National boycott of Upjohn started by Right to Life

By JOHN HEASLY

A nationwide boycott of products manufactured by the Upjohn Com-mpany, based in Kalamazoo, Mich., was started in this state Saturday by Indiana Right to Life. No one knows yet how Upjohn will react.

"There's always been an informal boycott against them (Upjohn), but until now, we never had proof and...we had no business spreading rumors," said Shlons.

"Upjohn has desired for years they were not involved in first trimester abortions," she said.

"We respect their right to boycott," said Dussing. But, Dussing added, Upjohn is not interested in abortion products used outside a "supervised and very strictly controlled medical setting."

Upjohn's rationale for producing abortifacients was expressed in a form letter of 1983:

"Where a woman decides to have an abortion, we believe it is within our ability to deliver a safe and effective medi-cal agent for the procedure, we have a right to protect that choice," Upjohn said.

Upjohn currently has three prod-ucts for second trimester abortions and are "rigtly controlled."

An Tostal chairman aims for fun 'in a business way'

The academic counseling program of the Freshman Year of Studies received rave reviews yesterday, but the Notre Dame Academic Counseling Council issued a thumbs-down to the quality of counseling available to sophomores, Juniors and seniors.

The discussion on counseling lasted 90 minutes - the bulk of this month's meeting on proposed Univity curriculum changes - as council members identified several problems with Notre Dame's academic counseling, such as:

"Peer counseling in choosing a major,

"Inadequate guidance in choosing among course offerings within a major,

"The lack of solid career counseling.

A report by the University Curriculum Committee, which the Academic Council is now charged with approving (related story, page 3), suggested implementing a central University Counseling Office to alleviate problem.

"A problem arises in the sophomore year," the report said. "Many students are not yet settled down in a college and a major, but they are domiciled in a college. Dean's offices are, quite understandably, inward-facing, concerned with courses, requirements, majors, etc., in their respective colleges."

But even students who are "settled" in a college often need a wider spectrum of information," the report adds. "Many students...complain about sophomore counseling and also about all advising being done by an others-occupied and hard-to-see counselors."

During freshman year, students are assigned to a full-time adviser in the Freshman Year of Studies office. Once students enroll in one of the four colleges, they are assigned to a professor or chairman for guidance.

According to a release issued last year by Information Director Richard Conklin, "There was agreement that the University ought to provide some post-freshman year initiative in bringing students together in a broader spectrum of counseling." See ACADEMIC, page 3.

That quickly changed when an audit discovered that one of the 1982 An Tostal organizers had written checks totaling $3,000 to himself. An Tostal now must send its invoices and receipts through Notre Dame's accounting department.

"We don't have outside checkcounting accounts for anything, except some clubs and organizations,

Go back to fiscal 1983, when The Observer, "the independent student newspaper serving Notre Dame and Saint Mary's," lost $7,000. Never mind the style, news coverage, or sports reporting. The bottom line was red-inducing drug for home use," said George Schimming, an Upjohn salesman who quit his job in 1983 because of personal objections to Upjohn's research.

"National Right to Life is a move-denting organization of progesta-donists during the first six weeks of pregnancy," and "there seems to be no doubt that we can expect a continued expansion in this direction and that possibly an important field of fertility control is evolving," where the words Upjohn fertility researcher Edward Souther used to describe his work in an 1985 article, "The nachness movement obtained by Schimming and published in Christi-

The loss was revealed in a Univity audit done after the paper requested an increase in the mandatory student fee which partially funds its operation. The administration required the audit before approving funding for next year, which was approved in the controller's office. Quite a change from the traditional Observer financial arrangement, which Vonderheide said was "run like a business.

Observer officials fought the ruling, saying administration control over Observer money could lead to their use in attempts to mean the administration gets to approve all transaction, keep Observer funds in a University account, require the paper to submit a budget to liaison Father William Beauchamp twice a year, and a later budget could be granted. Besides the loss, the audit uncovered various forms of mismanagement, payroll inaccuracies and an interest-free loan to an employee, according to copy Editor-in-Chief Bob Vonderheide. The administration decided a change in financial management was in order.

A judge yesterday authorized a Manhattan court order for the removal of the Reformation Society from a case to a grand jury. District Attorney Robert Morgenthau said Acting Supreme Court Justice Stephen Crane signed the order after prosecutors presented new evidence in the case. Morgenthau said the case will be presented to a grand jury next week. Morgenthau refused to say what the new evidence was. Janner said in a statement that the move to remand represents a "political move" by Morgenthau because public opinion had shifted away from overreaching support for Greenz. "AP"

A house appropriations subcommittee filed the first shot in the congressional battle over the MX missile yesterday by overwhelmingly rejecting a Senate amendment to spending $1.5 billion to produce another 21 of the long-range nuclear weapons. Critics of the MX, which is to be installed in existing Minuteman missile sites in Nebraska and Montana, say it is vulnerable to a first-strike Soviet attack. "AP"

Renewed interest suggests theory: Beats on the road to popularity

Dan McCullough

In addition, Viking Penguin publishers have announced plans to reprint with "Barens of the Beat Generation" William Burroughs during the next five years. Interest in the Beats was generally believed that the Beats' ideas died out during the rise of the Hippie movement in the 1960s. Peace protests and civil rights replaced joy rides and gansters. The defeatist attitudes of the earlier generation as vocalized by Beat poet Gregory Corso's statement about the atomic bomb, "I was bled by hate," was replaced by the free love and pacifist philosophies of the Hippies. The Beats back! According to Weber, the interest revival in the Beats probably has something to do with the 25th anniversary of the publication of "On the Road" (in 1982). This was celebrated with numerous academic events. Another factor was the recent publication of the Kerouac biography "Memory Baby," by Gerald Nicosia. Also, Ginsberg is being recognized as a major American poet. "But maybe," said Weber, "the new interest in the Beats has something to do with a "barest of the times. People are now looking back on that time with a renewed interest."

Neal Cassidy, who was the inspiration for the Moriarty character in "On the Road," and who was a central figure for many of Kerouac's works, resurfaced during the "acid test," psychedelic drug era. He was present on novelist Ken Kesey's cross-country bus/acid trips and was a major character in Tom Wolfe's journal of their adventures, "The Electric Kool-Aid Acid Test." For the Beats, Cassidy embodied the madness and impassiveness that the 1960s brought to the drug reaction to the times. "Songs are still being sung about Cassidy," said Weber. "In that sense, the Beat generation hasn't died at all."

