WARSAW, POLAND - Police frogmen found the body of the Rev. Jerzy Popieluszko in the icy waters of a reservoir yesterday. 11 days after three secret police officers kidnaped the pro-Solidarity priest, the official news media reported.

Solidarity leader Lech Walesa said "the worst has happened," and appealed for calm.

"One man died, and killed not only a man, not only a Pole, not only a priest - one wanted to kill the hope that it is possible to avoid violence in Poland in political life," he said.

He offered to step down as head of the outlawed union federation if it would ensure a dialogue between Poland's communist authorities and the people.

There were no reports of disturbiances after the announcement on state-run television's evening newscast that the 37-year-old priest had been murdered and his body recovered.

The government announced Friday that three Interior Ministry officers - a captain and two lieutenants - had been jailed and would be charged with the kidnap-ping.

Polish authorities suggested the baptism murder might be part of a broader conspiracy, and placed the three prisoners under special protection.

At Popieluszko's Stannoslaw Kozka Church in Warsaw, many people in the congregation of several thousand worshipers at an evening Mass were told they were told at the end of the service that the priest had been murdered and his body found.

"There are such moments in our lives that we simply stand completely stunned and the only thing we can do is say, 'Oh, God,'" said the priest who made the announcement.

More people began flocking to the church in the northern district of Zoliborz as word of the murder spread.

No uniformed police were seen around the church, its gates adorned with flowers and Solidarity banners.

In the hilly port city of Gdansk, Solidarity's birthplace, the Rev. Henryk Jankowski, said, "There is just one great crying and weeping in the streets, and around the church.

NEW DELHI, India - Prime Minis­ter Indira Gandhi was shot at least eight times yesterday in an assassination attempt outside her residence and was in "very grave" condition at a hospital, the United News of India Wire Service (UNI) reported.

Sources at the All-India Institute of Medical Sciences, the country's most prestigious hospital, told UNI there were bullet holes in her abdomen and that she was wounded in the thigh.

The news agency said she was shot by at least two members of her own security detail and that the two were killed on the spot by other security officials. The agency also said an officer of the security police was injured and "out of danger.

UNI said the 66-year-old prime minister came out of her house yesterday morning to make a video recording when "suddenly, out of nowhere, a person carrying a rifle — one uniformed and one in civilian clothes — shot at Mrs. Gandhi.

Eight to 10 bullets came from the gun hit her. The two persons, stated to be on security duty at the prime minister's residence, were instantly shot dead.

Mrs. Gandhi fell down with a cry, UNI said, and members of the household and other security personnel rushed to the spot. She was immediately taken to the hospital.

UNI said one of the guards at the residence was identified as Sawant Singh. Singh, who is in "very grave" condition, is said to be the part of the name of virtually every Sikh.

The prime minister had been under heavy security in recent weeks because of assassination threats reportedly from Sikh extremists. She had returned to New Delhi late yesterday from a two-day election campaign tour in eastern Urdu state.

Her son, Rajiv Gandhi, who is general-secretary of the governing Indian National Congress, also returned to New Delhi after hearing the news that she had been shot.

He was addressing a public meeting in the western state of West Bengal.

Neither police nor the prime minis­ter's office would make official statements on the attack.

UNI said police cordoned off her residence and the hospital, three miles away, where she was taken.

Her residence, No. 1 Safdarjung Rd., is on a tree-lined street in central New Delhi.

Mrs. Gandhi, who would turn 67 on Nov. 19, was elected to the office of prime minister four times, the last time in 1989.

She is the daughter of Jawaharlal Nehru, who led the nation as prime minister for 17 years after its inde­pendence from Britain in 1947.

The debate consisted of set ques­tions, rebuttals and questions from the audience. Each representative also had a one minute opening statement and a four minute closing statement. The prepared questions, which were posed by commentator Bob Vonderheide, consisted of three dealing with foreign policy and two dealing with domestic policy.

As in the actual debate between Reagan and Mondale, reliance on statistics, numbers, and stories was high. Both representatives also consis­tently mentioned what the other candidate had or had not done in terms of political beliefs and actions.

The questions asked ranged from those of strong national interest to those of special interest to the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's community.

On the question of student loans, Brogioli said Reagan had cut spend­ing for education and mentioned how Mondale, if elected, planned to increase education spending. Healy countered by stating that "Reagan

The Center for Study of Man in Society is an important part of Notre Dame

The Center's significance does not end there, however. Over 160 students are currently affected by the Center's work through their courses, primarily in the areas of computer applications and instruction on how to conduct research.

Although no actual course work or degrees are offered through the Center's many channels, Lege said "that he can't stress enough the significance of hands-on experiences that students get over and above classroom instruction." For as many programs that directly affect students, hands-on training is the Center's primary focus. He also said that the people who are able to take advantage of the courses that are in some way affiliated with the Center's work (statistics courses, the Arts and Letters Computer Program, and the Religion and Politics course) are much better prepared for graduate school and jobs.

