Sharon’s appointment sparks rebellion against government

Associated Press

TEL AVIV - Israel - Ariel Sharon’s appointment to a bipartisan Cabinet, 18 months after the hawkish Likud leader was ousted from the Defense Ministry, is sparking a leftist rebellion against a Labor-led government.

Critics yesterday said that by giving in to Likud’s demand that Sharon be appointed as finance and industry minister, Labor leader and Prime Minister designate Shimon Peres was committing “political suicide.”

“Labor is spitting in the face of people who gave it their votes because they wanted to keep Sharon out of the army,” said Ron Cohen, a member of Parliament from the left-leaning Citizens’ Rights Movement.

“I will make every effort to organize a movement to fight against the government which puts Ariel Sharon in such a central position,” Cohen told The Associated Press.

Sharon’s position in a new government expected to be installed this week will give him a powerful voice on economic affairs, the nation’s top priority issue. Israeli inflation is headed toward 400 percent this year, and its mounting deficits are creating problems in obtaining foreign credit.

Sharon, architect of Israel’s 1982 Lebanon invasion, spent most of his adult life in the army. He owns a large farm in southern Israel, but has no business experience.

He remained on the fringes of power after his forced resignation in March 1985, when an investigating panel found him negligent in failing to prevent the September 1982 massacre of hundreds of Palestinian refugees near Beirut.

Sharon called the panel’s findings unjust and fought to restore his power.

The 56-year-old Sharon’s comeback began last April when, as a minister without portfolio, he challenged outgoing Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir for the party leadership.

And in an astonishing 60 percent of the vote from his Likud colleagues.

Sharon’s supporters have applauded the Shamir-Peres decision.

Judicial Council holds first 1984-85 meeting

By EVAN FARLEY

The new alcohol policy, confusion over student rights and the LaFortune renovations were among the items discussed at the Judicial Council’s first meeting of the year, which was held last Thursday in Hayes-Healy Center.

This year, due to the new changes in the campus alcohol policy, Judicial Coordinator Joe Zahn said that his council is to be assisted with a wide variety of new cases and further more anticipated student confusion as to their rights. In an effort to clarify the situation, the council plans to publish a “Student Rights Manual” and a “Notre Dame Tenants Handbook” for off campus students.

It is also planned to have all J-Boards distribute clarification sheets of “Du Lac’s” hall rules and regulations.

The council, composed of the heads of each hall’s Judicial Board, is a court for further student appeal in University offense cases.

A major point brought up during the proceedings was the hope of wresting away the counting of the votes during student government elections from Ombudsman (the student information council). Zahn’s original request that Ombudsman “keep away” for this year, has continually made him feel like an outsider. If the position passes to the next student council meeting, these duties would be added on to the council’s responsibility of running the ballot boxes in the halls.

In addition, the council would house student council, a student government proposal concerning the renovation of the LaFortune Student Center. He urged the council to take an active part in the approval of incoming students in the formation of an alternative plan.

The plan calls for the construction of a new student center on the present site of the Library Mall. The proposal also would house student offices, dance floors, and a sit-down restaurant with table service, while including a full-service Bookstore, a steady hall and a site for the meeting of many campus organizations. Adopt-a-Transfer

By CHRIS SKORCZ

A new program designed to help transfer students become familiar with their new school is being introduced this year by student government officials and the hall presidents.

The Adopt-a-Transfer program was “born out of sheer necessity,” according to Student Body Vice president Cathy David.

“The transfers were disappointed with the welcoming process,” David said. “We’ve always had a transfer orientation but this year we made a greater effort to introduce our transfers to actual student life. We want them to be with people their own age to make the transition to Notre Dame much smoother,” she added.

Each dorm will receive the names of 8-10 transfers. The dorm presidents will then select a like number of outgoing dorm residents to show the new students around campus, take them to dances, and introduce them to campus life.

“The problem in the past has been the stereotyping of transfers as second-class citizens or outsiders,” David said. “We’re trying to remove those labels.”

David said that student response is very favorable. She added that both the current students and the transfers say they are pleased with the program, which she believes will prove to be very helpful for the more than 500 transfers to Notre Dame each year.

