Bahamas trip being organized for Fall '84

By TERRY BLAND
Staff Reporter

A trip to the Bahamas during fall break next year is being planned as an alternative to the senior class trip to New Orleans, said Mark Yusko, a coordinator of the alternative.

The journey to the Bahamas was the idea of juniors Mark Yusko and Laura Mein. "One day we were talking in class and we decided we wanted to go to the Bahamas," said Yusko. "We thought if we put together a trip, we could get a bunch of people to go with us."

"About ten or twelve really close friends were going with us," said Yusko. Presently, there are about 40 to 50 people who have shown a verbal interest in going to the Bahamas, he said. "Depending on how many people sign up, we might open the trip up to other students besides the senior class."

The trip is being arranged through First Source Travel, the agency that plans the excursions to the Bahamas last year. "Bill McDonald, the coordinator of the senior class trip to New Orleans, said that as long as we didn't use the same 'senior class' trip, there would be no problem in scheduling a trip to the Bahamas," Yusko said.

"The probable cost of the trip will be about $475," stated Yusko. However, the price could vary, depending on how many students actually take the trip. There will be a see TRIP, page 3.

Nuclear expert criticizes Reagan foreign policies, calls for freeze

Possible solutions to the escalating problem of the U.S. Soviet arms race were presented by defense and foreign policy expert Richard J. Barnet last night to an enthusiastic crowd in the Memorial Library Auditorium. Barnet's appearance was sponsored by the nuclear awareness group Ground Zero.

Introduced by Mike Brennan of Ground Zero as a man whose work "sparked my consciousness," Barnet addressed the problem of the arms race and its effects on U.S. domestic and foreign policy. He described problems the U.S. now faces in foreign and defense policy, citing nationally supported General American conflict, a spiraling arms budget, and escalating U.S.-Soviet tension as examples. He also pointed to domestic issues, such as the rise in the infant mortality rate and the crumbling social security system. Gaining President Carter's attention, he concluded, "We are standing tall," but he added, "on a floor that is caving in." Barnet attributes the general U.S. decline to a nation "starting down the path of an arms race. The process has led to a reduction in national living standards, foreign relations, and our standing in the world."

The resulting burden of increased military spending has hindered commercial innovation and damaged the social institutions of health care, housing, and social security because of the government's objective of maintaining a level of arms competitive with the Soviet Union, Barnet stated.

Changes in the international scene have also contributed to the present position of the U.S., Barnet explained. Military technology is increasingly sophisticated and precise in all quarters. In addition, several new powers have entered the competitive international theatre with the two superpowers, the United States and the Soviet Union. "It's not a two-man game anymore," he commented. "It's an extravganza with lots of players."

Both nations have increasingly less control over world events today than they did in the first decade after World War II. Barnet criticized U.S. policy as misguided in its attempts at containing Soviets with arms control. He cited the Reagan administration's policy of forcing Soviets towards arms control negotiation by arms buildup in tended to demonstrate the seriousness of U.S. intent. Actually, he explained, "The Soviets have concluded that the U.S. is attempting to force them to make a deal on their terms and will continue to build up." The result, he added, is "more weapons aimed at us."

He sees a return to the basics of foreign policy as a possible solution, suggesting diplomacy must create "positive relationships with other nations and the basis for a world in which we can feel secure." The two superpowers must agree to a nuclear freeze by realizing they have "no good time to freeze, but the best time is now." Eventually, he hopes for a treaty to stop further testing and production of new weapons.

Barnet, a graduate of Harvard Law School, is a Senior Fellow and former co-director of the Institute for Policy Studies, an independent research center devoted to the study of public policy questions which he helped to found in 1965. During the Kennedy administration, he was an official of the State Department and the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency and a consultant to the Department of Defense. University verifies Ruppe will speak at commencement

By DAN MCCULLOUGH

The University confirmed during the weekend that Peace Corps Director Lorett Ruppe will deliver the May commencement address to Notre Dame's class of 1984. Nine persons will receive honorary degrees during the ceremony.

