Cuomo defends public stance on abortion issue in ND talk

By THERESA GUARINO
Assistant News Editor

New York Governor Mario Cuomo defended his abortion policy and explained how he views the relationship between religious and political issues. He spoke at a packed crowd at Washington Hall last night.

Cuomo stated that he believes it is important for public officials to understand their beliefs, to stand up for them, and to argue for such issues as abortion. He said that, "We understand our beliefs to be universal, that they apply to everyone."

Cuomo once again gave his stand on the abortion issue, saying while he is personally opposed to abortion, he believes that the government should provide the option for women to choose. He also said that the government should not interfere with the rights of religious groups to practice their beliefs freely.

Cuomo said that he believes in the importance of protecting people's rights, and that the government should not be involved in issues such as abortion. He also said that the government should not use religion to justify decisions.

Recovery teams yesterday found the last of four bodies of miners killed when a huge slab of rock fell on them in a coal mine. The workers were forced to run for safety when loose rock began falling around them, an official said. All rescuers got safely to the mine entrance when a second big chunk of the slate inside Bon Trucking Co.'s Burger No. 2 mine began crumbling, said David Jones, administrator of the state medical examiner program. Four men who worked at the mine were crushed 1,600 feet inside the mine. It is unknown whether the state's emergency and Minerals Commissioner Ward Stanley said. Two bodies were out by 7:30 a.m. yesterday, 22 hours after the accident. - AP

Prime Minister-designate Shimon Peres asked the United States to mediate a national unity Cabinet, to give him authority to deal with the country's urgent challenges and to negotiate peace with the Arabs. Soviet Academy of Sciences said Wednesday that dissident physicist Andrei D. Sakharov, who has been in internal exile in Gorky for 4 years, has published an article in a physics journal. In the United States, a California physicist, Dr. Sidney Drell, said the article appeared to be one written by Sakharov in February and published in the West in May of this year. The Soviet Academy official, Boris Vares, said Sakharov's article was titled "Cosmological Transforms with Changes of Registration Signatures." He said it was published in a recent edition of the Soviet Journal of Theoretical and Experimental Physics. A copy of the magazine could not be immediately located in the Soviet capital. - AP

First it's Five Points. Whip up to Michigan. Then an OC kegger.

Let's be serious: Notre Dame's alcohol policy has forced us off campus to party. But now instead of stumbling across the quad to get drunk, we have to drive. Getting picked up on DWDl is one thing; killing yourself or someone else is quite another.

Twenty-four people in Indiana are injured or killed each day in drunk-driving crashes. Among the four age groups, drunk driving is the number one cause of death. We have all had this before - now it's time to think about it. On weekend nights, one out of every ten drivers on the road is drunk. Don't let that one be you.

Hey, let's be careful out there.

Public service announcement by the Governor's Task Force to Reduce Drunk Driving and The Observer stop for you. Check your Alcohol policy first. In short, the European system forces drivers to be aware.

The situation is the opposite in the United States. Enforcement of traffic laws is lax in most places, and fines generally are not regarded to be a deterrent. Most Americans can insulate the driver from the road, and the 55 speed limit numbs one's senses further. The roads themselves, while supposedly designed for safety, also have tended to allow one to think less about driving and more about the song on the radio or the Burger King down the street.

The situation can change as soon as the American public decides it wants to be serious about operating automobiles. Such a mobilization has been shown lately in the campaigns against drunk driving. But the focus seems to be incorrectly placed on the first word 'drunk' - when equal focus should be placed on the driving part. Americans who really know how to drive would know that one cannot control an automobile under the influence of alcohol. Tougher, enforced traffic laws and much better driver education must be taken seriously. If the American public decides it wants to be safe on the roads, then it is time to draw the line, to throw the red flag. Red, by the way, means to stop.

Mayor, student leaders discuss links between ND and South Bend

By PAT SAIN and LIZ MILLER
Senior Staff Reporters

The city of South Bend and the Notre Dame/Saint Mary’s communities are too isolated. South Bend Mayor Roger Parent said yesterday during a brainstorming session with Notre Dame’s Student Body President Rob Bertino, Vice President Corby’s, Saint Mary’s Student Body President Lee Ann Franks, and Student Government Service Commissioner Carrie Altegott.

“The bulk of the South Bend com-buisiness doesn’t get to know the Notre Dame/Saint Mary’s community,” Parent said.

“The students are not very different from other people... they drink alcohol, too. As a city, we have taken a fairly strong stand on alco-lhol.” The community at large has become “more sensitive” to this issue, Parent said.

Parent said South Bend has much to offer on a recreational level, citing restaurants, golf courses, and the East Race Waterway. The East Race is an Olympic-class white-water branch of the St. Joseph’s River in downtown South Bend.

“We have not done a good job of selling ourselves as a community,” Parent said, adding that improved communications between the student community and South Bend are needed. He proposed a calendar of events for both communities to help alleviate this problem.

“The reason we came is because we want to improve our image in the community which has deteriorated due to the events on the campus last spring and this fall. I call it our ‘foreign policy,’” Bertino said.

“We want to channel all of our student government volunteer services through our service commission (Carrie Altegott) and someone in city government. This way, the help will not all go to the same place, but can be directed to areas that need help,” Bertino said.

“We have to be realistic about how much time students can put in on these projects,” Parent said.

Parent mentioned the recent crackdowns on large off-campus parties, saying “any time you get 500 people at a house,” for a party the police are going to be called. The reprimands are not directed at students. “We just have to do our job,”
Parent said.

Students have to learn how to live in their neighborhoods and adjust to their neighbors, Parent said. “(Drinking) is not just a Notre Dame problem... it is a problem in the community at large. You wouldn’t want to live in a community that tolerated that sort of thing,” he said.

“The community gets to know you by the events that get publicized. If 10 students get arrested for underage drinking, that is what the community hears about,”
Parent said.