Vote on curriculum report nears

By BOB VONDERHEIDE

Editor-in-Chief

The talking is over, now comes the voting.

The Notre Dame Academic Council ended its initial paragraph-by-paragraph discussion of the University Curriculum Committee report yesterday, and will begin approving the recommendations of the 17-page document at the council's next meeting, April 15.

The curriculum report, issued a year ago, outlines significant restructuring of the 13 required courses in the University core curriculum.

One proposal would require an additional course in fine arts or literature and another in history or social science.

The new curriculum also would extend the time allowed to complete certain requirements and would require a yearlong introductory philosophy course during the sophomore year.

Yesterday's meeting, which closed to the public, focused on the last five pages of the report and a student addendum on the quality of student life.

The bulk of the discussion was about problems in academic counseling beyond the freshman year. (Story, page 1)

Other issues debated included professionalization in undergraduate education, class size and the class withdrawal deadline.

Agreeing with the curriculum report, members of the council warned that "the substitution of perceived career interest for intellectual curiosity in making key educational decisions was threatening the formation of a liberally educated person," according to a release issued last night by Richard Conklin, director of information.

"It was, however, observed that in the case of inter-collegial educational traffic, the least-traveled students were in the Arts and Letters College," Conklin wrote.

Student government Academic Commissioner Bruce Lohman who serves on the council agreed. "You don't see many Arts and Letters students pursuing a liberal education" by also electing for courses in science, business or even engineering.

"You don't think to say liberal education and think only of the liberal arts," Lohman added.

During the meeting, however, Law School Dean David Link said that in comparing the baccalaureate backgrounds of law school applicants, it is apparent that Notre Dame students receive a better liberal education.

The curriculum report does not recommend requiring an additional course in science or business although it does recommend two additional courses in the liberal arts.

The College of Science and the College of Engineering have expressed desire for more science requirements.

The new curriculum would allow students to complete the two-semester natural science requirement until the end of the second year but Lohman disagreed with the proposal, which he said would only affect Arts and Letters students.

"Arts and Letters student should get out of their college and explore (during the freshman year)," Lohman said. "They don't need to have a freer approach by (potentially) taking science out of the first year."

Some council members said large classes were not all together bad and that some professors taught very effectively in a large class. However, the report noted that large classes eliminate personalized instruction and written assignments.

A proposal by the curriculum committee to shorten the class withdrawal period to five weeks was opposed by student representatives. Freshman Year and ROTC.

Lohman said the proposal would put too much pressure on students to judge the merits of a class based on the first test.

serious and fruitful conversation with professors about education aspirations.

Conklin's release said, "There was no agreement about whether this was better done by incorporating the counseling responsibility among many professors, some of whom may not have the personality for it, or having fewer persons do it on almost a full-time basis."

Dean of Freshman Year Emil Hofman noted that through the years "no mechanism that works" has been found to assure an ideal counseling relationship develops between all students and at least some professors.

Student representatives who sit on the Academic Council reported "overwhelmingly positive student response to the Counseling Office," according to Conklin. But student government Academic Commissioner Bruce Lohman added last night that students did not want counseling within the departments eliminated.

"There is a need for a University Counseling Office," Lohman said in December to Father Edward Malloy, chairman of the University Curriculum Committee. "A reasonable ratio of advisers to advisee should be maintained in all departments. This problem of advising ratio is only intensified by the University's stress on large classes."

U.S. Soviets begin talks arms talks in Geneva

Associated Press

GENEVA, Switzerland - The United States and the Soviet Union began high-level nuclear talks yesterday, with the chief Soviet delegate making it clear that he had received no new instructions from Nikolai Khadzhegov, who died four days before taking over from Khrushchev.

President Konstantin Chernenko died Sunday. But Victor Karpov, the leader of the Soviet delegation here in Geneva talks, told reporters Gorbachev "presided over the meeting of the negotiators" earlier this week.

As talks started yesterday, the Soviet side strengthened an appeal made by Chernenko to Western leaders during his funeral service last week: "We are a people who want peace," the Soviet leader had said. "Let's work for peace." But the West had rejected Chernenko's plea for a "world without war." The West wanted the talks to result in something concrete, such as an agreement to limit strategic armaments.

HPC plans for end of MS drive feature ice cream, baseball events

By JOHN WALTERS News Staff

The Hall Presidents' Council is appealing to two old American favorites for the final week of the multiple sclerosis drive: baseball and ice cream.

During last night's HPC meeting, the council discussed bringing the MS Drive to a successful conclusion in two academic weeks. For its part, the HPC will sponsor a raffle during the final week of the drive, March 25 to 31. "Our goal is to sell approximately 1,500 tickets, which means about 50 percent of the student population," said HPC chairman Chris Tayback.

The grand prize is a baseball fan's heaven: tickets for the winner and 11 friends to see the Chicago Cubs in action on April 13. The package includes transportation to Wrigley Field, dinner at the game, and a night on Rush Street to cap off the day at the bullgams.

Each ball will also donate two prizes to the raffle, so a total of 50 prizes will be awarded. Tickets are a dollar apiece and go on sale immediately after break, according to Debbie Doherty, Lewiss hall president.

To appeal to your sweet tooth and to the MS Drive, a week for MS at Chris Ice Cream is present underway. For each dollar spent, Chris will donate a percentage to MS ice cream lovers should give the name of their dorm because the dorm buying the most ice cream receives a free ice cream party, said Tayback.

The HPC also discussed three amendments to constitutional proposals that have passed before student senate in recent weeks. According to Duane Lawrence, St. Edward's president and student body vice-president, "The three amendments are almost sure to pass in the senate, then we will be able to write a new constitution."

The amendments concern the Campus Life Council, voting rights for class presidents and changes in the Student Activities Board.

The CLC's role as an advisory board would be expanded while it would retain the same voting capacity in the senate. Increased faculty attendance at next year's CLE meetings is also on the drawing board.

The second amendment concerns the question of whether class presidents will be able to exercise the right to vote in the senate. HPC decided this right would not be extended into the new constitution.

