Senate to inspect University policy on non-Catholic religious groups

By MIKE MILLEN
Senior Staff Reporter

In a more desirable to inspect both religious freedom and freedom of assembly on campus, the Student Senate unanimously voted last night to examine the current University policy regarding non-Catholic religious groups.

According to Executive Coordinator Doug Wurth, the official school policy, as set forth by Director of University Ministry Father Daniel Jenky, prohibits non-Catholic religious groups from organizing or meeting on campus. As examples of this, he said both the Campus Ministry and the College Crusade for Christ have been forbidden from holding organized meetings on the campus.

Wurth, who is heading the sen­ate's committee dealing with this issue, said "There are people who came into campus as christians and they want a place to meet." Inter­ested student Bill Healy sought the current policy unjust. "If they are going to let a person in, either let them practice their religion or don't let them in," he said.

Wurth will have more information, along with a copy of the official policy, in a future senate meeting. Joanie Cahill, president of Lyons Hall, reported "the number one issue at February's Board of Trustees meeting will be equal access" in ad­missions for women. Cahill, who last fall gave the board a comprehensive report on the women's role at Notre Dame, said she recently spoke with a board member and was told this infor­mation.

In the second week of February, Notre Dame will play host to about 20 students from various universi­ties, including Marquette, DePaul, and Villa Nova. Exchange Coordinators Steve Tetervations said the cost would be approximately $500, with activi­ties including a leadership confer­ence, several meals, and seats at the upcoming Syracuse basketball game.

According to Student Body President Rob Bertino, the event is neces­sary because "we get questions from students." See SENATE, page 5

Delivery service 'has never been more popular than now'

By HARDY LEWIS
News Staff

With a service being offered in some Notre Dame dorms, male stu­dents can have their laundry not only steamed-cleaned and tumble­dried, but also delivered to their dorms.

Student-initiated laundry delivery services in Grace, Dillon, Morrissey and others are picking up students' clean clothes at Laundry on the north side of campus.

The program was originally started by enterprising students in Grace and Flanner Halls three years ago. But the service has never been more popular than now, according to Nick Megug and Dean Lispe, who deliver laundry and dry cleaning service. Presently, there are five different ser­vices to the "special delivery" ser­vice across the campus.

While the service has dropped the service, representatives from colleges are initiating it in their own halls. The prices for the service range between six and ten dollars per order, depending on the dorm. Grace's program is dorm-sponsored, according to dorm coordinator Wallace Harris, and all revenue goes to the hall.

Dorm coordinators submit lists of subscribers' names to the laundry staff. On pick-up day, the laundry staff delivers the bundles to dorms, either to individual rooms or to a designated pick-up spot in the dorm.

"If the dorm coordinates serves as a liaison between the laundry and the student," said Dillon project co­ordinator Andie Hutchinson. "We provide a useful convenience at a fair price. The weather's really been rotten, and the only things to do than walk all the way to the laundry.

Muller said that the service does increase the workload at the laundry. "It's a lot of work," he said. "It's necessary to have more people (in the laundry) because they don't have laundry rooms, and the guys just throw their laundry out in the (first floor) hall to be picked up." Muller said that Mullen's laundry would have to be sponsored such a delivery pro­gram. "That's where the dorm reps come in," he said. "When they take the bundles from us they assume re­sponsibility for them, and that's bet­ter because they can make sure the bundles get to students themselves.

"The amount of subscribers to the service varies from dorm to dorm. In Carroll Hall, nearly every resident receives the service. Dillon's relatively new program, however, is used by about one-third of the hall's residents.

Winter cold requires extra caution

By DIANNE McBRIEN
Staff Reporter

Despite temperatures which plunged below zero, the worst, it was completely unusual on the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's campuses.

The warm and chill temperatures of thirty or more degrees below zero, however, it takes common sense and planning to keep one's self and one's car warm and win­terproof.

Students need to protect their bodies against the weather, said Registered Nurse Harriet Joyce of the Notre Dame Student Health Center. She warned of frostbite, "We've been seeing a lot of it in the last few days--mostly the uncovered spots, like fing­ergips and ears.

Symptoms of frostbite include glossy white appearance and itching or stinging sensations in the affected skin. Blackened skin indicates advanced frostbite. Joyce recommends gently thawing the affected area with warm moist towels.

