South Bend police officers will be cracking down on off-campus parties this year, a decision that is being met with mixed reactions among incoming transfer students.

"We're going to be more strict this year," Badics said yesterday at a meeting with Student Body Vice President Duane Lawrence and Housing and Securities Commissioner John Truesel. "This meeting is the break we're giving students," Badics said. "We're doing this so students will know what we're expecting from them and what kinds of penalties they could face."

In order to help them do their job, police are using a decibel meter to measure the noise level at off-campus parties. The decibel meter, which will read a noise level of 60 decibels at 10 a.m. and 7 a.m., a city ordinance defines any noise greater than 55 decibels as a Class C infraction with a maximum $50 fine. Badics said.

"Fifty-five decibels is not very loud," he said. "We measured a party last week which registered 70 decibels."

Officers will not issue tickets, however, until the noise level reaches 65 decibels. Badics added.

If noise from the party exceeds 65 decibels, police will give the party's host approximately 15 minutes to bring the party under control or they will issue the ticket.

"Ninety-nine percent of the time, though, it isn't possible to get the party under control, so it will have to be broken up," he said.

Students at a party that is broken up face a number of charges, according to Badics. Anyone less than 21 years old may be charged with a Class C violation, even if they are not caught drinking, he said.

If a minor is in possession of alcohol, they face a misdemeanor charge which could put them in jail for up to a year, Badics said. "The penalty is usually a fine or a number of community service hours, though," he said.

Regardless of age, those attending such parties also may be charged with misdemeanor disorderly conduct, public intoxication (when they leave the host's property), and trespassing (if they refuse to leave after the host has told them to), Badics added.

"We are asking all students who are going to host off-campus parties to call us at the east sector substation (substation) and tell us the date, location and hours of the party," said Lt. Norval Williams. "That way we can tell them what is expected in terms of conduct, noise levels and clean-up."

Williams said calling the substation would eliminate confusion if the party is broken up.

"Sometimes when we come to a party and issue a warning to break up the party, the host does not even see us because of the crowds. So then the host doesn't try to break anything up and the party is still out of control when we return," Williams said.

"Some students may think we're harassing them, but when there are students creating a disturbance we've got to respond," Badics said. "It's our job."

ND transfer students face unique challenges

By FRANK LIPO

"The prestige and tradition here. The atmosphere. And of course the education," said junior David Jacoby, giving his reasons for his recent transfer to Notre Dame.

These reasons are the sort that many Notre Dame students might give for their decision to attend the University. Yet, transfer students face problems that the average Notre Dame undergraduate student does not confront.

Transfer students are admitted to the University to replace those students who leave Notre Dame. Although this rate of attrition is low compared to many other universities, it is still substantial enough to make the acceptance of transfer students a necessity for financial reasons, according to Michelle Thomas, admissions counselor at the University.

"Enrollment and budget are extremely linked," said Thomas. Two major problems which transfer students face are housing problems and problems in receiving financial aid, according to Thomas.

When transfer students are accepted into the University, they are sent a packet of off-campus housing information by the off-campus housing office. They are not promised residence life to request a position on the on-campus housing waiting list.

Because freshmen, 3/2 engineers (students who study at a liberal arts college for three years and then finish the last two as a Notre Dame engineer), and those returning from abroad are put at the top of the list, transfers who want on-campus housing see TRANSFERS, page 5.

Look for barbershop, laundromat in LaFortune addition - next year

By CINDY RAUCKHORST

The renovation of LaFortune Student Center is underway, as shown by the gaping hole on the building's east side.

Demolition of a portion of the structure was completed this summer, said Don Dedrick, director of the physical plant. Construction of the new facilities will continue until completion in early September of 1986, he said.

Some inconvenience and temporary relocations will be part of the renovation, said Joni Neal, director of student activities. In an interview last April, Neal said the improved facility would be worth the wait.

"We're trying to keep inconvenience for the students to a minimum," said Virgil Magerfenfisch, vice-president of architecture for Cale Associates, the firm handling the renovation.

"Most of the building will be able to be occupied throughout the construction," he said.

The third floor has been designated the student media center, where offices of the Dome, Scholar's, the Juggler and The Observer will be located. The University's AM radio station, WVFI, will move to LaFortune from its current studio in O'Shaughnessy Hall.

Look familiar? If not, it will. The irresistible line at the bookstore showed up on cue yesterday, with first-day students "amused" to get started on the semester's assignments. Look for continued heavy inconvenience today, tapering to scattered long lines later this week.