The SAB would fall under the wing of student government. The SAB manager would also become an executive coordinator for the student body president, meaning the president and vice president would select the SAB manager.

Lawrence said this would be a big improvement since the SAB and student government would be guaranteed of working together and not against each other.

Reagan confers with Mubarak; rates Egypt's latest peace proposal

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - President Reagan said yesterday that Egypt's formula to reconcile Middle East peace talks is "a positive contribution" but does not go far enough, and observed that Israel and its Arab neighbors "are still a long way from the negotiating table." After two hours of talks with Reagan, Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak insisted that "a golden opportunity for peace is emerging." The Egyptian leader said a recent agreement between King Hussein of Jordan and Yasser Arafat of the Palestine Liberation Organization for pursuing peace was "a major development that should not be discounted or discarded.

"We cannot afford another missed opportunity for peace, and not during your presidency," Mubarak cautioned.

The Egyptian leader pressed his plea for an $870 million increase in American aid for his country and his plan for the United States to meet with a delegation of Palestinians and Jordanians as a first step toward Israeli-Arab peace talks.

On the occasion of aid, Reagan promised to give a sympathetic hearing. However, an administration official, speaking only on condition of anonymity, said Reagan noted that the United States has budgetary problems of its own.

On the second point, the official said nothing would be gained by a U.S. meeting with a Palestinian-Jordanian panel which the administration supports might be useful to the PLO.

Reagan and Mubarak played down these differences as they read department statements outside the White House diplomatic entrance.

"I believe that no leader is more equipped to play an historic role and fulfill a sacred mission in the Middle

"Desire has chosen you to bring this great nation at a time when a golden opportunity for peace is emerging," Reagan said any negotiators must stay within the framework of United States policy. Mubarak promised to keep 242 which provides both for the retoration of Arab land now occupied by Israel and the recognition of Isrel to leave in peace in secure and recognized borders.

The president told Mubarak, "Let us hope that the positive trends that have recently begun in the region will be strengthened and that with Egypt's and Jordan's help, the path to direct negotiations"

The administration official said Mubarak had talked with U.S. talks with a Jordanian-Palestinian delegation "He didn't come with the idea to give it up in Washington," the official said. "The basic question is how do it ad-ances the parties to direct negotiations?"

Budget Committee rejects tax hikes

WASHINGTON - The Senate Budget Committee, rejected tere-day a pair of Democratic-led proposals for major tax increases next year to reduce federal deficits.

The Republican-controlled committee backed by Reagan's Vetoes tax increase even as it continued to defy him on domestic spending, voting to maintain the federal revenue-sharing program for one more year and to freeze pay for civilian and military government employees.

The two votes against raising taxes left the committee in limbo as it completed its first review of the budget in hopes of coming up with a deficit-reduction plan.

While the committee's actions fell the committee rejected a proposal by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, proval.

"There was a lack of business etiquette," said Byrne of past An Tosfinancial system are better and act as protections. All An Tostal workers must fill out requisition forms for ex-approximately four days.

The scandal two years ago which brought these greater controls has caused problems. Byrne said An Tos-

Soviet leaders wanted smooth power change

Associated Press

MOSCOW - Mikhail Gorbachev's assumption of Kremlin power eclipsed the death of his predecessor in a way that underscored both the Soviet style of authoritative leadership and the decisive nature of his rise to the leadership of the Communist Party.

But the exceptionally quick change this time discredited attention sharply from Chernenko and halted the period of official mourning - some 48 hours as compared with four days for Andropov and his predecessor, Leonid Brezhnev.

Chernenko was not publicly named general secretary for three days after Andropov's death was announced.

Many Westerners surmised from the speed of this transition that the decision to name Gorbachev must have been made in advance of Chernenko's death and certainly before Monday.

Westerners were stunned by the rapidity of the announcement that Gorbachev would become general secretary - made while the official news agency Tass and the radio and television were still issuing statements about Chernenko's death.

Gorbachev quickly established himself as a new leader. In his first speech as party chief, he devoted only a few paragraphs to Chernenko, compared to the lengthy discourse Chernenko made on Andropov when he assumed power a year ago.

Yesterday, Soviet armed negotiator Viktor Karpov told reporters in Geneva, where he was opening negotiations with the United States, that Gorbachev had presided over a Politburo meeting Thursday to endorse the Soviet bargaining stand.

Throughout Soviet history, the death of a leader has been reported by the state-owned newspapers with black-bordered front pages bearing large portraits of the deceased.

This time, the national dailies, including the party organ Pravda, devoted most of their front pages to Chernenko.

Diplomats said the phenomenon could be explained in part by desire for a smooth and swift transition after two decades of rule by an aging elite and two years of transition leadership.

But the new general secretary also dominated the official press, taking office so quickly that he crowded the death of Konstantin Chernenko off the front pages.

It was no surprise that the Soviet Union turned to a new generation after a two decades of rule by an aging elite and two years of transition leadership.

In calls to news agencies, the generals said they were members of the Armenian Revolutionary Army and were seeking vengeance for an alleged massacre of Armenians by Turks in 1915.

"We want our lands back and we want the Turkish government to recognize Armenian genocide in 1915," one of the men said in a telephone call broadcast by the Canadian Broadcasting Corp.

Between 1894 and 1915, Turkey allegedly tried to exterminate the Armenians, who say 1.5 million of their people were slain.

Associated Press

OTTAWA - Three Armenian terrorists shot their way into the Turkish Embassy in Ottawa yesterday, killing a security guard and taking 11 people hostage before surrendering to police more than four hours later.

Turkey's ambassador, Cokunt Kirca, 52, suffered multiple fractures when he jumped or was pushed from an embassy window, according to Sg. Garry Rae of the Ottawa police department.

The ambassador's wife and a daughter were among the hostages, all of whom were released unharmed after police used tear gas to negotiate with the gunmen for approximately an hour.

Police said the siege began shortly after 7 a.m. when the gunmen drove a rented truck up to the embassy, a Tudor-style home in a quiet riverside neighborhood just east of downtown.

The gunmen "were confronted by a security guard at that point and shots were exchanged," Rae said. "The front door of the embassy was blown off by an explosive."

Witneses reported hearing a loud explosion, then a burst of approximately 50 to 75 gunshots.

The guard was "in the line of fire," lying outside the embassy's front door during the takeover, Rae said.