"The layered look is more than just fashionable this winter. "A lot of layers help insulate body heat," said Joyce, who sug­gested that students should go out un­less it is absolutely necessary and they are warmly dressed joggers should cover their mouths with scarves to block freez­ing air from rushing into their lungs.

Students also should be careful not to mix drinking and exposure on chilly nights, Joyce said. She explained that alco­hol dilates the blood vessels, which cause loss of body heat, making the drinker espe­cially vulnerable to low temperatures.

Notre Dame Security Director Glenn Terry suggested many ways students can protect their cars from the cold. He recom­mended the use of light oil and antifreeze, as well as "keeping the battery well charged."

Terry emphasized that students must take caution when planning to travel, and that they should listen to radio and televisi­on bulletins or dial numbers listed in the front of the telephone directory for road conditions.

Weather can affect Notre Dame

By JOHN-JOHN AMORES
Staff Reporter

The blizzard-like conditions and record-breaking cold that swept through South Bend this past weekend not only caused concern over exposure and frostbite, but also halted hours of possible class can­cellations.

With regard to extreme weather condi­tions, the decision whether to cancel classes at Notre Dame is officially made by Father Edward O'Meara, since it is con­sidered an academic decision. However, the decision is also made with the cooperation of the associate provosts, and the information gained from the local weather, police, and highway departments.

"Some prefer to be cautious," said Father O'Meara, "and other classes are cancelled, though, Malloy said that the decision would be made promptly and related to the individual dorms, as well as announced through the local television and radio stations.

The recent winter weather, although cold, has had limited operation of the service. William Hickey, the director of food services at Notre Dame, said that all workers have been able to reach the dining halls, and although there was difficulty in getting the trucks started, nothing has been held up. In fact, the only effects of the cold was an increase the number of students using the dining halls and the Leperchaun Pizza ser­vice.

The extreme winter weather of the past few days has brought to mind some of the other memorable winters in South Bend, see COLD, page 3.

Job at Court teaches compassion from a new point of view

Theresa Guarino
Assistant News Editor

Fortunately, for most Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students, the only glimpse they get of the U.S. court system is due to an occasional speeding ticket or being around the Five Points area at the wrong time. Traffic court, however, is only one small part of any city's court system. That contrary to what many television shows would have you believe, the rest is not devoted to life-and-death child custody cases and alimony battles. Working at the Circuit Court of Cook County, Ill., during the summer and Christmas break, exposed me to the most frequent users of the courts — the poor and the disabled.

In June, Blake Carrington fights to save his oil company, this is the time of year that many are trying to save their homes and their paycheck.

The Cook County system is among the largest in the world. Over six million cases a year are handled, and civil trial court, garnishment court and eviction court carry most of that volume. The garnishment courts pick up where trial courts leave off. Once a defendant has been proven guilty, he must pay up. It's usually not that simple. Often the person who has been employed simply can't afford to pay the amount named in the suit or set by the judge. If that is the case, the courts go to the employer or bank account to collect.

Garnishment court obviously affects the poor, and the cases seem endless. Six hundred cases a day is not unusual. Comparable in caseload is Eviction Court. It is a very popular this time of year. Although it is against the law in Illinois to throw anyone out on the streets during the winter, the court was overflowing with landlords and tenants each day. Mothers, hoping for sympathy, carried babies into court and pleaded with the judge. Lawyers threaten tenants with the sheriff, and the possibility of forced eviction. And not in the ball, the landlords are also tenants fought, threatened, and argued, until the judge decided one way or another.

Watching this process go on, and being involved in it, was a fascinating experience. The most interesting part of the job, however, grew to be observing the attitudes of my co-workers. During breaks, I worked with a sophomore from another prominent Catholic university in the Midwest. The contempt he showed towards defendants was amazing. His attitude was consistently, "If they're too lazy to go out and work, they deserve what they get." I wonder how prevalent this belief really is. Especially among students at other prominent Catholic schools, namely Notre Dame and Saint Mary's.

Many students like they are turning out graduates who are bright, talented, and concerned with improving the world around them. But it seems to be these same privileged people, who give themselves the luxury of looking down the nose at those they don't see as "measuring up" to their view of hard work.

My other co-worker was a woman in her 5th, who had been working in a classroom since the age of 18. Never married, but with three children, she went out of her way to advise, and come in contact with many frightened people.