South Bend offers more than ethanol and boredom

Now that classes have finally begun, students will soon immerse themselves in the books that are now quickly disappearing from the bookstores shelves.

But as studies get more intense and classes surpass the passing-out-of-the-syllabus stage, Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students will undoubtedly begin to look for ways to blow off steam.

Looking around, however, the untrained observer could become frustrated with the lack of any real entertainment options in the South Bend area. It almost appears as if greater South Bend metropolitan area is a cultural and entertainment wasteland.

Nothing could be farther from the truth.

Like anything worthwhile, the happening scene in South Bend has to be sought out. To the ambitious entertainment bound, the city can be a better place to have fun than a lot of the college towns your friends keep bragging about - but only if you know where to look.

First, film is more than what forms on your teeth when you sleep in South Bend. On the Notre Dame campus alone, the excellent Snite Film series features both classic and contemporary films in the luxurious theatre in the basement level of the Snite Museum of Art. The Student Activities Board already has an impressive slate of movies waiting to be projected upon the screen in the Engineering Auditorium. Look daily to The Observer for titles and times.

Off-campus, the River Park Theatre in Mishawaka is continuing its River Park Classics series of off-beat and worthwhile films. Last semester, students flocked to the theatre for the Talking Heads concert film, "Stop Making Sense." This summer, a South African film, called "The Gods Must Be Crazy," about an impromptu, confounded with contemporary society through a misplaced Coca-Cola bottle, was held year for one and a half months.

Starting tomorrow, a controversial and touching documentary about children living on the streets of Portland, Oregon, "Streetwise," opens at the River Park.

Musically, the area also has a lot to offer. For the big name popular artists, the Athletic and Convocation Center is the place to be. The AAC has the very hot Tina Turner booked for this Sunday night. Opening for Mrs. T will be former Eagle Glen Frey.

In downtown South Bend, the Morris Civic Theatre presents the Southwind Express, a local group who play a lot of oldies, the place is a lot of fun and the people are the nicest you ever want to meet. It also features a large wooden dance floor where even Notre Dame students can do-see-doe. The South Bend Tribune usually carries the band names and times.

Jazz is also alive and well at a hopping little joint not more than two miles from the campuses, Duke's Bistro, in the Georgetown Shopping Center just northwest of Notre Dame off Cleveland Road, regularly features big name jazz artists, as well as local jazz and progressive groups.

Another generally unexplored entertainment resource in Chicago, only two hours away by train, 90 minutes by car. The Windy City has so many nightclubs and hot spots that it would be futile to even begin to list them. It should suffice to say that if Chicago doesn't have what you're looking for, then what you're looking for doesn't exist.

From the singles scene of Rush Street to the hard-core punk clubs further north, Chicago has something for everybody. While a Friday night in downtown Chicago Tribune usually has an adequate listing of things to do and see in the city, to really get a well-rounded view of what's going on, one has to pick up a copy of The Reader, the free newspaper that can be found in most record stores around the downtown and the northside areas.

Money from SMC goes to local economy

The University of Notre Dame recently achieved something that "it had a desire to do a long time ago," according to Provost Timothy O'Meara.

By giving faculty the faculty an average annual raise of 9 percent for the last six years, Notre Dame reached a long-range goal of having its faculty salaries rated in the top 20 percent in the country.

According to a survey of 162 institutions by the American Association of University Professors (AAUP), the average 1984-85 salary of a full professor at Notre Dame was $48,000, which ranked 31st in the nation; associate professor $36,400, ranked 11th; assistant professor $29,500, ranked 16th; and instructor $23,000, ranked 2nd.

The average salary for all faculty at Notre Dame was $38,000 and ranked 27th in the nation.

Six years before, the AAUP ranked Notre Dame's salaries for full professor, assistant professor and instructor less expensive and more expensive.

"I think the quality of our faculty is developing and salaries are a fac- tor in that. Not only in terms of who we hire, but also in terms of morale," he said. "Moral has increased in part because of the greater recogni- tion through various ways, including salaries."

O'Meara said equity was another reason salaries were hiked. Equity, he said, means paying faculty enough to support their families and paying higher salaries to people who have an extensive educational back- ground.

Equity also meant narrowing the gap between the lower salaries paid to liberal arts professors compared to those paid to engineering and business professors, O'Meara said.

"In some cases those salaries are higher than the market conditions," he said. "There's still a disparity between the liberal arts and business and engineering, but at least we're trying to narrow the gap."