The Observer reported April 4 that Ruppe would be the main speaker, but officials from the University refused to confirm or deny this report Sunday in Ruppe's office. Otherwise, however, did verify the news on that date.

Chrysler Chairman of the Board Lee Iacocca received an invitation to give the commencement address from University President Father Theodore Hesburgh, but has not yet refused because of a conflict in his schedule, according to Sally Hock, society of senior Vice-President for Public Affairs James Tolley. "He has been many other invitations," said Hock. "He gets several hundred a month." Iacocca received Hesburgh's letter Feb. 13 and declined on March 19.

Ruppe had previously agreed to speak on the same day, May 20, at the commencement ceremonies of Allegheny College, in Meadville, Dominican college in New Haven, Connecticut Benedict College in South Carolina of advancement for the college said, "Ruppe had accepted and has declined. She said she was unable to attend." Melinda Ropper, president of the Notre Dame student body last spring, will give the May 20 address instead.

Commenting on her address, Ruppe told The Observer, "Personally, I have always felt a connection to Notre Dame. My father, Fred Miller, was captain of the 1928 football team that won one for the Golden Irish. My brother, Fred, was a junior at Notre Dame when he and Dad were killed in a plane crash on their way to South Bend. Also, Peace Corps and Notre Dame have very close relationships. Almost all graduates have served in the Peace Corps and the University was one of our first training facilities."

Ruppe's father played football under Fighting Irish Head Coach Knute Rockne in 1927, 1928 and 1929. Ruppe attended Marymount College in New York. She is currently earning her degree in history and education. Her husband, Philip Ruppe, served as a Peace Corps director from 1979 to 1980.

Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan said yesterday he is resigning as vice chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee to protest what he called a breach of trust by the Reagan administration over the Iran-contra affair. The New York Democrat said in a statement that his resignation is "the most emphatic way I can express my view that the Senate committee was not properly briefed on the mining of Nicaraguan harbors with American mines from an American ship under American command." If this action was interpreted enough for the president to have approved it in February, it was important enough for the committee to have been informed in February," he said. Moynihan made his announcement in an interview on ABC News' "This Week with David Brinkley." His office later released a statement elaborating on the announcement. — AP

Nine Klansmen and American Nazis were found innocent today of a March 1979 anti-Klan rally in Greensboro in which five communists demonstrators were killed. The defendants also acquitted of a charge of civil rights violations stemming from the deaths. Two of the defendants were also acquitted of conspiring to intimidate witnesses after the confrontation. Prosecutors intended the same men, fired by racist fervor, plotted to provoke a fight at the rally and to disrupt it because it was integrated. Defense lawyers said the defendants went to the rally only for a peaceful protest against communism and were attacked. The verdict came after the jury twice on Sunday asked the judge to clarify a point of law in count 14, which charged Griffin and Dawson conspired to prevent witnesses from talking to federal agents. — AP

Moslem militiamen rescued a kidnapped American's son yesterday and a French engineer yesterday who had been held captive for two months. Looking dazed and weary, 50-year-old Frank Reyker, head of the electrical engineering department at American University, wired from Beirut a notice to the university's president today that he did not know who his captors were. Reyker and 56-year-old French engineer Charles Gentil, both unarmed and in red and white pajamas, appeared at a news conference with U.S. Ambassador Reginald Barbour, who attended an hour after the rescue. Reyker declined to say how he was released, reporting that his Moslem militiamen had used force to free him and he heard only one gunshot. — AP

The birth of the Bard, April 24, is being celebrated this year with a Shakespeare Reading Marathon. All the quad, the student Regent takes part in the day, and as a student, is also the subject of discussion.

However, Whelahan said in a recent interview, the regent was concerned about us, they are not trying to run their lives. They are interested in what the students have to say. "If this is true, students' views should be considered in the Regents as a vital part of the process. Can one student fully represent almost 1,900 students when many of those are not even aware that a student Regent exists?"

It is important that students of the College have an impact on how the Regents make decisions because the students themselves must adhere to those policies during their college years. While a student Regent with one vote is one vote which the students of Notre Dame don't have on our Board of Trustees, it is only effective if students' views are accurately represented.