Police could not get to him until the siege ended. The name of the guard, who worked for Pinkerton Canada Ltd., was withheld until his family could be notified.

During the siege, police cordoned off about ten square blocks around the embassy. Some 100 city police officers were at the scene. Members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police also were there.

The gunmen were not immediately identified. They were taken to police headquarters for questioning.

A warm welcome awaits students in Sunshine state

Mary Heilman features staff writer

"We're not in Ft. Lauderdale in loco parentis, as jailbirds, or as babysitters. We simply saw an issue and said we could help."

So said Charles Lennon, Executive Director of the Alumni Association of Notre Dame, describing the association's participation in the annual Spring Break festivities in Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

According to Lennon, the Alumni Association instituted its program for Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students in Ft. Lauderdale because it "wanted to give the students an alternative to laying around on the beach all day and drinking beer."

With this concept in mind, Lennon and members of the local alumni clubs in Florida spoke with the Ft. Lauderdale Chamber of Commerce in Sept., 1983. After securing permission form the Chamber of Commerce, Lennon and his staff began to develop the program of activities which proved highly successful in 1984, its incepent year.

All of the services provided last year by the Alumni Hospitality Center, as it is called, were designed, Lennon said, "to provide the students with an Ombudsman-type organization to which they could look for any information, and a location to come to if they wanted to get out of the sun or meet other students from South Bend."

Among the services sponsored by the center was the provision of a Watts line, open from 8:00 a.m. until 9:00 p.m. each day, from which Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students made 2,200 free phone calls in 8 days.

"We got the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's alumni residents of Florida to staff the center and they reported that there was no time that the phone was not empty from 8 a.m. until 9 each night," Lennon commented.

Other Hospitality Center programs operating last year and slated again for this year include:

- A "Student Finder" service, with which a student can register his Florida as well as campus address and phone number and locate other Notre Dame students in Florida.
- A message exchange and information board, featuring scores and game information for Notre Dame and national teams, as well as general announcements concerning trips, Mass schedules and transportation.
- A job interview service coordinated by the alumni clubs in Florida.
- Several educational and recreational trips, including snowboarding expeditions, planned trips to the Everglades and exhibition baseball games, and shopping excursions.
- A "Student Union/Alumni Association" party at the Sheraton Yankee Trader motel as well as Shenanigans throughout the week.
- Mass before departure on Saturday evening with refreshments for the return trip provided afterward.

"We wanted to give the students an alternative to laying around on the beach all day and drinking beer."

Goes for the Hospitality Center's services ran an estimated $5,000 last year, of which about $3,000 was donated by the national Coca-Cola company. "I swore to them substituting a present for them to sponsor the Shenanigans group last year, and they really picked up on the idea. They provided us with 90% of pop, which we distributed to the students last year after the Saturday Mass.

"The Hospitality Center will be providing these services again for Spring Break '85 due to, "the tremendous positive response of last year," Lennon said.

The Notre Dame Alumni Association van and tent will be set up next to Perrado's and the Yankee Trader and open from 8:00 a.m. until 5:00 p.m. Students, coordinated by this year's Student-Alumni Relations Group representative Ed Leonard, will staff the center from 8 until 1, and volunteers from the local alumni club will operate it from 1 until it closes at 9.

Leonard, a sophomore at Notre Dame, encouraged students to take advantage of the Hospitality Center, saying, "The alumni are putting themselves out and it should really be a fun trip if students make use of the van and the information and services available. It's there for their own use."

Lennon added that student response to the alumni participation in the traditional student event was "almost overwhelmingly favorable. Out of the 750 students who made use of our services, only two had negative comments. If we weren't wanted, we wouldn't be going back."

Leonard also noted that the response of Ft. Lauderdale residents to the program was very positive. "We received coverage in several local newspapers and were invited back by everyone we came in contact with. There were no instances of-obnoxious or out-of-line behavior."

This year, students will have an opportunity to evaluate the program upon their return to Notre Dame and Saint Mary's, because "the Alumni Club really wants to do everything it can to ensure a good time for all the students involved in the trip to Florida," Lennon said.

Ouch! today, wrinkles tomorrow

Maria Kronstein features staff writer

With Spring break just around the corner, students planning to spend it in the Sunbelt are already thinking about the real purpose of traveling South — getting that deep, dark, sexy tan.

What they usually don't consider is that their beautiful bronze hue may have an unintended effect — namely, skin damage.

Some of the damage is immediate and obvious, such as burning, redness and blistering. But other harmful effects from the sun are often delayed for 20 years or more. This belated damage includes premature dryness and wrinkling, a yellowish discoloration, a leathery appearance, and skin cancer.

The part of the sun's rays that tan, burn, and damage the skin are the ultraviolet, or UV, rays. There are two types of ultraviolet rays that make up one's skin. The first type are called UV-B rays which are the strongest between the hours of 11:00 a.m., and 5:00 p.m. This type of radiation is the main cause for sunburn, prematurely aged skin, and skin cancer. UV-A radiation can skin slowly, but prolonged exposure to these rays can also lead to skin cancer.

One cannot easily escape the ultraviolet radiation of the sun. The rays reflect off sand, so sitting under a beach umbrella only reduces the exposure by about half. T-shirts, beach robes, and other lightweight clothing allow 20 to 50 percent of the UV rays to pass through. Also, water cannot be used as a shelter from the sun's UV rays, as much as half of the sun's UV radiation can reach the submerged parts of the body.

The more intense the sunlight, the stronger the ultraviolet radiation. That's why one burn much faster in the summer than in the winter; faster at noon than in the morning or late afternoon; faster on a mountain or on the beach; and faster in southern Florida or Hawaii than in New Jersey or Indiana.

The skin pigment, called melanin, is the body's major defense against ultraviolet radiation. Melanin acts as a protective shield because it absorbs and scatters the UV radiation. Many granules of melanin in the top layers of skin make a good, but not perfect, shield against UV rays. People with darker skin produce large amounts of melanin. Little or no melanin is produced in skin which is very pale.

Sunscreens contain chemicals that act as melanin does: absorb or reflect the UV radiation before it can harm the skin. Some of the chemicals filter the burning UV-B rays while most only block out the UV-A radiation. A commonly used chemical in sun screens is para-aminobenzoic acid or PABA. PABA is soluble in water and tends to stain clothing. Substitutes for PABA include chemicals such as Padimate O, camphors, benzophenones, and salicylates.