Salaries were not higher in the 1970s, O'Meara said, because although funds were earmarked for the budget for pay raises, once the time came to give the raises, the funds had gone into something else.

"The system had not developed and managed sufficiently and we weren't sticking to our priorities. "Suppose a certain amount of money had been set aside for raises. It might have been used to create a position," O'Meara explained.

"That's why salaries had gone up as we had anticipated," he said. "We should get a little higher perhaps with the full professors and make some adjustments where necessary, but in essence, we are almost where we should be," O'Meara said.

The system was set up in 1978.

The second classified visitation included weekend retreats such as Freshman Orientation and Commencement.

"Visiting campus for a special event spent an average of $875 per visit," said occasional visitors accounted for.

The first category included occasional trips to campus by friends and relatives of students.

The survey found that individual students spent $7.35 per visit during the 1984-85 school year, and each visitor spent an average of $75 per visit. Thus, occasional visitors ac-

The survey defined two classifications of visitors: occasional visitors and visiting friends, relatives and relatives of students. The survey found that individual students averaged 6.7 visitors during the 1984-85 school year, and each visitor spent an average of $875 per visit. Total spending for visitors to special events was estimated to be $690,529.

Money pointed at the sig- nificance of the survey. "The study shows that College has a substan- tial contributor to the local economy," he said.

Court upholds porno definition

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Tuesday a federal appeals court panel unanimously upheld a lower court ruling that an Indianapolis ordinance defining pornography as a violation of women's civil rights is unconstitutional.

In the decision affirming a Nov. 19, 1984, ruling by U.S. District Judge Sarah Evans Barker, the three-judge panel of the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals agreed the municipal ordinance constituted a violation of free speech rights.

The plaintiffs in the case were six trade associations representing "virtually all the book and magazine publishers and distributors in the country," said their attorney, Burton Joseph.

Indianapolis Mayor William Hud­net III and city officials responsible for enforcement of the ordinance were named as defendants in the case.

"The plaintiffs will make no deci­sion on further appeal until they have received a copy of the decision," said Katherine Watson, one of two defense attorneys.

In writing the opinion for the appeals court panel, Judge George Easterbrook noted the Indianapolis ordinance defined pornography as considerably different from "obscenity," which the U.S. Supreme Court has held is not protected un­der First Amendment guarantees of free speech.

The ordinance "demands atten­tion to particular depictions, not to the work judged as a whole," Eas­terbrook said. "It is irrelevant under the ordinance whether the work has literary, artistic, political, or scient­ific value."

Easterbrook questioned how the Indianapolis ordinance would treat works ranging from James Joyce's "Ulysses" to Homer's "Iliad," both of which, he said, "depict women as submissive objects for conquest and domination."

Under the ordinance, Easterbrook said, speech that was "disapproved" would be unlawful no matter how significant its artistic or political value, while "speech treating women in the approved way... is lawful no matter how sexually ex­plicit."

United States experiences decrease in number of poor

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Yesterday, the government said the United States experienced its first significant decline in poverty in nearly a decade last year, as the improving economy helped 1.8 million Americans climb above the poverty level.

"There was a very significant in­crease in income and decrease in poverty in 1984," said Gordon W. Green Jr., who is in charge of socioeconomic statistics for the Census Bureau.

"Economic recovery and (the reduced level of) inflation are im­portant factors in the continuing decline of poverty," he said.

Green said the national poverty rate declined nearly one percentage point to 14.4 percent, or 33.7 mil­lion people living below the poverty line. The poverty rate in 1983 was 15.5 percent, or 35.5 million people.

The poverty threshold for an ur­ban family of four was $10,069 last year, up from $10,178 a year earlier. The rate is slightly lower for rural families.

The drop in poverty had been widely anticipated, and even critics of the Reagan administration had ex­pected a significant improvement.

The U.S. conference of Mayors said in a statement that it was pleased the report "shows some progress in some areas." But it added that poverty "continues at an unac­ceptably high rate."

Although there were small declines in poverty in 1977 and 1978, before the sharp increases of the last few years began, the last sig­nificant drop came between 1975 and 1976 when poverty dropped from 12.3 percent to 11.8 percent, according to bureau records.

At the same time the poverty rate was falling, median family income was growing by 3.3 percent to $26,430 last year. That was the second annual increase, following some years of declining real income in the face of inflation and recession.

That income figure is nearly the same as the median family income of $26,480 reported for 1975, but Green cautioned against defining this as a stagnant income level.