Whelahan has been involved during her four years at Saint Mary's, not just involved, but directly involved. While she has acquired different perspectives from her involvement with students, she cannot know all viewpoints unless students come to her with their opinions. The problem is few do come to her with their views because few know that a student Regent exists, let alone who she is.

In fact, Whelahan is not the only student who serves on various committees of the board. There is a student who serves on the Committee for Development, Tracey Baunicka, and one on the Committee of Finance and Budget, Mary Ann Potter. There are two additional students besides Whelahan who serve on the Committee on Student Life.

Students could be more involved if only they knew the potential of the position to be involved. That would be nice to know since the Regents have select major changes at the College. Changes in the parital system made last year were approved by the board. They also have the final word on what is decided and don't think that professors won't affect students lives beyond college.

More important is that the Regents generally take the student Regent's words to be indicative of all Saint Mary's students. For most of the Regents are on campus only twice a year for four days, when do they get the opportunity to talk with students? Holy Cross Hall's open house for the Regents last Friday was one of the few times Regents had an opportunity to see who is affected by their decisions. Because of this, the student Regent becomes the link between the policymakers and the students.

The College should take the effort to make the student Regent more visible and available to students so that she doesn't become a token representative. Nominations for next year's student Regent were accepted during this season of the Board. Student government, faculty and the student Regent submit nominations. How about granting nominating powers to those who will most benefit from the representative?

Student Regent needs input

Anne Monastyrski
Saint Mary's Editor

Anne Monastyrski, an English major and this year's student Regent, has compiled a list of student concerns that she would like to pass on to the board of regents. Monastyrski is one of two student representatives on the board, and she serves on the Committee on Student Life.

Monastyrski's list includes concerns about the lack of representation on the board and the difficulty of getting their voices heard. She also mentions the importance of student input in the decision-making process and the need for increased communication between the board and students.

"I feel like there is a lack of representation on the board," Monastyrski said. "I think students should have a voice in the decision-making process, and I think the board should be more accessible to students."
Lyons and Morrissey renovations among planned campus changes

By TRIPP BALTZ

New faculty offices, a park near to O'Shaugnessy and a swimming pool are among numerous additions, renovations, and changes planned for next semester. The changes, however, "won't be as dramatic as last year," said Physical Plant Director Don Dedrick.

Construction of the new faculty office building is almost completed and teachers should begin moving in today. The building will be "fully occupied and operational by fall," said Dedrick. Roads and walkways will be paved and shrubbery will be planted near the building over the summer.

Two dorms will undergo general renovation this summer. Plumbing in Lyons and Morrissey Halls will be completely redone. New sinks, showers, and pipe systems will be installed throughout both buildings. Walls will be repainted and state wells will be repaired. "The stairways will be made safer," commented Dedrick. "Also, Forbes Hall will have its electrical system revamped."

The Notre Dame Physical Plant hired contractors to begin construction on a Wildlife Animal Research Center behind the Galvin Life Sciences Building. Since it has closed in winter," stated Dedrick. "It should be a very nice building by fall."

More work will be done in Washington Hall this summer. "The second phase of our work in Washington will involve the North wing," said Dedrick. A small theater will be built on the third floor. Dedrick sees many purposes for this smaller space. "When the main stage is tied up, this will give more space for activity."

The theater department will probably use this space as an experimental theater. Smaller acts and dance performances will also fill the stage. A new exhaust system will be placed on the third floor to serve the theater. On the second floor, new dressing rooms for men and women will be built.

East of O'Shaugnessy, the Shubert-Mendenhall Pool will be built around the statue of Christ and the Samaritan woman at the well. The pool will consist of steps alongside the well scene leading up to benches built on raised concrete. Student Activity Board President Dedrick states, "The pool will be nice for small outdoor classes and for talking to other students between classes."

North Quad swimmers will no longer have to make the long haul to Rockne Memorial when they want to go for a dip. Contractors will soon begin the installation of a swimming pool at the A.C.C. It will be located on the east side between Gates 5 and 6. "By fall, the pool itself and the supporting masonry walls should be finished. The students will be able to see the shape of the pool," said Dedrick.