One person had years of a Catholic education. Another had never gone further than a Chicago public high school, but had 10 times the compassion of the religiously educated person. Students here will always be told they are the cream of the academic crop, and how others would love to be in their shoes. Four years at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's does not necessarily mean a better moral character or set of values, however. And feeling superior is an easy trap to fall into.

A Catholic education costs money, and students purchasing one are usually not near the bottom of the economic scale. Trying to identify with those who are can be difficult. It is one thing to contribute a few dollars to the local food pantry, but it's another thing to feel for the people you are helping.

Protests mark abortion anniversary

Associated Press

Church bells will toll today in Fargo, N.D., to protest the 12th anniversary of the U.S. Supreme Court decision legalizing abortion, while in 18 states, pro-choice supporters pledged to continue their processes against violence and vandalism at abortion centers.

As anti-abortion clergy stage a symbolic funeral of a fetus in Portland, Ore., a coalition of religious and women's rights groups plans a prayer breakfast in a downtown Toporka, Kan., church.

But on the anniversary, activists on both sides said they wanted above all to avoid the violence that has plagued the issue with increasing regularity in recent months.

Yesterday, abortion rights supporters ended a vigil that had lasted more than 60 hours at the Fargo Women's Health Organization, but clinic staff said a security guard would remain on duty to ward off any vandalism. Three men were arrested yesterday in connection with eight anti-abortion bombings in Washington, D.C., Virginia and Maryland in the past year.

At least 24 such bombing attacks have occurred since last January, and the National Organization for Women sponsored round-the-clock vigils at 25 family planning centers and abortion clinics in 18 states to protect the violence.

Women holding a vigil outside the Hollywood Feminist Women's Health Center in Los Angeles said they planned to keep watch at least through today.

Security was increased at the Pilgrim Medical Center in Montclair, N.J. "We're going to have guards three days a week now, and we've advised the staff that they can't be lax," said Joe DelBlassi, a security and personnel consultant at the clinic.

I think the bombs are obviously to create fear for a whole lot of people - women who seek services, personnel who provide services and that is deeply saddening," said Sarah Weddington, the attorney who argued the landmark case of Roe v. Wade before the Supreme Court in October 1973.

Reagan restates first-term beliefs

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - President Reagan, forced indoors by a record inaugural freeze, re-enacted his oath-taking yesterday and rededicated his second term to staunch conservative principles. "We are creating a new America, a rising nation," he declared with unabashed optimism.

In the beauty and comfort of the Capitol rotunda, Reagan emphasized the limits of government, but stressed the need for a mighty defense. "There must be no waver - and the effect that they had upon the Notre Dame community.

Sister Jean Lettis, assistant vice- president for student affairs, recalled that during the winter of 1977-78 when she was the rector of Faller Hall, the entire staff from Channel 16, including popular local weatherman Dick Auld, was forced to spend three days in the basement of Faller Hall.

The station operated out of the building that is now the Center for Social Concerns, and the snowstorm had crippled the local roads.

Malloy also has memories of the big snow of 1977-78. He remembered that after five days of crippling snow, the basketball teams had a game against Maryland at the ACC. And because of the weather, it was declared that no tickets would be needed for the game. Anyone could make it to the arena to watch the contest.

Malloy recalled that people came from "all over town" to watch the game, which the Irish eventually won.

Corrections

Because of an editing error in the story on Bill Healy, Healy's class was incorrectly identified. He is a junior.

Because of an editing error, Father William Beauchamp was incorrectly identified in yesterday's article on iniquity by other colleges concerning Notre Dame's alcohol policy.

Beauamp is the executive assistant to the president and executive vice president of the University.

Also in yesterday's edition, a story about Indiana's winter storm contained a reporting error.

The story reported no power outages in the South Bend area. In fact, about 1000 homes were without power when a line broke Sunday evening just east of the river between Angola and Jefferson boulevards.
Many applicants fabricate resumes

Special to The Observer

Looking for a new job and feeling self-indulgent? If you fabricate your resume to find that job, you're among one-third of all job seekers who attempt to boost themselves in the eyes of a prospective employer.

If you "give" yourself an M.B.A. to boost, you've awarded yourself the boot, according to Robert Vecchio, chairman of management at Notre Dame, who addressed the problem of phony resumes in an edition of the journal Personnel published last year.

One of the most obvious signs is an ambiguous resume, said Vecchio. Oddly phrased sections, a lot of abbreviations and gaps in employment dates should signal a warning.