In Brief

The Fall Army ROTC PDAE Lab was held Thursday, Sept. 7 in the Library of Congress. This ceremony recognized cadet accomplishments this past summer at Advanced Camp, Airborne, and Air Assault training. Four seniors completed Advanced Camp training at Fort Riley, Kan. Completion of this training is required for commissioning. Twenty-seven of the forty-four graduates received the coveted "Recondo" award which rewards high performance in physical fitness and land navigation and completion of "confidence building" exercises. This is the largest number of Notre Dame Reccondo winners ever and overall camp performance was one of Notre Dame's best ever. Notable individual awards were the platoon leadership award given to John P. Murphy and military proficiency awards given to Lourh A. Chiarella, Kirk M. Knisler, and Edward J. Shearer. — The Observer

The Reagan — Bush '84 campaign has designated September "National College Voter Registration Month." Youth for Reagan — Bush '84 will spearhead activities on campuses nationwide. The goal is to register 250,000 students who will support President Reagan and Vice President Bush with their votes in November. Reagan — Bush campaign officials cite recent surveys that approximately 57 percent of 18 to 24 year olds support the re-election of the President. Reagan now enjoys his greatest support from this age group. According to Liz Pickens, Executive Director of Youth for Reagan — Bush '84, young volunteers who will be working on their campaign are part of a national network of about 100,000 Reagan — Bush volunteers. — The Observer

Has Notre Dame lost sight of its Catholic identity?

The first week of school. Students gather in the library Auditory for their theology course on "Catholicism." The professor, Father Richard McBrien, begins by asking questions of basic Catholic knowledge. "Who was pope when Vatican II came out with its directives?" "Which came first, Augustine or the Council of Trent?" McBrien is testing his students, and the results are, as usual, a surprising ignorance of their religion among students of whom a majority are Catholic.

Notre Dame is going through a crisis. In the last half century, it has grown from an average Midwestern school to academically one of the nation's great institutions. There is just one problem.

In the drive for academic excellence, has Notre Dame lost sight of its Catholic identity? Has it been trying too hard to educate a great university rather than a great Catholic university?

The root of the problem is that no one seems to know what it means to be Catholic. In Notre Dame Catholicity is it run by Holy Cross priests? Because 60 percent of the students are Catholic (at least nominally)? Obviously, there must be something more than labels or affiliations.

On the other hand, it is because the students protest nuclear armament and abortion? Because they fight for human rights and just social projects? Because Notre Dame graduates are humane, especially sensitive people who are able to bring questions of social justice and ethics to bear in their occupations? These criteria, although very important, are similar to the conventional values of some of today's secular ideologies.

Should Notre Dame have also a unique and specific identity as a Christian institution? Shouldn't it nurture in its students a love for and commitment to the Christian faith? That is certainly not to say that all the students, or for that matter, the faculty, should be Catholic or Christian. But there should be some direction in the dialogue, some solid Christian base underlying an education at Notre Dame.

Some will be quick to point out that that causes problems. How can Notre Dame fulfill its responsibility as a university to allow free inquiry and the exchange of ideas? How can it keep growing as a great institution and still be a Christian university?

Undeniably there are conflicts in some cases. But when that happens, Notre Dame should be prepared to answer a central question. Which is more important, its Catholicism or its academic reputation? As it is now, the question is muted. Administration officials insist religion is not a criteria in hiring and tenure decisions. Yet a Protestant professor of theology left because he felt uncomfortable with the department's Catholic character. And according to another assistant professor of English, Notre Dame is, among other things, religious discrimination.

Students complain that professors teach theological opinions as if they were Church doctrine. But the question can't be ignored. The faculty is one of the most important factors in forming the identity of an institution. In recent years, the trend in Notre Dame's faculty has been toward increasing secularization. Few teachers ever talk about Christianity with enthusiasm or respect. There are signs that the trend is changing. Father McBrien, chairman of the theology department since 1980, is trying to enhance his Catholic character. Provisions for preferring Catholic faculty over non-Catholic are being considered.

But Notre Dame students still lack a basic knowledge of their faith, according to many professors. Although doctrinal knowledge is certainly not the most important part of being Christian, how can graduates be expected to commit to a foundation of content? How can the University help students form a critical faith if they have no common ground on which to begin?

In spite of this, Notre Dame students are noted for being religious. They are eager to understand their faith better — a high percentage (roughly 85 percent) go to Mass, and one third of all undergraduates take at least one theology course beyond the required two. Most students take their religion seriously.

The question is, in Notre Dame up to the challenge?
Foreign programs offer alternative

By MICHAEL J. CHMIEL
Staff Reporter

Every year a select group of Notre Dame students are allowed to enrich their academic lives by studying and living abroad for a year in one of four foreign study programs sponsored by the University.