City Attorney Richard Hill was called in to answer a question about the zoning laws governing the five-points area where Corby’s Bar is located. Concern was expressed that Corby’s Bar would not be allowed to open again because of the controlled-use ordinance.

The controlled-use ordinance was passed in 1974, prohibiting more than two establishments serving controlled substances from being within 1,000 feet of each other.

Corby’s was built before the ordinance was passed, however, and will be allowed to reopen, even though the five points area has more than two bars within 1,000 feet of each other, Hill said.

The ordinance is being modified to exclude “family-type” restaurants which serve alcohol, Hill said.

“We want to develop more areas like five points, which cater to students,” Parent said. He mentioned that more meetings between students and people in the city governments should be planned, so students can be included in future activities.
Lecture series to focus on Papal addresses

Special to The Observer

This semester the Thomas More Society of Notre Dame is sponsoring a lecture series entitled \"John Paul II and the Catholic Vision.\" The series will consist of seven lectures designed to introduce several of the major themes of John Paul II's pontificate. Each talk will focus on one or more recent addresses of the Pope.

The purpose of the series is to present those elements of the Catholic vision which the Holy Father has emphasized as essential to the Church's vocation in the twentieth century. Last night, Father David Jenky, director of University Ministry, opened the series with a talk entitled \"Christ, the Eucharist and the Church.\" The talk outlined the Pope's understanding of how the mystery of the Eucharist builds the mystical body of Christ.

The next six lectures are scheduled on Wednesday evenings throughout the semester. On Sept. 19, Father Francis Cafarelli, assistant vice president, will discuss John Paul II's statement that Scripture should be read as \"the personal teaching of God.\"

The following week Bishop Crowley of South Bend will explore the Pope's reaffirmation of the sacrament of reconciliation, a concern for which the Pope convened bishops around the world last year. This talk will present the understanding of freedom and morality which underlies the Pope's insistence upon the importance of Confession.

On Oct. 3, Dr. Janet Smith of the Program of Liberal Studies will speak on the spirituality of marriage and the meaning of the body, with reference to recent addresses of the Pope during his weekly audiences. Smith will also clarify the crucial distinction between natural family planning and artificial birth control.

The series continues next on Nov. 7, when Father Patrick Sullivan of the sociology department will examine John Paul II's 1981 encyclical on work, technology and social justice. This talk will focus on the major features of the Pope's challenge to improve the conditions of the poor.

On the following Wednesday, Professor Donald E. O'Connor of the Law School will analyze the Pope's insistence upon peace that is based on the dignity of the person and the integrity of the family.

Finally, Theology Professor Patrick Edward O'Connor will conclude the series on Nov. 28 with a reflection on John Paul II's recent request that the bishops of the world consecrate their countries to Our Lady.

The next lecture in the series is scheduled for Tuesday, Oct. 3, at 7:30 p.m. in Haas Hall.

Do you know someone who is dying to be thin?

Nearly one-third of the world's population goes hungry because of poverty. And nearly 20% of the young female population in the United States also starves - but by choice. Because they're dying to be thin.

Anorexia Nervosa. Bulimia. Two serious eating disorders. Illnesses that can affect people of all ages... and are most common among young women.

And the effects can be life-long or even fatal.

Now there is HOPE - Healthy Options for Problem Eaters. A therapeutic program developed by Memorial Hospital of South Bend. HOPE is designed to help those with eating disorders return to a normal, healthy lifestyle, because Anorexia and Bulimia can be cured. But early detection is vital.

If you know someone who is a victim of an eating disorder, you can help. Register by September 14 for HOPE's next 10-week session which begins September 18. Call 284-7308 for further information. Because HOPE can help.
Pope addresses economic justice

Associated Press

MONCTON, NEW BRUNSWICK — Pope John Paul II, in an appeal for economic justice, called on the faithful yesterday to abandon the "race for profit" and learn to share their wealth.

Facing 100,000 worshipers gathered in a muddy field for Mass, the pope quoted St. Paul on human communities:

"There must be no competition among you...so that nobody thinks of his own interests first but everybody thinks of other people's interests instead."

His homily in this eastern Canadian city was the second time in two days that the pontiff hit hard on economic issues.

Speaking in French and English, languages of this bilingual province, he urged them to have faith in Jesus Christ and "show solidarity with each other."

The, hornily dwelt on the subject of charity as defined by the early church father St. John Chrysostom, whose feast day was Thursday.

In a modern context, the pontiff said the "commitments of charity" should include respect for human rights, "including the right to life from the moment of conception."

Another commitment, he said, should be the will to live a simple, sharing life, "in contrast with the present race for profit, consumption and artificial gratification."

The bishops of the relatively liberal Canadian Roman Catholic Church issued a major document in January 1985 calling for a restructuring of the Canadian economy to relieve unemployment, more than 1 percent nationally.

The bishops welcomed the pope's words as an endorsement.

"One must start with the idea of a full employment policy," the Most Rev. John A. O'Mara, a bishop and social affairs specialist, told reporters.

Hurricane Diana ravages coastline; many left homeless, but no deaths

Associated Press

WILMINGTON, N.C. — Hurricane Diana howled into the Carolinas on Thursday, causing more than $25 million damage as it ripped off roofs, toppled power lines and blocked roads with water and debris. At least one looting incident was reported, and many people who had left shelters were stranded.

No deaths or injuries were blamed directly on the storm, which had hovered off the coast most of Wednesday before turning inland just south of Wilmington.

Diana rapidly lost strength and began breaking up after running ashore, but not before it had done so much damage that the National Weather Service called it "the worst hurricane since Hazel" in the Cape Fear area. Hazet struck Oct. 5-18, 1954, killing 95 people in the United States and causing $280 million worth of property damage.

Winds that swept eastern North Carolina on March 28 caused $100 million in damage and killed 44 people.

Preliminary damage estimates reached $20 million in three small coastal communities alone, said state Highway Patrol Capt. Robert Barefoot. He listed them as Oak Island, Yaupon Beach and Long Beach, which he said was "devastated. It is very, very severe."