Some of the other significant branches of the Center include the News Center for the Study of American Catholicism, the Center for Gerontological Educa­tion, Research And Services (GERAS), and the Center for Graduate Study Programs, which was cited as one of the three best programs of its kind in the United States by the U.S. Department of Edu­cation.

By DANE GALDEN

The Center for the Study of Man in Contemporary Society was founded in 1960 by Notre Dame Presi­dent Theodore Hesburgh in "an effort to make Notre Dame a first rate research institution to match Notre Dame's excellence of its undergraduate program" accord­ing to the Center's director David Lege.

Lege said The Center is an important aspect of the University which many people are unaware of. The Center is a large research institute which acts as a holding company for research projects of the faculty. It is also the center for the graduate and undergraduate stu­dents who are seeking research grants, as well as offering other types of research services.

Although the Center primarily serves the faculty of the College of Arts and Letters, Lege stresses the sig­nificant impact that the Center has had on the Univer­sity as a whole. Not only was the Center instrumental in bringing 20 major addresses by noted authorities in their respective fields to Notre Dame, but its scholars produced 51 books, articles, translations, and policy reports last year.

The Center also obtained research grants for 40 graduate students and 26 undergrads, and also as­sisted 160 faculty members with their research grant proposals.

A Mishawaka man faces up to 10 years in prison and a fine of $10,000 on charges of reproducing and mailing a video cassette showing a minor engaged in explicit sexual acts. Robert Ulery, 48, pleaded guilty to the two charges Monday in federal court in South Bend. According to the charges, Ulery reproduced and mailed the cassette, which showed a young girl having sex with adult males, to a man in Bellefontaine, Texas, on June 25. In entering his guilty plea, Ulery told U.S. District Court Judge Allen Sharp he reproduced the film at his home and mailed the package at the Mishawaka post office. He estimated the girl in the film was about 13 years old.

A fire was set in an apartment building and flames from fires in abandoned buildings leaped to occupied houses Tuesday night as increased police and fire forces were called out to battle the tracery of fires. No injuries were reported. Most of the fires were set in abandoned buildings and trash cans, although one apartment building was burning and two other fires were set from vacant houses to neighboring, occupied dwellings. In one block on the city's east side, three houses and a telephone pole were on fire. The fire department did not have an immediate tally of the number of fire calls, but Deputy Fire Commissioner Phillip Gorak stressed that fewer blazes had been set than last year, when more than 400 buildings were touched.

Let's just send them a Snickers bar

Dan McCullough
News Editor

Inside Wednesday

A child's youth of yesteryear has grown up still clinging to the Halloween game, but with the end results being so much more than a sack of sweets. They now want politician's support and prestige. The need for these things is like an addictive drug to them—on which they will go to any lengths to possess. This is more frightening than the scarecrow's specter. Politicians have spent a lot of time and money so that they can have better costumes than anybody else. The images they hope to project have to be the strongest, the most influential and hold up to criticism more than anybody else. They need to win every costume contest, they have to have more apples and they must get the biggest sack of tricks. It's their job.

But at the same time, politicians are doomed. They can't ever take off the mask in public. They cannot relax their Dr. Sardonicus grins. Their choice to enter politics has condemned them to a life of constantly wearing the veil. For politicians, it's Halloween 365 days a year.

Little children don't appreciate their ability to take off their costumes when they are done canvassing the neighborhood for treats. They can hang up the sheet and wipe off the makeup—perhaps', candy that they can eat until their teeth rot from their head. But alas, poor politicians. They want the pleasure of dropping the sham. They can never fully enjoy the spoils of their victories because they have to worry about that dreaded beast that haunts their dreams and terrifies their waking hours—re-election.

So this year let's do something nice for our politicians. When they write you asking for some kind of contribution, this Halloween let's just send them a Snickers bar.

The views expressed in the Inside column are the views of the author, and do not necessarily reflect the views of the editorial board or staff.

Do you ever wonder why election day is so close to Halloween? There's a reason for this. Listen.

Just as children dress up as their favorite character and go from house to house hoping to get something worthwhile out of their sacks, so do politicians put on a mask and confront the public in order to gain something worthwhile for themselves.

A ghost, a witch or a Goblin may show up on your doorstep today, and you will be expected to give them a Snickers bar or, if you're really cheap, a stick of chewing gum. A president, a senator or a Democrat may appear on your television screen or will have a letter put in your mailbox today and you will be expected to slip him or her a sawbuck, a c-note or, if you're really un­involved, just a vote.

