Culum unopposed in District Two in race for senate

By MICHAEL J. CHMIEL

As the week comes to a close, the races for the next body of Student Senators are reaching their peaks in the five senatorial districts as candidates scramble to express their platforms and imprint their names in the minds of the fellow students.

In District Two, which includes Zahn, Cavanaugh, Keener, Stanford, Farley and Breene Phillips Hall, the matter is basically settled as junior K.C. Calum is running unopposed for his seat.

"I'm running because I've been planning for three years and I've never done anything," said Calum, a Cavanaugh resident. "I figured that it would be a good idea, instead of complaining, to try to get something done."

Calum, a College of Arts and Letters student from Helena, Mont., has served on the Cavanaugh Hall Council for two years. According to the candidate, he has been involved in student government throughout his life and has held leadership positions in his home town.

"One thing that I'm going to try to stress within my district is unity, because without the alcohol, the social life has deteriorated quickly," said Calum. "One way to combat the social life issue is to get to know more people. The more people you know, the more options you have."

Calum's other ideas for the upcoming term include the clarification of rules for the next election and an enlarged version of the big-sisters and big-brothers program for incoming freshmen on the North Quad.

Also, he is advocating an open door week during which people would be able to visit each dorm and get to know their neighbors well and the continuation of the District Two Advisory Council.

"I'm a realist and I realize that the senate can only do as much as it is given the delegation to from the Administration and the student body president and such," said Calum. "I feel that if it (the senate) can gain a little bit of credibility, it will have the ability to undergo more worthwhile objectives."

"It's nice being unopposed," continued Calum. "But I'm not happy and I'm not mad. It's just something that occurred more than anything else, it shows the apathy."

In District Three, however, the race for the senate seat is alive and well as freshman Tom Browne is opposing sophomore John Ginty in the South Quad area.

Browne, an Allentown, Pa., native, believes that changes are needed on campus. He especially advocates increased communication between the students and their elected body of representatives.

"I'm running because I feel that there has to be some changes in the school," said Browne, a Fisher Hall resident. "I think that there should be better communication between the student government and the students through, for example, the district advisory council or something like that."

Browne's qualifications for the senate stem mainly from his previous high school experience and his observation of the campus, he explained. Among the key issues that Browne believes require attention are the improvement of communications, the establishment of a district advisory council, frequent meetings with district senators in order to get direct feedback, and the establishment of a bi-weekly newsletter.

"I also think there should be more social things like the Keenan Revue and, additionally, more student-organized projects like the student store," said Browne. "I think that the present student senate has not pretty much done this year, especially with the student store as the bookstore was monopolizing Ginty, a Fisher Hall finance major, places the responsibility of student life on the shoulders of the senators.

"The main reason that I am running is because the people in the senate should be received a bigger degree of respect and be remembered as making changes in social life. "There is going to be a change in that," said Browne.

Both ticketed agreed student government needed a higher profile among students. "It's like student government is here in Lafayette, and the students can't relate to it," said Calum, adding, "I think by including freshmen in student government, we will get a wider range of ideas from the students."

Browne would like to see a change in the structure of student government. "We have two presidents having a bigger say. They always disagree and continue," he said, adding accountability of the communication as important idea.

Browne also said, "There is a lot of conflict. We need more coordination."

Healy said his "number one priority is social life. The administration should see DEBATE, page 6

Soviet President Konstantin Chernenko, who has not been seen in public for nearly seven weeks, addressed the regular meeting of the Politburo this week in Moscow, the official news agency Tass said today. Tass did not say when the meeting occurred, but the Tass story was dated yesterday, the day the Politburo normally meets. Chernenko, 75, has not been seen in public since Dec. 27, when television showed him at a Kremlin awards ceremony. Several developments since then have suggested that he was seriously ill. The Soviets have received a number of messages from Chernenko and published decrees signed by him, but there has been no reports that he has spoken to Kremli gatherings before yesterday's Tass report. - AP

The grace in what we endure

Dear Freshmen:

It has now snowed each day for at least three billion years, and we are walking to class four inches above the real sidewalk.

This is what they warned you about. South Bend winters.

So as the light flakes fall heavily on the corners of your mouth, you may at times be caught wondering whatever happened to the glory days of high school.

I am too. As a senior about to take measurements for a cup and gown, I sometimes wonder if I ever finished those days called secondary education. So much has happened during the course of these four years that high school seems like a purgatory far away. Wasn't senior year in high school the time when you just didn't study? You filled out endless applications, nervously anticipated the future, and partied (illegally) with your friends?

But there's a difference between senior year 1984 and senior year 1985. Back then, I was excited about Notre Dame, and today . . . well . . . I just wonder if we have been too hard on our selves. Why is it that my friends grumble that they wouldn't recommend this place to their little brothers and sisters? We have become cynics and we brown too much.

Community made last year by former Student Body President Kim Draper has been going down steadily since my freshman year," he said. "It's not that there's a problem here. It's the whole administrative attitude toward students. It's like a parent-child relationship. I don't think I would recommend Notre Dame to an incoming freshman."

Perhaps Callaghan was bitter. He served as one of two students on the University's 10-member Committee on the Responsible Use of Alcohol. The committee swore him to secrecy during its deliberations, and when the alcohol-policies bombshell was dropped last April, stu­dents wondered out loud why Callaghan didn't stop it. But it wasn't Callaghan's fault. It is in the fault of our current student government or the student activities board.