The state suffered "some very great damage," with the worst in Brunswick and New Hanover counties, said Gov. Jim Hunt, adding that details were sketchy because of the difficulty in reaching affected areas. He said he hoped President Reagan would act quickly on his request for emergency aid.

An estimated 80 percent or 45,000 of Carolina Power & Light Co.'s customers in and around Wilmington were without power, the utility said. Spokeswoman Kay Young said it would be Saturday at the earliest before all power could be restored. An additional 10,000 customers lost power in South Carolina, utility officials there said.

Thousands of people spent the night in emergency shelters in southeastern North Carolina and northeastern South Carolina, but many people had left shelters to check on their homes Wednesday when the storm stalled off the coast.

"I am not implying that we should stand by and pretend indifference to whether a woman takes a pregnancy to its conclusion or aborts it. I believe with regard to abortion that we can teach a respect for life in it could be obtained, it wouldn't be practical ways. Cuomo supports work. Nor does Cuomo view the cooperation of both pro-choice and pro-life forces to develop government programs to help impoverished mothers with the support she may need to rear her children, so that abortion eventually may not need to be an option.

Cuomo hopes to create a society where the right to life doesn't end at the moment of birth where an infant isn't helped into a world that doesn't care if it's fed properly, housed decently, or educated adequately.

According to him, Catholics are "like stewards made responsible over a great household: from those to whom so much has been given, much shall be required." Cuomo concluded by saying, "We can be fully Catholic; proudly at ease with ourselves ... a light to this nation. Appealing to the best in our people, not the worst. Persuading, not coercing. And still, all the while, respecting and enjoying our unique pluralistic democracy. And we can do it even as politicians."

Cuomo's lecture was followed by a short question and answer session from faculty and students. Fielding a question about the difference between capital punishment and abortion, he said capital punishment involved "the state taking a life ... a murder," whereas abortion involved "making your own judgment." One response elicited some booing by the audience as he said abortion "isn't killing, it's giving a choice." On the whole, however, audience reception was enthusiastic. Cuomo received a standing ovation when he entered, and a three-minute ovation as he left. Students began lining up outside Washington Hall at 4 p.m., and by 6 p.m. the line stretched around the Fieldhouse Mall and toward the Administration Building. More than 700 additional people watched the speech live on a giant screen television in the CCE. Some pro-life demonstrators gathered around Washington Hall praying the rosary and picketing, while others met Cuomo at the CCE. Walking inside, Cuomo stopped to shake the hand and greet one protester.

After his lecture, Cuomo appeared live on ABC's Nightline, with Hesburgh and a contributing editor to The New Republic Charles Krauthammer.
Sandinistas working for Nicaraguan people

I am a student at the University of Notre Dame who has recently returned from a semester program in Mexico and Nicaragua. I realize that none of the world's answers, especially in the political realm, are black and white, but after being to Nicaragua and talking to the Nicaraguan people, I feel that the U.S. government has definitely been working on behalf of the Nicaraguan people, I feel that the government has definitely been working in the wrong color concerning this Latin American country. It has been shutting its eyes just long enough to ignore the millions of Nicaraguans recently reborn in the triumph of their revolution in 1979. The freemask fear which keeps the U.S. govern- ment's eyes closed is a fear that one day it will open one eye and see communism creeping closer to its borders. This obsession would have worked if Nicaragua was a weak country, a spiriless country full of people who did not care about anything but food for their hungry, a country that let others run their lives. Nicaragua is not such a country, and the blind- ness of the U.S. government to see this has driven it into a hyped-up frenzy of interven- tion. Absurdly, the present press winsen is for a common-sense reason. Sandinista teachers helping the shoeless children read. The Nicaraguans were a deeply Chris- tian people to whom I said that they made a clear distinction between the works of my government and me. They only looked at me with hopeful eyes asking me to go back home and let others know of their situation. They told me that now that I had seen the truth, I had a deep responsibility to myself and to them. Does this sound like the beginnings of communism? How could a country so motivated by its faith, a country who has learned Chris- tianity from firsthand suffering, a country who decided never to be ruled by dictators again, and a country who lost thousands of brothers and sisters in creating the reality of Nicaragua Libre (Free Nicaragua) let any government take over? These Nicaraguans are the most "soulful" spirited, motivated people I have ever seen. The intervention that our government has been part of is trying to eliminate that spirit of triumph, that spirit which told the Nicaragua mothers that their sons' deaths were for a cause, for new life in generations to come.

I think it is important to explain that the Sandi- nistas are not following a Marxist-Leninist course. The state does not control the means of production. It intends to create a system based on four basic principles: mixed eco- nomics, political pluralism, social welfare with emphasis on increased services to the poor, and national sovereignty with non-alignment to either superpower. In order to develop and maintain a mixed economy, Nicaragua must not be aligned, since it is so heavily dependent on foreign aid and credit.

Nicaragua needs major help and support from capitalist countries like the United States as well as from socialist countries like Cuba Currently, the policies of our governments are forcing Nicaragua to rely more on socialist countries than it wants to. The U.S. govern- ment needs to open its eyes, to stop dealing in the dark with this unique, Latin American country. It is full of so much wonderful people, and I promised them I would try to tell you of their struggles. It is so easy to come home and forget, but I will never forget their hopeful eyes.

Judicial Council is a circus under Zahn

Suppose for a second that Student Government started organizing candy- cane sales? Or better yet, what if the Supreme Court of the United States started funding the performances of the Ice Capades? Ridiculous impos- sibilities, right? Of course.

So how does Judicial Council Coordinator Joe Zahn expect students to react to his plans to bring a 17-ride carnival to Notre Dame this October?

The Judicial Council is the highest voice students have in the judicial process of this University. It's not a toy. Only two and a half weeks into his tenure, Zahn has already destroyed any credibility the council gained last year under the leadership of Bob Gleason.

It is obvious that Zahn, a sophomore with no experience on a dormitory judicial board, is using the council to satisfy his own political ambitions. His apparent desire to become student body president by 1986 has fogged his vision of what the Judicial Council is all about.

