95 percent of faculty in survey vote in favor of a sabbatical policy

By MIKE MILLEN

Judging by a recent survey, more than 95 percent of Notre Dame faculty favor the establishment of a sabbatical policy. Yet according to President Mario Borelli and Michael Crowe, Notre Dame's current leave policy fails short of this goal.

Crowe, who is the chairman of the Faculty Senate Subcommittee on Research and Renewal, wants to use a program implemented in which a faculty member can request a leave every seven years. The paid, one-semester sabbatical leave would allow professors to perform research and teach, as Faculty Senate Chairman Borelli adds, "renew themselves.

Crowe explained that there is a group of seven colleges which Notre Dame classifies as "peer institutions." The administration compares Notre Dame with these schools and says various areas of academic life. "Nearly all of our peer institutions have a sabbatical leave," Crowe explained, adding that Notre Dame is "dramatically different. Here, the average is 16 years between leaves." A survey reflecting the feelings of more than 60 percent of the faculty numerically supports this opinion. Not only did 95 percent vote in favor of sabbatical policy, but 62 percent said they would accept a smaller salary increase to cover the cost. Crowe said these statistics are both "consistent with the concern expressed in the survey that Notre Dame offers such a policy."

Provos also mentioned that the senate analysis concerning the rate at which sabbaticals are granted, but cautioned that the figures can be misleading. "In practice, all who have applied have received the leave," he said of the "paid leave," it is true. "I can only remember running down one or two requests," he admitted.

O'Meara said the faculty handbook encourages instructors to apply for leave.

"The University recognizes the importance of faculty leaves of absence. The University provides for sabbatical leave in the case of leaves for research or other activities. The University also provides for sabbatical leave in the case of extra-ordinary circumstances, and is often used to facilitate the work of the committee."

"I would love to see a list of good applications," he concluded.

While different would like to see more faculty taking leaves, he pointed out that a full sabbatical type of leave would not cost $600,000. "There will be a gradual

Commitment to action: a vital part of the plan

A new student center is not on the planning board. But once the plans for the renovation of LaFortune are complete, students might not recognize the former science building.

The LaFortune Renovation Committee has just submitted its report to the Student Center Building Program "Summary" to Executive Assistant to the President Father Tyson. Included in the summary are plans for a student media center, a commercial zone, an undergraduate club, and recreation leisure areas.

If all of the ideas submitted by Director of Student Affairs James McDonnell and the five students that comprised the Renovation Committee are executed, the social life at Notre Dame, or lack thereof, should be incredibly improved.

Or when?

The report of the committee is the first step forward taken toward refurbishing the center. According to Tyson, the administration is waiting for a viable plan from the students before beginning any work.

This must be one of the first times the administration has waited for student input before making a major decision involving students.

If past experience is any indication, there must have been many more significant reasons why the administration was Motting.

Whatever the reason, the administration postponed a decision. Now the committee has presented its report; is full steam ahead, right?

Not quite. All people draw preliminary sketches based on the report, a process which Tyson said normally takes three or four weeks. But remember, this is Notre Dame, the Officers must approve the plans. And if they don't, then what happens? is it back to the drawing board? Of course the Center get shelved for a while?

Even if the Officers do give the plans their O.K., running mass disapproval into itself also admitted cost has been a problem. Extending the Huddle eastward creating a patio terrace for outdoor dining, building additional floors on top above the pool room, and installing an elevator, to name a few of the major construction jobs suggested, would require large sums of money, especially since these additions are to a 100-year old building.

Credit must be given where credit is due. The University is finally admitting that LaFortune is inadequate as a student center. The University even created a committee, the majority of whose members are students, and it gave that committee the reins in creating a plan for renovating the student center.

That is where things stand now. From studying the committee's report it appears that its members spent much time analyzing the needs of the students, and the best ways of utilizing LaFortune to satisfy those needs, but will students even realize the work of this committee?

Whether or not it is coincidence, the fact remains that the students have been offered a renovated center within weeks of the issuance of a new alcohol policy that will take away the student's beer. Alcohol will be banned for all students under the age of 21 as of next semester. When will the social alternative promised the students be ready? So much of the plan hinges on the approval of the Officers, from the extension of three floors, down to the purchasing of a large screen television.