A sunscreen's ability to protect skin is known as the "Sun Protection Factor," or SPF number. Products usually range from an SPF of 2 to 15. A SPF number indicates the multiple of time it takes for the sun to produce an effect on one's skin. For example, a person who can tolerate 30 minutes of sun would be protected for 60 minutes with a SPF 2 sunscreen and for 4 hours with a SPF 8 sunscreen. Sunscreens with a SPF see SUN page 9

Shade Plus, Jovon Dial-a-Tan, and Es- ter Ladder Invisible Sun Control. Melanin and sunscreens block out some of the sun's harmful rays, but they don't protect one from skin damage. Defense from the sun is cumulative. Over the years, ultraviolet radiation damages the collagen fibers in the skin, allowing it to sag and wrinkle. Moisturizers and lotions may temporarily improve the appearance of the skin, but the damage is irreversible. Premature aged skin may not be very attractive, but it doesn't endanger your health. Melanin is produced by the skin to cause skin cancer, the most common form of cancer in the world.

There are three types of skin cancer: basal-cell cancer and squamous-cell carcinomas have been linked to the exposure of the sun. Fortunately, these types of skin cancer are easily detected and are the most successfully treated of all cancers. According to the National Cancer Institute, more than 500,000 cases of these two types of cancer occur in the United States each year. The third type of skin cancer, malignant melanoma, is much rarer but more serious. There are as few as 7,000 cases a year, but it has a 40 to 50 percent fatality rate. Evidence linking sun exposure to melanoma to sun exposure is weak, but many experts believe that there may be a connection.

The sun's ultraviolet rays cause skin damage and skin cancer. Unfortunately, even with this evidence before them, many students will continue to cover a beautiful tan over spring break. If you are one of these people, remember that today's healthy glow may have some unhealthy effects in the future. Do yourself and your skin a favor, limit the number of hours in the sun and always, always wear a sunscreen.

of 15 or more filter out much so much radiation that they are almost complete sunblocks.

Sunscreen labels usually give directions such as "Reapply often, especially after swimming or exercising." The benefits of a water-resistant sunscreen are quite obvious. Water is not a protection from the ultraviolet rays of the sun. People who have a very fair complexion risk burning while they swim without a sunscreen. Consumer Reports tested 19 water-resistant sunscreens to see if they held up to their claim. The results of the test show that six sunscreens out of four whose labels claim to be water-resistant and two that didn't were highly water-resistant. The winners included: Mmm? What a tan; Alor Sun Fashion Tan; Sundown; Coppertone.

Some things never change, and one of them is that for every article leading off with 'I wish I'd known...' that I write, I also have to put in a quote from my son to stick his IBM Selectric where phototypesetting does not occur.

But I digress. Another thing throughout America's short history which has changed, but something of which few are aware, is the annual obsession with making the trip to the sunny climate of the Everglades State for spring break. Ponce de Leon started the feud in the spring of 1513 when he reported his sun-burnt, splashed on some Coppertone and went waltzing around the one-horse town of 'Land O'Youth.' He never found it, but he did get a pretty good tan, and he couldn't complain about that.

The native Indians finally chased him off, understandably perturbed that not only was this man trespassing on their property, but his light skin was also charmed with their sunshine. Ponce de Leon had taken years to perfect. As he sailed off threatening to complain to the Florida Chamber of Commerce, the Indians yelled obscenities at him, and that is how the particular stretch of surf he cast off came to be known as Some Beach.

But then Alonso Alvarez de Pineda decided to check out the spring break action in 1519, and he returned to Jamaica with tales of awesome women and plentiful souvenirs. A year later Lucas Vazquez de Ayllon came by and de Pineda came by and de Pineda...you get the picture! Then came the famous and notorious 'Land O'Youth.' Ponce de Leon elected to return to see if the Indians were any more hospitable.

He was one of the poorer of spring break experiences—drinking again was taxed for a year more than ten years. But then you saw the price of that roundtrip. SCUD offers the potential of Florida and said, hey guys, we want to be here on this world we'd better declare independence. So the Declaration was drawn up, and John Hancock was still the signature of the day when he penned his name. The now-famous site where this event occurred has come to be known as Independence Day.

When Winfield Scott walked along the beach near Miami in 1849, he was so thoroughly unimpressed with the area that he called that stretch the Boredwalk, but there was one bit of land which thrilled him to no end and he called it (On your work, kids, Peruvian word meaning many scantily-clad women sunning themselves as far as the eye can see). And Scott, always one for precise description, defined the word without hesitation.

It was the Plains Indians whose students first related the concept of spring break in Florida. After taking midterm in Tomahawk Head Carving, Intermediate Hunting and the notorious Advanced Basket Weaving, undergrads at Algonquin University and Chipewa Tech were primed for the fun and frolic that Florida had to offer. Students without transportation could get a Rent-A-Horse for a reasonable rate, and planned their trips weeks in advance. Two months were allotted for Algonquin's spring break, in order to accommodate for the lengthy journey.

Students would then trek to Florida by the hundreds, attracted by posters and billboards—square faces in seductive poses and glory ads sponsored by payote distributors, and every once in a while causing major traffic congestion on Bagdad Road, the passageway to the Atlantic.

The time's major tragedy was the St. Lake smash-up on a road adjacent to the shoreline, an accident survived by the famous Chipewa pega moose, a white horse, Chitina, who proved the survivor. The messy mop-up was one of the few times in the past few years that the Suncoast Beach had experienced such a loss. But I digress.

It's always been the place to vacation...

What Cuomo did before he became famous

In every individual there comes a point when he has accumulated enough experience to make with this University’s adulation of New York State Governor Mario Cuomo. Ever since his visit, many people have been desperately trying to outdo each other in their attempts to hear something from this gentleman. I submit, however, that you Cuomos supporters who think he is the greatest thing to come along since sliced bread might think differently if you knew more about him.

No, don’t put the paper down yet. I’m not going to ramble on about abortion, homosexuality, and birth control. Those charges are the very last thing on my mind. I’m going to tell you about the Mario Cuomo that you non-New Yorkers don’t see. This is because I choose to form my opinions about the man based upon his actions rather than some unfairly unfair judgement, in my opinion.