Last week, Zahn urged the Judicial Council to move aggressively in develop- ing an alternate plan to the proposed $3.7 million LaFortune renovation. Ignoring for the moment that Zahn's proposal was weak, uninformed and shallow, the plans to renovate LaFortune have nothing to do with a judiciary board. The council rejected his idea.

But even more disturbing is Zahn's tendency to win at all costs. This week, a state leftover from 1984 campus politics -- who should count the ballots in the SBP and senate races -- emerged again at the student senate meeting. Zahn argued that the Ombudsman Organization has trouble counting to ten and that his council should take control of running all student elections. It was at worst a legitimate argument.

In lobbying for his proposal, however, Zahn told at least two senators and one Observer reporter that Student Body President Rob Bertino was 100 per- cent in favor of terminating OBDU's control. This is untrue. Bertino has con- sistently declined taking a position on the issue in order to insure a fair debate on the senate floor. Bertino issued a memorandum clarifying the matter, and Zahn once again emerged misinformed.

Zahn was elected judicial coordinator by a 7-6 vote of the council last May. The other 12 members of the council did not vote. The position wasn't Zahn's first choice: he ran for sophomore class president and lost and he applied for student government executive coordinator and wasn't hired.

So be he Judicial Council coordinator, a job he never really wanted. And now he tells us that he's bringing a circus to town in three weeks. It's a shame the council is faced with such misguided leadership.

Now more than ever -- in this Era of the Alcohol Report -- there is a need for the council to defend students' rights. Among the dorms, there are too many inconsistencies in how the new policy is enforced. There will be questions of justice and problems with due process. Students need in the Judicial Council a credible voice to represent their judicial concerns to the administration.

So far, Joe Zahn has shown no understanding of this role.

The Observer
Dear Editor:

Paul Cimino's letter in the most recent issue of the Observer was quite disappointing in my view. Mr. Cimino seems to be making a thinly-veiled attack on the moral and ethical standards of the University of Notre Dame. His citation of the song 'Adopt a Hooligan' seems to me more a personal attack than a legitimate criticism.

The Notre Dame campus is renowned for its strong moral and ethical standards, as well as its commitment to excellence in education. The University takes pride in its traditions of academic excellence and spiritual growth. It is unfortunate that Mr. Cimino's letter seems to undermine these values.

I urge the University community to remain vigilant and stand together in support of our moral and ethical principles. Let us continue to uphold the high standards that have made Notre Dame a beacon of light in the world of higher education.

Sincerely,

Spartans try for second in a row over Irish

ND needs win over MSU to avenge last year's loss and get back on winning track

By LARRY BURKE
Sports Writer

George Perles, head coach of the Michigan State Spartans, is not the type of person who is intimidated by the Notre Dame mystique. But at the same time, Perles is well aware of the amount of talent on the Irish defense. So the Spartans are in caution and complimentary in his remarks about Notre Dame as Saturday's clash in Spartan Stadium draws near.

"When you look at Notre Dame," says Perles, "they are big, strong, and are some of the best football players that have been recruited over the past three years. They have more publicized players than any other team in America. It is only right that everyone points to them. The motivation is there because they lost to Purdue and we beat them last year." Perles' remarks are certainly accurate. Few will dispute the statement that the '84 Irish have plenty of talent. Likewise, the motivating factors for Saturday's game are pretty clear. But, as Notre Dame fans saw last week, talent and motivation are often not enough to win a college football game. Whether or not the Irish can find the missing ingredients and put it all together on Saturday remains to be seen.

Defeating the Spartans will certainly be no easy task, however. Michigan State returns 42 lettermen and 15 starters for the 1984 season, and looked very sharp for three quarters in a 24-21 victory over Colorado last week.

Michigan State's offense against Notre Dame's defense:

Rest assured that Perles and the rest of the Spartan coaching staff are well aware of Notre Dame's major weaknesses - pass defense. Add that to the fact that Michigan State has a proven quarterback in red-shirted sophomore Dave Yarema, and the obvious conclusion is that the Spartans will be doing plenty of passing on Saturday.

Yarema beat the Irish with the big play a year ago and did the same to Colorado last week, connecting on touchdown passes of 55 and 56 yards, enroute to a 9-for-13, 145 yard day.

"The key to our defense is what kind of pass rush we can get against quarterbacks like this," says Irish head coach Gerry Faust of Yarema. "We didn't do a good job last year against Yarema and he hurt us. We really didn't do too much better Saturday against Purdue until (defensive tackle) Mike Gann made a big play late in the game to force them to punt."

There should be plenty of action in the trenches, however, because the Spartans have an experienced Joe Johnson
Irish safety

The Enforcer

Safety Joe Johnson lays down the law

By ED DOMANSKY
Sports Writer

For many athletes, being able to play football at Notre Dame is a life-long dream. For hard-hitting, all-purpose Joe Johnson, however, football under the Golden Dome was not even a consideration for me not to visit. Looking back now, after all the people I've met and the great experiences I've had, I think I did make the same decision over. I would certainly choose Notre Dame again.

Football has been very good to Johnson, who has seen consistent duty in the Irish defensive backfield ever since his freshman campaign. And, of course, Johnson has been a valuable commodity for Notre Dame as well.

"His leadership on the field is excellent," says defensive coordinator and secondary coach Andy Cover. "The enthusiasm with which he plays is good for the team."

In 1981, Johnson led all freshmen on defense in minutes played while earning a monogram as a sophomore. He appeared in all 11 games and earned a starting assignment against Michigan State. During his sophomore year at strong safety, he finished both on the team with 49 tackles while starting all 11 games. Included among his total were six tackles for negative yardage and three sacks.

The 1983 season saw Johnson once again start 11 games at strong safety. He missed only the Colorado game because of a shoulder injury. His four top outings came against South Carolina, Miami, Navy and Penn State. He had eight tackles during his sophomore year at strong safety, he finished both on the team with 49 tackles while starting all 11 games. Included among his total were six tackles for negative yardage and three sacks.