According to Art Grubert, assistant to the director of foreign study, the programs offered in France, Austria, Japan, and Mexico allow students “a broad experience.”

Beginning in 1966 with the French program, foreign studies at Notre Dame have been continually growing. They not only allow students “to experience and live in a different culture, but also "suit academic needs and career development.".

The initial program was established in France, Angers, a city of about 150,000 population, located two and a half hours from Paris and an hour from the Atlantic. Students in Angers are instructed in French by professors from the Universite' Catholique of l'Ouest.

Business Administration students accepted into the program are given an opportunity to take an examination for a Paris Chamber of Commerce certificate at the end of the year.

In 1967, the Austrian program was offered for the first time. Located in Innsbruck, a city of about 120,000 surrounded by the Alps, the program utilizes the facilities of the University of Innsbruck established by the Jesuits in 1669.

“A new cut to the Innsbruck program is the way in which the American students are studying with Austrian students which is quite a change," said Grubert.

As in the Angers program, students live with families around the university in order to fully partake in all of the customs of the respective countries.

Added to the list in 1968 was a chance to study in Tokyo. Studying at Sophia University, students join over 8,000 Japanese students in downtown Tokyo. Although fluency in Japanese is not required, students are encouraged to take introductory courses in the language. While in Japan, the language and customs are continually referred to in the classes so as to acquaint the students with the culture.

“If a student was going into business, he or she would probably benefit a lot from that experience in Japan," said Grubert.

The fourth program to be added in the fourth year of the foreign study program was that in Mexico City, Mexico. Added in 1970, the program offers courses at the Universidad Iberoamericana.

In Mexico, the student lives alone or with a roommates in a house. Students are selected by the director of foreign studies to study in this program. As in Angers, students in Mexico are taught in Spanish which makes one of the requirements for acceptance fluency in Spanish.

“Students in Mexico are key to understanding the developing world," said Grubert. "I think they’ll find a good source of information in Mexico. (especially about) third world economics.”

The cost for each of the programs, including round-trip air travel, tuition, room and board, and scheduled field trips is equal to a year’s stay at Notre Dame. All classes are accredited by Notre Dame and are added to one’s grades on campus.

In each country, the program lasts for an entire year with semesters running from October to February and from March to June except for the program in Mexico. In Mexico City, there is a full-year or a one semester program with semesters running similar to those at Notre Dame.

“Students stay there for the entire year," explained Grubert, "and sometimes parents go over and visit over the holidays.”

According to Grubert, acceptance into the foreign study program is offered to students with at least a 2.5 GPA. The French and Spanish programs add the requirement of fluency in their respective languages while German and Japanese are encouraged for the Austrian and Japanese programs respectively.

To apply for the foreign programs, interested students should contact the director of foreign study, Art Grubert, in the LaFortune basement. For more information, call 219-5323.

John Paul II kicks off 12-day Canadian tour in Quebec

Associated Press

QUEBEC — Pope John Paul II came to Canada yesterday for one of his longest foreign pilgrimages, kissing the ground where missionaries and martyrs founded a sturdy New World church four centuries ago.

"I greet you, Quebec, first church in North America, first witness to the faith," the pontiff said in an airport statement after arriving here at 11:25 a.m. EDT aboard his green and white Alitalia DC-10 jetliner.

Welcoming the pope, Governor General Jeanne Sauve said Canadians "receive you as a prophet, for ... you have been successful in identifying the causes of our universal anxiety."

But during his 12-day visit the Polish-born pontiff will find that the Canada once shaped by French explorer-priests today is a secular, pluralistic society, many of whose Roman Catholics reject the pope's traditional positions on birth control, divorce and other family issues.

In French-speaking and largely Catholic Quebec province, fewer than one-third of church members practice their religion, church officials say.

The messages Pope John Paul II is expected to deliver on family life, sexual conduct and church authority may be directed as well across the border to U.S. Roman Catholics, many of whom are increasingly disaffected by what they see as rigid church doctrine.

As he crisscrosses Canada, John Paul will visit 13 cities, cover 8,500 miles and pass through all six time zones of the last nation. It is the first visit by a pope to Canada, although John Paul has been here before, coming in 1969 as a Polish archbishop.

The white-clad, 64-year-old pontiff arrived on a brilliant, sunny morning at Quebec's city airport.

In the gesture that has become a papal hallmark, he knelt at the bottom of the airplane steps and kissed the ground.

Besides Mrs. Sauve, Queen Elizabeth II's representative in this former British colony, he was welcomed by Prime Minister John Turner, Canadian bishops and 660 other dignitaries.