Although the constant dollar figure is similar, he said, there have been significant changes in families over the same period. The result is more families headed by females without husbands, and more single people living alone, meaning that families are smaller on average, with fewer people sharing the same amount of money.

Other major findings in the new report included:

• the poverty rate among people aged 65 and over dropped sharply, falling 1.8 percentage points to 12.4 percent last year.

• the poverty rate in one-earner families dropped slightly from 16.3 percent to 16.2 percent.

• the poverty rate for whites fell from 12.2 percent to 11.5 percent, while it fell from 35.7 per­cent to 33.8 percent for blacks.

Among Hispanics, the rate was 33.2 percent last year, down from 38.7 percent a year earlier.

According to bureau records, the poverty rate among people aged 65 and over dropped sharply last year.

In the South and the West, while there were no significant changes in the Northeast and Midwest.

The rate for the South in 1984 was 16.2 percent, compared with 17.2 percent in 1983. For the West it was 13.1 percent in 1984, down from 14.7 percent.

The Northeast had a 15.2 percent poverty rate in 1984, compared with 13.4 percent in 1983 and the Midwest had 14.1 percent last year, compared with 14.6 percent in 1983.

Marine killers are dead: Duarte

Associated Press

SAN SALVADOR - Three leftist guerrillas suspected of participating in a cafe massacre in which four U.S. marines were killed have been arrested and a fourth is dead, President Jose Napoleon Duarte said yesterday.

At a news conference, Duarte read a letter he sent to President Reagan advising him of the arrests. He said other guerrillas who took part in the June 19 killings of 13 people at two sidewalk cafes in San Salvador have been identified and are being sought.

A rebel group, the Central American Revolutionary Workers’ Party, claimed responsibility for the night-time attack on the cafes in the Zona Rosa entertainment district.

But the military, Duarte said, were the only people to be held accountable, funding their attack with money from the CIA.

Four people were killed and eight wounded in the attack.

It is unclear if the arrests are linked to the attack.

Duarte’s letter to Reagan praised the U.S. government for providing “efficient and disinterested aid” to Salvadoran authorities in tracking down the suspects.

The letter said that Duarte’s government is committed to the peace process and is working to bring about a political solution to the civil war.

The letter also thanked the United States for its support in the fight against terrorism.

Duarte said he hopes the arrests will help bring about a more peaceful future for the country.

The letter ended with a request for continued U.S. assistance.

Tranfers

housed once are faced with a long wait.

"At the very beginning it wasn’t too bad," said Maureen McDonnell, who transferred last fall from James Madison University. But, she said, life off campus often is difficult for a transfer because of the residential character of Notre Dame.

"It is so hard to meet people off campus. I felt like an outcast," McDonnell said. "They (many transfers) feel like they are just taking classes here.

"Living off campus isn’t bad at all, it is just when you live off and don’t know anybody," said McDonnell.

Although McDonnell received on-campus housing this semester, she said the wait was difficult. "It’s ridiculous to have someone wait a year or more before getting on campus," she said. "I felt like they were giving me the runaround," she said, explaining her number on the waiting list fluctuated upward, not downward.

Other students accept the holding pattern, although hoping for a change.

"I’d like to get on campus but you have to live with the inconvenience," said Pat Butler, a transfer this semester from Holy Cross Junior College.

Another problem is that transfer students are accepted late; after the majority of the University’s financial aid already has been distributed. University policy dictates that academic scholarships only be given to transfers after a year at Notre Dame.

Transfers do not face these problems entirely without student support.

Transfer orientation, like campus-wide freshman orientation, is a yearly event at Notre Dame. The transfer co-chairman, Mark Fisher and Mark Kasner, will plan such events as a welcome Mass, a mass meeting and a non-alcoholic party at Senior Bar.

"The purpose of transfer orientation is to get the students to meet each other," said Rabogliatti, himself a transfer student.

It is necessary that transfer students make an extra effort to be out-going, said Rabogliatti. "It’s very discouraging at first," he said, but the extra effort is necessary to overcome cliques in the dorms.

Although the official orientation is over, Rabogliatti said the Adopt-a-Transfer program is a good way for transfers to become a part of campus life.

The program is in its second year and Rabogliatti said he anticipates a greater turnout than last year. A representative from each dorm will attempt to match up interested on-campus students with transfers.

Sept. 7 is the target date to start the program.

The Transfer Club was organized by student government last spring. The club has its own budget, said President Mike Huber, also a transfer student.