Children spend weeks preparing for today—trying to get just the right shade of green for their Frankensteins mask or the right color wig for their Boy George outfit. They'll hit every K-Mart and dime store in the neighbor­hood going through bin after bin in their quest for the "right" character." Politicians spend years looking for the right issues to support or try to get the backing of the best public figures in order to create the precise way in which they want the public to view them.

Politicians are like little children, when it comes right down to it. They worry about the way people perceive them and the work hard to make themselves look like someone they might or may or may not be. When Presi­dent Reagan jumps off Air Force One and snaps a salute at the Marine guard, or when Walter Mondale rolls up his sleeves and swears and shouts at the working people, they are projecting an image which they have spent a lot of time developing.

Surrounding themselves with advisors and speechwriters and image-makers, persons running for public office try to sell themselves. They want to make the voters believe that who they see is who they really are. But there's no "trick in advertising" in politics.

They may be no more a John Wayne-type or a John Kennedy-type than the little kid who dresses like Bat­man in a superhero. But the difference lies in the fact that the politician wants the voters to believe him. And most voters do.

The innocent concept of "trick or treat" has been warped by politics into "Democrat or Republican" "Liberal or Conservative" or "Man or Monster." The

Former NOW leader speaks out for women

By KATHY DOLAN

Former President of the National Organization for Women, Eleanor Smeal, spoke out strongly for the women's movement and cited Geraldine Ferraro as an example of the growing influence of women in society today during her talk given yesterday for the Thomas J. White Center at the Notre Dame Law School.

She said Ferraro has come under more scrutiny than male presidential candidates in the past.

Smeal's speech was in part a response to a speech delivered for the White Center last April by Phyllis Schlafly who founded Stop ERA and is an outspoken critic of the amendment. Schlafly contended that ERA was an attack on the family and also spoke against abortion, compatible worth, divorce laws, and the Equal Rights Amendment was not passed was due to the fatigue industries against it. She said if Ronald Reagan is re-elected ERA will once again "take a back seat." Eighty-five percent of the democrats in Congress voted for ERA while only 25 percent of the Republicans did, so Smeal said.

Smeal also spoke on abortion. It is a strong supporter of abortion and said that those who share her views must "take a stronger stand and speak up in the future."

She equated the outlaw of abortion to the prohibition laws of the 1920's, saying it would only cause women to hide their pregnancies and will be a catastrophic error which would injure females of child-bearing age. She called abortion the "Vietnam for women" and said "to outlaw it is to take some of their lives."

In response to one of Mrs. Schlafly's charges that ERA and abortion have no connection.

Smeal commented on Mario Cuomo's talk here earlier this year, saying it is improper for the church to impress its will, through office holders, on society at large.

She also said the majority of Catholics do not favor the church's views on abortion. "It is unlikely the public will elect Catholic officials who adopt all policies in agreement with the church," Smeal said.

During her NOW presidency from 1975 to 1982, Smeal increased membership from 35,000 to 210,000. She continues to fight for ratification of ERA, and was responsible for the 50-month extension of the ERA ratification deadline.

Women's salaries gaining on men's will increase more in coming years

The $5.5 million damage suit filed by Father Andrew Greeley in September, 1982 against James Winters, managing editor of Notre Dame Magazine, was dropped.

Greeley, a Roman Catholic priest and author, originally filed the suit two years ago in Cook County Circuit Court claiming that Winters had wrongfully appropriated the priest's private files and ordering Winters to return immediately all copies of the magazines.

According to Bill Maddux, Winters, the conflict began when Greeley called Winters a "thief, liar, and material-stealer" during an appearance on the Phil Donahue show. Greeley apparently expressed similar views in several other television appearances.

Following the accusation by Greeley, Winters filed a $5 million libel suit in July, 1982. The suit charged that Greeley had given him permission to examine the priest's personal files while he was working on an article about Greeley in March, 1980.

Halloween costume contest tonight in dining hall, prizes to be awarded

By SCOTT BEARBY
News Staff

North Dining Hall Service Manager Lisa Hughes announced plans to spook up eating at the dining halls at the Hall Presidents' Council meeting last night.

These plans include tonight's Halloween costume contest at the dining hall. First prize for the contest will be dinner for two at the loft while second prize will be brunch for two at the South Bend Marriott, Hughes said.

Also scheduled for tomorrow night are Laurel and Hardy and Little Rascals films which will be shown in the BC dining room. Hughes also outlined plans for Friday's Mexican Dinner Night and a Western Rodeo Night scheduled for Nov. 15.

Council President Chris Tayback reported on an earlier meeting he had with North Dame Vice President for Student Affairs Father David Tyson. Some discussion at the previous Council meeting had taken place concerning the limits of a hall director's authority. Tayback said Tyson wants rectors to run their respective halls without having to come to him for individual decisions. However, concerns or complaints by the students will not go unnoticed, he said.

