irish, while Clark contributed two hits and three RBI.

In the second game of the twin bill, the Irish rode the strong pitching of Buster Lopez to a 7-4 victory. Head Coach larry Gallo was pleased with Lopez’s effort.

“His action, good, though, was scarred by three injuries — a broken collar bone, a dislocated shoulder, and a dislocated knee,” Gallo said.

In the second game in the second game,” he said. “After a bit of a shaky first inning, he came on to pitch a strong game.

After the Badgers jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the first, Vuono quickly tied it up in the second with a two-run homer. A two-run single by Clark in the fourth pushed the Irish out to a 4-3 lead, and the team capitalized on two walks and an error in the fifth to stretch the lead to 6-3. Although each team scored an unearned run in its final innin at bat, the outcome had been decided. Lopes took the win for the Irish, bringing his record to 2:1. The Irish broke open a 5-5 tie with a six-run outburst in the bottom of the sixth inning to win the second 10-10. Eric Scheuermann’s story has all the details on the rollercoaster fortunes of the Irish above.