In 1978, while Cuomo was lieutenant governor of New York, Governor Hugh Carey issued Executive Order 42 in regard to the 100,000 jobs that were in the city at the time. This order provided for the ap- portionment of the funds allotted to the city by the state, a measure of hope to those dying in the field. He hated his service in Vietnam; rather, he carried a mission while that was stationed in that fatal season, care, and the sacraments to those that the next moment would be the last. His who were apprehensive and sometimes afraid he served by his selfless devotion to the pastoral care of troops in the field. He though that would mean more dangers and privations. As a Maryknoll missionary, Father Capodanno gave soldiers the gift of love when they killed the investigation right there, for it could govern the country continued with his service, offered pastoral services only day and night for everyone. The message of Americans and refugees. Another vehicle for breathing new life into the probe. For the next 6 years, federal tax dollars yours as well as mine were funneled to our home county to continue the investigation of the investigation. It is worth noting that at most every single one of those individuals were injured against them and their companies during the investigation. The news is reported as the truth of the matter.

Meanwhile, the State Senate, angered over the focus of the probe refused to allocate any funds to the city for it. Normally, this would have been a matter of great concern to the state legislature and appealed to the federal government. The judge presiding over that case disagreed and denied their pre-trial motions. Father Capodanno gave soldiers the gift of love when they killed the investigation right there, for it could govern the country continued with his service, offered pastoral services only day and night for everyone. In response to some previous written asser- tions that honoring war veterans through celebratory events is a form of propaganda war, I would like to relate the following true story of a hero whose legacy is quite antithetical to the fictions, celluloid figures that were cited as gate allegations of political corruption in both the Republican and Democratic parties. The Republican party, by no means, would have any say in the case of John Dough, a Notre Dame graduate deeply affected by the plight of the people of Vietnam. Dooley, a Notre Dame graduate deeply affected by the plight of the people of Vietnam. As I who am fed, who never yet went hungry for a day, I see a thing of children cried in wrong. Perhaps the empathy and moral courage which inspired him could be expressed through a poem written by Dr. Thomas Dooley, a Notre Dame graduate deeply affected by the plight of the people of Vietnam. For him, as for Vincent Capodanno, authentic love consisted in sharing fully the fate of others, even if poverty, disease or death came as his lot. His concern was as a parent, in the care of the sick. In this case, is part of the message of the Incarnation.

Invasion of a tiny island was a tragic waste of lives

In October 1983, U.S. troops successfully invaded Grenada, a small Caribbean island, to overthrow the Marxist regime of General Maurice Bishop. The U.S. action was justified by the claim that the Grenadian government had received arms from Cuba and that there was a threat to the U.S. mainland. The invasion resulted in the deaths of over 400 people, including 14 U.S. soldiers. Among the casualties were numerous American citizens, including students and servicemen. The invasion was seen as a violation of international law and a tragic waste of human life.

Dear Editor:

Since it took an Army man to explain the Marine Corps language, I would like to speak up for the Army.

The Marine will defend the Army's right to train on Campout. I do not want the official Marine statement that is all over on the radio, which says that the Marine is not worried about the combat readiness of the Army. The Marine is not worried about the combat readiness of the Army. The Marine is worried about the quality of training at ND. The Marine feels that the Army is not prepared to go into battle and win.

I am a Marine and I am a parent. I want my children to be prepared to go into battle and win. I do not want them to be prepared to go into battle and lose. I want them to be prepared to go into battle and win.

John Fedders, who is the third argument in the column, does not represent men's normal treatment of their women. Men love their wives, but they also abuse their wives. The problem of domestic violence is a serious one.

Drunk driving is not at all welcomed in Florida

Dear Editor:

Spring break is almost here and we hope everyone will behave. We are aware of the dangers of drunk driving and drug abuse on college campuses, especially at a well-run campus like Notre Dame. We hope everyone will walk on our beaches, try boarding, and enjoy the good weather. We hope the weather will be sunny.

We appeal to students not to come to Florida to drink and drive. Drugged and drunk driving have caused many needlessly tragic accidents in our country, but we are a remarkable friend to women, all given the limitations of his time and place.

Premature to question Prof. Rice's motives

Dear Editor:

The question is not whether Dr. Rice serves or does not serve. The question is whether Dr. Rice serves. Dr. Rice volunteers his time to the Army, we realize the responsibility of defending the country, but not to convey a threat.

We often hear that Dr. Rice serves to defend the country, but not to convey a threat. We are parents and we look forward to college for our children. We want to see our children graduate from college with the knowledge that they have the responsibility of defending the country, but not to convey a threat.

Sports reporters should be fair to all halls

Dear Editor:

Congratulations on the quality, impartiality and objectivity of Jerry Meeck's "Mormony Gains Revenge over Grace in Lethal." In this world of petty jealousy and appeal to the lowest common denominator, the absence of defiled, meaningless, unblatant claims. His bluntly false report is beyond the point of discussion during the regular season games in no way reveals his belief that jour-

Dr. Rice volunteers his time to the Army, we realize the responsibility of defending the country, but not to convey a threat.

You expect if things are not to our liking. America wants its backyard underdeveloped because we stand to profit from such a state of affairs.

While I agree that it is in our best interest to prevent the Soviet from entrenching themselves in the Caribbean and Latin America, invading a tiny island of no real strategic value and no military capability seems a tragic waste of young Americans lives. Force should be used decisively when our interests are threatened, but not to convey a threat. If security and stability in the world really are prime con-

NEW YORK - Patrick Ewing of Georgetown and Wayman Tisdale of Oklahoma were named to The Associated Press All-America basketball team for the third straight year Monday.

Chris Mullin of St. John's and Keith Lee of Memphis State joined Ewing and Tisdale as unanimous choices for the first team. Also chosen to the first team were Wichita State's Xavier McDaniel, who could be the first Division I player to lead the nation in both scoring and rebounds.

Ewing, Tisdale and Mullin were teammates on the 1984 Olympic gold medal team last summer.

Ewing, a 7-foot, 240-pound senior center, led the Hoyas in both scoring (17.2 ppg), shot blocking and assists.

Tisdale, a 6-9 junior center, led the Sooners to an 18-16 record, including the Big Eight Conference regular season title.