"A Taste of the World" was announced at the meeting. It will be Nov. 3 from 10 p.m. to 2 a.m. at Senior Bar, and will consist of ethnic food, music and dancing. There will be a S10 charge. All students are welcome. The student government faculty evaluation booklets were distributed by Vice President Cathy David. Hall presidents were given copies for their dorms. More copies will be available at LaFortune Center and Memorial Library. The booklets contain information on what students can expect from particular courses.

Completing Council business, Hall Parties Chairman Dave Lawrence said that Junior Parents Weekend is currently scheduled for the weekend of February 16.

System to avert food crises called inefficient

Specialists say the actual figure is closer to 20 million, adding that overestimates make it harder to pinpoint the neediest cases.

The problem of evaluating the impact of drought is complicated by uneven reporting, and political considerations, of local governments.

When drought again struck the Sahel region in 1983, Gambia, tiny and well-organized, quickly reported its needs. Upper Volta, in far worse shape, landlocked and reeling from a revolution, was silent for months. As a result, Gambia was listed as Africa's worst case. Upper Volta was 253rd.

Some governments rely on the outside world to make up food shortages automatically, while using their own budgets for arms purchases or such luxuries as a reported whiskey shipment Ethiopia ordered for national celebrations.

Yet others, such as Botswana and Zimbabwe, marshal their meager reserves to buy needed food on the international market.

When governments neglect food production and distribution, donor nations must decide whether to help or to make local governments face up to their responsibilities toward their own people.

Of course, the government should have done something earlier, remarked a UN official in Upper Volta, who asked not to be identified by name. "But now mothers and babies are dying. Do we let them starve?"

Specialists note, too, that socialist experiments in African agriculture have led directly to massive crop failures, far beyond the normal effects of recent droughts. Countries such as Angola and Gambia, with rich soil and good rainfall, have suffered dramatically.

McCabe cites Ghana as an example of what authorities and local market forces can do.

Nigeria refuses to cut production

The OPEC ministers decided that they must cut production to reverse a downward trend in oil prices that intensified with Nigeria's 12% barrel price cut Oct. 18. Following similar cuts by non-OPEC members Britain, and Norway.

It is expected that Saudi Arabia - OPEC's biggest producer - would accept the biggest cut in its production. Nigeria itself has an advisory vote, sought through a parallel training seminar.

Two major threats to the arrangement emerged during a morning session. First, many doubt the cartel's more hard-pressed members could resist the temptation of pumping more oil when demand picks up. The signs flash metallic green as the car flies past. The headlights shine out into the night, cutting along the dotted lines of the interstate. Flats of green to the left and to the right fade off into darkness.

Suddenly there is evidence of civilization. Lights. Traffic. McDonald's. But it is only a glimpse.

Onward the car drives. More flatslands. The road begins to curve occasionally. Until, at last, there is the bridge. And underneath the bridge, the river: The Ohio, large, bold and hotels pretty themselves in the reflection of the Mississippi.

The car is back on the road again the next day, tracing a winding path in the daylights that leads through Nashville, around Memphis and toward Jackson, Mississippi. It is a long trip, but it goes smoothly.

"Hey, can we stop somewhere? I've gotta go to the bathroom.

"I've heard this stupid Stevie Wonder song about ten times already.

"Can there be anything between Memphis and Jackson? Anything at all?"

"I'm serious, guy. I've really gotta go to the bathroom bad. Could we, like, maybe stop somewhere? Like the side of the road or something?"

Two days later, the car speeds toward its true destination. Though the point is near, Anthony is surrounded by the car's passengers.

"Do you have any idea where we're going to stay yet?"

"How long is this bridge? I've gotta go to the bathroom."

"I'm just saying. I feel like I wanna sleep.

"I think we were there a few times."

The bridge stretches across thirty or so miles of swamp and marsh. Only the tops of trees are visible to the sides. There are very few exits. No turning back. And no way for highway patrol to hide. The car speeds along at 80mph.

Memphis. Houses built on levees. Banks. Pontchartrain glistens as the sun begins to disappear beyond it. Past the lake the swamps deepen and deepen, and after that it's a road where traffic hurries back and forth. The outer limits have been reached. It is a beautiful moment.

"We've reached the outer limits! We've passed the swamp that ended abruptly and the small cluster of trees that separated it from the road where traffic hurries.

When you leave the Holiday Inn East and get to the French Quarter, you have to go left on the Chief Highway and then turn left where you see the signs telling you to stay on 10, and then to Go to Bourbon and turn right. From there you pass a whole bunch of lights until you get to Canal Street

The car is parked and the trek made to famous Bourbon Street. Light and capital of the world. Everything is lit up, demanding attention. All kinds of people are scattered in all kinds of places. Jazz plays loudly from various doorways while signs beckon people to come in. So much to see, so much to explore. What does one do first?

"Do you suppose we could find a bathroom around here?"