Callaghan's guilt is not the Notre Dame you know, and I am afraid that on far too many occasions we are getting in your way. A friend of mine is food saying how much class our has "dumped on us," and he quietly rati­cates off his list:

- Faust, senior final-exam exemptions, the Death March, special dinners, the Polish Wedding, gambling at Mardi Gras, concerts, the alcohol policy and of course the weather.

So at the age of 21 or 22, we still complain about the food at Dine Hall, dress, in a few months we'll be trying to cook for ourselves.

Did you see the Keenan Revue? Certainly it represents a fantastic fusion of the famous Notre Dame creativity, but between the songs and funny lines lacked a disappointing theme. Unlike past years when the show ended on a up-beat, still reminding all of us that it isn't so bad here, this year's show ended on a downer. I left with the feeling that someone was trying too hard to make a joke.

All I know is that Notre Dame, the school, is different than Notre Dame, the legend. We students live with Notre Dame, the school, everyday, and we are the first to criticize this or that. But in the back of our minds we know and I think it really is Notre Dame, the legend, which con­stantly hovers over us like some dome in the sky. And despite what we say, that's what we'll take with us when we leave.

As Father Robert Griffin so eloquently says, there are things you will miss. And we all share the bitterness. Which explains why at the end of the show, we all have tears in our eyes, we are all about to cry, and yet we are the ones who thought it really was great. We have good memories, we have good times. And they were the times when we thought Notre Dame was the best place to be, and we were the ones who thought Notre Dame was the best place to be. But in the back of our minds we had to point that out to our friends. We are in the detail. We are in the story. We are in the moment. And we are all about to become Notre Dame Alumni. This is what they warned you about. Notre Dame alumni.

Cadet receives unique chance

By GRETCHEN PICHLER
Staff Reporter

John Murphy, a senior Army cadet from Crystal Lake, Ill., recently was named one of 30 participants nationwide in the highly selective Army Enrichment Program.

Murphy said he was "hicked to death" about his acceptance to the program, which enables him to pursue a master’s degree at the school of his choice after he is commissioned as a second lieutenant in May.

"If you'd asked me a year ago about graduate school, I'd have said 'no,'" said Murphy, "but there was no way I could turn this kind of opportunity down."

Murphy, a chemical engineering major, has applied to three of the six schools recommended to him by Notre Dame for higher learning in his field. His first choice is Stanford University, his second University of California at Berkeley, and his third Northwestern University. He hopes to hear from the schools by mid-March.

Lt. Col. Robert Skinner of the Army ROTC department, said the program was "based on the needs of the Army, and the Army needs engineers."

"Right now there is a big need for technically trained officers," explained Murphy. "(The program) better prepares you, and gives you a chance to further your education and make you more appealing for your career goals."

Murphy will be working in research and development, specifically in the nuclear, biological, and chemical fields. "There is a wide range of things I could be doing. People don't realize the opportunities the Army makes available to you," he said.

Although the program has been in existence for several years, Murphy is the first Notre Dame recipient. He was one of 800 ROTC students nationwide to apply to the program in early December, and was notified of his acceptance a month later.

Murphy was chosen on the basis of his grade point average, his recommendations, and his performance at Advance Camp last summer. He placed 32nd of 1,600 students across the country who attended the camp in Fort Riley, Kan. He was the highest-ranking Notre Dame cadet to attend.

"A lot of my extracurricular activities were to my advantage," said Murphy, who plays baseball and was social commissioner for Cavanaugh Hall.

Skinner said Murphy was accepted for his leadership, and his potential quality as an officer, backed up by the fact that he did extremely well at Advance Camp last summer. "We are extremely proud of him, it's a very meaningful thing," Skinner said.

After completing his master's, Murphy will spend six years in the Army. He plans to be married in early June, during the 30-day leave period granted him after his commissioning in May 1985.

Former ND students to detail Chile on basis of Holy Cross experience

By SHARON HOUK

Do you ever wonder where you will be two years after you graduate from Notre Dame?

Two 1982 graduates of Notre Dame have spent the last two and a half years in Holy Cross Associates in Chile.

Joe Regotti and Liz Hellinghausen have returned to Notre Dame to share their experiences of this country Sunday at 7 p.m. in the Center for Social Concerns.

Their presentation will include a slide presentation and discussion titled, "Chile: State of Beauty - State of Siege."

According to the two associates, Chile is in its 11th year of military dictatorship. There have long been poor in this Latin American country, but the 1980-81 crash of the Chilean economy and the subsequent devaluation of the peso has made poverty more poignantly felt among the people. Unemployment is high and government repression is part of daily life, they said.

The attitude of the government toward the type of work Regotti and Hellinghausen were involved in is at best tolerated, they commented.

Regotti and Hellinghausen lived under the same conditions as the people they were serving. Regotti's community used the same organic self-subsistence farming techniques that they taught the peasant-type poblaciones.

Hellinghausen's community lived on the edge of Santiago in a house like the others in the poor urban working-class neighborhoods called poblaciones.

Regotti thinks it is by this holistic pastoral ministry, an accompaniment with the poor, that a context of mutual respect is established between Holy Cross Associates and the Chilean people. "You reach people by sharing the life that they live," Regotti said.

In a reflection on his experience, he wrote, "It is only in the context of this true sharing or accompaniment that one enters into 'La confianza,' a relationship of mutual confidence, trust and respect, with those to whom one is ministering."

Hellinghausen worked with children in the fifth through ninth grades. She taught at a school in Santiago where the students rhymed boy students; manana counts which in English means "today a student, tomorrow unemployed."