In hopes that the ambiguities will be interpreted favorably, Vecchio said, some candidates will list a number of schools they have "attended." The term may not be an out-and-out lie, but constitutes misrepresentation, according to Robert Vecchio, chairman of management at Notre Dame, who addressed the problem of phony resumes in an edition of the journal Personnel published last year.

Employment dates listed with years but not months should also be questioned. Such omissions might imply the candidate has more past experience than he or she actually possesses.

Vecchio said the technique might also mask the time it took to obtain a degree, past firings or worse. "Who knows, the person might have spent that time in jail," said Vecchio.

But even though some misrepresentations, such as inflating past salaries and responsibilities, might seem fairly harmless, Vecchio said the overall problem is hardly a trivial matter.

The statistics he cites, collected by the National Credential Verification Service of Minneapolis, indicate that employers run roughly a one in three risk of hiring a candidate who misrepresents in some way. Candidates who lose out on a job because of this might seem fairly harmless, Vecchio said the overall problem is hardly a trivial matter.

Computer gives career information

Are you still not sure what you’d like to do in life? Are you still wondering whether or not graduate school in genetic engineering is right for your future? Have you found out all the career possibilities for your major? If you answered “no” to any of these questions you may want to stop by the Career and Placement Services Office and visit their new career guidance program appropriately called DISCOVER.

DISCOVER is a computer software package that allows users to learn more about their interests and skills, as well as occupations and educational opportunities.

The guidance program has four parts: learning about yourself; searching for occupations, learning about occupations and searching for educational institutions. The user can select any category to work on and can take as much time as he or she wants to finish the session.

In the “Learning About Yourself” part of the program, a 90 question “value inventory test” allows students to rate different types of activities.

After the test the computer responds with a graphic representation of all the occupations in the United States called the World of Work Map. The area or areas of the map that are closest to the person’s interests are noted on the map. The user can then list all the careers which fall in his or her area of the map.

Before the actual “guidance session” begins the computer asks the user his or her social security number, name and educational status.

The computer uses the social security number as a means of identification for that session. If the user wants to save his responses to the different tests he may do so. The data is stored on a 10 megabyte fixed disk which is part of the system.

DISCOVER also has a section useful for searching for colleges, graduate as well as undergraduate. The program can be asked to search for colleges according to characteristics desired by the user as well as provide information about a college already in mind.

The DISCOVER program, which is also run out of the Student Health Center, is open to all students. Interested students interested in career counseling can schedule an appointment in the Career and Placement Services Office in the Memorial Library basement and ask to see the program anytime during office hours.

WAH!
A new look for Windy City!

On Tuesday, January 22, the Windy City Pastaria and Sports Emporium announced the closing of the restaurant section of the establishment. The bar portion will remain open for business.

According to general manager Dean Mighion, the decision to close the restaurant was made by First American Restaurants Inc., which owns the business and is located in Phoenix, Ariz.

"I don’t think it was a question of the restaurant losing money," Mighion said. "It wasn’t like it was taking big losses. What caused the move was the opening of a new past­taria in Phoenix. Our kitchen equipment will be shipped there, which will save the company money because the floor will be available for new equipment. The bar remains open in the same form as it always has been."

Mighion added that he does not know whether the bar will expand its operations to include that part of the building which formerly housed the restaurant. He plans to alter the present establishment to feature live bands or dancing.

"That decision rests with the First American Restaurants owners. At this time, I’m unaware of their plans."

A result of the restaurant’s closing, 32 employees lost their jobs. Mighion is presently involved in relocating these employees by helping their applications process and providing recommendations. The business has retained about ten employees.

The name of the restaurant was changed to the constitution in mid-1984 from Nancy’s Windy City, which it had been called since its opening in September 1983, to Windy City Pastaria and Sports Emporium.

Asked about the reasons for the change and its perceived effect on business, Mighion said, "We felt the change was necessary to give people a better perception of our menu, since we were not just a pizza place. It was also done to distinguish us from Nancy’s of Chicago, which is not incorporated in our company.”

Mighion added that it is impossible to estimate the effect of the name change on the volume of the restaurant’s business.

 cols and the time on things like the constitution, and the confer­ence would also facilitate the exchange of ideas. Subjects such as freshman orientation and student activities will be discussed.

Student Senator Javier Oliver said an “Off-Campus Week” will be held soon.

