Saint Mary's Jr. Mom's Weekend attracts more than 550 to campus

More than 550 Saint Mary's junior and their mothers participated in last weekend's Junior Mom's Weekend at the College.

Chairman of the weekend, Liz Zimmer, said the weekend offered a "rounded type program that was to encompass all aspects of Saint Mary's life. The main emphasis was to get re-acquainted with our mothers and each other."

The Friday events included the Shakespeare play The Two Gentlemen of Verona and the performance of Shenanigans. Melissa Sagon, a Saint Mary's junior, said Shenanigans was "very entertaining. They make you want to get up and dance!"

Shenangians' repertoire included "Bells of St. Mary's" and "A Charge to Keep."

The program ended with a fashion show of Atlantic Fashion.

On Saturday morning, Sister Elena Malpas spoke on the "Problems and Possibilities of Women in Today's Church."

Saturday evening's dinner and fashion show was at the Century Center. A three-course meal was served.

The weekend concluded with a brunch on Sunday morning.

"My mother thought it was a good weekend because it gave her a chance to be with me and not my whole family," said Anne McCarthy, another junior.

"I think that the college was very interested in how little people could really enjoy the college. It was a nice way," said Lydia Ludyng, another Saint Mary's junior, said the Junior Mom's Weekend was an overall success because, "this year's class is generally receptive to Saint Mary's functions."

Federal agents arrested 12 people and seized 5,000 gal­lons of bootleg rum, which was camouflaged as a shipment of tropi­cal food and smuggled into the United States from the Dominican Republic.

Two Miami men were caught Friday with a rented truck full of little-known "Ron baba" rum in non-standard bottles marked with unauthorized labels, said Federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agent R. C. Hilt. Ten other men were arrested in New York City earlier last week in connection with the bootlegging. Ochlen said. -AP

About 40 families were evacuated for several hours after 10 cars of a Seaboard freight train derailed at a crossing and a car carrying explosive methanol overturned and burst into flame near Alamance, N.C., officials said.

No injuries were reported in the Saturday morning incident. Firefighters had disposed the flames and residents were allowed to return to their homes by late afternoon, authorities said.

The cause of the derailment was under investigation, said Seaboard spokesman Mark Sullivan. -AP

Dry Driving Club support shows concern about drunk driving

Last year, one of the most common arguments against the highly unpopular new alcohol policy usually ran something like this: the policy will cause a mass migra­tion of students to parties and bars off-campus every weekend, students will drink themselves silly and then attempt to either walk home through unsafe neighbor­hoods or drive drunk, and there will be an unprece­dented number of tragic accidents and deaths. Obviously, the University is more concerned with its financial liability (it can be held responsible when stu­dents cause accidents after drinking on campus) than with students' well-being. If the administration really cared, it would anticipate that the new rules will be much more dangerous than they are.

The policy has nearly completed its first semes­ter. And although there have not been any of the number of drinking-related collisions that many expected, there have been at least three serious accidents involving Notre Dame students and alcohol, which may no have occurred if there had been dry homes to come home.

Whether or not accidents are indirectly related to the alcohol policy is unanswerable. The damage is in the face of the suffer­ing they cause. Almost everyone has been or knows someone who has been in­volved in a drinking-related accident, but in spite of this, the statistics remain staggering: approximately 25,000 deaths result from alcohol-related traffic accidents each year. In the United States, dry driving is in the leading cause of death among persons under the age of 24.

Students need to show they can deal with the problem as they sounded last year. The problem cannot be passed off as the fault of a selfish administration and blamed on an unaccepting alcohol policy - it must be dealt with con­cretely. And now there is a positive project toward which anti-drink driving efforts can be directed the new Dry Driving Club, founded by Don Todd and offi­cially approved by the Student Senate at last week's meeting.