Topless/?bottomless hangouts advertise their offerings. "IF YOU ARE OFFENDED BY NUDITY. DO NOT ENTER" is an oxymoron in its gets. Elderly women stand outside and joke about what they manage to see. Break-dancing and tap-dancing kids, used to it all, try to pry the attention away from the spectacle with some fancy footwork. A doorway is crowded with a pair of female impersonators apparently attempting to appear seductive. Souvenir shops selling every New Orleans T-shirt imaginable, except the one you really like. Both are numerous that some are side-by-side. Every restaurant presents its menu in the window, drawing many to try their crawfish, shrimp, catfish and gumbo.

From the corner of Bourbon and St. Peter, the Maison Bourbon blares good jazz, preaching loudly its dedication to the preservation of that. And though you want to expose yourselves, you simply must have a drink for the mere price of $3.75. At the upstairs corner the Embers allows into their observation of the nightly activities from its balcony, which personally I found to be the better deal. Apart from the drinks being cheaper at the Embers, the music itself is a little smoother, and you would think that's what I think, if you want to know the truth.

Colorful people all around. The Hurricane. The Hurricane. The Cyclone. The Purple People Eater. The Dauphine. Lynchburg. Lemondale. The Crawler. Nitroglycerin. And ever so often you can find a little Skyline Lafayette. But enough about drinking. Because you know what happens when you drink, right, kids? Well, besides that...

You have to go to the bathroom.
Remember the third world meals that were served two weeks as a national leader which included vegetable soup, brown rice, bread, and tea. These events helped to raise the student body's awareness of the world hunger crisis. The World Hunger Coalition Deserves a round of applause for its efforts.

A few days after the meals, however, many people were shocked that the WCH did not receive a cent from University Food Services. Most people had previously thought that the coalition would receive a donation from UFS for each person attending the special dinners. Since the World Hunger Coalition already receives a dollar per person in its weekly fund program it was assumed that a similar donation would be made for the third world dinners. More than 6,000 people ate the rice dinner on the two nights offered. Apparently, not many knew the dinners were only for personal experience, not a monetary donation.

Well, just why was no money contributed to the World Hunger Coalition after the third world dinners? William Hickey, University Food Services Director, said that even though the dinner appeared less expensive than regular food, no appreciable amount of money was saved. Right. Forgive me for being so blunt-minded.

After working in a supermarket for three years, how could I forget that brown rice costs as much as meat! Silly me. Just how could that dinner have been as expensive as a normal dinner? Did UFS fly the rice from India just for the occasion?

Hickey went on to say that "to donate the rice dinner out of our general budget would be bad for both the coalition and us (UFS)." Sound puzzling? I'm sure that everyone else is also wondering how a monetary donation could be bad for the World Hunger Coalition, after all, it is a non-profit group. Hickey stands economics better than us common people. Would such a donation promote world hunger instead of solving it? I think Hickey meant to say that donating any fair share of the student person would have been good for only UFS.

More than six thousand students ate the preceding soup dinner. They could have a normal meal at the other dining hall, but, they chose to experience a small part of third world life. The students of Notre Dame were willing to try something about world hunger. It is too bad that their service was too worried about profit to help the students' effort.

Even a modest contribution would have been graciously accepted. Even if the rice and soup dinners did come as much of a shock as UFS should have at least matched the students' effort. After all, it is a tax write-off.

Brown student explains suicide pill referendum

I am a member of the Brown University group, "Students for Suicide Tablets." Much of the publicity has distorted our message, by emphasizing the word, "suicide." For example, a New York Times headline read, "Students to Vote on Suicide." "It is important that our ideas be understood. Our referendum, passed by a 60 percent majority, requests that "suicide tablets be stocked at Brown's Health Services, for optional student use in the event of a nuclear war." This is not a suicidal or defeatist approach to the threat of nuclear war. It is aimed at dispelling the notion that we could survive such a holocaust. Suicide pills negate civil defense. In a nuclear war, there is no defense.

James R. Knebelman

(Unless, perhaps, you are a general or a president, with access to the stockpile of nuclear weapons.) Hopping for survival is dangerous, because it makes the stockpile too easy to accept and too acceptable, and thus increases the chances that it could occur.

Many Brown students voted for the referendum to express their fear and despair, in a purely symbolic way. Others actually want Brown to stockpile the pills because they consider the threat of nuclear war a very real one. Would the idea of suicide seem so bizarre, if you were dying a slow, painful death from radiation sickness? It would be more akin to euthanizing. Would it be dangerous to stockpile poison on a college campus? Well, the chemistry building at Brown is already check-full of deadly substances, including cyanide, that could be used by some unbalanced person to harm himself or others. Suicide pills could be secured in a vault, and would pose no danger. By stockpiling real pills, we would emphasize that nuclear war is a real threat. The missiles are real.