Because of difficult entrance requirements and high costs, few have been able to attend college.

Regotti spent his first year in Chile teaching. His second year was spent working in the Andes mountains approximately 350 miles from Santiago. His community ministered to a rural parish of more than 50 small villages.

By personally assuming the life and culture of the people of the villages, Regotti said he and his fellow Holy Cross Associates hoped to empower the people with the tools to help themselves and to develop a Christian sense of community.

Hellinghausen says she thinks a community is important because it allows associates to express their commitment to each other as well as to the people of Chile.

Both Hellinghausen and Regotti think they have been received well by the Chilean people.

On how they are perceived, Regotti commented, "Our identity is a lot more related to the Catholic Church."

Hellinghausen says she thinks associates are seen as part of the Church's global missionary work rather than as foreigners or Yankees.

There are currently nine associates in the Chilean program working in various areas.

SMC readies for 1985 Orientation

By MARY FRAN GISCH
News Staff

Although snow is still on the ground and the dog days of August seem far away, the Saint Mary's Orientation Committee is taking the first steps in planning to welcome next year's freshmen.

The chairwoman for the Saint Mary's Orientation Committee, Carol Hastings, recently chose her assistant chairwoman and other committee mem-bbers.

"I'm really pleased with the committee I have to work with," said Hastings. "Three of us worked on orientation last year and we know what to expect. We also have a good mix of girls from different classes.

Assistant chairwoman is sophomore Maura Bautle. Other committee members include juniors Mary Doyle and Kim McNamara, both of whom were on the committee last year.

Sophomore members are Elizabeth Baehr, Megan McMonigle, and Lisa Lawler. Freshmen members include Mary Beth Braun, Kathleen Herte, and Kathy Bryan.

Hastings, with Saint Mary's Director of Student Activities Mary Anne O'Donnell, chose the committee by interviewing applicants. "We were very pleased with large turnout of applicants we had in order to make our selection," said Hastings.

An experienced orientation commit-TEE member for the 1984 orientation, Hastings was involved in the new approach to orientation implemented last year. She said this year's orientation will run much like last year.

"Instead of cramming everything orientation should cover into one hectic day, we spread out the events from the original Saturday through the next two days," Hastings said. "This will allow for much more time and events for students. So we do plan to have more student leaders for the freshmen groups."

The big sister/little sister program was replaced last year by student leaders who headed groups of freshmen. "It worked well last year because the freshmen got to know each other and no one was left out," said Hastings.

The committee, which has grown from six members to 10, will be accountable to the Saint Mary's student activity board.

For those interested in becoming student leaders, there will be two meetings, one on March 8 and the other on March 26.

"We feel interviewing all the applicants is an important process for this selection," said Hastings.

"Things should go very smoothly this orientation. All the unforeseeable problems will allow for a first year program has will be worked out," she said.

Blind activists delay USAir flight

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - A group of 50 blind activists delayed the departure of a USAir flight yesterday night and the emergency exit was blocked at National Airport to protest USAir's refusal to seat a blind passenger near one of the jetliner's emergency exts.

The protest was sponsored by the National Federation of the Blind, which accused USAir of a civil rights violation for forcing the federation's Indianapolis chapter president off a flight to New York at National because he would not vacate his seat adjacent to an emergency exit.

Airline officials said they were enforcing a USAir rule, similar to other airlines' rules, prohibiting certain people - including the handicapped, the elderly and young children from seats near emergency exits.

The chapter president, attorney Russell Anderson, returned to the airport yesterday - accompanied by members of the Baltimore-based federation - and demanded a seat in one of the emergency-exit rows aboard a USAir flight bound for Indianapolis.

USAir personnel again refused to seat Anderson near an emergency exit, although they offered any of the other seats available on the plane. But Anderson declined an alternate seat.

"The seat doesn't matter," Anderson said. "It's the principle."

The USAir spokesman, Dave Shapley, told reporters, "We welcome (Anderson) to board the plane. But it is our policy not to seat handicapped passengers near emergency exts."

Anderson and 50 supporters then gathered at the exit gate in an effort to prevent other USAir passengers from boarding the plane. However, USAir officials quietly guided passengers into the plane through nearby gates - unknown to the blind protesters.

The 110-seat DC-9 jet departed without Anderson after being delayed by 30 minutes due to the gate-side blockade.

The demonstrators - chanting such slogans as "USAir Is Grossly Unfair!" - then continued their protest by marching to the airline's ticket counter in the airport's concourse.

No arrests were reported.

tives given to the students along with the policy change.

For District Three, which includes Illion, Fisher, Pangborn, Lyons, Morrissey, Baldwin and Howard Falls, Ginny is advocating a monthly newsletter for residents, a better procedure for distributing student tickets at the ACC, and increased parking for South Quad students by expanding it. He is also in favor of social happenings like the recently begun Blow-off for a White Club and the continuance of the LaFortune removation project, along with a new student center.

Ginny believes his qualifications basically stem from his role as a student and observer of "what's been going on for two years."

"I think the job can be more useful to the students if somebody is elected who is fully committed to getting the goals that they set forward carried out, and I think I am," said Ginny. "Communication is a big part of it - letting the people know what you are doing. Each individual senator is held responsible to the students and for the purposes for which they elected him."

In the end, the students of the South Quad will decide the fate of the District Three Senate seat on Tuesday, Feb. 12, when the senate elections are held.

tion took something away (with the alcohol policy) and didn't give something back," adding, "the social life at Notre Dame is atrocious.