Finally, an addition will be made to the Power Plant. This new area will be an additional water facility that will serve the University's air-conditioning units. Work should be done by fall.

Looking ahead, Dedrick describes work to be done to other areas of campus. The University plans to begin work soon on an addition to the Law School. The possibility of a fountain being added to the old campus area is also being investigated.

"Students will be flying on Delta Airlines and will be staying at the Sheraton British Colonial Hotel," said Yusko. "The trip is about $150 more than the trip to New Orleans," stated Yusko. "But you will probably have a few more things available to you in the Bahamas than in New Orleans like snorkeling and scuba diving.

"Right now, the trip is scheduled from October 25th to November 2nd," said Yusko. "But we might change this because of the hurricane climate.

Last year's trip to the Bahamas was a big success," said Yusko. "A lot of people were talking about going somewhere warm," said Kathy Ziemer, another coordinator of the Bahamas trip. "Since last year's trip was such a success, we wanted to do it again."

The "senior class trip being sponsored by the University is to New Orleans October 25th to November 2nd. The price is $290 and includes a ticket to the LSU and ND football game, a ticket to the World's Fair and a riverboat cruise," said Jim Canty, one of the coordinators for the senior class trip.

Students will be spending six nights and seven days at the Marriott Hotel in downtown New Orleans, staying. Transportation to New Orleans will be provided by Greyhound buses.

"There are 250 students who have paid a down payment for the trip," Canty said. "It's the most people we've had in five years on a senior trip. Being with your class, you can do things with a spacesaver, it is a lot of fun."

"There's no travel agency at all helping us with the trip," he said. "We talked to different hotels and they were very good about giving us discounts. The Marriott is giving us the rooms at a really good price."

American diplomats killed in blast

WINDHOEK, South-West Africa — Two U.S. diplomats were killed yesterday when a bomb exploded at the gasoline station where they had stopped to service their automobile in this disputed territory.

Administrator-General Willie van Nickerk said a black civilian also was killed and four other people wounded.

A western diplomatic source, who was briefed by South African authorities, said it did not appear that the blast had been directed at the Americans, but that they just happened to be at the station when the device exploded. The source asked not to be identified.

Nickerk did not identify the diplomats, but South African authorities said they believed they were the director of the U.S. Liaison Office in Windhoek and his military representative.

Nickerk blamed the bombing on a black nationalist guerrilla of the South West Africa People's Organization (SWAPO). They have been fighting a bush war for 17 years from bases in southern Angola against South Africa's administration of the territory, also called Namibia.

Nickerk's statement said the Americans were members of a team working with a joint South African-Angolan monitoring commission.

The commission, which the United States helped create in February, is trying to stop SWAPO units in Angola from entering Namibia while South African forces withdraw from southern Angola.

The statement said the bomb exploded at 10 a.m. in Okatana. The Americans were en route to the northern Namibian town of Okahandja.

"At a time when virtually everyone in southern Africa is working together toward peace, SWAPO still clings to a barbaric preference for senseless violence," Nickerk said. "This further suggests SWAPO's concern for the welfare of the people of Namibia appears clearly from this incident. We will do everything we can to safeguard the local population against insane and cowardly acts."

El Salvador where the tormentors triumph

A recently released documentary on El Salvador provides some revealing information about the 1982 nationwide elections, which elected the right-wing candidate, Roberto d'Aubuisson, to the presidency. It is titled 'In the Name of Democracy, the 1982 El Salvador where the tormentors triumph'.

Joseph Murphy

who took the judicial council from the dog-house of student government. If nothing else, this is the story of a boy and his dog.

My first assignment as an Observer reporter was to cover the judicial council. I remember walking into a nearly empty room and thinking the council, like all dead bodies, should indeed be covered. At the meeting (I use the term loosely) Gleason announced the formation of the Discipline Committee, where Gleason is a typically authoritarian, thus: 'Voting is for the little snafu.' What was to stop the right-wingers already in power from using this information to attack those who had opposed them? It seems Hesburgh failed to mention that, on Election Day, a wing of d'Aubuisson's party (a party associated with right-wing death squads) ran a full page ad in the newspapers calling that the ballot was illegal.