Seven children representing Canada's ethnic groups presented him with a 21 gun howitzer salute boomed.

Switching between French and English, Canada's two languages, in his arrival statement, the pope said he would like to speak to Canadians "about the issues of our times, concerning culture, the community, technology, the family, sharing and justice."

Beyond the airport, throngs of welcoming Quebecers waited to greet the pope as his motorcade rode to a park at the St. Lawrence River waterfront to meet with newly confirmed children.

His schedule also included a visit to the tomb of Francois de Laval, the 17th-century Quebec archbishop regarded as the father of Roman Catholic Canada, and a Mass at Laval University.

For months, the impending papal visit, 23rd foreign trip by John Paul, had stirred excitement and anticipation across Canada.

cost of this project is estimated to be the same as the LaFortune renovation, which is pegged at four million dollars. In a vote the council decided not to participate in the planning process (contrary to the wishes of Zahn), and instead place it solely on the shoulders of the Student Council.

Zahn further proposed a "Grand Tea Party" between the Judicial Council and the hall rectors. Pointing out inconsistencies on interpretation of the alcohol policy by certain rectors, the council wants to iron out the problems and arrive at an understanding between students and rectors.

Do you know someone who is dying to be thin?

Nearly one-third of the world's population goes hungry because of poverty. And nearly 20% of the young female population in the United States also starves - but by choice. Because they're dying to be thin.

Anorexia Nervosa. Bulimia. Two serious eating disorders. Illnesses that can affect people of all ages... and are most common among young women.

And the effects can be life-long or even fatal.

Now there is HOPE - Healthy Options for Problem Eaters. A therapeutic program developed by Memorial Hospital of South Bend. HOPE is designed to help those with eating disorders return to a normal, healthy lifestyle, because Anorexia and Bulimia can be cured. But early detection is vital.

If you know someone who is a victim of an eating disorder, you can help. Register by September 14 for HOPE's next 10-week session which begins September 18. Call 284-7308 for further information. Because HOPE can help.

Father Leo R. Ward, 91, dies

Special to The Observer

Father Leo R. Ward, 91, died Tuesday morning at St. Joseph's Medical Center after an extended illness.

Since 1976, Ward lived in Holy Cross House at Notre Dame. He joined the faculty of Notre Dame in 1929 as a professor of philosophy. Born on April 19, 1893 in Melrose, Iowa, Ward made his first profession of vows in the Congregation of Holy Cross in 1920.

He graduated from Notre Dame three years later, and after studying theology at Holy Cross College in Washington, D.C. he was ordained on June 24, 1927.

Ward wrote extensively, his last work - a volume of poems - was published two years ago. Last May, the philosophy department held a symposium at Holy Cross Church in honor of Ward's contributions to philosophy.

A toast to the hosts

The City of Indianapolis proved to thousands of Notre Dame fans that it knows how to play host to more than just a race. And much of the credit belongs to developer Robert Welch and the Notre Dame Club of Indianapolis.

Welch, an alumnus, led the effort to bring the Irish to the Hoosier Dome, providing approximately $100,000 for buses to transport any student who wished to attend the 5 p.m. departure time, 5:00 a.m., against all odds, no problems boarding the buses, and Capt. Carlos Pettiford of the Indiana State Police said, "We didn't experience any problems whatsoever" with the caravan down U.S. 51.

Those fans who ventured to the capital city on Friday found more than just a pep rally. In Monument Circle, two bands kept the spirited crowd dancing in the streets until midnight. The Notre Dame Club’s tent on the north side of the circle attracted hundreds of fans—from freshmen to alumni in the tent. I certainly participated, and I adopted and boldly jumped on the running board and tried the Haymarket, which I pretty much flubbed. But I did manage to get the running board up and it was a little sideswiped another vehicle and knocked my uncle’s car over.

That seems to be just a little sunned, but I was inspired to fight for a cause. In my previous complaint, I asked if the dished for an award. This was the service provided for the guests of the Hoosier Dome, and further if someone paid for this service, I cannot see how this did not constitute a sale.

As would be consistent (if consistency is my sole criterion), this ban has on alcohol sales for the service provided for the guests of the Hoosier Dome. All persons of the administration’s position on public drinking and underdriving, and further, if the administration can prove that the alcohol in the stadium was the appropriate cause of drunkenness, the bans on alcohol sold in the stadium then all should have been held accountable to such rules. Universal rules are universally binding. I agree that the argument brought about this ban had any stipulations or exceptions, then it must have been understood to have included all who were in the stadium Saturday.