Browne also thought a problem existed. "The alcohol policy is one year in, and people are still complaining. We want the university to have matching funds (for social events). We also want to have a per-mance shuttle service to malls and restaurants," he said.

A sophomore engineer, worried about the addition of two courses in the proposed curriculum changes would force him to take over 20 credits per semester, asked Browne what he would do as student body president to alleviate the situation. "It's difficult to accomodate everyone," Browne responded, adding he agreed with the proposal to put both semesters of philosophy into a single course, possibly in the freshman year.

Healy mentioned his plans to put in a "dining/lit room with some tablets" in LaFortune. Regarding actual implementation of the idea, he said, "We'll have to go through a lot of work. Maybe one of the hall services will provide the food." He added, "We want to get away from special events" and have more per-mance places, using Blow-off for Awhile as an example of something that should be centralized.

Cahill said she would like to see the faculty course evaluations continued, although "students placed too much emphasis on the grade portion and perhaps that will be cut out."

Being brother's keeper a Christian complexity

Being our brother's keeper is one of Christi- anity's oldest and greatest complexities. One wonders whether the collective Christian community is even remotely practicing its ideals of social compassion. In many in- stances, America is a triumph of kith and kinship over substance, of the back over prayer and a place where cash precedes compassion. Have Chris- tians accommodated these attitudes to the ex- tent that their religious mirrors a secular society?

To be an authentic Christian is a radical po- sition in today's society. It entails much more than a weekly "lip service" attendance of Mass. Christianity is a way of life. Beyond in- stitutional denominational dogmatic squabbles lies an essential message of social compassion. Being our brother's keeper is deflected by Christians who want government to be the sole eradicater of social injustice. Pitting with the economic structure of our society is a means for the salvation of man, they think. Enlarging the sphere of social programs and stealing from the "naughty rich" will realize a just society, they think. Advocating a legal sys- tem of progressive taxes, transfer payments, and so forth as advanced social reform is erro- neous. The call for social justice in the Scriptures is not the same as the justice of the social pro- gram mentality which exposes a legalized theft, a naive understanding of economics, and a tool which can only be ultimately frustrated by a gun. Poverty and other social ills could be eradicated if more Christians were authentic. Capitalism is sound, in its participants, not one of the most morally conservative and a means which can only be ultimately misused to the immoral truncations of Bourbon Street, they might break the dreams of the Notre Dame commandments—partially! University policies can be used as excuses, if they are interpreted creatively. So I would continue, "In keeping with the University's alcohol policy, we have decided the marching band permission to attend Mardi Gras. They might present a poor image of the Notre Dame commandments—partially!

Excuse of academics. Such a trip would be an "intrusion into an academic schedule," said a spokesman from the office. Personally, I am kind of let down. Not so much because of the denial, but because of the lack of creativity on the part of the administra- tion. At a top school like Notre Dame, one might think up a better excuse than "academic interference." Lately, the adminis- tration has been dropping to new depths of creativity. In many instances, America is a triumph of kith and kinship over substance, of the back over prayer and a place where cash precedes compassion. Have Chris- tians accommodated these attitudes to the ex- tent that their religious mirrors a secular society?

Another anonymous classified ran in the paper a few weeks ago: "Dear Father --- Why didn't you attend our banquet? ... Where you trying to think of some excuse to keep us from going to the Mardi Gras too?" Surprise! Isn't an amazing how things work out around here! After being denied a trip to Hawaii to perform in the Aloha Bowl, the marching band was denied a free trip to the Mardi Gras parade in New Orleans. Unlike the Aloha Bowl decision which had a legitimate reason, money, the Mardi Gras decision by the Office of Student Affairs managed to offer only the worst- And a besides, they will need it for next year's big football game roadtrip—Alahoma! Now, if I saw that the students weren't believing that excuse, I would immediately begin another. If we were to lie and say that I was "concerned" about the moral welfare of the student body, then perhaps another excuse might seem believable: "Since New Orleans is not one of the most morally conservative cities, and since the role of a Christian univer- sity includes the proper training of its stu- dents..." You get the idea. "All those evil and immoral communities!" We couldn't let our good, moral students go to Sodom and Gomorrah." Doesn't sound convincing? The next best excuse, it seems, is the lack of space is available to the marching band permission to attend Mardi Gras parade for instance. Had I been the time dreaming up colorful yet believable excuse of academics. Such a trip would been considered "academic interference." Doesn't try to tell the band members they didn't go because they would miss Ash Wednesday services. Well, I'm sure the thought crossed their mind.

Not if I was the spokesman for the administra- tion. I would spend a large fraction of my time dreaming up believable excuses for the decision makers. Take the Mardi Gras parade for instance. Had I been the spokesman, I would have offered any combi- nation of the following excuses: "The band has just had too much road of trips this year;" I would say with a grinning sneer, then I would talk about the universe's funnest city—Columbia, Missouri, where the band visited. "And then, I would continue, "How could we overlook that overnight trip to the nightlife capital of the state—the In- dianapolis!" Of course, I wouldn't mention that the Hoosierdome people paid for the trip to the Purdue game out of their own funds.

"But how easy it is to work in a bureaucracy...And, in conclusion, we figure that the band should be saved. Money. Most of them still owe us tuition anyway. And

"Raise money, have fun"

Campus MS organizers are planning entertaining events to serve as alternatives to a sometimes dreary social life. MS workers also hope to raise the level of public understanding of a disease that strikes people in the prime of life.

"The fundraising aspect is important, but Notre Dame organizers wish to avoid the "pass the hat" syndrome they say placards drives like the United Way.