In the Name of Democracy also describes the use of transparent lucite ballot boxes which, by law, had to be kept in plain view of the precinct workers. The thin, paper ballots used in the 1982 elections made it easy to see who the voter chose. Can such conditions produce a fair election? Can someone in fear of their life make a free decision? Hesburgh's diary described free-block-long lines of voters in San Salvador. He seemed very impressed. He was supposed to be. On election day only 13 polling places were open to serve the 500,000 registered voters in that city. It made for a grand show, having more than 30,000 voters to a polling place.

How could Hesburgh have missed all of this? If he truly had no idea that these things were occurring in El Salvador, he failed miserably as an observer. If, on the other hand, he knew about these abuses and ignored them, he is guilty of far more than ignorance.

If Hesburgh did keep these abuses secret, then he betrayed the Salvadoran people by promoting a false image of the elections in the United States. He also betrayed all those working to effect social justice in El Salvador, and all those who respect him as a man of justice.

Knowing of his close friendship with Napoleon Duarte, the Christian Democrat's presidential candidate and former Notre Dame alumnus, it is difficult to accept that this information was unavailable to him.

An ego trip on courts

Dear Editor:

This letter is in response to an action taken by the Bookstore Bookstore commissions concerning the use of the phrase "Moonjuice" and "We Came To Shoot Pool..."

To the Bookstore Bookstore, I believe the use of these terms was not an offense. In my opinion, these terms were not being used in a derogatory manner. It is important to understand the context in which these terms were used.

Space was not ignored

Dear Editor:

In response to the April 13 letter from Paul Wilkins and Mike Traynor regarding space development being "ignored" in the Mock Convention platform, I would like to respond as follows:

First, nothing was "ignored" in the Mock Convention platform. There is a mention of space development, but it was not the main focus. The platform addressed other important issues.

Second, space development is not necessarily limited to a single language. It is important to consider the global nature of space development.

Third, the Mock Convention platform did include space development, but it was not the central theme. The platform focused on other important issues.

I believe that the Mock Convention platform was a comprehensive and inclusive document.

Take a position, Potter

Dear Editor:

I have always assumed that editorialists were more careful in their opinions. It seems that editorialists are more inclined to express opinions that are in line with the political or social norms of their readership. This has led to a lack of diversity in editorial opinions.

I believe that editorialists should be more open to expressing opinions that are contrary to the dominant views of their readership. This would encourage a more diverse and vibrant public discourse.

I hope that editorialists will consider the need for diversity in their opinions.

Dear Editor:

In Wednesday's edition of P. O. Box Q, Joe Malivizzi wrote a letter in response to The Observer's coverage of the Mock Convention platform. Although Joe had some good points, I'm afraid his claims are just not worth the effort.

The Mock Convention was an important event and I believe that the Observer covered it fairly well.

The Russian problem

Dear Editor:

Once again election year is upon us. With all the hubbub on campus concerning our upcoming Mock Convention, I would like to consider the potential for nuclear war.

There is a well-known saying that the worse the presidential campaign, the more likely is the possibility of nuclear war. This is because the presidential campaign is a time when the candidates are forced to take positions on various issues, including foreign policy.

While I do not think that the Mock Convention will lead to nuclear war, I do believe that it is important to consider the potential for such an event.

Space was not ignored

Dear Editor:

In response to the April 13 letter from Paul Wilkins and Mike Traynor regarding space development being "ignored" in the Mock Convention platform, I would like to respond as follows:

First, nothing was "ignored" in the Mock Convention platform. There is a mention of space development, but it was not the main focus. The platform addressed other important issues.

Second, space development is not necessarily limited to a single language. It is important to consider the global nature of space development.

Third, the Mock Convention platform did include space development, but it was not the central theme. The platform focused on other important issues.

I believe that the Mock Convention platform was a comprehensive and inclusive document.

Take a position, Potter

Dear Editor:

I have always assumed that editorialists were more careful in their opinions. It seems that editorialists are more inclined to express opinions that are in line with the political or social norms of their readership. This has led to a lack of diversity in editorial opinions.