Even more essential than the O.K. of the officers is the basic commitment of the administration. Concern for student life has been verbally expressed a number of times. But what if a new and improved LaFortune is not finished until 1994? What are students supposed to do in the interim? They are left with an inadequate facility and an administration that seemingly does not care. Now the administration's chance to prove their commitment to the students through action.

OBUD asks students about alcohol

BY MIRIAM HILL
Staff Reporter

Ombudsman telephoned more than 250 students last Wednesday, April 25, to survey student attitudes toward alcohol, according to Ombudsman Director Henry Sienkiewicz. A similar survey was taken in 1975.

The purpose of the survey "was to see whether student attitude has changed since the 1975 survey," Sienkiewicz said. Sienkiewicz and other pollsters chose students taken in 1975.

Eight questions, including how often they consume alcohol, whether alcohol is a detriment to the Notre Dame community, and whether there should be official University guidelines concerning student use of alcohol. The 1975 and 1984 surveys yielded basically the same results, with approximately 49 percent of the students responding that they consume alcohol more than once per week and 43 percent less than once per week in both surveys. Ninety percent of the students in 1975 and 1984 replied alcohol was not a detriment to the Notre Dame community.

The most noticeable difference between the two surveys occurred in response to the question of official University guidelines on the use of alcohol. In 1975, only 42 percent agreed the University should establish rules governing the use of alcohol. Last week's survey showed 41.2 percent of the students felt there should be official University guidelines, reflecting increased student support for responsible use of alcohol.

Over 64 percent of the students questioned in this year's survey agreed with present University guidelines on alcohol and 74.8 percent said the new policy would affect their social life adversely.

Father George Rozum, rector of Alumni Hall, agreed with these results, saying he thinks most students are pleased with the old guidelines governing alcohol use.

Copies of the survey were sent to Student Body President Rob Berino, Vice-President Cathy David, and Observer Editor-in-Chief Bob Vonderheide.

Bertino felt "the results of the survey coincide with the way students have been reacting to the new policy in general." In response to the question concerning the effects of the new policy on student social life, Bertino said, "When you've got three fourths of the students saying it will affect social life negatively, it shows there is a serious problem with social life here.

Sienkiewicz said Ombudsman will continue with this type of survey next year.

accommodation," he said, giving the empirical example of Notre Dame's steady rise in other areas of faculty concern. In salaries, O'Meara said "in 1970, Notre Dame ranked 90th out of 198 schools at the Assistant Professor level, while the University moved up to 18th in 1982." He alluded to similar pay increases in the other levels of instruction.

The provost pointed out that the faculty report was only a resolution. The faculty must "actually make a proposal," he said, adding that perhaps the current system, if better publicized, might be better than a set policy.

"It's a much more difficult question than it appears on the surface," O'Meara said. "It's a matter of priorities," and "it's always a tug-of-war (for the budget)."

Borelli commented on the importance of a sabbatical program. "Twenty to 25 years ago, the university was less excellence oriented. If that is the aim of the university, then periods of refreshment and learning are needed..." Borelli added, "It is time that the faculty senate has had to face in a long time.

O'Meara seemed optimistic about the future of leaves at Notre Dame. "I hope this discussion will encourage people to plan proposals," he commented, also saying "I don't believe that there will be a dramatic increase in requests, though.

Ruppe has been the victim of a bad press

I am writing to respond to The Observer's totally misinformed attack on Loree Ruppe, the 1984 Notre Dame graduate and current speaker. Having viewed Ruppe's many successes in Washington at close hand, I find it hard to understand how The Observer can so easily ignore her achievements. It is even harder to accept your quoting without question the outrageous attack of the Washington Times, a yellow journal controlled by the Reverend Moon. To say that the Times is held in low regard in Washington political circles would be a great compliment to it. Since Notre Dame is probably not familiar with the Times, and cannot therefore ignore its attacks as obviously without merit, I would like to respond to the two claims raised in the Observer article.

