SMC President Duggan resigns after 10 years

SMC ready for change and 'new leadership'

Saying his decision was "not arrived at easily," President John Duggan announced his resignation Friday after 10 years at the College.

The resignation will take effect June 30, 1985. Students and faculty members received a letter Friday notifying them of the resignation.

The announcement was also made by Sister Frances Bernard, superior general of the Sisters of the Holy Cross, and Sister Madonna Murphy, chairwoman of the Board of Regents during the winter meeting of the Executive Governing Board of the College.

Duggan said he is ready for new directions and believes the College is ready for new leadership. Such leadership, he said, "should come about, not in a time of institutional weakness, but when the educational and financial strengths of the College encourage re-assertion of traditional goals."

Personally, Duggan said he needs "new challenges" and would like to go on to new work. And at 56, he said, "If I'm to do one more professional task, I'd better get to it quickly."

"I am confident that Saint Mary's faces the future with great strengths built on strong traditions, an excellent faculty and an outstanding student body. As such, a committee will be formed to help in the search for a new president, a process Duggan said he will have a hand in. "In fact," he said, "I've agreed to stay on as a consultant to the College for a number of years."

Duggan said that "an institution of 140 years does not depend on one individual," and thinks his decision is the best "for me and for Saint Mary's at this time."

Duggan said that since Saint Mary's has the endowment raised from $3 to $16 million, and the construction of two new buildings, the $7 million Cushwa-Leighton Library and the $1 million Angela Reinebold Facility. In addition, the old Alumni Centennial Library was renovated into the Haggart College Center, and work on an addition to Science Hall will begin this summer.

Duggan came to Saint Mary's from Vassar College, where he served as vice president of student affairs and professor of psychology for seven years.

He also taught at the Canterbury School in Conn., the University of Bridgeport, and was director of guidance services and program development at the College Entrance Examination Board.

In 1963, he was promoted to vice president of the board.

Duggan is president of the Indiana Conference on Higher Education, a member of the board of directors of the Independent Colleges and Universities of Indiana. He was a director of the Associated Catholic Colleges and Universities, and served on the executive committee.

Decision surprising for SMC community

College President John Duggan's announcement Friday that he would resign shocked members of the Saint Mary's community.

Student Body President-elect, Anne Marie Kollman said she was surprised at first but could understand his reasoning and his desire to move on. Kollman said she was sad to hear of Duggan's resignation, as he was always a friendly face who appreciated what students had to say.

Sister Jeanne M. Stack said, "He was really great for the College. He managed to turn the College around financially and really did a good job of it."

Aside from the disappointment, students were shocked and many did not believe the news at first.

"I was really shocked. I understood why he resigned. He's been here 10 years," commented sophomore Denise Kiley. "However, I think he should have been informed before the press so we were not as clueless as to what was happening." Freshman Laurel Horvath added, "I'm really sad to see him go now. I would have loved to have him around at least until our graduation."

He's a really great man who has done an awful lot for this College. I wish we could have been informed of the resignation immediately after the meeting," said Christine Leeper. "I was really impressed with his REACTIONS,

Comments about long waits and lectures from Saint Mary's security personnel concerning Saint Mary's students prompted the Student Affairs Coordinating Committee to look into these problems with Director of Safety and Security Richard Chlebek.

A letter issued to Saint Mary's students on Feb. 6, resuming the escort policy was a result of this meeting. No new policy was made. Chlebek simply issued the letter to inform everyone of the services available.

Saint Mary's security has offered escort service for students between the McCandless and LeMans dorms and has provided half hour waits for an escort.

Chlebek responded to complaints of long waits. "The officers have other assignments such as locking and securing the buildings. Once the buildings are locked they begin nightly duties of patrolling and checking the buildings. Each time they answer an escort call they become further behind on their scheduled rounds."

Security receives an average of nine calls per weekend night.

Chlebek added, "We have responded to calls for exceptions and have found no one there. Students often become impatient and walk. They must realize that we do have other duties."

If the officers are busy the dispatcher is responsible for telling the students how long they may have to wait.

Chlebek added, "I would like to stress the fact that if any of the young ladies have problems with security officers, they should lodge a complaint directly with my office."