The Man with the De:
Spartan kicker Mojsiejenko once again!

By JOE BRUNETTI
Sport Writer

After nearly a year, most people probably do not remember who was the real hero in Michigan State's 28-23 upset of Notre Dame last season. Spartan quarterback Dave Yarema looked impressive in the MSU win, but the real credit went to State's inconspicuous kicker Ralf Mojsiejenko.

"He was the difference in the game," commented Irish coach Gerry Faust after last year's loss to the Spartans. "We gave up 255 yards on defense, but it was Mojsiejenko's punt average of nearly 50 yards that really set the Irish against the wall. It seems strange to think of a kicker as a weapon, but that's what Mojsiejenko is. And Notre Dame offensive coordinator Ron Hudson is very impressed with him."

"There's no way to neutralize Mojsiejenko," says Hudson. "He's got a leg. He's a star. We just have to make sure to struggle with it. Maybe he won't have a good day, but I doubt it."

Mojsiejenko had a day like he did in last year's game, the Irish definitely may have some problems. The Irish senior averaged a 47.3-yard punting average in that game that constantly forced Notre Dame to start poor field position. After getting his second wind in the second half, Mojsiejenko hit punts of 47, 57, 58, and 73 yards. Five of Mojsiejenko's punts pinned the Irish inside their own 20, and six landed inside the Irish 50.

"We're probably not going to have good field position unless Michigan State turns it over," says Hudson. "I think we can be very patient and mistake-free in our drives."

If the Irish get turnovers they can keep Mojsiejenko off the field and that's the best way to stifle his leg. If they don't get the turnovers then they be will be forced to complete some very long drives.

Last year the Irish didn't display either patience or errorless execution when forced to start deep in their own territory. When trapped inside its 30, Notre Dame was forced to punt three times, was intercepted once, and turned the ball over on downs another time. The Irish did manage one touchdown on an 88-yard drive in the first half. Obviously, last year the Irish didn't show the poise that Hudson wants the Irish to display this year when his team is in poor field position.

Not only can Mojenjenenko's punting leg kill a team, but he also has a deadly kicking leg for both field goals and kickoffs. Last year against Notre Dame, the physical education major kicked four out of his five kickoffs into or through the end zone. The Irish never started a drive after a kickoff outside their 30. "Any coach would call that bad field position.

"A guy like Mojenjenenko can do a great job of keeping the other team from ever having good field position," says Faust. "He forces you to start deep in your own territory every time you get the football."

Mojenjenenko didn't have a chance to attempt a field goal in last year's game, but he proved his ability throughout the rest of the season. Four of his eleven field goals were longer than forty yards including a 59-yarder as time ran out enabling the Irish to win the game.

"If time is running out, though, Perles is going to have to call that kick," Faust says. "He has proven that he has the ability to hit the end zone from ever having good field position. The Irish might be in good shape if his field goal leg is as accurate as his kickoff leg.

Mojenjenenko is a senior, still remains virtually untested in a game situation. Against the Boilers he punt only twice for a 38.5 yard average, but he has yet to be tested in a clutch situation.

After last week's performance the receiving side of Notre Dame's special teams may also show a positive mark in many people's minds. The opening kickoff was fumbled and turned over to freshman Tim Brown. Sophomore Alonzo Jefferson also bobbled two punts and one kickoff.

"The ball handler was OK, (on special teams)," says Hudson. "They need to squeeze the ball harder (to avoid fumbling). They also said the lights were terrible. I think Brown was just last year I'm sure it was just first game jitters."

It is time running out, though, Perles is going to have to call that kick, because he can call on his human kicking machine to decide the outcome.

Forster speaks highly of his coach.

"He was a big reason why I came here. One thing people really don't realize, and I think it's hard for people to realize, is that he came from high school to college and had to make the same adjustments we've had to," states Johnson. "I really wish that things would have gone better for him so far, but things just haven't fallen into place. He's recruited the best players and he's done anything for them, but a coach can only do so much coaching.

We've got to take it upon ourselves to play the game. If we play like we can, there's no reason why Coach Faust can't be as successful as previous coaches here."

Putting the critical aspects of the team aside, Johnson's aggressive play has taken him to great pride in. He believes that any player can be good if he wants to be. "Football is 80-85 percent mental," he says. "I'm not that big compared to some backs, but if he's not, maybe I can intimidate other players. It hurts me just as much as the guy in the back, but getting up and going on after play after play is just a matter of who wants it more."

Being captain is something special for Johnson and being able to get the job done is one of the reasons he believes his teammates chose him a captain. "It's really an honor to be one of a select few of all Notre Dame football players, and I'm really proud to be a Notre Dame captain," he says. "I think I've learned the best example on the field. I'm not a real rabble rouser. On the field I'm really into the game, but when it's over, I try to keep it away from my personal life."

When school at Notre Dame is finished, Johnson has several possible opportunities under consideration for his future. "If I'd like to try pro ball," he says. "I'd like to go out of the air to get the opportunity, because later in life I might regret not trying out.

Graduate school, law enforcement or employment as a stockbroker are other considerations for Johnson. "Notre Dame has meant a lot to both athletically and academically," he says. "It is the epitome of both worlds, so I just want to go out and know that I'm making the best of what I've received here as both an athlete and a student."

Sometimes I get embarrassed by the behavior of religious people. I had an older brother who never went to church. Though he believed in God, I’m not sure he was ever baptized. He was more gracious as a human being than some of the bigots who come to Mass. Maybe the real problem is that I’m a lukewarm Christian. Maybe if I were a stronger Catholic, I would have more courage to speak out, even at the risk of staining, wrestling against his enemies in the word, and so the world continues to get uglier. I would hate to be one of the mindless simpletons on Christian television so happy to be saved believes He is present when two or Christian virtue.