"It’s primarily an information event," he said, adding “we’re not trying to promote people’s interests," Information will include sample housing contracts, talks from representatives of Campus View, lists of available -out and other helpful information. The date has not yet been set, but should be before housing contracts are due (February 4th).

Rules for student body elections were clarified by Massarie Carabba, Ombudsman Election Chairman. He said an informational meeting will take place on the 29th of January, with a mandatory meeting following two days later.

Before the next week will be held office hours in the ORUB office from 12 to 2 pm next week to answer any questions.

Bertino said “one of the things we tried to do is avoid the problems of last year,” which centered around write-in candidates. He summed up the new changes by saying “if you plan on running for anything, you better meet the deadline.

A motion submitted by Student Senate Parliamentarian Brian Holt was unanimously approved for con­sideration. The motion was a work­ing change to the constitution which involves adding students to the list of those who can be im­peached by a two-thirds vote of the senate.

P.O.Box Q

Dear Editor:

What is the purpose of the Notre Dame Credit Union, to serve the Notre Dame community?

John Neblo

Is the Credit Union a friend or enemy

Outside, looking in

I have been a member of the Credit Union since my freshman year, and I have been disappointed with the service I have received. The Credit Union has been slow to process checks and has frequently made errors. I have found it difficult to get in touch with a customer service representative.

Edward J. Rolison

Notre Dame Law Student

With bills due, in need of cash, and nearly too angry to speak, I took my checks to a nearby Notre Dame credit union, the American Bank. There I was not greeted with lines forming along the counter, but instead, service and a willingness to listen. Within a few moments I had opened a new account and had deposited my checks - out with the "21 day hold".

How can the Credit Union justify its hold policy when major banks in the area, with less ties to the University community, in order to tie up these deposits at all? If the Credit Union has some lucrative 21-day interest-bearing certificates to invest in, surely it does not take three weeks to clear a check if cash flow is what they are worried about.

My hassles with the Credit Union are over. I have a new bank. Perhaps if more students do the same the Notre Dame Credit Union will get the message, terminate its "21-day hold" policy and return to the business of serving the Notre Dame community.

Founded November 3, 1966
Apple Corporation had introduced dark faces they spread slowly at first until it seemed like they were everywhere. Since their arrival they have succeeded in changing the working habits of many students. Noire Dame would never be the same again.

For those of you who haven’t gotten over the movie yet, I’m not talking about Gremlins. What I am talking about is a computer, the Macintosh personal computer from Apple. And it does seem to be turning up in a lot of different places these days.

A great deal of publicity surrounded the introduction of the Macintosh last year. In 1982 the Apple Corporation had introduced Lisa, which was promoted primarily as an office computer. Despite its state of the art graphic capabilities, power and ease of use, Lisa never had the chance to live up to its expectations. A prohibitively high price (just under $10,000) and the failure to capture a significant portion of the office computer market dominated by IBM contributed to Lisa’s very low sales.

Macintosh was designed with many of the same features as the Lisa but with less power and features and with an aim to capture a greater share of the personal computer market. (Apple stills sells more personal computers than any of its competitors.)

Some critics called the “Mac” with it’s “mouse” more of a toy than a computer. Indeed there were many new features never seen before on a personal computer that made the Mac easy to learn. It’s small size (13 1/2 by 10 1/2 by 9 1/2) is less imposing than other personal computers. A “mouse”, a small unit attached to the machine allows a user to operate the Macintosh without a keyboard simply by moving the mouse on a tabletop and clicking the button when the desired command is pointed to.

With its Macwrite and Macpaint software the Macintosh is able to combine sophisticated wordprocessing with graphic capabilities. More importantly the Macintosh is capable of running application programs like spreadsheets and databases as well as languages like BASIC and Pascal.

Ken Frysztak, an RA in Stanford, who bought his Macintosh last May, said he has not been dissatisfied with the Macintosh. “I like its ease of use, the pull down windows and mouse. You don’t have to spend a lot of time upfront learning it. You can get right into it without reading manuals.”

Frysztak said he bought the computer for three reasons. His career after college, family business and for work in school. He currently uses the Multispreadsheet program and is hoping to buy a modem and a communication software package soon.

“I had problems with the logic board but it was serviced excellently,” he said.

Although he believes the Macintosh has made things much easier for him, he doesn’t think it gives him advantages over others who don’t own a computer. “For me the Macintosh allows me to write more easily but some people just work better writing their paper out, editing and then typing it. It all depends on the person.”