Social issues and the need for better information distribution are on the agenda for the club, said Huber. The club will have a booth at Activities Night at Stefallon Center on Sept. 2.

Students are important to ND government

As we sit here getting ready to go out and party with the rest of the season, we just thought we would give our warped idea of what student government is all about. After a year in which student government was destroyed, we promised a fresh approach. Here it is: We do not take ourselves too seriously; only our responsibilities seriously.

We are just students who are trying to make a difference. Student government is only as dis­patched as it let us be in it. If you unsure of your ideas, intelligent criticisms, and stop up your mouth. (Second round here?) We will help you work on your problems, and (we hope you do), then we, in turn, promise to be as quiet as just the butt of all the lunchtime jokes.

Healy & Lawrence

We promise to let you know what we are doing. Chuck Bercer, our newsletter editor-in-chief, is still doing the newsletter. John Healy, our business manager, is still trying to get some announcements. The Observer is the independent newspaper of the University of Notre Dame du Lac and Saint Mary's, to welcome them by inviting the transfers to share lunch, to socialize and assimilate. It is a part of family life.

If anyone should understand the problem of transfer students, the leaders of the administration should. Bill Healy, student body president, is a transfer student. Student government should expand its involvement in transfer adjustment. Using existing student government programs, such as Adopt-a-Transfer, student government leaders should send transfers regular bulletins concerning on-campus activities and create events for off-campus students to meet with other students, regardless of their residency. The new Transfer Club, established last spring, is a good idea that student government could make better. The club will need more than the $200 appropriated, and student government should attempt to find a way to provide future funding.

The greatest and the easiest solution to many of the transfer student's problems is for all students, both at Notre Dame and at Saint Mary's, to welcome them by inviting the transfers to share lunch, to socialize and assimilate. It is a part of family life.

Students must remember that Notre Dame may be made of many different segments, but the community only will be whole if it makes the transfers a part of Notre Dame.

ND transfer students are part of family

For the Notre Dame Class of 1989, the welcome wagon has been rolling around the quad for several days now. The new freshman class is full of bright ideas, colorful faces, charming personalities, and more. When the freshmen arrived with their parents, the rectors and their staff were there to welcome them. Father Theodore, University president, and other top administrators greeted the newcomers. The returning students were there to help them unload their cars, unpack their baggage, and decorate their rooms. All was as it should be.

The freshmen, though, are not the only new arrivals on campus. There are approximately 200 transfer students, the welcome was better than in previous years; however, the transfers will have a rough ride ahead of them when the welcome wagon stops rolling.

All transfers must live off campus until housing on campus becomes available. This can take months, even years. Neither the incoming transfers nor the Notre Dame administration know how long it will take to get these newcomers into dorm rooms. Transfer students must wait until all freshmen in study lounges have proper housing. Then transfers who request on-campus housing add their names to a waiting list and wait, and wait and wait.

The administration should clarify and strictly enforce the process by which transfer students receive on-campus housing. Transfer students have complained of fluctuating waiting lists. The process is further complicated because the number of students who leave Notre Dame and thus create on-campus rooms, varies. To wait is to make the transfers a part of Notre Dame.

The greatest and the easiest solution to many of the transfer student's problems is for students, both at Notre Dame and at Saint Mary's, to welcome them by inviting the transfers to share lunch, to socialize and assimilate. It is a part of family life.

 студентs perform to their potential, then we can prove to the administration that we deserve a real voice. Once again, that is up to you. We can only do so much, but with you on our side there is unlimited potential. After all, we are students who will be the "best and the brightest." Now let's prove it in October.

We see the opportunity to go before the Board of Trustees, and present the views of their authors.

Oliver Wendell Holmes, Jr.

Oklahoma rated No. 1 in 1985 AP preseason poll

Auburn second, ND 14th in AP rankings

Associated Press

The Oklahoma Sooners, who were ready to claim the 1984 national championship had they beaten Washington in the Rose Bowl, are the preseason choice to win it all in 1985 while defending champion Brigham Young just made the Top Ten.

In wide-open balloting, with 10 of the 105 Division I-A teams receiving at least one first-place vote, Oklahoma knocked out Auburn, last year's preseason pick in the Associated Press poll, which began in 1936.

Notre Dame was ranked 14th in the poll, which was released late last week.

The Sooners received 23 of 60 first-place votes and 1,090 of a possible 1,200 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters. Auburn received 13 first-place votes and 1,027 points in balloting results announced Saturday night.