The religious establishment has its visible symbols, and Christ crucified is preached with a thousand variations. Though there is hype and ballyhoo no one has seen the Holy Spirit in the form of a dove descending on the pope and preacher. God seems so silent. A child has asked me if I have the grace to believe that this love is active and busy, but the proof is personal, though some of them come out of a shared experience in hearing the gospel and receiving the sacraments in a community that believes in them both or three are gathered in His name. Other good people are honest enough to admit that my experience is subjective. They are skeptical whether the Lord speaks now, if I have ever spoken. I must be thankful in working out my differences with the US and Russia in a nation where a tolerance is a duty we owe to those who have had so much to overcome.

My quarrels with the world will not go away, just because I’m tolerant. I wish I could have the courage to lay down his life for a friend, but I have to admit I’m afraid to go out and shrugging in war don’t wear Christ’s dogtags. Tolerance doesn’t require me to remain near to the people in government is responsible for hor-rible, I wish for the common sense to see people good of will as all is on the Lord’s side, working with his grace, even when they don’t agree with me. The house seems divided against itself when Catholics write off their bishops as Communists after because they wrote a pastoral on nuclear control. I’m as passionately concerned with the national problems as anyone: I feel a duty to offer myself as a referree calling me to face my valuable critics.

I wouldn’t be able to an- skeptically whether the Lord speaks my conscience, the divine spark of salvation, which is the foul in the wrestling match. The government is responsible for horrors. I wish for the common sense to see people good of will as all is on the Lord’s side, working with his grace, even when they don’t agree with me.

I read the hate mail, or hear the stories, and get sick to my stomach. If screaming ugly words in the street is what the Lord asks of His followers, then I would want to return the cross of discipleship, sobred of what it means to be a Christian. I have to believe in all the private visions in which it is claimed God’s Motherthreatens the end of the world if Catholics don’t follow her instructions. She’s been a waste of time bothering with a ministry, since Our lady is working out the conditions of the judgement with some children in a meadow. I would have to offer myself as a referree calling me to face my valuable critics.

The album - a unique representation of the adult, erotic and experienced

The album Purple Rain, and the Historic First Avenue Club, have catapulted Prince for pan the storm generated by his previous LP, Controversy. The pop music like Purple Rain, Prince has defined the second half of the 1980’s. He uses powerful images in this story of a teenager vacationing at a seaside resort with her sophisticated older cousin from Paris. The movie will begin tonight at 7:30 in the Annenberg Auditorium and admission will be $2.50.

The exhibit "Andret Keeterson: Form and Feeling," which began on Aug. 26, will continue at the Sutro Music Museum through Oct. 20. There are 38 photographs in this retrospective collection spanning 1914-1972. The display is on loan from the Hallmark Photographic Collection and is touring the nation. Hours at the Museum are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday through Friday, 1 to 4 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays, and Thursday evenings from 4 to 8.

The show begins at 8 in O’Laughlin Auditorium. On Sunday, Nozette D fate’s department of music will present an All Blues Recital at 4 p.m. in the Annenberg Auditorium. The recital will feature accomplished musicians Marjorie Hayward Medley, Millis Hasting Hallman, and Patrick Maloney. Admission is free.

If you missed Wayne Newton’s performance at the A.C.C. on Wednesday, you’re in luck. Newton will be performing this weekend at the Holiday Star Theatre in Merced. Tickets are $7.50 and performances will be tonight at 8, tomorrow night at 7:30 and 10:30, and Saturday at 7:30. For more information call 769-6660.

the tallest of the Belles at 5-9, and is expected to contribute heavily from her middle blocker position before the end of the year.

Rated one of the outstanding freshmen is Kary Tekulve who, as a "good all-around player," should see a lot of action despite her size.

Having played volleyball last year, sophomore Jane Reichert contributes experience as well as enthusiasm to the team, and her constant "100-percent effort" does nothing but add team morale.

Freshmen Beth Womac and Noel Craig are presently nursing injuries, but both are expected to be valuable contributors before the end of the year.

Of this team, Goralski proudly says, "This year there is a really positive attitude. They are a good bunch of ladies and I do not want to lose any of them. I do not feel that any team practices harder than us. Maybe longer, but not harder."

"I can push them this hard because they are all playing for themselves now. They want to prove to people that they can play. And they will.

Goralski backs his statements by pointing out the fact that many of the Belles not normally playing on the floor have devoted their schedule since a loss to a small NCAA school like Saint Mary's "does not look good on their record."

According to Boulton, who was-committed all season last year, "We have always had the skill, but now we have something really important — enthusiasm."

Boulton's attitude reflects that of the team, and if the Belles can play with the same intensity that they boast mentally, the reason for their uncountable excitement will soon be evident to all.

Volleyball team evens season mark

After a disappointing start this season, the Notre Dame volleyball team has rebounded well. Wednesday night the Irish defeated North Star Conference foe Valparaiso for their second straight win. The 15-2, 15-6, 15-12 win pushed the team’s record to 7-11-1, 15-6-1, and helped the Irish get off to a strong start in conference play.

Coach Art Lambert was happy to have the win, but was not very impressed with the way his team played.

“We played fairly well,” said Lam bert.

This weekend the 125 members of the Notre Dame Sailing Club will host their annual Notre Dame Inter­sectional Regatta. The regatta, which will include over 100 yacht­men from 19 schools throughout the Midwest, will be held on Dia­mond Lake in Cassopolis, Mich.

Sanctioned by the Midwest Collegiate Sailing Association (MCSA), the regatta will be the first of three chances for Midwest sailing clubs to qualify for the prestigious Sugar Bowl Regatta. The Sugar Bowl, a national event, will be held this year in New Orleans in December. The Notre Dame Intersectional will be the largest MCSA-sponsored event of the season.

Spread over both tomorrow and Sunday, the regatta consists of a series of races broken into ‘A’ and ‘B’ divisions. Each of the 19 schools attending will sail two boats in each division. The winners of each division will then automatically qualify for the Sugar Bowl Regatta.