I believe that editorialists should be more open to expressing opinions that are contrary to the dominant views of their readership. This would encourage a more diverse and vibrant public discourse.

I hope that editorialists will consider the need for diversity in their opinions.

P. O. Box Q

Dear Editor:

I would like to clear up a few items set forth in a recent column appearing in The Observer. First of all, I refer to the issue of the Mock Convention. At the time of the convention, the platform was not yet finalized. The platform was finalized on April 16, 1984.

The Observer's article stated that the Mock Convention platform was not yet finalized. This is incorrect. The platform was finalized on April 16, 1984.

I would like to clear up this issue and ensure that the public is informed of the correct facts.

B-Ball brawl

Dear Editor:

Spring at Notre Dame marks the return of two events, Bookstore Basketball and spring field hockey. Unfortunately, the first of these two events is not always successful. As a matter of fact, our recent game against Spontaneous Bookstore play was a disaster. As the ball was about to go over an hour to complete, upsetting the finalists...

I would like to bring this issue to the attention of the administration. As a Spontaneous Bookstore player, I feel that our team was at a disadvantage due to the long time it took to finish the game. We were already scheduled and that had looked forward to playing behind the combustion and sweet swishes, a shocking long time. This is not the way our team members were scheduled to play on and hoped will be avoided yet there are limits to how rough play should be...
Strange days indeed

An ND interview in the year 2000

by Marc Ramirez
features columnist

LETTERMAN: Would everyone please welcome University of Notre Dame President Weadore Thisplace.

Weadore: Thisplace, taking his hands as if in victory, throwing kisses at the audience, then finally shaking hands with Letterman. Letterman motions for Thisplace to take a seat.

THISPLACE: Hey, it's really great to be here.

Weadore: You've been the president of Notre Dame for how long now?

THISPLACE: Two years. David, and it sure took me long enough to get here. I mean, after Tedford for the ten-year extension on his contract back in the '80s, no one ever thought he'd leave. And even when he died in '88, they didn't taste Eddie Joyce his successor until three days were up, in case you know. And then Eddie finally went in '98, as everyone knows, and I took the helm.

LETTERMAN: I understand all of your students are required to sleep on the floor?

THISPLACE: Yeah, that's right. David. Even after we outlawed folks, we still had problems. A student in a drunken stupor fell off a daybed and fell into his own vomit and suffocated. That was when Ted got involved. So then we had everyone sleep on mattresses, but that didn't go on for long, either, because some guy at the University of Zimbabwe rolled off a mattress he was sleeping on and died. No now everyone has to sleep on the floor.

LETTERMAN: Pardon me if I'm wrong, Weadore, but wasn't the guy who rolled off his mattress in a fact at 90-year-old teacher? WOULDN'T that have something to do with his death?

THISPLACE: I suppose that could have been a minor factor. But the main issue was that he died falling off a mattress.

LETTERMAN: I see. Now, about your football team, Weadore.

Notre Dame has gone 6-5 for the last fifteen years. I believe that's a record, isn't it?

THISPLACE: You're absolutely right. David. It is. Yeah, after Gerry Faust went 10-1 in '84 and then won the Cotton Bowl, what else could we have done but extend his contract by 25 years?

LETTERMAN: Yes, I see your logic.

THISPLACE: So we've been to the Liberty Bowl three times now, to help celebrate its 50th, 50th and 40th anniversaries. I'll admit it's getting quite monotonous. But we've never quite been able to turn down the bucks, you know?

LETTERMAN: Along those lines, I hear the nation at Notre Dame has been upped to an incredible $50,000 a year for students now.

THISPLACE: Actually, it's $52,500. David. The reason it's so high, of course, is to help pay for all the guards against possible injury which the University has had installed on campus. It's not nearly enough, you understand, but I think in the long run our protective measures will have shielded against lawsuits and have saved us money.

LETTERMAN: What kind of protective measures are you talking about?