The idea of the club was taken from a similar program at Marquette University, which so far has been very suc­cessful after beginning only this year. In the program, a student can go to any participating restaurant or bar and receive free coffee or soda in ex­change for agreeing to refrain from alcohol in order to drive others in his group home. This bounty from the custom long used in Sweden and other European countries where members of any group of friends that go out regularly to bars take turns "staying dry" for a plus the possibility of saving a life is worth one night without alcohol. The Dry Driving Club, and the support it has already received from students, shows the administration we weren't kidding last year when we said we care about drunk driving.
National Shakespeare Company reveals combat techniques at SMC

By SHARON HOUK News Staff

Shakespearean performance and stage combat were the focus of two workshops conducted by the National Shakespeare Company Friday afternoon at St. Mary's Hall Auditorium.

The two workshops were conducted prior to the ensemble's performance of "The Two Gentlemen of Verona" at O'Laughlin Auditorium.

"Shakespeare deals with the emotions through the body and live through on a daily basis," said Guy Howard, who conducted the workshop on Shakespearean performance. Howard played Speed in "The Two Gentlemen of Verona.

The purpose of theater, in Shakespeare's words, "is to hold, as in a mirror, the mirror up to nature."

Shakespeare demands more from the actor than any other playwright, Howard said. According to Howard, performing Shakespeare is a personal challenge. He said, "Shakespeare is the mirror up to nature."

Two other actors conducted a workshop on stage combat. Rik Montgomery and Mark Battle tossed in a brawl. Montgomery and Battle demonstrated their techniques during Friday's performance of "The Two Gentlemen of Verona." Montgomery played Proteus in the two gentiles, and Battle played an outlaw.

The National Shakespeare Company is celebrating its 22nd season on tour. Of 3,000 applicants desiring a position in this year's tour, 1,000 were asked to audition in New York City this past spring. Of those who auditioned, 12 were chosen to form the 1984-1985 touring ensemble.

Nine men and three women with varying backgrounds and ages constituted the ensemble that travels by bus throughout the continental United States and Canada. The 12 performers also serve as their own lighting and stage crew.

The troupe will perform 50-150 shows of "Macbeth" and "The Two Gentlemen of Verona" in the nine month season.

Russ Anderson, who plays Valentine in "The Two Gentlemen of Verona," is a native of Minnesota where he creates a summer theater program for children. He is recently graduated from the University of Northern Iowa. Mark Battle is originally from California and is presently working on a screenplay based on the genius of Shakespeare. Stephen Dirk is an Army veteran who originally worked as a theater technician and has since turned actor. Dirk plays Thueso in "The Two Gentlemen of Verona." Anthony Edgerton, a native of Philadelphia who has resided in New York City for the past 13 years, Joseph Gargiulo attended Webster College in St. Louis. He purchased his first theater experience in. Guy Howard has had a diverse career before coming to the National Shakespeare Company. Some of his favorite roles include McMurphy in "Cuckoo's Nest" and Billy in "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof.

Marc Twain visits ND

By PAUL CIMINO Staff Reporter

Mark Twain visited the campus of Notre Dame yesterday for the first time since his death in 1910 and addressed a crowd of students, professors, and assorted Twain-lovers on the subject of war and peace.

The man responsible for bringing Mark Twain back to life in William McBinn, a minister of the United Church of Christ who has been impersonating Twain since 1975.

"It started as a fluke," McBinn said in a pre-lecture press conference. "I had always wanted to do a one-man show and I decided to impersonate Twain and use him as a novel approach to hitting the issues."

Since 1975, McBinn has impersonated Twain in all parts of the globe, including mainland China. He has been touring the world ever since and enjoys his time traveling and enjoying tourist. "Twain is a favorite American author," he said, "a folk hero and every one knows him."

McBinn's lecture was meant to show Twain's feelings on the subject of war and peace and how they are related to the inhabitants of today's world. All of the comments McBinn gave were actual quotes from Twain.

The speech was mainly comprised of anecdotes from Twain's life in which the author related happenings from his days as a reporter, arguments with his wife, and his campaign to defeat the famous Tammany Ring.

Above all, the speech conveyed Twain's opinion of war in no uncertain terms. "War amounts to nothin' at all," he said. "We may not be able to have perpetual peace but we can reduce the world's armies down to small amounts.