"We aren't asking for a handout," Willis is quick to point out. "People spend money anyway on entertainment. Spend money on our entertainment."

The kickoff tomorrow is only a harbinger of things to come.

A halftime free-throw contest is scheduled for the Syracuse game. Anyone attending the game is asked to purchase a $1 raffle ticket. Ten winners will be drawn from the raffle, who will compete in the contest. Whoever throws the most successful free throws will win a pair of tickets to the NCAA basketball tournament.

The video party in the ACC arena will be tomorrow night. Tickets, priced at $2, may be purchased in advance at the dining halls or at the door of the ACC.

The price of the tickets includes a raffle chance to win a trip for two to Florida on the SAB Spring Break trip.

University Food Service will serve refreshments at the party at reduced prices.

In the weeks to come, there will be SAB-sponsored movies, a skating-bike-a-thon, a skating party for high school students at Notre Dame, a phone-a-thon, a Valentine's cookie sale, and several other events culminating with the Rock-Alike contest to be held the last week in March.

All money raised will go toward the Notre Dame contribution in the "Millions Against MS" drive.

Saint Mary's will run a concurrent fundraising drive, and will contribute all proceeds to the Notre Dame campaign. Although Saint Mary's students are not counted in the per capita enrollment at Notre Dame, they will be entitled to any of the privileges of a Notre Dame win.

Publicity Director Nancy Domzalski says, "This is our best year to date. We are only competing with 11 schools and since we're smaller than most of them our chances are better to win. Our alumni and South Bend community contacts are strong."

The "Millions Against MS" fundraiser is perhaps the most ambitious project undertaken by Notre Dame students this year.

Gioffre said fundraising events need not be limited to entertainment activities and encourages inter-dorm competitions to raise money.

"We have the support of campus groups and the administration. With such backing, it is the duty of the student body to show we're worthy of such support," he said.

In Willis' words, "This is a campaign for the students, by the students with the support of the University. It is a chance to improve social life and at the same time help fund a cure for MS."

Students interested in working on the fundraiser should contact Aline Gioffre at 283-2179.

Not only will MTV broadcast a free concert from the winning school, but it is also sponsoring the Rock-Alike contest, a major fundraising event in the drive.

The Rock-Alike contest, as it is called in short, will allow students to impersonate their favorite rock personalities on stage. The winner and first two runners up of each campus contest will be transported to the MTV winners' concert on April 27. There the winner will compete on stage against winners from other campuses.

The grand prize winner of the Rock-Alike contest will receive an internship with MTV this summer.

MTV will also be providing promotional material to the campuses, including public service announcements. These one-minute messages will be used by cable companies in the Notre Dame district.

The video party is held in a university's restaurant and will include a 100% of the proceeds of the food and drink bought at the video party.

The price of the ticket at the video party is $2 and includes a chance to win the grand prize winner of the Rock-Alike contest.

MS is a young person's disease.

The NMS was formed to encourage research for a cure of the disease.

The society has many fundraisers, but none were as successful as the Rock-Alike contest.

According to Maggie Katz, a campaign district coordinator, "MS people looked at it and said, 'We want to get college students involved.'"

It was Katz who had the idea of forming a student-organized fundraiser at Notre Dame.

"We decided, is a good way to encourage inter-dorm competitions to raise money," Katz said.

The decision was made to target college students, the committee chose pilot colleges. Participating in the contest along with Notre Dame are the universities of Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa, Purdue, Northwestern, Ohio State, Michigan State, Marquette, Central Michigan, Drake, and Miami University of Ohio.

"The schools were chosen on the basis of their high caliber of academics coupled with competitive athletic teams. The strength of the athletic competition will insure rivalry between the schools," said Katz.

Accord to Katz, the contest was based on the size of contributions per capita undergraduate enrollment as well as the size of contributions per capita undergraduate enrollment.

"MS is a young person's disease," said Katz. "It is a process that includes the ages of 18 and 34. It is pertinent to college students - they are going to run into people who have the disease.

"This program says, 'It's a worthy cause,'" Katz continued. "'Yes, we want money, but we give you something back, from leadership experience to T-shirts. You are not working for us, but with us. Let a campus subordinate.'

"Once the decision was made to target college students, the committee chose pilot colleges. Participating in the contest along with Notre Dame are the universities of Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa, Purdue, Northwestern, Ohio State, Michigan State, Marquette, Central Michigan, Drake, and Miami University of Ohio."

Letters to a Lovely God

I think of all the possible worlds, each of us would be born, flower and attain to the minimum of a happy death, ready to disappear without a trace, for Pedestrians would never litter. Avoidance of trouble from politicians looking for issues with which to attack the system. Delivering pizza at 2 a.m. I hate cars. I'm crowded off the sidewalks by pedestrians looking for issues with which to attack the system. I hate it when my friend, here to see his son, wants his room changed, or that we can walk away from an annoyance. He gave us windows to promote a worthy cause and enjoy one of the real world's best features: the earth, have emerged as demonstrators with very loud mouth. It looks as though we have the worst, instead of the best, of all possible worlds.

With the help of the Lord and a few policymakers, we can manage to survive with dignity and style. Christianity with faith in civilized institutions believe that the law will come to their aid. Bardem Goetz as their folk hero is living proof of the benefits of the right to bear arms. The Catholic Bishops with their pastoral letters are idealistic: everyone knows, a Lady told me, that the real world would make pest control easy.