Some concern has also been expressed regarding the number of people that security will escort. "If see ESCORT, page 3

"Gender blind" is how Father David Tyson, vice president for student affairs, described the promotions of Evinyn Reinebold to director of student housing and Joni Neal to director of student activities.

"I didn't go out to seek women to fill these positions. In our pool of employees, they were the most talented people. It was a matter of their positions already and their talents that made each of them the natural choice," said Tyson.

Sister Jean Lenz was promoted to associate vice president for student affairs. Although the "issue of women wasn't even there" in the promotions of Reinebold and Neal, Tyson admitted that it was a consideration in Lenz's promotion.

"I felt we were long overdue for a woman in a senior administrative position. Having in mind that if there was a woman who filled the qualifications, I would like to hire her, I saw Sister Jean as the perfect candidate."

Tyson stressed again, however, that if there was not a woman available who met all the criteria and was extremely qualified to fill the position, as she (Lenz) was, I would have chosen a man."

Reinebold formerly served as secretary to the director of student housing, a position she held since 1972. Tyson gave her formal notification of her new position at the commencement of the present school term.

Neal previously held the title of acting director of student activities.

Reinebold expressed enthusiasm for her new job, but maintained that she "did not feel intimidated" in accepting a job formerly held by a man. Father Michael Heppen, the former director, is now director of student accounts.

"We're now striving to find more housing for graduate students, where I see a great problem in the spaces now available," Reinbold commented.

Other projects confronting her are the housing of incoming freshmen for the 1985-86 term and the upcoming distribution of housing applications.

Reinebold was nontenimental concerning her own selection, saying that fewer students plan to move off-campus than in the past.

Tyson nationalized the change in the SMC community from position by position.

aren't you? Don't be so naive. We can do wonders with electronic circuitry these days. Now we know where all our food is, every bit of it, every day. And that goes for our silverware and our sugar dispensers, too. We worry about this stuff too, you know.

Let's say you make it past the first set of doors. Just a hypothetical situation, you understand. So let's just say it. My men can be on top of you within 1.9 seconds. You'll be in handcuffs in 2.5 seconds. You'll be bound and gagged in 4.2 seconds. We know. We've practiced.

One false move and your roommate gets a 4.0 for the semester. The easy way.

...And enough of this using someone else's ID. We'll not have that anymore. We've spent the last week analyzing the body warmth factor for each and every one of you, designing our machines so that your BFF will register when inserted into the machine. If it doesn't match, you don't eat. It's that simple.

Now before you go mouthing off to Mommy and Daddy, you just remember this: we will stop at nothing to protect our dining hall. We don't trust you little heathers any farther than we can throw you with one good shot to the temple. If you tell your folks, you may as well tell your roommate that he or she's got a single. Do we understand each other? Good. Enjoy your dinner.

We'll tell you what to do, and you'll like it. You should be used to it by now.

You want to know when it started? I'll tell you. But mum's the word. It all began with that dung Syracuse basketball game.

That's when we were forced to employ the use of a security guard, armed with a revolver and 10 extra rounds of ammunition. Pretty much went unnoticed, until that dumb kid said he was going puking his nose where it wasn't his business.

Well, no problem. Things like that can be corrected. Nobody need four extra tickets for commencement.

I suppose you want to know who I am, right? Well, I'm one of those transformed women you are walking around the dining hall, maybe pushing a cart with reinforcement containers of mustard on it or maybe putting more cereals into those strange dispensers. Whatever. But although that's what I may appear to be, in reality I am a highly trained agent with the federal government. I know nine languages fluently and am taking a class next summer in Swahili. I have a black belt in karate, can handle an M-16 like it was my favorite toothbrush, and my job is simple: to oversee the security of the dining hall.

So anyway, you understand how it is. You students just can't control yourselves. You need constant observation, regulation. You get a little upset, you throw tantrums. You steal food, throw it at each other, do anything but eat it.

That's where we - uh, I come in. Don't think that we don't know where those hot becicles got those oranges that they threw onto the court at the Syracuse game.

We're not crazy. They got them from the dining hall. Won't happen again, I assure you. My men can pick off flying projectiles from 50 yards away and you never knew you were shot. Ah, that's the beauty of it.