General Micro opened a store in the basement of Lafortune to sell the Macintoshes and other “Apples” to the public. The store was part of a special deal arranged by the University to sell the Macintoshes at special rates to students, faculty and staff of Notre Dame and Saint Mary’s.

Several classes at the University now use the Macintosh. The Introduction to Computer Systems and Introduction to Pascal in the Computer Applications department involve programming on the Macintosh.

Jill Middendorf of General Micro said that since their introduction last February the store has sold approximately 2000 Macintoshes. The $1197 price, discounted 50 percent from its retail price, includes the Macintosh computer itself and the Macwrite/Macpaint software. Peripherals for the Mac include a printer, external disk drive, numeric keypad and modem. Middendorf said all peripherals and software sold for the Macintosh are discounted as part of the arrangement. Students can order software if it is not in the store.

Middendorf said the printer and the external drive are the most popular peripherals while Microsoft’s BASIC is the most popular software sold. The other peripherals do not sell as fast. Middendorf said. Printing cartridges, floppy disks and paper are also sold. All Macintoshes sold have 128K of internal memory but a memory expansion to 512K is available for $912. The larger memory will allow the Macintosh to run software packages like Lotus which require larger memory.

The store also sells other Apple products, including the Lisa and the new Apple IIc.

Students who buy the Macintosh have a 90 day limited warranty. They may also purchase a special service contract that covers cost and labor for 15 months if it is purchased within ninety days of the Macintosh. If it is purchased after 90 days, the contract covers 12 months.

For those of you who want to buy a Macintosh but don’t have the money - relax. Middendorf said the special agreement will last until February, 1987. But don’t wait too long; alumni are not included in the special agreement.

Knee injury sidelines Roundfield

Associated Press

DETROIT - A knee injury requiring surgery will keep Detroit Pistons forward Jackie Boggs out of the NBA for at least two weeks. Boggs sprained his left knee last Friday night in the second quarter of Thursday's 105-90 victory over New York at Cobo Hall.

The injury occurred when Boggs, being deliberately fouled by New York's Ken paradise, slipped on Boggs' own foot and fell. Boggs, a 6-8 starter, tore cartilage in his left knee in the second quarter of Thursday's 105-90 victory over New York at Cobo Hall.

The date and location of the operation have yet to be determined, he added.

Roundfield, a former Indiana Pacers guard who has averaged 11.8 points and 8.5 rebounds per game this season, played Saturday despite the injury. A doctor in Roundfield's home town, Atlanta, determined surgery was necessary, the spokesman said.

Patrick takes over

Brooks takes over

Brooks fired by struggling Rangers

Associated Press

NEW YORK - Herb Brooks was fired yesterday as coach of the New York Rangers and was replaced by Craig Patrick, the National Hockey League team's vice president and general manager.

Patrick, who also coached the team during the 1980-81 season, said that Robbie Ftorek would become a playing assistant coach.

"We feel today's change is in the best interest of the team," Patrick said. "This is no reflection on Herb's abilities. We feel he is an excellent coach and will be successful in the future."

Brooks took over as the Rangers' 19th coach on June 4, 1981, the same day Patrick was elevated to team vice president. Brooks, the mastermind of the 1980 U.S. Olympic gold medal performance at Lake Placid, N.Y., compiled a 131-100-35 record in his five-year tenure.

But so far this season, the team has been hit by a rash of injuries to star players but not yet performed in consistently all year.

In the Pacific, St. Ed's and Sorin are both 0-3, and the Fighting Irish fell to 0-2 at 5:00. St. Ed's has beaten Grace (2-1), Flanner (1-2-1), and Fisher (0-3). Flanner, Fisher, and Stanford (2-1) have all fallen at the hands of Sorin. However, both of these teams have unblemished records to this point. Grace and Stanford will make some noise before the season is completed.

St. Ed's and Sorin met last night and the number three spot will result of this game and many other important "A" League games in Thursday's paper.

"Our epee team has fended out of their mind," said DeCicco. "Last year, we had the team that we have this year, we'd go undefeated."

In the foil, the Irish are led by senior co-captain Mike Janis. With 115 lifetime wins, he is at the top among current fencers in that category. After going 40-0 last year and meeting some tough luck in the NCAA tournament, he is back in good form with a 9-1 record.

Junior Don Johnson adds depth at the 198 5 season for the Irish.

In the sabre, the Irish are led by Moschella (4-1).