Mullin, a 6-5 senior guard, became the Redmen's leading career scorer, raising his total to 2,350 points with a 19.5 average on 52 percent field goal shooting and 82 percent from the free throw line.

Ewing has totaled 2,660 points, Mullin 2,570 and Tisdale 2,500 in their respective careers.

Joining Keys on the first team was Wichita State's Xavier McDaniel, who could be the first Division I player to lead the nation in both scoring and rebounding.

Ewing was selected to the first team for the third straight season he has blocked 100 or more shots. An intimidating defensive force, Ewing in a sure choice as the National Basketball Association's No. 1 draft choice. He made 66 percent of his shots from the floor this season, raising his career total to 2,096 points. He also grabbed 1,277 rebounds and blocked 479 shots in four seasons.

Tisdale, a 6-9 junior center, led the Sooners to a 28-5 record this season, the Big Eight Conference regular season and tournament champs with a 25.5 scoring average on 57 percent field goal shooting and a 10.2 rebound average. He's the Big Eight's all-time leading scorer with 2,570 points.

Tisdale was expected to be a leading draft pick by the NBA if he passes up his senior season. Tisdale's high game this season was 55 points against Southwest Mississippi (Texas).

Mullin, a 6-5 senior guard, was named to the first team for his senior season.

NFL unveils helmets wired with radios and receivers

Associated Press

PHOENIX, Ariz. - The National Football League's competition committee formally unveiled yesterday a plan to bring the league into the space age by wiring players' helmets with radios and receivers that will help them overcome crowd noise in stadiums.

The new hi-tech transistor helmets, which if approved in voting by the NFL's 28 teams to take place today and tomorrow, will be used in pro football this year by the San Francisco 49ers and Seattle Seahawks, then put into general use in the 1986 regular season.

The helmets were unveiled by the NFL's competition committee, which also presented its "pace of the game" package, a series of rules changes and interpretations designed to make the average NFL game next season 10 minutes shorter than this year's three hours and nine minutes.

Those changes include nothing revolutionary. But they do include a half-dozen minor changes that would keep the game moving more quickly and perhaps cut down on penalties, including the controversial pass interference calls caused by incidental contact.

"The thing we're all concerned about is the cheap calls," said Miami Dolphins Coach Don Shula, who presented the report at a news conference with the committee's chairman, Dallas Cowboys President Tex Schrumpf and Eddie LeBaron, general manager of the Atlanta Falcons.

Fencing team gains strength in foil through Higgins-Coulthard's success

By MICHAEL J. CHMIEL
Sports Writer

Leading the way for the Irish fencing team is a former All-American for the last two years has been sophomore Mike Higgins-Coulthard. In his rookie season, Higgins-Coulthard compiled a 35-2 record while taking his second straight NCAA championship.

He plays his position as a freshman and begins to give you the kinds of results that you would expect from juniors and seniors," said Irish head coach, Mike DeCicco. "He's a good fencer, and he's dedicated his record speaks for itself.

This year, the sophomore has compiled a solid 35-2 record while taking his second straight NCAA Great Lakes Championship in the foil with an 18-1 outing at the event. According to DeCicco, he should be the top seed in the foil in next week's NCAA tourney, and the favorite to repeat as the champ in the weapon.

"He should be one of the top seeds, if not the top seed," commented DeCicco. "If he's the number one seed going into the first round and if he is able to remain there, his chances of winning it will be very good.

Two years ago, Higgins-Coulthard enrolled at Notre Dame because of its strong fencing program and because of the people who preceded him in the program.

"I came here because Mike VanderVelden was here, and he was a good fencer whom I looked up to," said Higgins-Coulthard. "Also, my brother fenced here."

In his rookie year, the Scottsdale, Ariz. native became only the second freshman to achieve all-American status for the Irish. He did so by getting into the final round of the NCAA Tournament, which he eventually won. Last year, he also finished sixth in the United States Junior Olympics and represented the United States in the 1984 World Championship held in the Soviet Union.

Charles Higgins-Coulthard
To this point in his young college career, Higgins-Coulthard has achieved and even surpassed any goals that he had set prior to enrolling at Notre Dame, as his 70- 4 record is among the best on the all-time Irish list. He also feels confident that he will be able to defend his national title in the foil.

"This far, I have been very pleased with what I have done," said the sophomore. "I never expected to do as well as I have done this far."

"If I feel that my chances to win this championship might be a bit better than they were going into last year's tournament because the competition, I don't feel, will be as strong as it was last year," continued Higgins-Coulthard. "The main competition will be those of Wayne State and Penn State and Mike VanderVelden."

Higgins-Coulthard will join VanderVelden (35-5) on the year) in representing the Irish in the foil division of the national tournament. Overall, he strongly believes that the Irish should go into the event and emerge triumphant.

"If we're going to win it sometime in the next few years, we're going to win it this year," commented Higgins-Coulthard. "We're really keyed up for it, and I think that we'll be going in as the odds-on-favorite to win it. If all of us fence up to our potential, I don't think that there'll be any other team to challenge us.

In the foil overall, Higgins-Coulthard believes that the Irish entry will hold its own.

"I'm always ready for a competition like this," said the sophomore. "Mike (VanderVelden) is off and on, but by the way that he's been fencing, I think that he and I will be at the top in the foil division. Mike is really determined to do something this year and so am I.

"For the future, the foil sees the Irish as having continued success in fencing.

"Next year, I feel that we'll have as strong a team as we had this year," said Higgins-Coulthard.

New Brunswick, N.J. native. "He allows you to touch all the bases in coaching. He has a great head coach. He knows that will be the next step. In fact, that's one of the reasons I picked Notre Dame."

"I love you to touch all the bases in coaching. He has a great head coach. He knows that will be the next step. In fact, that's one of the reasons I picked Notre Dame."

"As far as playing for him also, I have a good lot of memories as a player here," continues Brokaw. "The biggest moment was definitely the victory over UCLA in 1974. The magnitude of the game was also very satisfying for me: it came down to those two choices on where to go to school.

Brokaw first came to Notre Dame in 1971. He started at guard for the Phelps-coached Irish a sophomore and junior. He averaged over 17 points per game during each of those years and helped to skip his senior year to join their professional ranks after earning all-America accolades his junior year. He was a first-round selection of the Milwaukee Bucks in 1974 NBA draft. After two years with the Bucks, he spent two more seasons with the Cleveland Cavaliers before returning to the campus to finish work toward his bachelor's degree in sociology, which he received in 1986.

