140,000 students prolong vacations as teachers strike cross country

Associated Press

CHICAGO - Classes began yesterday for Chicago's 431,000 public school students following a two-day teachers' strike, but walkouts in seven states prolonged summer vacations for 14,000 other students, including 4,000 in Seattle.

In Chicago, the nation's third largest district, teachers and paraprofessionals were relieved and students resigned at the news of a contract settlement. The walkout, which cost students one day of classes, was the third in three years.

A tentative agreement between the Chicago Teachers Union and school board officials came Wednesday after a 30-hour bargaining session mediated by James Reilly, chief of staff for Gov. James Thompson.

The union's House of Delegates suspended a strike pending a Sept. 19 ratification vote on the two-year contract by its 28,000 members and 12,000 non-teaching members of 17 other unions.

The settlement calls for a six percent pay raise in the first year and three percent in the second year. It would increase the average salary of a Chicago teacher to $35,878 from $29,130 this academic year, and to $31,804 next year.

In Seattle, teacher representatives and district officials met informally yesterday in what the union said could be a prelude to a new round of official talks to end the three-day walkout.

"The purpose as we understand it was to be an off-the-record kind of thing, informal and exploratory," said John Cahill, spokesman for the Washington Education Association, a statewide teachers group that is aiding the Seattle Teachers Association.

About 3,700 teachers, substitutes, aides and secretaries went on strike Tuesday, a day before the district's 43,000 students were supposed to have returned to school.

School Board Chairman T.J. Vassar said at a board meeting Wednesday night he was confident new talks could be productive.

Main issues in the dispute were the state-imposed salary limit, class size, lack of extra pay for extra work days, a personal stipend for materials and supplies, and transfer policies for surplus teachers with seniority.

6,000 expected to play game of musical chairs to break world record

The event will be verified through both local judging and media coverage. Father David Tyson, Provost Timothy O'Meara and Registrar Daniel Winceur tentatively have agreed to judge.

All the major networks and wire services have been invited as well as all the media within a 100-mile radius.

"Everyone who's anyone has been invited," said Willis. "An event like this should attract heavy coverage."

When Ohio State broke the record in 1983, "20/20" did a segment about it," he said.

Due to the size of the event, registration of all participants is essential, and has been conducted in the dorms and the dining halls.

The last chance to register will be at Green Field between 3 and 5 p.m. today. At this time, those who already have registered will receive their official game numbers.

"The idea to break a world record was presented to me this summer," said Jim Domagalski, president of the junior class. "We just sat down and came up with the musical chairs idea."

"It originally started as a Class of '87 project, but it became a campus-wide project when we realized the number of people involved," Domagalski said.

As a result, all three upperclassmen are at the event.

"Father Ted was the life of the party," said Bill Healy, student body president, describing his recent trip with President Theodore Hesburgh to the Santo Domingo conference of the International Federation of Catholic Colleges.

Last month Hesburgh and Healy accompanied Provost Timothy O'Meara, Dean of the College of Arts and Letters Michael Loux, their wives, and student Maureen McDonnell - attended the international discussion.

The Paris-based IFCU holds its conferences every three years. French, Spanish, and English all are spoken because delegations attend from North and South America, Europe, Africa, Indonesia, and the Middle East.

This year, according to Healy, delegates focused on a draft of a document on "Catholic Institutions of Higher Learning." Healy said the document "basically asserts more power from Rome over Catholic universities."

McDonnell, by winning a national contest on "the expectations of youth at Catholic universities," was invited to the conference by the Association of Catholic Colleges and Universities.

When asked what accounted for his participation in the conference, Healy said, "I was there as a listener, to give input to other students."

Boston College and Creighton University also sent student representatives to the conference.

Both Healy and McDonnell were impressed with the quality of the college administrators who ran the conference.

"I couldn't get over it," said McDonnell. "Everyone was so brilliant. Healy added, "You think of intelligent people as stuffy, and they're not stuffy."

"But the best part," Healy said, "was that we really enjoyed ourselves. He said the opportunity "to really know people through meals and meetings" was more beneficial than the conference itself.

"The people are the best part," Hesburgh said to Healy. "There are real men behind the smile."

The president of the Dominican Republic spoke at the IFCU's opening ceremony guarded by four men holding machine guns. According to Healy, he and McDonnell were sitting only 10 feet away from the podium. "It really added to the whole air of the ceremony. That night, I could not sleep," he said.

To help get "an ear for the language," Healy took a Spanish crash course over the summer. Conference delegates used headsets "for simultaneous translations."

Healy said his fondest conversation was with a Frenchman. Both conversing in "poor Spanish, we had a riot. Everyone was as willing to try."

Commissioned by Pope Paul XI, Hesburgh wrote the IFCU constitution. A former IFCU president for 15 years, he chaired a day's session introducing the speakers.

Passing years inspire maturity and off-campus living

Two weeks ago, I moved into my nine-month Hoeiser home for the final time. It was different from my first three moving-in experiences in one dramatic way: I didn’t move into a dorm.

Off-campus life has its ups and downs. Three college rooms can’t live as closely as one. Dishes will not clean themselves no matter how long left near a soapy sink. The old man who used to clean our bathrooms doesn’t make house calls.

The first time I passed my former dorm, that pile of trash by the front door made me feel a little homesick. In my second year, I said Hal Mary, thanking the Lord for delivering me from the place once called a "penal colony." By an assistant rector. The next time, I failed to say anything. Soon, I’ll have to learn the Apostle’s Creed again.