According to DeCicco, junior co-captain Van der Velden may be the best or at least one of the best in the country. Lifetime, he maintains a 66-28 record (52-8 in 1984). This year, he is 10-4. With his injury two weeks ago, he might be questionable for the upcoming Ohio State tournament. Nevertheless, he will be a key for the Irish in 1985.

Rounding out the foil lineup are juniors Dave Reiner (5-7 in 1985) and Mark Finlan, who is unbeatable (4-1).

In the saber, the Irish are led by senior co-captain Mike Janis. With 115 lifetime wins, he is at the top among current fencers in that category. After going 40-0 last year and meeting some tough luck in the NCAA tournament, he is back in good form with a 9-1 record.

Junior Don Johnson adds depth at the number two spot with a 9-3 record. After going 35-6 last season, he came on at the end to be the runner-up to National Champion Mike Slevin of New York University in the foil.

Junior John Edwards (27-1 in 1984, 68-11 lifetime) is competing with sophomore Tony Consoli (28-4, 54-6) for the number three spot on the team. Edwards is 6-3 after losing his first three bouts while Consoli is 6-6.

Of the three teams, DeCicco believes that his epee squad is perhaps his best currently based on their 10-10 mark. However, his 37-17 sabre and foil squads are also very talented and have been fencing some tough competition. Teamwork will be the key for success in this season.

"We have some individuals who are very, very competitive, but you can't go undefeated with just a couple of individuals," said DeCicco, who has also had success.

To provide the Irish with a tough test of their ability will be this weekend's tournament at Ohio State. At the Buckeye university, they will face the strongest team along with the surprise team of 1985 Illinois. Also on the schedule will be a tough Cleveland State and a tough Case Western Reserve.

The first home meet for the Irish will come on Feb. 23, when they will face Northwestern, Illinois, and Wayne State in the ACU Fieldhouse.
San Francisco's running game was factor in 'Super' win over Dolphins

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO - In the days before Super Bowl XIX, finding a few predictions was easy. Everybody seemed to know exactly what was going to happen.

Some people even turned out to be right.

There was Joe Montana, for example, examining the astounding pass statistics Dan Marino had assembled this season.

Montana's numbers were produced in a Miami offense that used its ground game for decoration. The Dolphins traveled through the air - much like the San Francisco team that won the Super Bowl three years ago.

"I don't think we threw 70 percent of the time," Montana said, remembering that team. "That's impressive, when you throw that much and you're winning."

Then he added an interesting kicker.

"A lot of teams throw that much, but they're losing," he said.

On Sunday, Miami set Super Bowl passing records with 50 passes and 29 completions. And he lost.

San Francisco guard Randy Cross thought he recognized the Dolphins before this Super Bowl. They reminded him of his own team in 1981.

"Miami's going into this Super Bowl a lot like we did three years ago, with more of a implied running threat than a real running threat," he said.

The implied running threat gained just 25 yards on Sunday.

Miami defensive coordinator Chuck Studley was worried about Montana's mobility. "He's most dangerous when he gets out of the pocket," Studley said. "We've got to contain him, keep him from getting outside."

The Dolphins did not accomplish that and Montana set a Super Bowl quarterback rushing record with 59 yards.

Tackle Keith Fahsborn had been asked about the 49er ground game in what seemed certain to be a bomb-away air show between Marino and Montana.

"I hope it's being overlooked by the Dolphins," he said. "I'm sure not through. I think it'll be one of the keys of the game as far as controlling the ball and keeping their offense off the field."

"We're looking forward to running the ball," running back Wendell Tyler had said. "A lot of people don't look at us as a running team, but we've been able to run on everybody and I think that will be a key to the game."

San Francisco rushed 40 times. Miami tried just nine runs, fewest ever in a Super Bowl.

USFL's Generals could sign Flutie, Phelan by week's end

Associated Press

NEW YORK - Doug Flutie may sign a contract with the New Jersey Generals of the United States Football League by the end of the week and he said yesterday the failure of the National Football League to sign a contract with the New Jersey Generals could sign the Generals for the two players.

"They want Gerad very much," Woolf said. "They have always wanted Gerad and again sent him down here. It's a unique situation where Doug and Gerad are very close and the Generals realize how important it is they play together."