Is stockpiling suicide pills tantamount to accepting nuclear war? Hardly. Why would anyone kill themselves? Most of us don't. By equating nuclear war with suicide, we are urging people to stop from happening. What can be done? The administration's rejection of the student group's recommendation that the production of nuclear weapons would be a step. Ronald Reagan's statement of "negotiation from strength" has accomplished nothing. Why would the Soviet Union want to decrease arms strength? The arms race is a matter of politics. Nut that is increasing its own arms. Reagan claims that he bombed America back from a position of weakness to one of strength. This is misleading. The United States has never been strategically weaker than the Soviet Union. We have been at parity with each other since the sixties, when we lost our strategic superiority. What Reagan really means is to restore American superiority (this is exactly what an outer space "defense" system would do, if successful). But this will not increase our security. On the contrary, it is destabilizing and dangerous, not to mention draining on our economy. Superiority is dangerous, because it promotes the idea that a "victory" is possible, and, like hope for post-war survival, it increases the chances that a nuclear war could occur.

But arms control is not enough. Even if both sides cut their stockpile of nuclear warheads by half, there would still be enough firepower with which to destroy ourselves. Better relations with Moscow are essential. This means more than simply meeting with the Soviets. It certainly means seeking out new ways of repositioning our position in the world as a via a the Soviet Union and the Third World. Should we continue to confuse internal popular revolutions with Soviet expasions? Why did the Administration oppose a new report stating that the Soviets are not practically weaker than the Soviet Union, and developing new opportunities for a conflict that could lead to nuclear war? We must correct our policies when our security is being threatened, and when it is not. And we must not only stop the anti-Soviet rhetoric, but also communic ate to Moscow our sincere desire to co-exist in peace. This may seem naive to some, but it is less naive than equating greater numbers of missiles with greater security.

These ideas are not new and they are only some of the ways in which we can avoid nuclear war. But the Reagan Administration has done nothing in this direction. The purpose of requesting suicide pills for use after a nuclear war is to show the urgency of the problem, to show that students are afraid, that they consider nuclear war a distinct possibility in their future, and that they consider such a war unendurable. The government must discard "defensive" star-war weapons projects and such a war is in the offing. We may have a war before a war is started, to prevent nuclear suicide.

A winning tradition off the football field
Dear Editor:

Often in the past month I have heard the football team referred to as "losers," and I must admit often I who said it. However, regardless of the performance or record of the team, today I witnessed the true character of our players and the community.

Today was the most enjoyable lunch I have had in years, and it had nothing to do with the food. My pleasure was totally the result of a young man we all have come to know and love, Pete Laches.

Upon leaving the lunch line, Allen was engaged in conversation with students who were visiting the campus. As the children were ushered away, Allen sat down to eat his lunch with friends, but the children no longer cared to pay attention to their food. They arranged it in a long time and after a few minutes one by one approached Allen for his autograph.

After watching Allen Pincket sign autographs on envelopes, papers, and even chair backs for the better part of twenty minutes, and after wondering about the good practices when they left after shaking his hand, I forgot about our football record. For the first time in I know, I was proud to be an Irishman.

For all the complaints that have been issued against Pete Laches, I think it is time we realized gerry Faust teaches his players to be gentleman. And perhaps it may not win us all of our football games, but it is winning us more even now.

Men's tennis takes second at tourney

BY DENNIS CORRIGAN

In their last action of the fall season, the Irish men's tennis team took second place in a tournament at Miami University of Ohio.

The Irish opened the tournament by defeating Eastern Tennessee 5-4, but they lost their second match to Kentucky, 6-1. Notre Dame closed out the tournament by defeating host Ohio 6-3.

The ladies were paced by the singles play of Tom Grier, who won all three of his matches. Strong play also was turned in by lãrian Nelsen and Joe Nelsen, both of whom won two of their three outings.

The team also benefited from strong doubles play, a weak point in earlier matches. Doubles teams won two matches against Eastern Tennessee and three against Ohio. All 11 of the doubles matches were close.

Head Coach Tom Fallon said he was pleased with his team's second-place finish.

"The teams we played were a good representation of the type of teams we'll play in the spring from the Big East," Fallon said. "It was a good competition for both of our teams to gain some good experience."

ATTENTION JUNIORS

This season, the Irish men's tennis team will be competing in the Big East Conference. The conference is expected to be one of the strongest in the country.

The team will be led by seniors David Smith and Brian O'Brien, who are expected to be strong contributors.

Watch for updates on the team's performance throughout the season.

Franco Harris released by the Seattle Seahawks

Associated Press

SEATTLE - Franco Harris, the National Football League's all-time career rushing leader who helped the Pittsburgh Steelers capture four Super Bowl titles, was released by the Seattle Seahawks yesterday.

The surprise announcement was made by Seahawks coach Chuck Knox, who said Harris had been given a 24-hour victory in San Diego on national television.