The preseason poll also raised the possibility that a team on probation could win the national championship since there are two such teams among the top five. Southern Methodist is third with three first-place votes, California with two first-place votes and 754 points; and 837 points, and Florida, with four firsts and 788 points.

The remaining four first-place votes were split between Illinois, No. 11, and Washington, No. 12.

Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer, whose Sooners finished sixth last year, isn't thrilled to be No. 1 this early, but noted: "we've all got to start somewhere. There are just a lot of unknowns about our team. Illinois is No. 11 in this year's preseason poll, while Washington is No. 12 and LSU No. 13. Trailblazing the No. 14 Irish are Arkansas, Oklahoma State, South Carolina, Penn State, Florida State and UCLA.

Oklahoma head football coach Barry Switzer chats with running back Kurt Johnson during a practice session in Norman, Okla. The Sooners, who were ready to claim the national championship had they beaten the Washington Huskies in last year's Orange Bowl, are the preseason choice to win it all in college football this year, according to a recent Associated Press poll. Notre Dame was ranked 14th in the poll.

Switzer: Tough slate will hurt our chances

Associated Press

NORMAN, Okla. — The Oklahoma Sooners may be rated No. 1 now but Coach Barry Switzer says he wouldn't be surprised to see his club fall down the list.

The reason is not his team. It's the schedule.

"With the late start we've got, you can be fairly assured we'll not have played a game and fall out of the top spots," Switzer says.

Oklahoma doesn't play until Sept. 28 at Minnesota due to a schedule change. The Sooners were originally supposed to open two weeks earlier against third-ranked Southern Methodist, but the game was moved to Dec. 7 for television.

History also says Switzer is right. Since the AP began its preseason poll in 1950, only six teams ranked No. 1 at the start have won the national championship. Three times that team has been Oklahoma, in 1956, 1974 and 1975.

"It just raises the expectations of your fans. It creates so much anticipation and they feel so disappointed when it doesn't happen," Switzer said of being ranked No. 1. "They ought to know that unbeaten seasons just don't happen much any more."

Oklahoma received 23 of 60 first-place votes and 1,090 of a possible 1,200 points in the preseason poll, chosen by sports writers and sportscasters. Second-rated Auburn received 13 first-place votes and 1,027 points in balloting results announced last Saturday night.

The late start means Oklahoma will be able to forego two-a-day drills, something Switzer said will be a plus.

"The players are fresher and you get more out of the practices," he said. "Two-a-days are a tremendous strain on the athletes."

He said, however, that he's worried about the Sooners' early opponents.

"I'm concerned about two games: Minnesota and Kansas State," he said. "I've said those two teams will have more of an advantage on us than Texas. When we play Texas it'll be their third game and our third game.

"But when we play Minnesota it'll be our first game and their third. They're liable to be 2-0 when they play us as Kansas State will have played four games.

Santana’s title defense highlights ACC wrestling

By MIKE CARDINALE
Sports Writer

The spectacular of professional wrestling returned to the ACC last night for the second time this summer in an six-hour card highlighted by the successful WWF International Heavyweight title defense of Tito Santana against Greg "The Hammer" Valentine. In the main event, Santana was cheered on with cries of "Tito!" by a crowd of over 4,000 as he sought to defend the title that he wrested from Valentine in July.

Santana got off to a quick start by applying three successive spinning toe holds that had "The Hammer" reeling. To avoid a quick pin, Valentine was forced to resort to a highly illegal, but usually unforced, choke hold. This was the first turning point in the match, as Valentine then gained the upper hand with a devastating piledriver and the famed figure-four leglock. Spurred on by a screaming crowd, Santana recovered for an inner reserve of strength and fought off six consecutive pin attempts by Valentine. Santana escaped a figure-four leglock and managed to climb out of the ring to regain his senses.

When he returned to the ring, the look of shock determination on Tito's face was too much for Valentine to bear. When "The Hammer" made a last-ditch attempt at a piledriver on the ring apron, Santana reversed the move and pinned Valentine at the 19:13 mark in the match. The champion was confident before the match as he stated that he would not play a defensive role in defending his title.

"The challenger is always in the aggressor in this business," Santana said, "but I won't sit back and let him come at me."

Santana intends to hold on to the belt for as long as he can, and he wants to stay in wrestling "for at least five more years." He feels that quickness is his major asset, and it will enable him to defend his title successfully.

In other World Wide Wrestling Federation action last night, the referee took a beating in the match between "The Polish Power," Ivan Putski and Adrian Adonis. Adonis was punished throughout the match, as Putski seemed to be playing with the veteran wrestler from New York City.