Preachers on television warn us that the age of anti-war is dawning. Chaos explodes around us. Those-four of all adults lean on lithium to get them from break­fast to supper. The crime rate is up in every city as faceless folks turn to terrorism as a way of resolving their identity crisis; their need to be violent with shootouts as the old west was at the time of Wyatt Earp. Some of the poor, instead of waiting to see God, are becoming distinctly unfriendly. The meek, instead of keeping their shirts on until they inherit the earth, have emerged as demonstrators with very loud mouths. It looks as though we have the worst, instead of the best, of all possible worlds.

Lendl and Navratilova stay alive

Associated Press

DIELRAY BEACH, Fla. - The No. 1 seeds, Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia and Martina Navratilova, continued on the express tracks yesterday, while Jim Courier derailed the women's fourth seed, Manuela Maleeva, in the second round of the $1.8 million Lipton International Players Championships tennis tournament.

Lendl was forced into a first-set tiebreaker before he eliminated John Saffir, 7-6, 6-0, on the windy, sun-swept stadium court, while Navratilova ripped off the first nine games enroute to a 6-0, 6-5 victory over Robin White.

Stauffer, a 27-year-old right-hander who posted her biggest career victory in 1983 when she won the U.S. women's Indoors, ousted the 17-year-old Bulgarian, one of the upcoming stars in women's tennis, 6-2, 6-7, 6-4.

Maleeva, who upset Chris Evert Lloyd to capture the 1984 Italian Open and also took the U.S. Clay Courts and Swiss Open titles last year, followed her younger sister, Katerina, out of this inaugural two-week event. Katerina Maleeva, 15, lost in the first round.

In other night matches, No. 6 Johan Kriek downed India's Vijay Amritraj 6-4, 6-0; No. 7 Yannick Noah of France defeated Terry Moor 6-2, 6-4 and No. 13 Stefan Edberg of Sweden eliminated Poland's Wojtek Fibak 6-2, 6-0.

Besides Navratilova and Lendl, other seeds posting second round victories in the day matches were No. 4 Anders Jarryd and No. 8 Joakim Nystrom, both of Sweden; No. 7 Hans Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia, No. 10 Carling Bassett of Canada, No. 11 Bonnie Gadow, No. 14 Pam Shriver and No. 15 Catarina Lindqvist of Sweden.

Nowre Dame most likely will go with its latest starting lineup, which features Donald Royal, Jim Dolan and Ken Barlow on the front line, and David Rivers and Joseph Price at guards.

"We're in a groove with Royal and Price, but that doesn't mean (Tim) Kempton and (Scott) Hicks won't be factors, because they both have to be factors.

"Starting doesn't mean anything to me; it never has, it never will. It's just 'let's play,' and we've been playing very well."

Patterson leads indoor track team

By NICK SCHRIANZ

Coming off a convincing win in the Midwestern City Conference Meet, the Notre Dame indoor track team travels to Bloomington, Ind., today for the Indiana Intercollegiate Meet.

The Irish will compete against a competitive field, which includes perennial powerhouse Indiana University. However, co-captain James Patterson remains unfazed about the high caliber of the competition.

“We are a very balanced team, and even without the top guys we don’t lose much power,” Patterson explained. “Indiana is a good team, and we’ve just had some bad luck this year, but overall I think we will do well.”

Impressive performances turned in by Patterson thus far this year contributed strongly to the Irish success in their conference meet and gives them confidence heading into today’s meet.

The senior has won both the triple jump and long jump in all three meets in which he has competed this year. His best include a 24-9 long jump in the Western Michigan Open, which broke his old Notre Dame record by an inch, and a leap of forty-eight feet, six inches in the triple jump at Iowa, which is the third-best indoor triple jump in Notre Dame history.

Patterson’s talents do not lie only in the triple jump and long jump. So far this year, he has also competed in the high jump and 600-yard hurdles. Furthermore, in the three previous years he also has entered the 600-yard dash, 100-yard dash, 110-yard high hurdles, and 4x100 relay. All this makes Patterson one of the most versatile performers in Notre Dame history.

Patterson’s duties to the team change with the addition of his new responsibilities.

“Before, I had more or less a role of not leadership, but something more supportive. I would just try to do my best and get some points for the team,” Patterson related. “Now, I still have the responsibility to do my best and score points, but I have to set an example instead of just being a supporter.”

Patterson has a successful high school career at University City High School. He even long jumped over 25 feet as a senior. Despite his ability, the adjustment to college wasn’t easy.

When Patterson entered Notre Dame, all track performers were required to run a two-mile test in under 12 minutes. He had trouble with the test, which he said back then he only competed in the long jump. The test troubled him at the start of his sophomore year, but the rule was dropped in time for him to get in shape and compete outdoors.

Patterson remained at Notre Dame in the summer following his sophomore year to go to school and work on technique. This extra effort paid off, and he finally was able to reach his full potential during his junior year.

“College was a big change for me, and it took me two years to adjust. There were a lot of trials and tribulations, but I made it through all right,” he explained. “The two-mile test was bothersome, but I finally got it off my chest and then things fell through for me.”

Patterson will graduate this spring with a combined degree in Government and APLA. He plans to attend MBA school, preferably in the South so he can train for track all year.

His ultimate goal in track is the 1988 Olympics. Two major problems he anticipates will be finding a sponsor to pay for expenses and competing against the world’s best. However, Patterson won’t let those problems hold him back.

“If I do better this year maybe the sponsors will come and help pay for expenses and MBA school,” he said. “I feel if you strive for something and work hard for it, then you can achieve it if you really want to.”