He also noted admiringly, that, "the human being is the only being that deals in the atrocities of war." In the end, Twain's message became simple: there is no reason for war.

Following the lecture, McBinn allowed a brief question and answer period during which he fielded questions on any topics the audience desired to ask.

When asked about President Reagan, McBinn answered, "He's always shown off this cheap imitation cowboy. If he were to die tomorrow there would be an outpouring of affection - the kind not seen since Nero."
Six Saint Mary's students initiated into Pi Lambda Theta Association

By DIANE PRESTI

Two local education professionals and six Saint Mary's students were initiated last Saturday to the Northern Indiana Chapter of Pi Lambda Theta, a national honor and professional organization in education.

The initiation of the six Saint Mary's students marks the first time this chapter has ever included undergraduate students in their organization. The student inductees were Janice Bradley, Corrine Flores, Joan Gundlach and Anita Murtagh all of whom are juniors. One senior, Carla Seibaty, was also inducted. All the students are majoring in elementary education.

Pi Lambda Theta is an organization that works toward outstanding levels of creativity and academic excellence on all levels of education. They seek to "promote professional fellowship and cooperation, support research in education, and improve the status of women in education."

Among the inductees were Roma Anglemeyer, an elementary teacher who works with gifted and talented students of the Wa-Nee Community Schools, and Marilee Grandson, an assistant professor of communications at Bethel College.

The president of the Northern Indiana Chapter, Sylvia Whitmer, director of student teaching and assistant professor in the education department of Saint Mary's, attended the ceremonies. Marjorie Suver, of Fort Wayne, vice president of the national Pi Lambda Theta also attended.

The ceremonies took place in Harmon Hall on Saint Mary's campus.

course that would have more relevance to contemporary issues.

After years of development, the new core course began in 1979 under the title, "Ideas, Values, and Images." All A-k-k sophomores are required to take the course in order that they may achieve a broader educational and cultural background.

According to Annastasia Gutting, assistant director of the core course, students in small-sized classes are introduced to four crucial foci of Western thought: Nature, Society, the Individual, and God. Authors ranging from Plato to Freud are read and discussed.

Gutting also assessed another long-range function of the course. Since the course is taught by faculty members who are experts in a particular field, much of the course material is also new to them.

"The Core Course," said Gutting, "brings a small group of students together with someone who is an expert at research. Students have an opportunity to observe how a well educated person thinks in analyzing material that is foreign to him."

The hope is that students will achieve a higher level of problem solving.

Gutting will direct the review and investigation of the course for which the grant funds are being used. Projects will include a review of the syllabus by faculty members, investigative visits to other schools such as Columbia University, and a summer workshop to prepare faculty for the presentation of the course.

Since the course is so diverse, embodying Western thought on all aspects of civilization, the summer workshop will enable the course to fulfill its aspirations.

Both grants are substantially larger than what is common for the College of Arts and Letters.

especially true with personnel matters. "People do have a right to know what goes on at the meetings, but at the proper time," said Carney.

"The bulk of the meeting is taken up with reports from the various committees," said Murphy. The committees meet the day before the entire board meets to prepare the reports they will present in the board. Murphy said, "Most of the work is done in the committees."

The six committees of the board are: Nominating, Academic and Faculty Affairs, Student Affairs, University Relations (Public Relations), Financial Affairs, and Investment.

Any policy or proposal for action must first go through the proper committee before it is put before the entire board for final approval.

All of the committees will meet Thursday afternoon to prepare the reports they will present before the entire board when it meets Friday.

Accent oversight does not serve students

Dear Editor:

As a concerned student, I feel it is my responsibility to inform you of some of the inadequacies of your recent column.

Recently, the student players of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's at your front page states: I don't think so. The students involved in that play put roughly twelve hours a day into perfecting this performance on every day of their break! The performances they gave were so flawless and, at the very least, very entertaining. It's a shame when so much hard work is shown so little appreciation.