Although I am arguing a standard of consistency in a much stricter sense than has so far been used in reference to the University’s position on alcohol. If, as the University Committee on the Responsible Use of Alcohol has stated, “it is the conviction of the University that drunkenness and public intoxication are unacceptable” and further if no one of “age” is to provide alcohol to minors, then it seems to follow that it is the judgment of any kind that should be allowed. Alcohol is not to be provided to minors. Alcohol containers are not to be open near underage students. Therefore, tailgaters should be universally banned. They offers lead to understand that alcohol be taken on a public nature, and they often lead to public intoxication. Thus in light of consistence, student tailgaters are appropriately banned. However, this rule should be unverifiably enforced (in air-tight cases).

Legislative bungling.

Playing by the rules

While most of us are disturbed about the result of the Purdue — Notre Dame game this weekend, I find myself more disturbed by the actions of a few prominent members of the administration during game-time.

According to a source in last Thursday’s Observer, Mr. William Beauchamp stated that the administration “just felt in light of the fact that this is a college game, the sale of beer didn’t seem to fit.” In accordance with this express opinion of the administration, no alcohol was sold at the game — thus depriving the thousands of Hoosier fans of thousands of dollars in revenues and depriving several thousand fans, alumni and various other spectators from enjoying a few beers at a college football game.

In light of this, why not argue either for or against these mentioned actions or statements, enough had been said about alcohol and about the implications of the new policy. Nor do I wish to make any sort of statement about other or not alcohol have been banned in the Hoosier Dome on Saturday. My only desire is to examine why the alcohol to someone in the box as part of a service provided for the guests of the Hoosier Dome, and further if someone paid for this service, I cannot see how this did not constitute a sale.

at halftime, Grace told his players that they were lucky they had not yet been scored upon, and he warned them that they needed to play better in the second period. The Irish responded and the second half was, in Grace’s words, “...a half field scuffle.”

Mark Bidinger scored his first goal of the season at 49:13 of the contest. Stanto tallied his 5-9 junior at the top of the Louisville penalty area, and goalkeeper Glenn Whitfield with a hard shot to the right side of the goal. He learned two excellent shots in the following minutes, but one shot hit the right goalpost, and Whitfield made a beautiful save on a hard head shot.

Stanto also had a few shots at the Louisville net, and one led to an Irish goal. At 63:25, Whitfield blocked a Stanto shot, but freshman John Fon­ sella took the rebound on the half volley and slammed it home from ten yards out for his first career goal.

Once again, as happened in the previous two games, the Irish up a goal after going up, 2-0.

Cardinal Jim Shula got the ball on a one-on-one breakeaway, beat both defenders, and shot the ball past keeper Mark Stepanick. The Irish had not come out to cut down the angle to goal, and Whitfield slammed the Irish net to give the Irish breathing room with only 7:07 remaining. The game was noticeably more pleased with yesterday’s game that he had been with his team’s first two outings.

“(We showed much better) a little bit of a better knockout punch, a little bit better "keller in,"” he called. The first two games we up 2-0, and then we took the back on the goal track."

inctor Andy Chernoff. "We didn’t have Figoero prepared to play the game because of the experience at outside linebacker and in goal setting with that unit and some of the adjustments.”

These exercises may have been believable for that position, but the lack of a consistent pass rush and the loose defensive practices in the secondary are what hurt the Irish.

Pressley added, Notre Dame’s de­ fensive backs played five or more yards behind Purdue receivers, giving the Boilermakers an easy read. Add that to the big plays that resulted from in repeated mental lapses, and the Notre Dame second­ ary looked every bit like a champ­ ionship candidate.

"We lost our post and didn’t execute,” continued Chernoff. "We were in the right defenses, but some crucial mental errors killed us.”

We’re certainly going to expect other teams to throw against us at some point, but we’re prepared for them to run safety Joe Johnson. "People will think that’s our one weak spot. We’re going to have to take it upon ourselves to play harder and get rid of those mental errors,” he added.

"They offered no specific solution to the defense problem,” Pressley added. "We need to play better defense and that will come with the defense up 10 to 15 minutes."

"We’ve got to get a better pass defense,” Pressley added. "We didn’t do enough to tip the ball off."

"We’ve got to improve on the defense, and we’ve got to improve on our special teams to be competitive in the Big Ten and at Notre Dame."