Patterson has set his sights high for the remaining part of the year and after graduation. However, he has never been one to place limits on himself. With that kind of attitude, the Notre Dame track team appears to have a fine leader with high hopes for a successful performance today and the rest of the year.

“Now, I have more or less a role of leadership, and I have to do my best and help the team.”

One of the most versatile performers in Notre Dame history, Patterson not only competes in a multitude of events, but he usually wins them. He recorded the best time in the triple jump and long jump in the Western Michigan Open, which broke his old Notre Dame record by an inch, and a leap of forty-eight feet, six and three-fourth inches in the triple jump against Iowa, which is the third-best indoor triple jump in Notre Dame history.

Patterson’s talents do not lie only in the triple jump and long jump. So far this year, he has also competed in the high jump and 600-yard hurdles. Furthermore, in the three previous years he also has entered the 600-yard dash, 100-yard dash, 110-yard high hurdles, and 4x100 relay. All this makes Patterson one of the most versatile performers in Notre Dame history.

Patterson’s duties to the team have increased even more this year, due to his being elected co-captain. However, he has adapted to his new role and its added responsibilities with the same success as he displayed on the track.

“If he were a student instead of an athlete, I would give him the role of captain,” said Irish head coach Joe Plane. “He’s not the type of captain who is out there leading cheers all the time. Instead, he lead by example because he is a real competitor and a hell of a worker.”

Fencers travel to six-team tourney

By KEVIN HERBERT

The Notre Dame men's fencing team will put its unscathed 10-0 record on the line tomorrow when it takes on five fencing squads in a tournament at Oakland University in Michigan.

The Irish will open the tournament tomorrow morning at 9:30 when they take on Michigan Dearborn, a team with relatively little talent. Next, the Irish take on a talented Detroit squad and another from their host, Oakland. Notre Dame rounds out its lineup by fencing Chicago and Ohio State.

Notre Dame should, if past form holds, be able to dispose of the out-of-tourname the four; 10-0 record and five victories and no defeats. The tournament, however, will see some tough competition, particularly from Ohio State and Detroit.

Notre Dame coach Mike DeCicco said he looks forward to tomorrow's action.

"We should win all of our bouts and come back 5-0," DeCicco said. "It will be an interesting weekend of fencing."

DeCicco said he expects the toughest competition from Ohio State and Detroit.

"Detroit has a good sabre team and an outstanding foilist, but we should win all of our bouts," DeCicco said. "Ohio State is very strong in epee and has a very good foilist."

Notre Dame should be able to dispose of Detroit without much difficulty.

Chicago brings a good, talented team into the tournament yet DeCicco said they see themselves placing no higher than third.

Former Notre Dame player Laimbeer makes All-Stars

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS - Center Bill Laimbeer of the Detroit Pistons was named yesterday to replace injured Jeff Ruland of the Washington Bullets on the East squad for Sunday's 57th National Basketball Association All-Star game.

Ruland, suffering from a strained right shoulder, has missed 12 of the Bullets' last 15 games.

Laimbeer, a former Notre Dame player, also was a replacement for the East Stars last year when Moses Malone of Philadelphia missed the game with an injury. The Pistons' center had 13 points and five rebounds in 17 minutes a year ago as the East defeated the West 154-145 in overtime.

Irish hockey team faces Iowa to end rough week

By ED DOMANSKY
Sports Writer

After surviving 26 hours of a round-trip bus ride to Huntsville, Ala., five days in that city in a tent and a tie and a loss to Alabama-Huntsville, the Notre Dame hockey team finally returned home at 2 a.m. last Tuesday morning.

Weary and somewhat disoriented by the turn of events between Friday night's hard fight, come-from-behind tie (7-7) and Saturday's crushing defeat (9-4), it was difficult to find anyone in the traveling party who wanted to do anything but get off the bus, let alone begin thinking about this weekend's opponent, Iowa State.

After missing Monday's workout, the Irish had a light practice on Tuesday, and finally returned to full practice on Wednesday.

"Our extended stay put us a day off schedule, but our goals are still quite obvious," said head coach Lefty Smith. "It sounds redundant to keep saying it, but we still need to keep working hard for that consistent victory." added Smith. "The kids showed a lot of character coming back after trailing the whole game on Friday. But Saturday, when things started going against us, we lost everything."

Toniht and tomorrow, Notre Dame (6-15-1) will entrench the Cyclones from Iowa State in 7:30 p.m. contests both nights at the ACC. When the Irish last played at the ACC, they ended an eight-game losing streak by defeating Lake Forest, 6-4, on Jan. 23.

In the most recent encounter between Notre Dame and Iowa State, the Cyclones defeated the Irish, 4-2, last March 3 at the ACC to win the Central States Collegiate Hockey League playoff title. Notre Dame had taken both games of a regular-season weekend series in late January in Ames, Iowa. The Irish skated away from 7-3 victory.

Unfortunately, it doesn't work that way. And just the same, if the first two periods from Friday and the final two periods of Saturday's contest would have been added to get it, it would have found the Irish on the short end of an 11-4 tally.

"We need to work for that consistency," added Smith. "It showed a lot of character coming back after trailing the whole game on Friday. But Saturday, when things started going against us, we lost everything."

Irish hope to upset Syracuse and keep victory streak alive

By MARC RAMBZE
Sport Writer

A victory against the Orangemen would certainly be a boost of added confidence for the Irish, but boosts in confidence don’t typically come easily in Syracuse. The Irish have played the top four or five teams in the country as far as consistency of having to shoot well, which is something neither the Irish, the Cats, or anyone else has been able to do.