Heilmann's account needs some explanation

Dear Editor:

There are certain inaccuracies in Mary Heilman's account of her interview with me (Observer, Nov. 7, 1984). In particular, I would like to make the following observations:

I said unrest between Hindus and Sikhs is a recent phenomenon and not something that Peter Ward and I studied as a separate entity. This interview was conducted in the context of the situation in South Africa. It was not a separate study of the situation in the Punjab.

Perhaps the most important part of my interview was the same question that was raised by Khuswant Singh, the most distinguished Sikh historian and journalist, and a former confidant of Gandhi whom she decorated with a national award and nominated to the Indian Parliament. He asserted that "the violent Hindu backlash against Sikhs, unprecedented in its savagery, appears to be convinced many Sikhs to request the need for a separate homeland... What happened last week was genocide. We are like the Jews in Nazi Germany" and asked "Can a Sikh really say 'I am an Indian' after all this?"

White House promise to fire its authorizer.

Why was the White House scared? Why was the White House scared? It seems to have been an effort at education that had been misused.

Perhaps it is useful to ask whether the White House is now saying, "We'll never hurt at all." Yes, the man of many stories, if not only, is that of a professor is one of them. Brown, Roberts, there are millions of them - I never hurt at all."

Teachers must respect and encourage students

Dear Editor:

A recent conversation with a fellow student led me to some serious contemplation on a matter which concerns all of us at this University. If indeed, we are engaged in the pursuit of knowledge at this institution of higher learning, it would seem only fitting that those who profess to "teach" us students do just that.

It is not my intention to make an accusation toward an unnamed defendant, nor to claim immunity, as a student, in the responsibilities of educating myself and being educated. However, I have entertained the view that the role of the student is to aid in acquiring and increasing the education of students. Although I am not personally involved, I have become aware of and witness to the effects of a situation where such is not the case.

In fact, it is evident that some students, particularly in the philosophy department, have been subjected to an attitude and behavior most unbecoming to any professor. Professor X is a well-educated, extremely knowledgeable man in his field. Unfortunately, he has lost the respect of many of his students by finding it necessary to resort to a method of instruction which does not achieve its professed goal teaching.

Arrogance and condescension are inappropriate in a classroom. Nor do insults and ridicule encourage anyone to improve his work. And, certainly, none of these creates an environment conducive to learning.

Students are of the human species. When attacked, they assume a defensive attitude, and are stiffer. They do not venture forward; instead, they become discouraged and withdraw, concluding that ignorance may indeed be bliss, if the price of learning is so great. It is truly a shame that some are exposed to such futile negative reinforcement and suffer undue, unnecessary, and unjust degradations and discouragements.

One does not funch at a third- grader when he misspells a word; nor does one slap a child when she falls off her bike. Students of any subject, whether bike-riding or philosophy, are impressed with teachers who possess proficiency, dedication, and enthusiasm, they are inspired by those who respect and encourage them.

I have been blessed with professors of this latter sort. I sympathize with those who have not.

While thousands of tourists come from all over the world to view Notre Dame’s Golden Dome, slightly less than 2,000 new students travel to northern Indiana each year to experience the University. Undergraduates devote four years to growing intellectually, spiritually and socially at Notre Dame. But in the process of all this growth, sometimes students forget to take a look around.

The Golden Dome makes an indelible imprint on every Domer’s memory, but how many years after graduation does it take before South Quad alumni forget which is Farley and which is Breen-Phillips? Is anyone ever able to distinguish Fisher from Pangborn? There is more to this campus than the Administration Building.

Few campuses combine such drastically different architectural styles as Notre Dame. From the log chapel to Decio Faculty Building, from Carroll Hall to Pasquerilla East Hall, each building is distinct. There is as much difference between Sorin and Dillon, the buildings, as there is between the spirits that are these dorms.

Unfortunately, too many students do not seem to notice these differences.