THISPLACE: Well, there's the massive conveyor belt system we have. The folks run everywhere on campus, so people don't have to walk anywhere; just step on a belt and there you are at Stepan Center or the Bocese Memorial Library. We were worried some student would trip on a crack in one of the old sidewalks, fall over a fence or something, and then sue for every- thing we have. So we solved that problem.

LETTERMAN: Hard to believe, Weadore. Tell me more.

THISPLACE: We're trying to make Notre Dame the safest school in the world. There was an incident out at Duck Island at St. Joseph's Lake that had us shaking in our socks. Some crazed duck ran after a student who had playfully waded onto the island and bit him, and he wanted to sue the University for allowing wild animals to run loose. I think this was in '91. So we gave him a full scholarship and he never said another word about it. But to prevent anything similar from happening, we just put all of the ducks hunted down and shot, and we attracted duck repellent all over the shores of the lake. And finally we installed hidden machine guns on campus to ward off any ducks or other birds that might come to Notre Dame to bite some- body.

LETTERMAN: We have time for one more question, Weadore. It's somewhat of a closed issue since the case was closed in 1994, but I was wondering if you could shed some more light on the situation. For those in the audience who might not know the story, five senior classes in one high school in California have to have Ft. Lauderdale resident Harold B. Augustine as their commencement speaker in the mid to late '80s. Augustine then mysteriously disappeared in 1989. The question is, wherever happened to Harold B. Augustine?

THISPLACE: No comment, David.

LETTERMAN: Well, thanks for coming down for the show.

Weadore: Will you be coming back for our segment of "Stupid University President Tricks"?

THISPLACE: Of course, David.

THISPLACE shakes hands with Letterman and walks off stage.

LETTERMAN (to audience): Well, there's our show for tonight. Hard to believe, isn't it, folks?

On the superiority of dogs

by Paul Cimino
features columnist

A field guide

Heathcliffe

What do these names have in common? As you probably have already realized, they are names of cats. But why are these cats so well known? I mean, what good are they? Really now, what good are cats anyway?

Let's get serious here. The creature that should be talked about is the dog. That's right, the DOG!! The dog is a much more worthwhile creature than the cat. Why, you ask? Well, dear elocutionist, read and learn.

First of all, the dog is not known as man's best friend for nothing. He is now and always has been important in society. Way back when man had to hunt in order to survive, the dog was an invaluable asset. Even today the dog remains a willing helper to hunters. And, by the way, when was the last time you heard of a bunch of cats leading the world Prince Charles to a fox?...

But enough of fox hunting and retrievers. Let's talk HOLLYWOOD! Dogs are acting in shows all over the place. How about "Lassie," "Benji," and the parts dogs have played in such memorable sitcoms as "The Brady Bunch" and "Please don't eat the Daisies." You may have also noticed the dog in this weekend's movie, "Flashdance." Simply put, the dog is a much more able actor than the cat.

Dogs have so much going for them. In fact, they can't lose. Loyalty, intelligence, and ability—all qualities which felines do not possess in great quantities. Sure, I know that you are going to argue that cats learn to use litter boxes quickly and to bury any of their leavings. All I can say is ROB! One of the most enjoyable things about owning a dog is walking him. I can find nothing I would rather do than to try to restrain my Siberian Husky, from pulling me all over the neighborhood. I would like to clarify a previous statement. Earlier I said that people owned dogs. True, you do need a license for your dog; however, in reality after a short period of time a dog becomes a full-fledged member of any family. To true dog lovers, licenses are just formalities. Excuse me; I digress. Let me now turn to the dog's worth in and around the home.

My house is heated by natural gas and every time the gasman comes to check the meter. I am usually hurried to restrain my dog. Once my dog realizes that a stranger is coming to the house he takes things into his own hands (or paws). It takes a good half hour to make him understand that the person is a friend. And here is a question for you. Have you ever had a girlfriend or boyfriend whose dog does not like it when you touch her or him? And what if your girlfriend enjoys watching while you are attacked by her dog? Try it some time. I think you will agree there are better ways to spend an evening.