Mark Brooks drove into the Purdue endzone for this touchdown, which gave the Irish a 14-5 edge over the Boilermakers in the first period of Saturday's game. Over weekend

Soccer team gains two victories

The Notre Dame soccer team improved its record to 3-0 this weekend with victories over Purdue and Louisville.

Purdue was the victim Friday night on Cartier Field, 2-1, and Louisville fell yesterday, 3-1, on Alumni Field.

The Irish began to dominate play immediately after the kickoff Friday night, and senior captain Rich Herdegen put Notre Dame on the scoreboard with only 9:44 gone in the contest. The goal was Herdegen's third of the season.

Junior Dave Miles took the ball deep in the right corner and crossed the ball in front of the Boilermakers' goal. Sophomore Szanto did his part to create the Irish scoring opportunities against the Boilers, who gained just 69 yards in 22 carries during the game. The move to play Figaro proved correct, as he was the 12th man on the field during a Purdue field goal attempt. The penalty gave the Boilers a first down, and they took advantage of the Boilermaker offense.

The penalty gave the Boilers a first down, and they took advantage of the Boilermaker offense. As poorly as Notre Dame played, however, it still had a very good chance to avoid the upset. After the defense shut the Boilers down following Allen Pinkett's second touchdown, Purdue gained possession of its own 44 with 10 minutes off the ground and stood in the center of the net with the ball.

The first half passed quickly, with the Irish continuing to dominate play. Shortly into the second half, however, the Boilermakers began to assert themselves and create some offensive threat.

Sophomore Szanto did his part to counter the Purdue momentum by scoring his first goal of the season with 21:05 remaining in the game. Sophomore midfielder Chris Ryan recorded the assist on that goal.

Purdue kept the pressure on, however, and the Irish seemed to ease up after the second goal. Then, at 8:51 of the contest, Purdue's Hector Corona got loose from his defender after a free kick in front of the Irish goal, and his teammate John Rosandich passed him the ball about ten yards in front of the net. Corona's shot beat goalkeeper Dan Coughlin to keep the Boilermakers in the game, 2-1.

The Irish were able to protect their lead for the remaining seven minutes of play, and they came away with their first victory.

Notre Dame head coach Dennis Grace said he was not pleased with the result of the game, however. He blamed himself for the decrease in intensity of play that led to the Boilermaker goal.

"I thought once we went up 2-0, I'd give a lot of people a chance to play," Grace said. "I probably wasn't very wise on when I put whom I probably asked too much of the people that I put in there."

Grace said he also was not pleased by the Notre Dame offense in the game.

"We created some good opportunities again, but we're not very accurate going to goal," the Irish coach said. "Once we get inside that 25 yard line, we have a tendency to lose our composure and not play very well in that last quarter of the field. That's something we definitely need to work on."

Yesterday's game against Louisville had much less careless play of both teams, according to Grace.

"It's apparent to everybody that we made too many mistakes," said Allen Pinkett, who gained just 69 yards in 22 carries during the contest. "We beat ourselves."

The Boilermakers were to win the game because they made very few mistakes and capitalized on ND's. The Irish did make a few mistakes against Purdue, though, as they did a better job of stopping their offense than the Boilermakers.

Notre Dame punted two times all day, once because it fumbled a handoff on a short-and-three play on the Purdue 53, and the other because it Boilermakers cause major problems for defense

INDIANAPOLIS - If Notre Dame drowned in the concrete jungle called the Hoosier Dome on Saturday, then the crucial mistakes the team committed was the water that did the trick.

The humbles, the penalties and the mental lapses hurt the Irish all day and took away opportunity after opportunity for the Notre Dame offense.

But, even more than that, it was the inability of the Irish defenders to stop Purdue quarterback Jim Everett and the Boiler aerial attack.

"We felt they would throw a lot because Everett is a good quarterback and he had a good day against us last year," Head Coach Gerry Faust said. "We were concerned because our secondary is young, but we felt they could do the job."

Problems for the secondary started in the second quarter when Everett began to find his receivers open wide open field. Even with five defensive backs on the field, the Irish could not prevent Boiler receivers from finding an opening.

"To make matters worse, inbatter Mike Golc left the game with an injured shoulder and was replaced with freshman Cedric Figaro, and the Irish already had been forced to substitute sophomore Robert Banks for the injured Mike Larkin.

"We weren't ready for Golc to get injured," admitted defensive coordinator see DEFENSE, page 6

The Boilermaker defense held Allen Pinkett to only 69 yards on Saturday, but the Irish defense did not have a turnover in the game story on the left.