Here is your chance to test your knowledge of the campus of Notre Dame. How well do you know your home of four years? Below are 14 photographs of sculptures, statues, engravings and inscriptions from around the campus. Can you identify the location where these are found? The Observer will award a $15 prize to the person who can identify the most locations and submit an entry in the least amount of time. So delve deep in your memory of this famous campus, or grab your jacket and hit the pavement (and the grass). Search high and low, near and far. All of these photos were taken on campus. Even if you do not win the $15 prize, the knowledge and appreciation of the University of Notre Dame du Lac you gain will be priceless.

Women's interhall semifinals decided Farley, Pasquerilla East win berths

Only two teams left and just one more game to be played. Last night's semifinal victors, Farley and Pasquerilla East, will meet next Sunday in Notre Dame stadium to fight for the women's interhall flag football championship.
Farley earned its way to the final contest beating a tough Breen-Phillips team, 6-0. P.E. won its ticket to the championship by toppling a spirited Lewis squad, also by the score of 6-0.

It was obvious from the start that the weather would have a drastic effect on the game. The temperature at kickoff of the first game was in the mid-40's. There was also a stiff wind which often altered the flight of the ball. To top it off, the field was extremely wet, making the ball hard to handle. "There were a lot of things we could not do because of the weather conditions. It definitely affected our game plan," noted P.E. head coach Jerry Judd.

Farley received the opening kickoff off the game and quickly established its offense. Using both the option and short passes, quarterback Mary Lou Almeida brought her team to the B.P. 25-yard line. The B.P. defense toughened, though, and stopped the Farley drive.
P.E. then mounted a modest drive of its own, moving the ball on the ground into Farley territory, but it too was unable to score. The ball ended with both teams having impressive offensive statistics, but nothing to show for it.

Farley received the second half kickoff and began to drive again, but this time B.P. was not able to stop them. Farley connected on a flea-flicker play in Karla England for a 50-yard gain that put the ball on the B.P. 48.

Farley then advanced deeper into B.P. territory using a mixture of running plays and short passes. Almeida capped the drive by scoring a one-yard touchdown on a quarterback sneak.
P.E. got the ball back and tried to move downfield to tie the score, but the Farley defense was too tough. B.P. played well, but it was unable to come up with the big play. "B.P. played really tough, but we came through in the clutch," said Farley head coach John Janicki.

Most thought P.E. would have a pretty easy time with the Lewis team. The Lews players, however, were really up for this game and gave P.E. all it could handle.

Neither team could do much with the ball in the first few minutes. P.E. appeared to be in big trouble when a 60-yard punt by Janine Ouhel put P.E. at its own six-yard line. P.E. then showed just how explosive it can be. Elize Armstrong swept left, beat the defense to the outside and raked down the sideline for 85 yards and the score.

competition for the Irish. University of Texas at El Paso, Oregon, and Washington State are all traditional powerhouses.

"To finish in the top 10 we have to do better than yesterday," Courtney said. "However, we don't have to do anything outrageous or superhuman. Like we've done all year, we need a consistent team performance. It all comes down to one day, and who runs well on that one day."

The Irish have used fine talent, teamwork, and consistency to remain undefeated all year and qualify for the NCAA's. In order to fulfill their final goal of a Top Ten finish, the Irish must display these qualities at the NCAA's. Considering the special character of this Irish team, any goal of theirs must be considered attainable.

The Notre Dame cross-country team had its pre-season hopes fulfilled this Saturday at the University of Illinois, as it finished fourth at the NCAA District IV Qualifying Meet and qualified for the NCAA Cross-Country Championships.

The team totaled 111 points to claim the fourth and final qualifying spot in the district. Wisconsin had the top two finishers, which enabled the Badgers to win the meet with only 57 points. Notre Dame, Illinois, filled second place with 100 points, while Michigan finished with a third place total of 115 points.

The Irish were led by freshman Dan Garrett, who finished in 15th place overall, with a time of 31:05. Senior Ed Cannon, who finished in 38th place, while 30:33. The host team, Wisconsin, captured second place with its highest finish so far this season.