The boats which will be sailed are “Flying Justice” class sailboats. Each has a crew of two, consisting of a skipper and a crew member. Thus, four yacht­men will represent each school per race.

Notre Dame’s club is looking for­ward to hosting the regatta. Oppos­ing team members will be staying on campus and be transported to Dia­mond Lake by van.

Tom Funk, commodore of the club, said he was looking forward “not only to the racing, but to the social aspects of the weekend.” Members of Notre Dame’s sailing club will be presiding at several pic­nics and parties over the weekend.

The Notre Dame Sailing Club has a rich tradition of success. Former members include the present coach of the Mexican Olympic Sailing team, Buzz Reynolds, who this year placed second in the U.S. Olympic trials in the Finn class, and Bruce Murphy, a noted yacht designer.

And the club is hoping that its rich history and tradition of success will inspire it to numerous qualifying spots this weekend.
Michigan State and Northwestern

Soccer team wins the road for two

By DAN MICHELENI

As in most sports, intensity plays a big part in the success of soccer teams. And this is one aspect of the 1984 Notre Dame soccer season that worries Irish coach Dennis Grace.

"We must develop some consistency with our intensity," says Grace when speaking of the key to this weekend's games against Michigan State and Northwestern. "We have to embrace that killer instinct. The better teams will take advantage of our sub-par lapses, luckily we have been able to avoid that as far as wins and losses thus far."

The Irish will face their stiffest challenge of the year when they travel to MSU today. The team has not faced the Spartans since 1981 when Notre Dame triumphed, 4-1. However, the Michigan State team returns seven starters from a very competitive team of one year ago. "Michigan State lost to Indiana last year, 4-2, and anytime you can score two goals against IU, you've played a whole of a game," explains Grace.

"They'll be our toughest opponent to date, I'm positive."

On Sunday, the Irish will travel to the Chicago area to face Northwestern. Grace admits he does not know too much about the Wildcats, except that they are starting to get serious about their program. Notre Dame is 3-0 against Northwestern, and the Irish shut out the Wildcats, 6-0, the last time the two teams met in 1981.

Grace points to the chemistry of this year's team as a major strength. "I think the ability of the team to work together will carry us to a lot of victories," he says.

The only glaring weakness is the team's occasional lapses in the quality of play. "We play very, very good at times. These we play very, very bad," Grace says, explaining that the Irish cannot afford that inconsistency if they plan on being victorious this weekend.

The major load of the leadership burden seems to be falling on the shoulders of captains Rich Herderen and Dom Drano. The two seniors head the offense and defense, respectively. Chris Irel, a junior midfielder, also seems to be emerging as a team leader while coming back from a knee injury.

"Chris isn't even playing 75 percent yet, but as he comes around physically, I think he will assume some of that leadership responsibility," Grace says.

The Irish coach also has been pleasantly surprised by the play of his freshmen.

"We start two freshmen, Johnny Foustella up front and Steve Lowney as a back. Johnny's learning things quickly, and Steve is doing a real good job as a back."

For the moment, though, Grace's only concern is preparing the team to play well this weekend. He says that he feels some of the players are questioning how good the team is.

"The biggest thing I have to do is convince them that we can beat Michigan State," Grace says.

If Grace can indeed convince his players, then the Irish soccer team may return home Sunday evening with a perfect 6-0 record.
Baseball team opens up fall season tomorrow

By TOYOM

The Notre Dame baseball team opens its fall schedule this weekend with a pair of doubleheaders. Tomorrow at 1 p.m. on Jackie Kline Field, the Irish meet San Francisco College for two games. Then on Sunday, Notre Dame faces Bradley in another doubleheader beginning at 1 p.m.

With most of their games on the weekend, the weekdays are used by Irish coach Larry Gallo and his staff to teach and sharpen the skills of their ballplayers. The fall season is also an opportunity for the Gallo to check on the talent for the more important spring schedule. And although the fall season is basically only an exhibition, Gallo would like to start the season as a whole.

With the loss of seniors Mark Clementz, Tom Conlin, Jim Dee, Brian Gibbons, Mike Metzler and Dan Vukovich, Notre Dame must find adequate replacements. Most of Notre Dame's hitting graduated in the persons of Dee, Metzler and Vukovich. The three accounted for close to 80 percent of last year's Irish RBIs.

Clementz and Conlin were two of Gallo's better pitchers.

While Gallo says that his defense and pitching staff will be good, he also acknowledges that hitting will be a big question mark. His only hope, it seems, is that returning players, as well as his freshmen, prosper.

Returning up the hitting staff in 1964 are Joe Dobosh, Brad Cross, Buster Lopes, Dan Sacchiini, Jim Schomer and Mark Watzke. Both Lopes and Dobosh are coming off a solid season, according to fielding the most talented and, along with their hitting, will be the biggest indicator of the team's strength.

Police points out that Western Michigan and Missouri have a field to be added that usually only included the University of Notre Dame. He states that Western Michigan is a tradition of good middle and the Irish, aided by foreign runners, will be excellent.

To make matters tougher for the Irish, Northwestern had a good recruiting year by signing four outstanding distance men, including two high school all-Americans. Furthermore, Ohio State added a new coach and several good recruits to a team which came back to beat Notre Dame in the Notre Dame Invitational last year.

Another reason for Piane's guarded optimism is the fact that Notre Dame is weaker this year than last year; it lost three of its top four runners. Graduation claimed 1983 coach Andy Dil- lon, along with his talented runners Ralph Capano and Ed Jubel.

These three consistently finished among the top four Irish runners in meets last year and will be sorely missed.

Despite the heavy losses to graduation, there are many bright spots for the Irish this year. One of the top Irish runners, a highly talented returnee is time-distance runner for the Irish. Cannon returns to Notre Dame for his final year after a very successful freshman season.