We thought you students might be just a little out of control when you came back from the Syracuse game. So we prepared. The security guard was only the tip of the iceberg. He would have used those extra 10 rounds of ammunition if he had to. Luckily, he didn't have to.

Go ahead and try stuffing cookies into your purse. Nobody watching you except that girl with the Lyons sweatshirt on, is there? But are you sure she really lives here? And you never knew her to be. Ah, that's the beauty of it.

Novelist and short story author
Horstine Calisher, acclaimed by critics as one of the key fig­ures in the "Second Wave" of feminist literature, will give a reading from her latest work at 7:30 p.m. on Monday, March 1.

Calisher's presentation will take place in the Lecture Room of the Library Auditorium. The event is free and open to the public.

Calisher's work has been praised for its powerful depic­tions of women's experiences and struggles. Her novels, short stories, and essays have explored themes of gender, identity, and sexuality with a depth that has earned her a place in the pantheon of contemporary literature.

In her work, Calisher often explores the complex relationships between women and their families, friends, and lovers. Her stories often feature strong, complex women who are forced to navigate a world that is often hostile and unwel­come to their experiences.

The event will include a Q&A session with Calisher, and copies of her works will be available for purchase. Attendees are encouraged to read her work beforehand to fully appreciate her unique style and voice.

Don't miss this opportunity to hear from one of the most influential and important female writers of our time. Mark your calendars and join us for this special event.
Soviet President Chernenko makes first public appearance in 2 months

Associated Press

MOSCOW — Soviet President Konstantin Chernenko, looking frail, broke a two-month absence yesterday with a television appearance in which he was shown casting his vote for deputies to the Parliament of the Russian Republic.

The 73-year-old Soviet leader, who missed a key election speech only two days earlier because of illness, murmured only a few words during the less than two minutes of film shown on a news brief.

Chernenko’s surprise appearance was strictly managed and limited to a handful of Soviet photographers. It contrasted sharply with the election day coverage of Mikhail Gorbachev, who, in the eyes of many Western observers, has emerged as the ruling Politburo’s number two man, along with other Politburo members.

Chernenko and the other 10 members were all nominees for parliamentary seats, among the deputies being elected to parliament in the 15 republics of the Soviet Union.

During his 59-day absence from public, rumors had been intensifying that Chernenko was seriously ill. There was no film of him marking his ballot and he did not take out his customary glasses to look at it. The next sequence was of Chernenko standing over the ballot box and depositing his vote. He was not shown getting up from his chair.

A Western diplomat reached for comment on Chernenko’s reappearance, said: “It must be a very carefully stage-managed performance that they figured they could manage without too much strain on him.”

Chernenko reportedly suffers from emphysema, and his condition had been said to be worsening.

Israelis raid 7 villages in Lebanon

Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon - Israeli armored units raided seven more villages Saturday in occupied southern Lebanon, and Israeli and Lebanese reports said at least 10 people were slain.

It was the fourth day of Israeli strikes in retaliation for guerrilla raids on Israeli forces.

In Tel Aviv, Israeli military sources reported that nine suspected guerrillas were killed and two were wounded in two villages.

Sources with the United Nations command in southern Lebanon said the body of a man who had been shot in the back was found in another village, Tossa, that was not mentioned in the Israeli account.

Lebanese in the area said the Israelis launched their raids after guerrillas attacked an Israeli positions overnight.

The Israeli military sources, who spoke with the condition they not be identified, said the nine people they reported slain were believed to have carried out or were planning attacks on Israeli units.

Lebanese sources reported Israeli raids on seven villages east of Tyre in an area policed by the U.N. peacekeeping force and across the Litani River, just north of the U.N. zone.

The Israeli sources reported only two guerrilla attacks, and said one was on a position of the Israeli-backed “South Lebanon Army” militia. They declined to say if there were any casualties.

According to the Lebanese, all of the guerrilla attacks were on positions near the Israeli army’s new front line along the Litani River. Israeli troops pulled back to the Litani from the previous line along the Awali River, some 15 miles farther north, on Feb. 15 in the first stage of a three-phase withdrawal from south Lebanon. Israel has not given any timetable or details about the next two withdrawal steps.

Since the initial pullback, Israeli soldiers have been attacked more than two dozen times.