Wisconsin may be the team to beat. Top-ranked Indiana State, and Ohio State, Qualifying for the NCAA Championships, which Notre Dame had done since 1986, was the major goal for the Irish this year. The Irish had taken qualifying spots in the last few years, but none have been able to clear the final hurdle and qualify.

"We've had the opportunity to qualify the last three years, but we've never made it," Cannon said. "It was our goal to make the NCAA's this year. Having it is very fulfilling. It's a dream finally realized."

"Our main goal is to qualify, and it feels outstanding," Courtney said.
"After so many years of our goal being unfulfilled, it's great feeling."

"We did not run our best race of the year," Cannon said. "We's good equaled by Scotch Runners in the next season and will be still better than ourselves in pre-season."

The NCAA Cross-Country Championships will be held at Penn State on Monday, Nov. 19, at 11 a.m. As with the qualifying meet, the championship race will be 10,000 meters.

Howard, Morrissey eliminate Sorin, Stanford advance to final

By BRIAN McCARTHY
Sports Writer

The weather turned icy cold for the second round of playoffs in the district yesterday. The four teams, Sorin and Stanford, warmed up enough to earn spots in next year's championship game.

Howard, who beat Stanford for the second time this year, appeared ready to score on their first down.

Three straight handoffs to back Matt Kelty on first down for a 23-yard gain by Dave Rivers, which edged Morrissey yesterday, produced a touchdown. The snap on three yard-line. Three plays later, on 4th-and-11, Stanford advance to final round at the Stanford 35-yard-line.
They added up to yield another touchdown. After gains of 15-20 yards up the middle, Morrissey gained a first down at the Stanford 20-yard-line.
Again Howard failed to move the ball against Sorin's tough defense.

With 23 seconds remaining in the first half, Howard became the first team this season to score on Sorin as Joe Rieh boosted a 62-yard field goal.

Heading into halftime, Sorin had lost the spark it had shown early in the contest, but in the third quarter it once again took control of the game. Sorin sacked Howard quarterback Matt Kelly on first down for a 10-yard loss. On second down, following a 15-yard penalty, Howard tried to catch Sorin off balance with a quick kick. The maneuver backfired when the kick was shanked out of bounds at the Howard 31-yard-line.

In the ensuing drive, Sorin converted on four third-down conversions to get the game out of reach. On fourth-and-three at the 24-yard-line, quarterback Tim LaBowe hit Jim Folsom for 17 yards at the Howard 17-yard-line. After gains of four and three yards by Garrett and a two-yard gain by Dave Cowden, Sorin faced fourth-and-four but Garrett got the call again and the Howard defense appeared to him again stopped at the line of scrimmage but a great second effort allowed him to struggle for the needed two yards.

Howard refused to quiet and Sorin faced another fourth down on the three-yard-line. This time fullback Dave Boggio took the handoff and plowed through for the score. LaBowe connected with Folsom again for the two-point conversion and the 11-3 lead. Howard never threatened in the fourth quarter and Sorin is now one victory away from a perfect season.

Stanford had not played a game in four weeks and the anticipation of the Morrissey game was evident in its emotional players and fans. The most emotional Stanford player, with doubt, was tailback Jack Gleason, who had 110 yards rushing on 19 carries.

In the first quarter, Stanford reached the Morrissey 25-yard-line but on fourth down and eight, Stanford was stopped for no gain. The defenses remained in control as the two teams exchanged punts for the rest of the first half.

The defenses were still playing tough in the third quarter but Stanford got the key break when a Morrissey punt traveled only 20 yards against a strong wind. Stanford returned the ball to the Morrissey 35-yard-line.

Three straight handoffs to Gleason, the last covering five yards, and Jack Gleason, who doubt, was tailback Jack Martinez, Stanford's 50-yard-line, Morrissey gained a first

Howard defenders John Forry, left, and Eric Zagroclzi stretch for a pass in Saturday's interball semifinal action at Stephon Field. Sorin won the contest, 11-3, to remain undefeated as it bends into next Sunday's championship game.

The Irish will meet Stanford, winners of the Morrissey meet, Sunday.
6-0. Brian McCarthy recaps both games at right.