"Franco Harris and I had a long talk and we kind of mutually agreed that he wouldn't be comfortable in executive's best interest if we released him," Knox told a news conference. "He made a comment to our team. It may not be reflected in the statistics, but he gave us a big lift when we needed it and he's really a classy guy. I wish him well." Harris carried the ball only three times for three yards against the Chargers. He gained 1,709 yards, a 2.5 average, in 68 carries in eight games for the 7-2-1 Seahawks.

Knox placed Harris on a 12-season for the Steelers, but was released by them in a contract squash this year. He was signed by the Seahawks as a free agent prior to the second game of the regular season, after Curt Warner suffered a season ending knee injury in Seattle's opener.

Harris, considered a sure bet to make the NFL's Hall of Fame, reportedly signed a one-year contract at $500,000. However, his contract was not guaranteed and will not be paid out through the Seattle game, a club spokesman said.

Harris was not immediately available for comment.

Knox, in his second season as the Seattle head coach, refused to say anything critical about the 6-foot-2, 225-pound Harris.

"I don't really want to get into problems," he said. "What was transpired - we just agreed it would be in the best mutual interest to release him.

Obviously, he wanted to make a bigger contribution to what we were doing and we were hoping that he could, and it was very tough on him coming in here like he did, with the system intact and everything." Knox said Harris would be released today.

Asked what Harris had to say about his release, Knox replied, "My statement covers that." By releasing Harris, the Seahawks made him available to the NFL's other 27 clubs. Asked whether Harris had indicated he wanted to stay to play for another team, Knox said, "We didn't get into that." Hughes, a fourth-year fullback from Boise State, carried the ball 10 times for 36 yards Monday night.

Harris leaves Seattle with 12,120 yards in his career. He trains Walter Payton of the Chicago Bears and Jim Brown, who retired after gaining 12,512 yards with the Cleveland Browns.

In addition to being only one of three players to rush for more than 12,000 yards, Harris is the NFL's all-time leader in 1,000-yard seasons with eight, including a 1,000-yard season at Pittsburgh last year.

Harris holds the NFL career record for rushing attempts with 2,945. He holds or shares 24 NFL records and is second in all-time rushing touchdowns with 91 behind Brown's 106.

He has played in seven Pro Bowls and was the most valuable player in Pittsburgh's victory over Minnesota in Super Bowl IX.

Bird votes

NBA All-Star ballot announced

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS - Larry Bird, the National Basketball Association's most valuable player a year ago, took a look at this year's All-Star ballot yesterday and asked, "Can I vote for myself?"

"I don't want Bird to be selected," said a reporter. "He could be, and it would be tough on him coming in here like he did, with the system intact and everything." Knox said Harris would be released today.

Asking what Harris had to say about his release, Knox replied, "My statement covers that."

Volleyball team wins four straight in North Star Conference action

By ERIC SCHEUERMANN

After the Notre Dame women's volleyball team lost quickly to the Boilermakers of Purdue the week before break to fall to 7-9, the rest of the season did not appear too promising.

"Over the past week, however, the Irish won their four straight games overall, giving the team a very impressive fashion. These victories lifted their record to 11-9 overall and 7-1 in the conference.

On Sunday, October 20, the Irish ventured to Evanston to take on the Northwestern Wildcats. They quickly ended their three-game losing streak by sweeping the match, 15-13, 15-15.

The Irish did not have much time to rest, though, because on Monday they travelled to Evanville to take on the Aces. Notre Dame survived a five-game nailbiter and outlasted Evansville, 6-15, 15-8, 15-12, 15-12, 15-13.

The Irish returned home after the victory for two more games later in the week. Dayton arrived at the ACC for a match on Friday night, but the Flyers were quickly dispatched in three games, 15-4, 16-10, 15-5.

The Irish put their three-game winning streak on the line the next night against a tough Xavier squad, and although it took them four games, they again came away with a victory, 15-11, 15-11, 15-11, 15-11.

Coach Art Lambert said he was very pleased with the play of his squad.

"The girls played very well, the best I've seen them play all season," said Lambert. "We beat some tough teams. Xavier is one of the top teams in the league, so I'm very pleased.

In finishing their conference schedule with a 7-1 record, the Irish guaranteed themselves at least a second-place finish in the conference.

In addition to the conference championships, the Belles also earned the right to compete in the NAIA State Tournament.

"Everyone played really well at State," said freshmen Susie Craig. "I thought that by the time we got there, everyone was playing at the top of their game."

By winning the championship, the Belles earned the right to compete in the NAIA State Tournament, thus continuing their quest for a third consecutive title in three years.

"We did what was expected of us by winning the conference, and now hopefully we will keep getting stronger and will be able to finish better than tenth place at Kansas City (National Championships)," stated sophomore Caroline Zern. "It will take a lot of hard work, but I think it can be done."