“You're talking about one of the top four or five teams in the country as far as consistency of having to shoot well, which is something neither the Irish, the Cats, or anyone else has been able to do.”

Jim Boeheim has always had a team that plays well. They’re not going to shoot well from the outside. They want you to shoot from the outside. So we're going to have to shoot well from the outside, and I also feel we can get around and do some things there.

Still on a roll

Women face Xavier tomorrow

By MIKE SULLIVAN
Sports Editor

The Notre Dame women's basketball team is on a roll right now, something which is bad news for North Star Conference opponent Xavier. The Lady Musketeers, struggling along at 2-16 (3-6 in conference play), must try to slow down the Irish, winners of six of their last seven, when they visit the ACC tomorrow for a game which begins at noon.

“We're making our game better,” says DiStanislao, whose team now has won five home games in a row. “We're improving on the things we need to do to win. More importantly, we're learning how to win.

“We're at a point in the conference season, though, where we have to do what we do well every time we play. I have no doubt that the kids are fired up after the Dayton win (81-66 at UD). We did a lot of things well and need to look to improve on that. But we're too smart to think we can look past anybody.

It would be easy to look past the Musketeers, who, as their record indicates, have been having serious problems in their second year in the North Star. After finishing 10-6 last year (5-7 in the NSC), Coach Laura Majors' squad has found its schedule upgraded more than it can handle.

If there is one thing that has hurt Xavier this year, it has been defense. The Musketeers have given up all but 109 points per game, an incredibly high total, and have allowed opponents to make almost 60 percent of their shots. With the Musketeers offense averaging 66 points on 39 percent shooting, it is no surprise that Xavier is losing games by large margins.

Not all is bad for the Musketeers, though, as a few individual players have been able to supply some bright spots in 1984-85. Forward Mary Land has been the bright spot for the team so far as she leads the offense with her 20.8 points per game. The 6-0 senior leads the conference with that figure and also holds a spot among the NSC rebounding leaders with her 7.4 average.

“Land is real strong and uses her strength well,” says DiStanislao. “She's not particularly quick, but she can power to the basket and has a good touch on her turnaround.”

Land gets some help from 5-7 guard Shannon Sowers. The sophomore, who has supplanted most of the outside scoring for the Musketeers and is the only other player besides Land who is averaging in double figures (11.0 ppg).

Land and Sowers were about the extent of Xavier's offense, but that changed when freshman center Terry Coughman introduced herself in a 104-74 loss to Dayton. In that game, she scored 19 points and pulled down 13 rebounds, while picking up four assists, two blocks and three steals.

Her emergence can only be good news for the Musketeers.

Although the Musketeers do not appear to be a serious threat, DiStanislao is not about to look past them to next week's tough opponent, Alabama.

“We're not in the position to afford anyone in the West to look past anybody,” says the fifth-year coach. “I expect a good solid performance from everyone—I and one might expect everyone. We're going to win the conference, we're going to have to win one game at a time because it's going to be a battle.”

Joseph Price is the backcourt to the creative ability of David Rivers and it is easy to see why the Irish are starting to take off like they did last year before Kempton went out with his stress-rhought about this point in the season.

The key now is to beat a big name team like Syracuse on national television. Such a feat certainly won't be easy. The Orangemen are a multi-talented team. Just stopping an explosive player like Paul Westphal won't be enough to win. Any one of about five other guys have the capability to hurt Notre Dame.

The Irish do have other games like the Syracuse one left. There's Duke next weekend at the Meadowlands. Washington here, and the season finishes out with an UD game at Villanova. It's a tough place to tough. But Notre Dame has to start seeing nationally-ranked teams sometime if it hopes to do anything this season. The Cats are among the best teams in the country and are just as good a team as any to do.

A win is the most important thing of the season. The Irish need that win to get the season turned around. With Kempton back, the Irish are definitely going to be better. At the same time, however, the Irish have to keep winning.

It's a pretty safe bet that the Irish will be able to win enough games over the remainder of the season to get into the tournament, but they won't last more than a round or two if they don't start beating team's like tomorrow's opponent, Syracuse, very soon.

Yet, I don't think we can just worry about him. If he gets his 18 shots, we have to hope he makes six. But you just don't stop The Pearl. He's just too good.

Jim Boeheim, however, is not the leading scorer for the Orangemen. The team is powered by freshman Rafael Addison, a sharp, sharpshooter who can turn it on at any time. Addison is scoring at a 18.2 pace for the Orangemen after a sophomore year in which he started every game and averaged 17.7 points.

“Addison is so explosive,” says Phelps. “He's got a quick release and he's an excellent outside shooter. He's a third guard.”

The Orangemen also start 6-10 freshman Ray Seckaly, who, apart from Greece, at center. Seckaly is hitting more than 60 percent of his outside shots from the field, averaging 7.3 points while collecting a team-leading 18 rebounds per game.

“Seckaly is the most improved player on the team,” says Phelps. “He's playing with a lot of confidence right now and he's playing with a lot of confidence right now and he's going to be the first freshman who has made him a better player.”

Joining at Addison on the left position is 6-6 senior Andre Hawkins, a silent, 240-pound force who quietly totals seven and six points and six assists in Syracuse's 82-71 overtime loss to Georgetown in last year's Big East tournament final.

“Defensively,” Phelps pointed out, “we're in trouble if the Pearl comes in here and scores 35. If he dominates the game like that, we're going to have problems, because the other players are that good.”