In the retaliatory raids, the occupation troops have been entering villages, rounding up all men for questioning and using bulldozers to level houses where they maintain weapons were found.

In addition to the new raids, the Israelis attacked six villages, rounding up all men for questioning and using bulldozers to level houses where they maintain weapons were found.

If you are like me, you don’t quite know what to make of this Browne-Cahill/Student Senate ballot. On the one hand it seems to be the logical alternative to the Senate, but also has been posturing itself as the Brownie-Cahill ticket did not abide by the election rules, however. They are concerned that the Student Senate has turned into and been forty-four, according the HPC members are willing to do anything to cover for each other - including changing their own rules. In contrast, the HPC claims that it is incapable of such behavior. In spite of these claims, however, I’m inclined to be a little suspicious of the HPC for two reasons.

The first is that in handling the Browne-Cahill affair, the Student Senate did not change the rules that were in place before the election. OBUD did its job in making sure that the election rules were obeyed, but once Browne and Cahill were caught, they were acting within the rules when they appealed to the Student Senate, and the Senate was acting within the rules when it voted to re-inslate the Brownie-Cahill candidate.

Similarly, the Senate was not obligated under the rules to exclude any of its members from this vote, to know this vote public, or to hold this vote when Tailback was in town. All these rules were established before the election. All those who have resigned, including the members of OBUD and Tailback, either were aware of or should have been aware of these rules.

If Tailback or OBUD had some problem with them, the time to act was before the election.

The second reason I am suspicious of the HPC is that they seem to be claiming what happened to the Student Senate couldn’t happen to them. What is the warrant for such a claim? The members of both organizations are elected into office by the student body. Given the apathetic attitude of the student body toward student government in general, it is unlikely that a majority of the student body will elect the HPC. Not only this, but since the members of the Student Senate are elected by the student body, the HPC has no more right to question its legitimacy than the senate has of questioning theirs.

In conclusion, it is clear that, in spite of what Tailback and the HPC have said, the Student Senate was not “wimpy” in its handling of the Browne-Cahill ticket; it was in accordance to that familial legislation body that was, no doubt, appalled at your parents. Your parents decided was all your decisions seemed to be overruled by your parents.
Once more, the sophomore class has produced "New Anthologies IX and II." He is a recipient of the Swallow Press New Poetry Series Award for 1970. "Anania's latest work, "The Red Menace," is a novel about American culture and values during the McCarthy era, in the wake of the first atomic blasts in Nagasaki and Hiroshima. It touches upon the American spirit and reveals a nation of great strength and dark fears. Upon reading this new work, Sted. Tukel said, "Michael Anania, an excellent poet, is now a multi-threat. This excellent novel, as timely as the razor's edge on which we live, is a natural."

Mary Gordon accomplished just such a feat with her first novel, "Final Payments." In this novel, Gordon deals with one woman's attempt to find a new life for herself after her father's death. She dramatically describes how this woman's search is hampered by guilt, which leads to a self-destructive habit of suicide. She also poignantly captures her character's emotions and ideas while writing about morally complex situations. "Final Payments" was greeted with much enthusiasm, as it announced the appearance of an important writer who contemplates existential topics of religion and feminism. Born in 1949 in Far Rockaway, New York, Gordon was raised in a strong Catholic setting, which still greatly influences her writing. She graduated from Barnard College of Columbia University and received her M.A. in the writing program at the University of Iowa. She published the collection of "Final Payments" in 1978 and has continued to build her literary reputation by writing short stories and critical essays and publishing a second novel, "The Company of Wolves," in 1980. Her awaited third novel is due out this spring.

Jon Silkin, poet, critic and the editor and publisher of the poetry quarterly "Stand," has established himself as one of England's most distinguished living poets. Born in London in 1930, he committed himself to poetry at an early age. His poetry reflects his wide-ranging experiences. Silkin's first publication, "The Peacable Kingdom," was published in 1954; it has been described as "the finest first volume of poetry written by a living English poet." Since then, he has continually developed and reformulated his poetry. Silkin expresses the relationships between life's positive and negative forces. He calls us to show care and concern, and often launders a loss of value. Silkin writes, "The notion is that order more or less has existed since God created the universe. Well, it's clearly non-sense... There clearly is a great deal of conflict, stress, and chaos, and... the good poet has to create a sense out of which the clarity is emerging. How on earth does one create that? Recreate it and give it value, which is another problem." Silkin's poetry includes The "Re-ordering of the Stones," "Nature with Man," "Ananna Grass," "The Little Time-Keeper," and "Psalms with Spots."