John Walsh

Guest column

No, this is not another column concerning alcohol or ROTC (though I support the existence of both on campus) instead, the following account explains the social prejudices which residents of the less-celebrated Notre Dame halls face daily.

First, let me say I am a willing resident of Fisher Hall and am proud of it. Unfortunately, this was not always the case.

When I was assigned to "life in Fisher," my brother, a former Stanford resident, described the hall's single rooms as "cells" and compared my future roommate to the walk-in closet of a drug store. He had used the word, "window added." My friend, who was also a former Stanford resident, told me, "It could be worse, you could have been thrown into Howard." For the rest of the summer, I had nightmares of being caught in a narrow hallway by whatever they said crawled in halls such as Fisher and Murphy. Not knowing anything about hall life, I was prepared for the worst. My brother was only kidding, but I wasn't going to take any chances.

For the first few weeks of school, when a visitor asked me what the dorm was like, I would simply say the dorm was a "killing floor." I now realize how easy it is to ignore her achievements. I know it comes as easily to John Walsh as it does to me. But I find it hard to understand how he has been able to forget about his headstrong medical student, who is now a dedicated soldier. I hope it comes as a surprise to him.

Joseph Murphy

Wishful thinking

The U.S. military must realistically deal with its current soldiers. It is unfair to expect the soldier to act if the need arises. Some of those who will decide how our country handles foreign aggression will never have any input into a military decision. The military is a profession, not an existence. To expect the future officers from the Notre Dame ROTC units will some day be in the position to be building another "proof of isolation," not a student gathering place.

to affect our nation's military posture, but so will those students who become politicians.

The military must realistically deal with the soldiers it now has. It is unfair to expect the soldier to act if the need arises. Some of those who will decide how our country handles foreign aggression will never have any input into a military decision. The military is a profession, not an existence. To expect the future officers from the Notre Dame ROTC units will some day be in the position to be building another "proof of isolation," not a student gathering place.

The idea that ROTC should be banned from Catholic campuses because it promotes unchristian acts by its members is irrational. What if the Notre Dame Student Council were to decide not to send our nation into World War II using a Notre Dame Law School Graduate? If one follows the logic of the pacifist, the Law School should be closed because from it come those who acted in an unpacifist and therefore unchristian way.

A military officer has less input than congressman in deciding whether or not we go to war. This, of course, exposes to danger, the future officers from the Notre Dame ROTC units which would be to lose valuable religious input into the military decision-making process. By educating future officers in a Catholic environment, the ideas and morals of the Church are added to the military organization.

The important question people must ask themselves is "Who would I want to make today's military decisions?" Would you be more comfortable with the officer who has a social science education or the one who has a Notre Dame ROTC graduate who you know has been educated in a Catholic environment?

Someone is going to make those big decisions and I believe that it is in the Catholic Church's interest to place as many Catholic educators into the system as possible.

Many who oppose ROTC argue that the training is too harsh for students to bear. It is obvious to anyone remotely associated with ROTC that those people have no concept of the ROTC curriculum. The ROTC programs are designed to produce professionals and leaders who are capable leaders.

The idea that ROTC educate all students to military leadership is a lie. Students are taught the history and purpose of the military. The purpose is not to promote war, but to prepare for it as a precautionary measure.

Upperclassmen teach leadership techniques and managerial skills. Juniors and seniors are taught what it means to become professionals and, more specifically, military professionals. This education includes discussion of morals, ethics and duties — and how they relate to the Christian officer.

A case might be made that, on the whole, ROTC students are inclined to take their moral education more seriously than other students. ROTC cadets realize that the position into which they enter as officers increases the possibility for moral conflict. The ROTC cadet must work out the demands of the military with the morals of the Church before making a commitment.

An officer who thinks about the moral implications of certain actions is an asset to the military and to the Catholic community. Fortunately, for the military, and the Catholic community, the Notre Dame ROTC administration sees a need to morally educate future officers.

This University exists as it does today primarily because of the freedom available in the United States. To continue that freedom we need a strong military. The military gains highly-skilled, educated officers (both academically and morally) from Notre Dame.