Adonis became frustrated with the crowd's support of Putski, and he decided to vent his frustrations on the helpless referee. After grabbing the ref's rose, Adonis picked him up and bodyslammed across the ring. He was immediately disqualified at the 12:28 mark of the match.

In preliminary matches, James Wells pinned Mike Sharpe in a confrontation match with a shoulder smash off the ropes at the 1:45 mark. A dive bomb off the top rope enabled the Missing Link to pin WWF newcomer Steve Guttenwolf in under eight minutes.

Also, Kong King and Buddy Devon defeated Tony Garcia with his specialty, the Atlantic City Avalanche. Garcia was distracted throughout the match by Buddy's manager, "The Mouth of the South," Jimmy Hart.

After his victory, the 553-pound wrestler from Atlantic City, NJ, grabbed the microphone from the ring announcer and praised WWF World Champion Hulk Hogan.

That's what's going to happen to anybody who gets in the ring with me," shouted Bundy inside a chorus of boos from the crowd.

The final match of the evening was a WWF newcomer The Iron Shark and Nikolai Volkoff against The British Bulldogs. Davey Boy Smith and The Dynamite Kid. Volkoff began the match as he begins every match, by singing the Russian National Anthem.

The annal rendition did not help the anti-American team against the long-time WWF partners. With bearhugs and backbreaker, the team from England trapped the Iron Knight for a few minutes. Davey Boy Smith pinned the Shark's arms. The Dynamite Kid leapt over the rope and administered a flying headbut, stunning the Shark and leading to an easy three-count.

The time of the last match was 10:48. During the conclusion last night, WWF officials announced that the next ACC wrestling card would be held on October 27, although the schedule is yet to be determined.

Sport or entertainment?

Wrestling's popularity a mystery

By DENNIS CORRIGAN
Sports Writer

The lights dim, the music blares, and the crowd screams. Through the spotlight, a well-muscled, blonde-haired man wearing skin tight pants. A typical rock concert, right? Wrong. It's professional wrestling, and it's booming in popularity. Over the course of the past two years, pro wrestling is attracting a dedicated audience with packed houses and huge dollars. The question is: is pro wrestling sport or entertainment, real or a hoax?

Last night, the ACC hosted its second pro card in three months - a World Wrestling Federation tour that attracted 21,000 fans in Montreal on Saturday night, and a crowd of 5,000 fans to the ACC last night. ACC Program Manager Joe Sassano points out the success of this spring's closed circuit television of "Wrestling at Stegan Center as the reason for wrestling at the ACC.

"We originally planned to sell 4,000 tickets to the closed circuit broadcast, but we had to turn twice as many away. At the June match, we had a crowd of about about four to five thousand. If we can tie the same or bigger size tonight, we'll try to schedule it again, providing the audience doesn't get out of hand and try to become the show."""

The guideline force behind the resurgence in pro wrestling's success is Vince McMahon of the World Wrestling Federation. According to Tito Santana, the Intercontinental Champion, McMahon branched out from the east coast, wrestling's traditional stronghold, into a national market. Wrestling shows can be found on many local television stations as well as the now famous Tuesday Night Titans on the USA Sports Network. Locations can be seen on WSBT channel 22 at 10:30 on Saturday night.

"Championship wrestling has been on since April. At first the show didn't have good ratings, but when it found its audience, it took off," says Skip Gassensmith, Program Director at WSBT. According to Gassensmith in the past two years, pro wrestling has attracted a 35% increase in the local audience. It's been a traditional stronghold, but we had to turn twice as many away. At the June match, we had a crowd of about about four to five thousand. If we can tie the same or bigger size tonight, we'll try to schedule it again, providing the audience doesn't get out of hand and try to become the show."""

It's wrestling in its purest form, a世界上 most popular sport. The reason for wrestling's increasing popularity is that the WWF went out and spent a lot of money to get the best wrestlers under contract.

The question remains though: is this sport or show business? Santana holds the former view.

"Some guys like Jesse "The Body" Ventura put some show business into it, but to me it's a sport. I don't care about people that say this is fake." But as soon as the announcer said, "and some in our corner," the crowd went wild.

Nate Dame varsity strength and conditioning coach Gary Well, an avowed fanatic, ranks pro wrestlers among the top athletes around. "Even if there is some amount of chicanery involved, these guys need to be in top condition to do some of the things they do. When you consider the age of some of the wrestlers, it's even more incredible."