Howard Nemerov

Howard Nemerov was born in New York City and is a graduate of Harvard University. Nemerov currently is the Multnomah University Professor of English at Washington University in St. Louis. Nemerov has published extensive works of verse, fiction, and non-fiction. He is best known to his readers through his poetry. His works vary stylistically, but share simplicity, clarity, and a responsiveness to the times. He often displays a blunt sense of humor that reveals sharp insight into the ordinary. Nemerov is able to vary his tone of voice and subject matter to produce many more modes of writing than are usually available to writers, even in a long career. Nemerov was elected to the American Academy of Arts and Letters in 1976, and in 1978 received both the National Book Award and the Pulitzer Prize for "The Collected Poems of Howard Nemerov." He was also the Consultant in Poetry to the Library of Congress in 1963, and among many other awards and fellowships, he holds honorary degrees from ten universities. Some of his other works include "Guide to the Ruins," "Mirrors and Windows," "Stories, Fables and other Diversions," and most recently, "Inside the Onion."

John Irving

Novelist John Irving has been acclaimed as one of the few writers who is able to bridge the gap between popular and serious American fiction. Irving's style is humorous and always entertaining; nevertheless, a deeper meaning often emerges through the humor. Irving uses this humor to satirize life and its hypocrisy and to call attention to the serious issues which confront his characters. Irving's works are characterized by autobiographical detail and a unique mix of the bizarre with the ordinary. His first novel, "Setting Free the Bears," received considerable critical attention. The novel, which describes the elaborate scheme of two young Austrians to free the animals in Vienna's Heitzinger Zoo as a protest against a return of fascism, touches on themes of freedom, responsibility, rebellion, and restraint. Irving was born in Exeter, New Hampshire, in 1942. After graduating from Exeter Academy, he continued his education at the University of Iowa and took his M.F.A. degree in 1967. Irving now resides in New York City and eastern Long Island. His sixth novel, "The Cider House Rules," will be published in June.

Strange days indeed

Dearly beloved, we are gathered here today to watch this thing called a movie.

A fairly interesting concept, a movie, and it can go on forever (in particular if you happen to be taking in a viewing of "Heaven's Gate" or "Star Trek III: The Search for Spock"), and that's a mighty long time, but Sir Obnoxious is here to tell you:

There's something else:

Being obnoxious.

A world of never-ending tactlessness where, a annoying ones, you can always cause a healthy amount of grief, day or night.

So when you call up your friends in Beverly Hills (which, incidentally, happens to be where the major portion of Sir Obnoxious' legion of acquaintances make their home), instead of burdening them with a long, long, boring monologue of a movie you saw last night, tell them about all the connotations you caused with a couple of careless, caustic remarks.

Because in a crowded movie theater, the opportunities for obnoxiousness are endless. In fact, when you ponder it awhile, the opportunities for endurances are obnoxious, too. At least when Sir Obnoxious ponders it.

As this particular Sir Obnoxious will pause for a guitar solo, followed by the push-push-pull-pull rhythm of a synthesizer.

Ahem. And now, in the interests of promoting rudeness, let us proceed with the subject at hand. Sir Obnoxious happened to wander into a certain showing of a certain movie on a certain campus this weekend, although he declines to mention which particular one in the interest of protecting the identities of his cohorts, whether they are aware of it or not, and they're probably not.

And Sir Obnoxious was pleased with what he witnessed.

Such obnoxious behavior rarely has been so rampant in a limited space. It was everywhere. Those attending the film got a free, first-class seminar from some of the best, as far as Sir Obnoxious is concerned. Sir Obnoxious cannot find the correct terminology with which to give a truly fair account of the extent to which this event was out of control.

The movie was heavy-laden with music, and Sir Obnoxious could not help but grin as many members of the audience sang along, because Sir Obnoxious has done that sort of thing before and he knows how much it annoys those who have not seen the movie.