Leading the way at No. 1 singles was Captain Debbie Laverie who defeated Hanover's Amy Bacon, 6-1, 6-1, Goshen's Sally Hunsberger, 6-1, 6-1, and St. Francis' Tracey Johnson, 6-1, 6-1, en route to her third straight championship.

Laverie recorded a dual-meet slate of 12-7 in singles competition this season while also winning the conference championship to a rapidly expanding list of accomplishments.

Freshman Kate McDevitt, who did not see a lot of singles action this fall, surprised everyone with an 8-9 slate, rose to the number-one team as they trounced Indiana State with 13 points, followed by Anderson and Indiana University Southeast with 10.

"It was exciting," said freshmen Margy Nold, Goshen's Bonnie Raber and Earlham's Alaka Lindsley, 6-2, 6-0.

Irish field hockey team wins six, takes Western Illinois Tournament

By KEVIN HERBERT

The Notre Dame field hockey team continued its winning ways by recording six victories in six games over the fall break.

Senior Mike Taylor led the way for the Irish as he helped the team to a third place finish at the Western City Conference Meet held on Oct. 27. The Irish were able to pull out three victories, two of them by one goal.

Mike Taylor, who notched six goals, was the game-winner and giving Notre Dame a 2-1 victory.

The Irish now will take their 13-4-1 record into the St. Louis Tournament this weekend.

Still undefeated

ND cross-country wins two meets

By NICK SCHRANTZ

The Notre Dame cross-country team captured first place in two large and competitive meets over fall break to remain undefeated for the year.

On Oct. 27 the Irish won the Western City Conference Meet held at the Butler University Golf Course.

Notre Dame totaled 21 points (lowest score wins) to defeat Loyola and defending champion Oral Roberts, which totalled 65 and 74 points, respectively.

Senior Tim Cannon took the individual title with a time of 25:50 for the 8,000-meter course. Cannon's victory makes up for the disappointment he suffered in last year's conference meet when he was not able to run because of an injury.

Senior co-captain Jim Tyler captured third place overall with a time of 26:08 and was directly followed by freshmen Dan Garrett in 26:11. Sophomore Mike Collins placed sixth in 26:26 and sophomore co-captain Bill Courtney had a seventh place time of 26:27.

Senior Ed Willemsen and junior John Magill finished out of the scoring for the Irish, but each ran well and kept several runners from other teams from placing highly. Willemsen took eighth place with a time of 26:28, while Magill finished in 12th place.

Irish head coach Joe Piane said he was pleased with his team's performance.

"If we were able to enter 11 of our runners, and all of them finished in the top 18," Piane said. "We could not have run our top four and still won the meet, which shows that we have a strong team."

The Irish have been in the Western City Conference for only three years, but they have captured the conference championship two of these years. They won in 1982 but finished second to Oral Roberts last year. Oral Roberts, led by several foreign runners, was expected to provide again a strong challenge to Notre Dame, but the Irish proved how strong they are this year by easily winning the meet title.

On Oct. 19 Notre Dame soundly defeated several top teams to win the Indiana Intercollegiate Meet held at the Burke Memorial Golf Course.

The Irish amassed only 36 points to outdistance second-place Purdue, which totalled 48 points. Indiana captured third place with 60 points.

Steve Brahm of Indiana took the individual championship by finishing with a time of 19.20. Purdue captured fourth place and was followed by the rest of the teams, with Collins leading the Irish in 11th place.

Jim Tyler surged past several runners in the stretch to finish in 18th place for all three meets.

The Irish haven't used any witchcraft to fix the running game, though. Instead, the Irish ground attack has benefited in the last two weeks from the implementation of a single back offense, which gives Faust an extra tight end to use for blocking. Defenses which were able to overload against the run when Notre Dame lined up in the formation now have a harder time of it, and the Irish have opened up the rushing attack as well.

The balance of efforts has made the Irish's offense more dangerous, combined with the bumps and ruts into the Western Illinois Tournament.

"It's a matter of how winning can make the bandwagon a little more crowded."

It seems as though the Irish have managed to solve the mysterious problems which have haunted the team all season. This weekend the Irish will face off against some goodish members of the media from radio stations and newspapers.

Halloween comes early for Irish

Chuck Freeby

Sports Writer

Hello again, everybody!

Halloween came early for Jerry Faust last week. Just as almost everybody predicted, the Notre Dame football team, the corpse arose to walk across Tiger Stadium and shook 78,000 bowing fans by knocking off USC in Baton Rouge.

The victory was the best treat the Irish coach could have received this week. First off, the Irish defeated the second ranked Penn State and Capt. Tracey Rosser of the Notre Dame football team, the corpse arose to walk across Tiger Stadium and shook 78,000 bowing fans by knocking off USC in Baton Rouge.