The relationship helps both parties. There is a place and, in fact, a commitment, in the Notre Dame ROTC program to ROTC and the education of future military leaders.

Dear Editor:

On the front of your paper under the name The Observer is the slogan "the independent newspaper not at all in favor of Saint Mary's." Keeping in mind "and Saint Mary's," I would like you to look at the Wednesday May 2, 1984 issue of The Observer.

There are three sports articles, one of them describes the women's basketball loss against Valparaiso, the only caption to the picture of Suzie Pancraft returning after a shoe read, in part, "The Irish destroy the Belles." Please, then, search for the article in "Sports Briefs" that is written by Jim Rocker. Where is the picture of Mary Lynn Melchatch knocking in one of her four RBIs in the first inning of her three RBIs? It seems to me that the connection is neither obvious nor fairly suggested.

I take it Picher sees the connection between "Pre-Vatican II" and the People of Praise in sufficiently obvious to his readers—it probably is. Perhaps from McGinnis point of view which you seem to be looking for more than the right to drink whenever, whenever, and wherever he wanted.

And by all means disregard the fact that Indiana is a 21 state, and therefore, underage drinking at Notre Dame was a previous right. In your dictionaries are non-existent, a privilege is, by definition, "an ex-law, right, or advantage specially granted."

If you're attempting to restore the supposed elimination of student freedoms and rights, then you had better come up with a button than one which reduces the implication that your social life depends so much on alcohol that it will die without it, and subsequently Notre Dame will be a very boring place to live.

So much on drinking, you yourselves are very binging. If the quality of your social life depends upon your so-called "right," then I advise you to do some deep soul searching to find out exactly the kind of freedom for which you seem to be looking.

Students immature

Dear Editor:

Directing my letter to the students, I ask do you who participated in the protest, or should you say temper tantrum, at the Administration Building feel better?

Instead of taking the time to effectively organize your thoughts, plans and actions, you went full steam ahead, without considering what consequences your rash actions would have.

I truly felt you might have had legitimate complaints when this situation came to light. I, however, and you alone, were the ones who demanded to be treated like responsible adults. Never mind that you haven't acted like responsible adults, but by God, you nevertheless demand to be treated as such.

Just exactly how far do you think your actions will take you now? It's time all of you grow up and face the cold realities of acting like responsible adults. Your immature response is indeed indicative of why your privileges were taken away.

And you have much to be concerned with when you believe that perhaps many people are not very interested in the direction given this issue by the Praise of Praise link.

Apple has a worm in it

Dear Editor:

Several months ago I was pleased to learn about the contractual agreement formalized between the Apple Computer Company and the University of Notre Dame which would enable persons associated with the University to purchase Apple computers and accessories at a discount. In exchange, the University agreed to buy $2 million worth of Apple products. Unfortunately, my opinion was changed because of the poor business practices of the Apple Company.

Perhaps these manufacturers believe that since we are not paying "full retail price," we will be broken promises and add additional expenses. I do not share their opinion. I ordered a Macintosh, an ImageWriter and accessories the first week of February. Payment in full was required upon ordering. The seniors of General Micro said they expected shipment within four weeks. Several weeks later I received the Macintosh, but not the ImageWriter or some accessories.

When the computers were being distributed, some students inquired about the products not yet received. The seniors were rude and inconsiderate.

I realize that they are merely puppets of the company and have no control over production, but their attitude and their treatment of the students were inexcusable. After waiting one more month, I inquired about the products not yet received. The Apple response? First, they had no idea, except that nothing would arrive in the near future. Secondly, asked if Apple would ship the remaining products not to people homes this summer, these salespersons replied that they would ship them only C.O.D. Thirdly, they kept repeating to me how "fortunate" I was because at least I received a computer. They offered that if I paid full retail price in February, cannot expect shipment until "sometime this summer" and also how "fortunate" ND is because some schools have received even fewer shipments.

I can understand a slight delay, but I have difficulty believing that this nationwide delay in shipment to universities (Macintosh computer can be purchased and received at retail stores when one pays the full price) could not be alleviated. Is Apple's participation of sales to 24 large universities.