And while the obnoxiousness continued, as not only did they sing along with the music, but also spoke along with the dialogue. Sir Obnoxious was practically jumping out of his seat, and if he had been level-headed enough at the time to realize how rude it would have been, he would have been.

Such rudeness stirred Sir Obnoxious' heart to no end. He could just imagine the obnoxious thoughts flashing through these people's minds. Oh, I love this movie so much! I love this music!

Oh, it just makes me want to sing! Oh, I love it! Oh, I guess I'm really annoying that guy and his date in front of me but I don't care! Oh, I love this movie! I bet that everyone will be so impressed that I know all the lyrics to all the songs and all the words to the movie - I know I'm impressed! Oh, I love it! Oh!

So obnoxious.

It is not often that Sir Obnoxious learns something, because he knows almost everything, but on this night he picked up more than a few pointers. Besides the nonfolly mentioned already, things were thrown at the screen as well. Beer cans were left strewn about the floor. Fi obnoxious exteriors. These methods simply must be used again. Sir Obnoxious commends these few boors who had the proverbial guts to be self-centered instead of worrying about that wimpy care-for-others, be-considerate scene.

Live and let die, Sir Obnoxious always says:

Your Majesty Sir Obnoxious:

Chivalry is dead. Nuke whoels. The Chicago Cubs are geeks. I read your columns all the time, and it appears that ever since your overbearing arrival onto the scene, there has been a rash of rudeness which has spread across the nation as your fame increases. So popular has the new fad become that I propose the following: a weekly award honoring those who have shown the greatest flair for the art of obnoxiousness. What do you think, oh? Kill Mr. Rogers. Mary Lou Retton has bad teeth.

A Matter of Everything

O Annoying One:

Although you are to be commended for your wonderful idea, it is by no means an original one, for Sir Obnoxious secretly has been keeping a weekly tally of such obnoxious behavior. The Medal of Tactlessness has gone in the past to such infamous characters as Steve Perry, Woody Hayes, Billy Martin, Mrs. George Bush and Mary Derby Tabb Fawcett Slaney or whatever her name is now. This week's medal is undeniably awarded to none other than Indiana basketball coach Bobby. "You can call me Bob." Knight, who, in a fit of rage, screamed a few obscenities and hurled a chair across the court as the free throw entitled the opposing team due to Knight's technical foul was being shot. Incalculable, they said, but hey, it was probably an extremely bad call. Congratulations on a job well done, Bob.

season, and 5-6 in the conference. It appeared for a while, however, that the Lady Blue Devils had the greatest chance for victory, as they used an aggressive defense and tenacious rebounding in the second half to stay close to the Irish despite the 12-point tie the score at 43 with 10:12 left on the clock.

"Playing DePaul is always difficult," said Irish head coach Mary Beth Schuerth. "They are hungry players who always play hard.

DePaul's 10-2 record earned Tracy Manuel scored 19 points and pulled down 15 rebounds, most of them in the second stanza, to anchor a strong inside game that kept the score close. Teammate Sally Anderson, a 5-5 sophomore guard, also contributed 19 points to the cause, hitting several key outside shots in the first half of action.

In the second half the Irish jumped out to a 12-5 lead six minutes into the game on a Mary Gavin jump shot over the DePaul zone. The Irish, however, quickly got into foul trouble, and the DePaul bench was able to get back in the contest as they hit five of the final five minutes of the bench with two foul南京s. Nevertheless, the Irish were able to stay in a slim 52-50 lead to the locker room.

Also troublesome for the Irish in the first twenty minutes of action was the varying, attacking defenses employed by first-year DePaul coach Jim Timme.

"In the first half they changed up their defense a little," said D'Simandasi. "We were a bit overthrown by their aggressiveness, but we made some changes at halftime, and they made a difference."

In the middle of it all shone two Notre Dame stars Lynn Ezell and Mary Beth Schuerth. Ezell took advantage of a seven-inch height difference over DePaul's Anderson to score 10 points in the first half, while Schuerth registered eight points and 10 rebounds to stuff DePaul's center.

Notre Dame's Trena Keys, quiet in the first half of play, came alive in the second half behind, hitting two free throws, a layup, and a 15 footer from the baseline, to move the Irish lead to 45-35 with 11:15 left to play.