But the dog can do a great deal more than just guard your house and family. Depending on your teaching ability, it is possible to get your dog to fetch the paper, a pair of slippers, a frisbee, or even open and close doors. About the closest a cat will come to mimicking these abilities is to play with a ball of string and/or look cute. Boring.

If, however, you still believe that God had a constructive reason for creating the cat, go ahead and try to find one. Here is one hint: whatever the reason, it was not to bring brandy to freezing mountain climbers.

And Joe Blah made 6-16 for Red Wine.

Individual standouts in yesterday's games include Ed Herpe, who led the Windy City Five to a 21-7 victory over Dead on Arrival. The Windy City Five, which played with only four players in that game, shot an impressive 21 for 50.

Jack McLaughlin returned his crown (carried last week) as the best of The Modern Lovers by making eight of his nine shots in yesterday's 21-14 win over The Hare.

Rick Louthan hit 11 of 13 to lead, Armed and Dangerous II past BVK.

Father Ed (Mock) Malloy was the shoo-in for The Shootist, which eliminated the Milwaukee Polo Club, 21-14. Malloy hit 10 of 14 for the winners of that contest.

This weekend saw two other teams leave the tournament without losing a game. Two teams were ejected because they played with players who had already played for other teams in this year's tournament. Blum says he hopes he and his assistants can stay ahead of these illegal players.

Meanwhile, the second round continues. Today is the second and last day of the 250-team round, and there are several good games scheduled.

At 4 p.m., one good game is on Step 5, where Four Guys That Would Rather Be at Quarter Beer Night and One Guy That Would Rather Be at Lewis Meet The Vacuum Effect. Meanwhile, on Laconia 11, The Screamer take on Showtime.

At 5:45 p.m., the place to be is behind the bookstore. Mark's Deli meets Bob Barker and the Walkers on Bookstore 9, and Return of the Pig- bag takes on Academia Nuns on Bookstore 10.

At 6:15 p.m., you can pick your favorite courts and still find a good game. Bleeding Ax & Wounds II will play The Dry Heaves on Step 5, Nothing.VIII and Hungry Rats Who Like to Throw on Bookstore 10, and Tequila White Lightning IV goes up against Newton's Fallacy on Laconia 12.

Spring scrimmage

Francisco moves to defensive tackle

By LARRY BURKE
Sports Writer

As is usually the case in spring football scrimmages, there were some good things and some bad things observed by the Irish coaching staff during Saturday's practice session. But whether or not the good outnumbered the bad is still a debatable issue.

Probably the biggest bright spot for coach Gerry Faust and his staff was the emergence of placekicker Pat Chura, a 6'4, 195-pound, sopho- more walk-on who could be Notre Dame's next "small wonder."

A sore-footed kicker from St. Louis, Chura spent last season as a walk-on-kicker at Purdue. He always dreamed of playing for Notre Dame, however, so he transferred after the '82 season and sat out last year. Chura certainly didn't hurt his chances on Saturday by booting field goals of 38 and 42 yards, a couple of extra points.

Sophomore Safety John Carety, the early-spring favorite to assume the placekicking chores of graduat- ing Mike Johnston, was two-for-four on his field goal attempts, hitting from 22 and 25 yards, but missing at 32 and 46 yards.

Another walk on, Ted Gradel, was the victim of a bad hang-on a 41-yard attempt. Gradel did hit on his only PAT attempt, but five-for-four on his extra points. He did sophomore Hal Von Wy, who is coming back from orthoscopic sur- gery on his knee.

Another pleasant surprise for the Irish coaches was an old favorite who turned up in a new place.

Hawwatai Francisco, the flashy freshman who backed up Allen Pinckett at tailback for most of last season, played safe on Saturday, after making the switch in Friday's practice. Francisco spent the majority of the day with the second unit behind Steve Lawrence, but did see action with the starting team as a nickel back.

"Hawwatai is a great athlete," said Faust. "We asked him to make the move because we want our best 22 players on the field. If he works out and the kids like him, he could be a starter.

Francisco's move was made possi- ble by the emergence of several of his classmates at the tailback spot. The most impressive of these was Alonzo Kelley, who had another good day Saturday, leading all rus-"