But what of the fans, what do they think of wrestling? Santana calls wrestling fans the greatest in the world.

"Some nights its really hard to go out there and wrestle but as soon as you walk out and the fan roar, you can do anything." The fans, themselves, add to the excitement at the matches. "We're watching the bad guys, cheering the good guys. Tapes of the fan reactions are shown on TV viewing. They're not common. They don't care that everything they see isn't real."

The bottom line on professional wrestling may be its value as an escape from the pressures and routine of everyday life. While the fans acknowledge that it's not what it seems, they don't care. As Well put it, "Reality isn't always the greatest thing."
The news of Butler's heroism has already reached the inner sanctums of the fighting Irish locker room - a place where the term 'hero' is usually reserved for on-field achievements.

"Butler, everyone was talking about what they did. I just feel a lot better knowing he's going to live," says Butler.

When I walked in after the weekend," says Butler, "everyone was talking about what they did. I just feel a lot better knowing he's going to live."

Newly-constructed pool will serve more than just varsity swim teams

By MICHAEL J. CHMIEL
Sports Writer

The Irish swim team will soon begin practice for its second season. Fortunately for the Irish, their new home will be available to them soon as construction crews are putting the finishing touches on a new Olympic size pool located behind the ACC.

According to Athletic Director and former Swim Coach Dennis Stark, the new natatorium should be completed by the end of October. Depending on the construction progress, Stark is planning for the four-million dollar complex to be available for use by the Notre Dame community just after fall break.

The two-story natatorium will house the Olympic size pool, men's and women's locker rooms, and offices for many of the coaches, according to Stark.

The pool itself will be 50 meters in length and 25 yards wide. It will have high dive and low dive facilities, and will have an outdoor seating area. The pool section will be divided into three smaller ones. "Depending on how you want to set it up," explains Stark, "you could leave it at a 50 meter by 25 yard complex or you could make it a 25 meter by 12.5 yard complex over to one side and have one activity going on at one end, something going on in the middle, and something at the other end. It gives us the flexibility of having more opportunities to do more things at the same time, which we couldn't do before."

While the new pool will provide the community with a vast facility for its use, it will also serve to enhance the quality of the Notre Dame swimming team's pool and space and opportunity for practice. "It will allow us to take in more players and to condition themselves because of the 50-meter aspect."

"I hope this will be a facility that we had trained (for 50-meter events) was between seasons when we would go someplace. The pool will open up an opportunity for additional warm-ups and to train our swimmers."

Daring summer rescue makes ND's
Butler a hero off the football field

By MARTY BURNS
Sports Writer

A quick mind, good instincts, and a great deal of courage have kept Notre Dame linebacker Dave Butler alive and successful on the gridiron for the past two seasons.

But those qualities meant something a whole lot greater to a Louisville family one summer day. Butler was kept alive because of the heroic actions of the junior linebacker over the summer break.

Butler, a 6-3, 223-pounder from Sullivan, Ohio, was returning to South Bend with his girlfriend, Mary Wagner, after attending a debutante ball in Louisville, when he witnessed a chilling one-car accident and decided to use some of his talents to save the injured man's life.

"I was out at Notre Dame for classes and to lift weights, and I went down to Louisville to see my girlfriend for a few days," remembers Butler. "It all happened so fast, I couldn't even remember the details until afterwards."

Butler and his date were travelling along a dark, narrow road outside Louisville when the couple's car went spinning up from behind. While Butler was able to side the vehicle over to one side and have one activity going on at one end, something going on in the middle, and something at the other end. It gives us the flexibility of having more opportunities to do more things at the same time, which we couldn't do before."

Will Faust be walking out or walking tall in '85?

By ERIC SUEUERMANN
Sports Writer

Although many rumors have been circulating about the kickoff times and television coverage of this year's Notre Dame football games, very few of them should be believed. Because of the power of television over college football, very little is known for sure at this point. Since the 1984 Supreme Court decision which forbade the NCAA to contract for the college football television package, each school has been allowed to negotiate television packages for itself.

Because of this deregulation, the union of college football and television now creates many more complications, something which Notre Dame associate sports information director John Hesler."The television guide. He has seen key players repeatedly fall to injuries. He has often been lambasted by the press. Worst of all, he has learned what it is like to lose. Faust has become all the more exasperated at the loss of his first four seasons. Things have not been all that pleasant for the Irish fans, either. They have only won five games in their last eight seasons. But they have been allowed to negotiate television packages for itself.