Surprises, surprises

After last Saturday's game, one of the Purdue assistant coaches was riding down in the press box on an elevator. In the beset of his broad should- er, he said, "I'll tell you, if you want to see the Irish go to the Air Force, and they lose. You expect them to lose at Boston College, and they will. Last week they surprised us with their poor performance against a Purdue team that may be the best in the Big Ten. You can't keep them down, you gotta nuts." The elevator door opened and he ran out cheering toward the locker room.

If you can say one thing about the Notre Dame football team, it's that it never ceases to come up with a new surprise. You expect the Irish to beat Air Force, and they lose. You expect them to lose at Boston College, and they win. Last week they surprised us with their poor performance against a Purdue team that may be the second or third-worst team they will play this year.

Then again, maybe "surprise" is the wrong word. "I feel like I've been lied to." That's what at least one student said after the game, and it actually may be close to the truth. Remember the told-right-now-the-story of how the Irish beat Air Force last year? The students have been told that "this could be the year" for the past three, now four, years. They have gotten their hopes up so many times that they are beginning to feel that nobody - not the press, not the coaches, not the players - know what they are talking about.

It's very hard to have confidence in a team that, year after year, never plays as well as everyone says it can. It's too early in the season to predict a "good" year, but, after one game, the team hasn't played like everyone was told it would. How many times have fans and coaches said all that was needed was for the Irish show up and play on the field? Then they go out and heat the first game they play.

Maybe tomorrow's game can be the one that begins to earn back people's confidence. In case you don't know, the Irish have never rebounded from a loss with a win in more than three years. The only time they have lost just one game in a row was in 1982. They were upset by Arizona and bounced back to "tie" Oregon, 13-13.

Notre Dame has an excellent opportunity to prove that this year is different from the past three years by proving Sat 1984 season today at Burke Memorial Golf Course. Nick Sain, Sports Editor, covers the meet, as well as the upcoming season, in his story at left.

Marianne Killman and Tracey Cannata are not surprised by the uncontrollable excitement of coach Brian Goralski's young Saint Mary's volleyball team. After all, when it changes into the Chicago area tonight for this weekend-opening Elmhurst College tournament, these ladies will be finding the most talented and, along with their hitting, will be the biggest indicator of the team's strength.

Sain's Mary's volleyball begins

By MARK B. JOHNSON

One should not be surprised by the uncontrollable excitement of coach Brian Goralski's young Saint Mary's volleyball team. After all, when it changes into the Chicago area tonight for this weekend-opening Elmhurst College tournament, these ladies will be finding the most talented and, along with their hitting, will be the biggest indicator of the team's strength.

"I have quite a few really talented athletes who know how to play volleyball," says Goralski, "and I really have some high expectations for them this year. Due to the enthusiasm, I think this is a really good team to coach, and I am pushing them a little harder because of it." Testing that enthusiasm this weekend will be a host of teams, which includes six NCAA Schools. Only one other NCAA competitor, Sr. Francis, which placed in the final four of the state of Indiana last season, will be there.

"As far as this weekend goes, it is going to be a tough tournament, and we are going to have to struggle for a win," said Goralski. "But I am not going to take anything negative from it because it is going to be a learning experience for most of them." A year of problems, deep looks to be a part of the squad's problems this season.

"The team as a whole is going to be really good," Goralski says, "and it is going to be hard for me to put six out on the court. I am going to try and utilize as many players as I can without discouraging anybody from playing, but this year of some body is not going to perform for me, they are just going to come out.

Discounting the relative lack of team height, Goralski is looking to other areas to earn victories.

"I think we are just going to serve and dig everybody off the court," he boasts, while adding, 'I hit them as hard as I can, and they respond with "cake and ice."

Attitude seems to be the biggest improvement over last season's 12-13 slate recorded during Goralski's first year at the helm, and most of the praise appears aimed at the fresh men, who comprise the largest part of the young team with six members.

The freshmen and newcomers are going to be a great contribution. We have an entirely new attitude - a winning attitude - because of them," retired senior co-captain Ann Bounton.

Classmate and fellow co-captain Molly Baker added, "Everyone is really enthusiastic. We are really young, but I am impressed at how well everyone is working together.

Teamng with Bonton and Baker, both of whom are four-year players, will be a array of youth and talent. Sophomore Ann Brown and Patty Williams both are expected to reach their potential as a middle blocker and an outside hitter, respectively, after banner freshmen years in the starting rotation.

Classmate Mary Dilsenbode, who is athletically eligible for four years, will be the team's new defensive specialist. In her first year as a starter, in last season, is one of four setters ex- pected to see a lot of action. Along with the serving duties, as well as strengthening the defense, will be junior Rita Schubert, who returns from a year of foreign study.

Freshman Anne Willard, who had considered attending Notre Dame until her height worked against her in recruiting, should receive the starting call as a setter. Of Willard, Goralski comments: "She loves to win and she is prob- ably the most enthusiastic player that I have ever seen," says the Mary's coach. "She is going to be a big asset to us by the time she gets everybody on the court really motivated. She is just a great lady to have out there."

In her first year of varsity play is sophomore Kathy Copeland, who is described as a "good all-around lady" and who is expected to see action in recruiting, should receive the starting call as a setter. Of Willard, Goralski comments: "She loves to win and she is prob- ably the most enthusiastic player that I have ever seen," says the Mary's coach. "She is going to be a big asset to us by the time she gets everybody on the court really motivated. She is just a great lady to have out there."

The Notre Dame cross country team opens its 1984 season today with a challenging meet against Michigan State and Western Michigan. Notre Dame officials have announced a meet scheduled to begin at 4 p.m. on the Burke Memorial Golf Course.

Last year's team finished second to Ohio State in a dual meet, 16-47 (lowest score wins), and later in the year defeated Northwestern by a similar 14-44 score. However, head coach Joe Purdy, entering his tenth season as coach of the Irish, warns that "last year was misleading." Purdy says that this year's opening meet will be highly competitive and a good indicator of the team's strength.

Police points out that Western Michigan and Missouri have a field to be added that usually only included the University of Notre Dame. He states that Western Michigan is a tradition of good middle and the Irish, aided by foreign runners, will be excellent.