The Generals reportedly have offered Flutie a $1 million over four years. The Buffalo Bills of the NFL have the top selection in the league's April 30 draft, but Woolf said they have not taken contract with Flutie. Last week, the Bills announced they had not made a decision on who they would pick first.

"We're planning on taking a deal," Woolf said. "We'll be ready to go."

Interhall basketball has close races in all three eight-team A divisions

By JERRY MELIA Sports Writer

Although it may seem that Diggery's team is the only show in town, there are other basketball teams that play in the ACC. The men's basketball league began a few weeks before fall semester finals, and most teams completed three of their eight regular season games.

1984 ACC Schedule of "A" Leagues has three separate divisions or leagues which are named ACC, Big Ten, and Pac Ten. Each division in turn consists of eight teams.

In the ACC league, Bob Brown's Off-Campus team won its first three contests by outscoring Cavanaugh (with a record of 0-3), Carroll (0-2), and Alumni (1-2). Planner is only a half-game behind while posting a 2-0 record. They have beaten Cavanaugh and Dillon (2-1).

Off-Campus had a slight edge over a call made by a referee. With less than 30 seconds left in the game, Morrissey was trailing by a point and had the ball. Off Campus had three fouls to give before they were in a penalty situation. They decided not to use those fouls to give Morrissey as little time as possible to score.

The Notre Dame men's fencing team, in action here on the Notre Dame campus, will be on hand this weekend for the Ohio State Tournament. The Irish are 6-0 for this season, and are looking to add more points to their already strong schedule.

Fencers continue drive for NCAA championship at Ohio St tourney

By MICHAEL J. CMIEL Sports Writer

While it is early to be talking national championship, the 1985 Irish seem to once again have one of the top men's fencing teams in the country as they are already off to a 6-0 start behind a talented and well-experienced team.

After stumbling in the 1984 NCAA finals late last year due to poor scheduling and tough competition, the Irish took third in the springtime event. With eight of nine starters returning, the Irish are looking to better last year's one-loss season (19-1) and are shooting to dethrone Wayne State - the 1984 National Champions and perennial powerhouse in fencing.

In his 24th year, head coach Mike DeCicco believes that his team has the talent to go undefeated and be successful.

"The key to our success is that we have the overall depth that we hopefully carry us through the entire season," said DeCicco.

After getting off to a rough start shortly into the season, DeCicco has been pleased with the progress of his team. "Beginning against Haronary Jan. 7, the Irish had not touched their weapons as a team since before the Christmas break. "We started off rather slowly when we met Notre Dame because we hadn't fenced since early December," said DeCicco. "Fortunately, we have enough good people that had some training during the Christmas break like Don Johnson and Charles Higgins-Couthard. The pressure of that first round with Harvard, nevertheless, got our kids back in the groove."

While winning Harvard, 17-10, the Irish went on to make a clean sweep of their east coast competition as they downed MIT, 18-9, Penn, 17-10, Cornell, 20-7, Princeton, 24-3, and Temple, 12-1.

Over the last weekend during break, the Irish participated in and won the 1985 United States Fencing Association's Collegiate Open. Of the three weapons, the Irish won two team events and finished third in the other.

In the saber, perhaps the most talented of the three Irish squads, Notre Dame took second, third, and fourth spots individually. Junior Tony Connolly finished second to Cottingham of Columbia who won the gold medal in a close match. The Irish won the team saber competition as well.

In the epee, senior Mike Gottisian won the gold for the Irish, who placed four epeeists among the final eight. Senior co-captain Andy Quaroni took third after being eliminated by Gottisian in the semifinals. Overall, the epee beat Penn and Columbia by scores of 5-1 for the team title.

In the foil, sophomore Charles Higgins-Couthard won the gold while captain Mike Van der Velden took third after injuring his knee. Despite the loss of Van der Velden, the箔ius finished third as a team.

The "way our team is fencing, we're looking at about four or five teams that are going to give us fits."

Stark anticipates fierce competition Friday night since Bonaventure had a successful recruiting season last year, adding to its solid corps of returning veterans. "They've got some front line recruits which make them stronger," said Stark.

On Sunday, the team faces Holy Cross College and Providence College to round out this weekend's acamines. The Irish will return home to the Rockne Memorial Pool on Feb. 5, when they host fellow MAAC College.

The Notre Dame men's fencing team, in action here on the Notre Dame campus, will be on hand this weekend for the Ohio State Tournament. The Irish are 6-0 for this season, and are looking to add more points to their already strong schedule.