Apple personnel should have been honest from the beginning, the choice of discounted price and long delay or retail price and earlier supply. Certainly, no one would desire to wait six or seven months. What about the 82 million Notre Dame has provided to Apple through purchase of Macintosh? Maybe the University should "delay" payment.

Perhaps Apple personnel believe they are "serving the consumer," but they are not. Their salespersons made promises, disappointed them and now benefit. They required full payment up front, and subsequently Apple's advantageous position for them have our money and our products.

I believe that since they did promise students the delivery of the computer, Apple should at least pay the shipping charges, if the shipments ever do arrive. After all, the salespersons stated that they "could not guarantee" the safety of the computers if not picked up or shipped at shipping charges. It seem unlikely that the computers, but are disgusted with their general business practices.

Brown picked in sixth
Steelers hope safety can support aging secondary looking to replace Blount

By THERON ROBERTS

Sports Writer

As the Steel Curtain rusts with age, gradually replacements will have to take over for names in the secondary such as Mel Blount and Donnie Shell.

The second Notre Dame player to be taken in the draft, Chris Brown was chosen by the Pittsburgh Steelers in the sixth round.

Even though he was chosen a little lower than he expected, Brown still thinks that he has a good chance to make the Steelers squad.

"I think that my chances are pretty good, taking into account the age of the guys they have in the secondary," Brown said. "I think with the versatility that I have because I played all of the positions while I was here will help me, too."

The 6-1, 196-pound Brown moved to free safety last season after holding down the cornerback position for the previous two years.

Brown accounted for 46 tackles and two interceptions in 1985. He also led the team in passes broken up for the last two seasons.

"Another thing that will help is that I have a lot of determination to make it with the Steelers," Brown commented. "I was hoping that I would go there."

Brown had a chance to work out with other defensive backs who were drafted in some mini-camps held by the pro teams. "I don't think that there was a whole lot of difference between me and some other people who were chosen ahead of me," Brown continued. "I think that it just depended on what in particular each team was looking for."

Steelers in the sixth round.

Brown was chosen by the Pittsburgh Steelers in the sixth round.

"I'm pretty confident about being able to make the team at Tampa Bay, and that's my only concern. This is a great opportunity for me, and I'm really looking forward to playing for Tampa Bay this year."

When training camp begins later this month, Kiel will battle for the quarterback spot with holdover Jack Thompson and Steve DeBerg, recently acquired from Denver. One advantage that the Irish senior will have as he enters the Bucs' quarterback derby, in addition to his signal-calling abilities, is that he has been proven passer. With more plays at any other position in Notre Dame history, Kiel had a solid senior year as a punter, kick coverage and returner.

"It's been a solid season for me. I've been working hard and I think that I have a good chance to compete for the starting job.rated quarterbacks selected, two interceptions as a junior.

The Chicago Blitz have USFL territorial rights to Toran, and have talked with him since the NFL draft, but Toran is thinking only about being with the Raiders for now. "I'm excited about moving out to L.A.," Toran pointed out. "I hope I get a chance with the Raiders."

had also expressed interest in the United States Football League.

Kiel didn't hold down the starting quarterback job for the entire season, but he believes that was a consideration in Tampa Bay's decision to draft him.

"I think that it was important that I proved my ability to perform well coming off the bench," noted Kiel. "I did pretty well in that role during the season, and I think that I showed that I can help a team in that respect."

Kiel will begin his NFL career later this month, when the Buccaneers open their preseason training camp.

Raiders take CB Toran in sixth round

By THERON ROBERTS

Call it stating the obvious if you want, but physical players fit in well with physical teams.

Terry Toran, last season's Irish defensive captain, known for his physical play, was tabbed by the Los Angeles Raiders in the sixth round, four picks after teammate Chris Brown was selected.

"That was about where I expected that I'd go," said Toran. "In fact, that's the exact team that I wanted to go to."

The defending Super Bowl champs have been known for hard-hitting secondary play, and Toran figures to be a good addition to the secondary, increasing the likelihood that Toran could break into the lineup.