After a basket by DePaul's Anderson it moved 43-39, another Blue Demon guard, 5-0 freshman Andrea Morgan stole the ball from Notre Dame's Gavin and converted the layup, moving it 43-41. She followed that effort with an offensive rebound, and another lay up to tie the score for the first time since the game's early moments.

Meanwhile, D'Simandasi's often-employed bench was quiet, only senior guard Laura Dougherty saw action. This was especially surprising in that the five Irish players who had up 13 turnovers in the half which helped give DePaul its chances.

We didn't have to go to the bench, explained coach Schuerth. "We had good matchups the way they lined up for us.

The aggressive Blue Demons committed 11 turnovers of their own in the first half and in the process of rallying, found themselves in early foul trouble. The Irish were able to capitalize, hitting 11-16 of the free throws.

The effective foul shooting, and the solid play of Keys (20 points, 10 rebounds) and Anderson (17 points, 6 rebounds), and the Irish switched to nine men after DePaul established the tie.

"It was a great win," said Schuerth, "we were revenge for the loss they handed us," said Ezell, the star of the game in the crowd's eye because of her heroics at the free-throw line at the end of the game. "They were keying on Trena and, at times, no one came on to me, so I shot it.

For the "big gulp ... I was glad to help out."

of the fighting Illini, who came into the Saturday morning affair at 18:1. "They've got some people here that would be starters on any other team that I know of, and they'd certainly be starters on mine." Leading the way to victory for the Irish was the Irish sabre squad which finished at 154-35 (.815) for the year. The saber men went 9-0 against the Illini and 6-3 against a strong Tartan squad. "Our saber men are fencing up a storm," said DeCicco. "There's nobody in the entire Midwest, as a team, that could touch them. There was nobody in the East, that could touch them either with the possible exception of Pennsylvania." Heading the onslaught by the Irish sabre squad was senior captain Mike Janis. Janis went 18-1 on the season with a 1985-86 record of 42-3. His 42 victories topped the team and propelled him into third place on the all-time Irish list with 157 wins against only 27 losses in four seasons.
Juniors Don Johnson and John Ed wards were also strong going from the No. 2 and No. 3 spots, Johnson went 10-2 (.833) and Edwards went 11-1 (25-5). Despite a pulled stomach muscle, junior Tony Con soli went 3-0 (.333), and freshman Geoffrey Ross finished up his rookie season at 4-1 (.800). A remarkable 4-0 weekend (18-2 on the year).
An improved 1985 epee squad finished up a rather good year at 151-30 (.813). The No. 4 spot was senior captain Andy Quaranti who was 8-3 for the weekend action. His 35-6 season record propelled him into eighth place on the all-time Irish list with a four-year record of 133-23.
Going from the second spot for the Irish was junior transfer Chris tian Scherpe. Scherpe, who came to the Irish from Cal-State Northridge after that school disbanded its fencing program last year, compiled a 34-8 season record with a 9-3 weekend performance. "Notre Dame has been very lucky to recruit Scherpe," said Etienne Blanch, defending national champ in the epee from Wayne State, who went 20-0 on the year. "He's a very good fencer, and so they are a better team than they were last year." Junior Mike Gostigian, who returned to the Irish squad after a one-year layoff, went 8-4 to boost him to a 16-6 mark on the year. Gosti gian was especially impressive against Wayne State as he was the only Irish fencer to notch two wins against the Tartans, going 2-1 and losing only to Blanch.
Junior Brian St. Clair went 4-0 to finish at an impressive 21-4, and sophomore Tim Vaughan proved to be the only unbeaten fencer on the team as he finished at 14.0 for the year.
In the foil, defending national champions Charles Higgins-Coulthard was 9-1 on the weekend to go an impressive 33-2 on the year. In two years, the sophomore has compiled a 78-8 record. His second loss of the year came at the hands of Wayne State junior Stephan Chauvel by a close 5-4 margin.
Junior captain Mike VanderVel den finished with a 35-7 record after declaring a 9-1. And junior Craig Funa also finished up strong going 45-12-311 for the year. Both Vander Vel den and Funaali, who was a strong 2-1 against Wayne State as all three losses for the field were at the hands of Chauvel who finished at 38-7. While the Irish finished their season without a loss and dispelled any skepticism in regards to the strength of their attack, knocking off two top 20 teams in the process, the champs for the second time this year was gratifying in itself, according to DeCicco. "Our 16-11 win was a little bit better than we did at Wayne State (15-12 on Feb. 1) which proves we're capable of staying with a strong team and winning," said DeCicco. "The only disappointment, if you could call it that, is that we didn't have any of our fencers go undefeated against Wayne State - that we didn't have somebody beat their top men."