That year he began as a part-time coach under Phelps before being elevated to full-time status less than a year later.

"I guess you could say that I always wanted to coach," the fifth-year assistant says. "My dad used to coach fast-pitch softball, so I grew up with a lot of girls become coaches. They're like a quarterback in football - they have to know what's going on all over the court."

There are a number of things involved in being a player that would tend to help with coaching, Brokaw thinks. "In order to succeed as a player or a coach you have to set goals. Individual goals - by the day, month, and by the season. If you work hard, you can see yourself progress as you meet each one."

He also sees some similarities between this team he coaches and the teams he played on for the Irish.

"The team we have has more than one player to two years, just like we didn't only depend on (Adrian) Dantley and (John) Starnum," Brokaw says. "Whenever Rivers (Ken) Barlow is off, we have other players that can pick up the slack. Brokaw is definitely looking for an opportunity to coach his own team.

"I don't know what I need to know to take that step," he says. "It'll happen eventually.

In the meantime, Brokaw will settle for being in the huddle alongside Jeff Blum, and getting the Irish ready for the NCAA Tournament.

The Far Side

- Gary Larson

- "Hold on there, Dale. We should sort and between tools."
Hello again, everybody!

There are a million stories in the naked city . . . and a million questions to go with them. Here are just a few.

So the man that selected the sites of the Southeast Regional in the cities of South Bend, Indiana and Dayton, Ohio — two cities that were part of the Union Army in the Civil War — is the same man who put the Atlanta Braves in the National League West?

• How did Kentucky, with a 16-12 record, qualify for the NCAA tournament? According to the committee, the Wildcats made it on the "strength of schedule," but try telling that to West Virginia at 20-7 or Marquette at 18-10. I doubt those folks will be very receptive.

• I thought that with a 64-team field, there weren't going to be any "byes." Then, how do you explain Georgetown playing Lehigh in the first round? The Engineers appear as though they will be little more than cannon fodder for the Hoyas.

• Do you think that with a 64-team field, there weren't going to be any "byes." Then, how do you explain Georgetown playing Lehigh in the first round? The Engineers appear as though they will be little more than cannon fodder for the Hoyas. Meanwhile, Manning has done most of his talking on the court, leading the Jayhawks in scoring.

• Despite its geographical proximity, Purdue makes its first visit ever to the ACC this Thursday. The Boilermakers and the Irish were perennial rivals until 1966, when the series was halted. Since then, the two teams have never met, and they won't meet until the Boilermakers and the Irish make it to the third round at Birmingham.

• Purdue Coach Joe Shepperd hasicking his team to take a break from the conference schedule to focus on his team's preparation for the NCAA tournament.

• The visit by the Ohio Bobcats is a return to where it all began for head coach Danny Nee. Nee served his apprenticeship as an assistant to Digger Phelps from 1979-82, and now he has taken his Bobcats to the Mid-American Conference championship.

Nee isn't the only Notre Dame connection on the Ohio squad. The Bobcats' leading scorer is Paul Barlow. If the name sounds familiar, it's because Paul is the younger brother of Notre Dame assistant coach Jim Baron. Jim might put up an argument as to who the better player is, but let there be no doubt that Paul must play well if Ohio is to upset Kansas in the first game tomorrow.

• Speaking of Kansas, the Jayhawks feature two of college basketball's most controversial figures in head coach Larry Brown and freshman sensation Danny Manning. Brown, who has picked up the reputation of a "quasi-coach," made the Lawrence campus the most recent name on his resume which has spanned the NCAA, NBA and ABA. While the Jayhawk coach has his critics, one would do well to remember that he is the only one of John Wooden's successors at UCLA to take the Bruins to the tournament finals.

Although the Notre Dame women's basketball team wasn't one of the 40 teams offered bids for post-season tournament play, the 20-13 Irish are taking in the awards following their Notre Dame Conference championship.

Yesterday, Notre Dame coach Mary DiStanislao was honored at the conference dinner as the conference's coach of the year, two Irish players, Trena Keys and Mary Beth Schuetz, were named to the first team all conference. For more on the awards, see the awards story at right.

Mary Beth Schuetz, and Sandy Bot- ham — were named to the all- conference team. The announcements follow on the heels of Monday's news that Keys had been named as the NorthStar player of the year. For DiStanislao, the award caps off what has been the most successful five years at Notre Dame. Despite increasing the strength of the Irish schedule, she was able to lead the team to its second consecutive championship in three years. It was also Notre Dame's first championship conference. Under DiStanislao, the Irish have won every conference record during the Notre Dame's first two seasons, the best record of any NSC team in that span.

The 20-8 performance also im- presses DiStanislao, who was recorded at Notre Dame to 80-56 record at Notre Dame and Northwestern, she has recorded a 106-90 (.665) mark.

Hello again, everybody!

There are a million stories in the naked city... and a million questions to go with them. Here are just a few.

So the man that selected the sites of the Southeast Regional in the cities of South Bend, Indiana and Dayton, Ohio — two cities that were part of the Union Army in the Civil War - the same man who put the Atlanta Braves in the National League West?

• How did Kentucky, with a 16-12 record, qualify for the NCAA tournament? According to the committee, the Wildcats made it on the "strength of schedule," but try telling that to West Virginia at 20-7 or Marquette at 18-10. I doubt those folks will be very receptive.

• I thought that with a 64-team field, there weren't going to be any "byes." Then, how do you explain Georgetown playing Lehigh in the first round? The Engineers appear as though they will be little more than cannon fodder for the Hoyas.

• Do you think that with a 64-team field, there weren't going to be any "byes." Then, how do you explain Georgetown playing Lehigh in the first round? The Engineers appear as though they will be little more than cannon fodder for the Hoyas. Meanwhile, Manning has done most of his talking on the court, leading the Jayhawks in scoring.

• Despite its geographical proximity, Purdue makes its first visit ever to the ACC this Thursday. The Boilermakers and the Irish were perennial rivals until 1966, when the series was halted. Since then, the two teams have never met, and they won't meet until the Boilermakers and the Irish make it to the third round at Birmingham.