"I am hoping that I open the chances of (making the squad) because I haven't looked at their player personnel," Toran said. "I know that I'll have to work hard and work in the capacity that they want me to in order to make a contribution."

Toran was plagued with an ankle injury during the 1985 season, missing all or the major part of five games. He picked up only 23 tackles and no interceptions during the year.

Toran, a 6-4, 206-pounder was a honorable mention All-America selection in the Sporting News, after making 77 tackles and 2 kicking average.

"I'm going down to Tampa Bay to do both (play quarterback and punt)," said Kiel. "I believe that I'm going to do both and I think it's going to be good, and I also believe that I can compete for the punting job. I've just got to go down there and prove myself, then we'll see what happens."

Although he had an up and down season with the Irish in 1985, Kiel undoubtedly helped himself with a strong finish. In the regular season finale against Air Force, Kiel completed 16 of 22 passes for 389 yards and touchdown in a losing cause. In the Liberty Bowl, Kiel led the Irish to a 19-18 victory over Boston College by connecting on 11 of 19 passes for 151 yards and a touchdown. The Columbus, Ind., native did not hold down the starting quarterback job for the entire season, but he believes that this was a consideration in Tampa Bay's decision to draft him.

"I think that it was important that I proved my ability to perform well coming off the bench," noted Kiel. "I did pretty well in that role during the season, and I think that I showed that I can help a team in that respect."

Kiel will begin his NFL career later this month, when the Buccaneers open their preseason training camp.

Bell still has a season of college eligibility left. But having his degree in hand, he decided to try the professional ranks. He attended several NFL mini-camps, where pro scouts took a close-up look at his talents. He also made a fine showing in the Japan Bowl in January.

Bell joined Notre Dame teammate and fellow Buckeye Tony Hunter as the second Notre Dame player the Bills have chosen in the past two drafts.

Maune joins Cowboys
Lineman hopes to use size and speed to earn position on 'America's Team'

By ED DOMANSKY

Neil Maune, the only offensive starter to leave the Notre Dame ranks, will be putting his muscle to good use for the Dallas Cowboys as a result of Tuesday's National Football League draft.

Although not selected until the nineth round, Maune is pleased to be heading for Dallas.

"I thought I might have gone earlier (in the draft)," says the 6-5, 278-pounder from Mariasville, Mo. "But I'm happy about going to the Cowboys. They've got a fine organization and I would really like to play for them."

Maune hopes to avoid the shoulder problems that plagued his early career under the Golden Dome. The problems forced him to miss a good deal of action and allowed him to be granted an extra year of eligibility.

Originally a defensive player, Maune was converted to offense in the spring of 1981. Though not an extremely vocal person, his hard work and determination over the last two seasons helped him distinguish himself as a valuable team leader. These qualities, as well as his impressive physical abilities — great size and strength and a 4.67 40-yard dash — attracted the attention of pro scouts.

Although Maune says he will always remember his years at Notre Dame fondly, he emphasizes that it was a great relief when Gil Brandt, the head of the Cowboys' scouting, called him at 10-30 Tuesday night offering him a chance to play pro football.

"I'm glad it (the draft) is over with," Maune says. "You don't know what room what your chances are of making the squad. There's no other way to look at it."

"It's good that there's another guy from Notre Dame," says the three-time monogram winner. "I'll have someone to relate to, especially another offensive lineman."

To add strength, Maune will continue to lift weights. In addition, he is working to improve his quickness and mobility.

"My arms are my size and speed," he explains. "I'm going to work to get even better."
SMU's Billy Cannon nine-game losing streak since the trade stemmed from the desire of Art Modell, the Browns' aggressive owner, to get into a direct bidding war with the USFL. The Bears, the source suggested, were not so inclined.

As for the draft itself, some watchers appeared to be the New York Giants and Jets, Cincinnati Bengals, New England Patriots, the Bears and the Cowboys. The Los Angeles Rams also appeared to do well, despite being without a pick until the fifth round.

The Rams went for immediate help, giving up a first and a fifth choice for defensive back Gary Green of Kansas City, a three-time All-Pro. Earlier, they had surrendered their second pick for the rights to Ron Brown, the world-class sprinter who declined to sign with the Browns last year after being drafted in the second round.