with David Rivers playing as well as he has been in recent weeks.
"He's going to have their backcourt in order now as they head into the final four games of the season and toward an NCAA tournament bid." But one question lingers. What about Joseph Price? Where does he fit into the picture now?
Price saw plenty of duty on the bench for the majority - all 40 minutes to be exact. It's not exactly like the guy's been playing all that hard himself the last month. He scored a career high 17 points and had three assists a week and a half ago against New Or lean. And a couple weeks earlier, he was perhaps the game's most valuable player when Notre Dame topped UCLA in Pauley Pavilion. Price's big downfall, though, is that Hicks, with the quickness he holds, fits in much better with the transition game the Irish like to run this year. Price is more the outside shooter. He's going to get some playing time in games like Saturday's, if for no other reason than to keep Hicks a breather. This team needs to have a solid core of eight players going into the tournament, which, for all practical purposes, means that it is going to need Joseph Price. Phelps' philoso phy has been to go with the "hot" player, but deep up a bench as the Irish going to have to come tournament. Perhaps for now, though, Notre Dame must simply worry about getting into the 64-team affair as opposed to how well it will do once it gets in. No matter what, the Irish are going to have their hands full each of the next four times they step out onto the court. A sign near the locker room door might sum it up best for this team: "THE TIME IS NOW."

The Notre Dame hockey team ended the 1984-85 season in fine fation spirits, emerging as the top team from the University of Michigan-Dearborn over the weekend. The Irish fell behind 2-0 in the first period on Friday night, then rallied on Saturday to grab a thrilling overtime victory by the same 5-4 score in the season finale.

Notre Dame ended the season with five straight victories and im-

Guards lead Notre Dame to 67-58 win over BYU

Royal's defensive play holds Saarelainen to just 10 points

By MARC RAMIREZ
Sports Writer

For a while it seemed that Saturday's contest between Notre Dame and the Cougars of Brigham Young might be a closer game than it turned out to be.

The Irish toyed around with the idea of being behind early, but after a few rumbles from the ACG (American Coaches Association) defending crowd of 11,545 and a pressure defense that kept the Cougars running around in circles, they rallied to a 27-26 lead and never looked back en route to a 67-58 victory.

Rebounding - or lack thereof - hurt the Irish in the first phase of the game, as the Cougars scored on second and third chances to take leads at 16-10, 18-12 and 22-16.

"We had lapses on rebounding early," admitted Notre Dame head coach Digger Phelps, "but once we settled down and got to our press, we just made BYU play our game." "When Notre Dame extended its defense, we didn't manage it well," said Brigham Young coach Ladell Anderson. "We've struggled on the boards this year, but we've gotten better. They (the Irish) sustained their board play today. They're a great rebounding team."

The Irish tandem of Scott Hicks and David Rivers riddled the BYU defense. Hicks striking inside and Rivers firing from the outside. Hicks went 11 of 14 from the field, but contributed two baskets in Notre Dame's 8-1 run that put the Irish ahead for the first time since the opening minutes of play, 25-22.

BYU's Timo Saarelainen had been averaging 20-25 points until he met Donald Royal in the ACC. The 6-6 Cougar forward was held to just 10 points on 4-of-15 shooting.

"Timo hasn't shot well the last three games," said Anderson. "It seems like he gets pushed, shored and backed, but he gets maybe 20 percent of the calls. But I suppose I'm just seeing it from BYU's standpoint.

With Perry going off the outside, the Cougars were almost exclusively running through Saarelainen and Perry, who normally scores just under four points a game for BYU, canned eight of 14 shots from the field and three-of-four from the line to garner a team-high 19 points, only the third time this season he has scored in double figures.