The Giants went into the draft with two options — pick to their strength by using their first pick third overall, to take Michigan State linebacker Carl Banks, or trade down and plug a huge hole by taking Ohio State tackle Bill Roberts.

As it turned out, they picked Banks, then traded their second-round pick for Washington's late first-round pick and grabbed Roberts. On the third round, they picked West Virginia's Jeff Enis, whom they had tabbed as the draft's best quarterback.

The Jets, with four picks in the first two rounds, grabbed four players who could provide immediate help — SMU defensive back Russell Carter, Arkansas defensive end Ron Faurot, center Jim Sweeney of Pittsburgh and tight end Glenn Demerson of Miami.

Cincinnati used its three first-round choices to go for beef — linebacker Rick Blessey of Arizona, defensive lineman Pete Koch of Maryland, and 310-pound offensive tackle Brian Blados of North Carolina. On the next two rounds, they picked up what scouts considered the best quarterback and running back left after the 10 picks — Boomer Esiason of Maryland and Stanford Jennings of Furman.

New England added wide receiver Irving Fryar, the draft's top pick, to off-injured running back Craig James, released by the USFL's Washington Federals, who couldn't afford him — particularly on the disabled list.

The Bears never expected Marv Levy to be around and they got an other highly rated linebacker, Ron Rivera of California. They also picked up potential help on the offensive line in Michigan guard Stefan Humphries.

Dallas, whose most recent drafts have been mediocre, grabbed Texas A&M's Billy Cannon Jr., son of the 1959 Heisman Trophy winner, whom they will use as a linebacker. They also may have helped their linebacker corps with DeOssie.

S.F. Giants halt long losing streak

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Al Oliver's pinch single in the eighth inning gave the San Francisco Giants a 4-3 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers yesterday and halted a nine-game losing streak.

The Giants came from behind twice to stop their longest losing streak since 1931 when the club was in New York. The eighth inning rally was off relievers Tom Niedenfuer, 0-2, and Carlos Diaz.

Despite career plagued by injuries, Bell first RB picked

By DAVE DZIEDZIC
Sports Writer

Being a surprise first-round pick and the first running back chosen in this year's NFL draft doesn't scare Greg Bell.

"I'm one of the happiest guys in the world right now," Bell said. "I'm anxious to get this season under way.

The Buffalo Bills, who made the Columbus, Ohio native the 26th pick in the first round, are also anxious for Bell to get going. The Bills are looking to Bell to fill the backfield void created by the departure of Joe Cribbs, who jumped to the Birmingham Stallions of the USFL at the end of last season.

"We've been out a feeling the Bills would pick him first," said his coach Gerry Faust. "Especially because the Bills talked to me three or four times.

The coach Kay Stephenson said the team had Bell rated as "the top running back in the draft." He's got good size and excellent speed, he has excellent strength, he has made adjustments and he catches the ball well," Stephenson said. "He has the potential to be the all-around type back that you look for.

The 5-11, 210 pound Bell accepts the challenge of following Cribbs. "I'll give it my best shot," he said. But he said that the Bills could not give him Cribbs locker or uniform number.

Bell's high selection came as a surprise to many people, especially his coach. "I'm really happy for Greg because he has had such a frustrating career as far as injuries," said Faust. "He's worked out real hard on his rehabilitation, though."

No matter what other experts say, the Bills are impressed with Bell's talent and do not anticipate that he will have injury problems.

"We don't think it's a risky pick," said Stephenson. "We did a lot of work on Greg and we feel that he can be a big impact player at running back.

Bell, who finished his degree requirements last semester and was doing graduate work here this semester, is already in Buffalo, preparing to receive treatment on his ankle. He will be fitted for a cast soon and will then receive electro-magnetic treatments that should completely mend the ankle. The goal is to have Bell in top condition for training camp.

"My body's fine," said Bell. "All I want to do is prove I can come in and play.

Bell accepts the challenge of following Cribbs. "I'll give it my best shot," he said. But he said that the Bills could not give him Cribbs locker or uniform number.