Sponsors: A world’s record attempt at musical chairs will take place tonight at 5 on Green Field during exam and vacation. Students and faculty members will be limited to 256-5550. My bride-to-be won’t tolerate volcanoes at the dinner table. The real world and a career seem right around the corner. Mom and Dad call less often.

Many 18 year-olds don’t have much common sense. Some do, or are fortunate enough to live with others who are grown up and provide a stabilizing influence. Others, like a hurricane, dwell and prey on each other’s weaknesses until one big bad situation forms. Dormitory life may not be the best solution to this problem.

For the mature leaders all around campus, I pray for patience, which you need much more than that copy of Little Rock on your desk. Keep up the waiting list for each one you throw out. But I don’t think that’s necessary. Time and (appropriate punishment) will produce students who have become decent citizens.

In reality, my reason for moving off campus doesn’t center around a desire for unspeakable pleasure and independence. Now that common sense rather than a recor of your weaknesses until one big bad situation forms. Dormitory life may not be the best solution to this problem.

Affair of accused spy admitted during trial of former FBI agent

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES - A woman testified yesterday she was former FBI agent Richard Miller's lover at the same time he was romantically involved with a Soviet spy, and that he admitted to her he sold classified documents.

Maria York of Portland, Ore., testified during Miller's espionage trial that she came to Los Angeles to visit him during the last two weeks of September 1984. She said at the time she visited him, she was unaware he was having an intimate relationship with Svet­lama Ogorodnikov, who has been convicted of spying for the Soviet Union, but he later told her.

York said she believed Miller was divorced and she was seeking a long­term relationship with him. Miller, the first FBI agent ever accused of spying, was a tense and nervous man who poured out his problems to her during the latter part of her two­week visit during which she went to movies and the county fair with him.

York, a native of El Salvador and a resident alien, said she warned him she went to movies and the county fair with him during the last two weeks of September 1984.

She said Miller also confided he failed a lie detector test.

"I asked him if he did or didn't (sell classified documents). He hummed, then he paused, and then he said, 'Yes I did, only one.'"

"He said, 'I thought I had a good deal,'" she testified.

She added that in the same conversation, he confided to her he had been involved with a Russian woman at the same time he had been romancing her.

She said Miller urged her not to talk to the FBI.

York said she had known Miller as a friend since 1970 and her husband had become particularly friendly with him. When her husband died in June 1984, she said she met Miller and they renewed their acquaintance.

Miller, who is married and the father of eight children, faces a possible life sentence if convicted of spying for the Soviet Union.

E.F. Hutton promises to reorganize structure after legal problems

It's pretty hard not to like an Army ROTC Scholarship. Just look at what it covers: full tuition, books, lab fees, etc. Plus, it pays you up to $1,000 each school year it's in effect. WASHINGTON - House Republican Leader Robert Michel, in a fresh sign of trouble for President Reagan's "fall offensive," said yesterday that there is more sentiment among House Republicans to reduce federal deficits and the nation's record trade imbalance than for overhauling the tax system.

"There's much more concern about those issues than (about) tax reform. There's no way around it," Michel said in his first comments to reporters since returning to Washington from the month-long congressional recess. In addition, Michel concurred in predictions by Democrats that the House is likely to override a possible veto on legislation imposing sanctions against white-ruled South Africa. WASHINGTON - Former Attorney General Griffin Bell blamed tax maneuvering for allowing E.F. Hutton & Co. to slip into legal trouble over its banking practices. The firm said yesterday it would implement Bell's recommendations for an extensive reorganization. But he said there was wrongdoing by a group of middle managers who were given immunity from prosecution by the Justice Department in an unsuccessful effort to trace improper check overdrafting practices to corporate headquarters.

The report recommends that six regional managers be assessed penalties ranging from $25,000 to $50,000 with the money being paid to a charity, and the firm said this will be done. The six are among those given immunity.

Hutton chairman Robert Fomon hired Bell to conduct an internal investigation after the firm pleaded guilty on May 2 to 2,000 counts of wire and mail fraud in connection with bank overdrafting that the Justice Department said clarified hundreds of bank statements of dollars in interest on Hutton accounts.

The report said just over a quarter of the 397 banks that may have suffered interest losses had signaled their intention to file claims for restitution, and Bell said he believes the $8 million fund Hutton has reserved for restitution will be more than enough.

Bell, attorney general under President Carter, said he had quit the Justice Department for granting immunity to some employees in an attempt to trace wrongdoing to the top.

Spectacular pictures promised of recently located Titanic wreck

Associated Press

WOODES HOLE, Mass. - Researchers who found the wreck of the Titanic headed for home yesterday, with the chief scientist promising he was bringing back "spectacular" film from the expedition.

The Navy-owned research ship Knorr, operated by Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution, was scheduled to dock Monday.

Officials said Robert Ballard, chief scientist on the mission, will try to arrange a return trip, possibly next summer, to explore the sunken liner miles off Newfoundland.

"Mainly, it's a matter of safety. But also it's a question of what you could learn about it," he said, adding that a possible reason for inspecting the ship in a manned vessel would be the chance to learn more about corrosion and preservation.

"We don't know that much about the preservation of things at the depths of the sea floor. People all over the world are thinking about using it for disposal, particularly of nuclear waste," he said.

Asked how Woods Hole could safeguard the Titanic, he said, "We've tried not to reveal the exact position of the ship and the exact depth of the find. But we heard aircraft were in the vicinity. I don't think there is anything we can do about that.

He said Woods Hole would act to protect the Titanic only if someone were to try to salvage it. "We'd have to appeal to a higher authority to ask them that the Titanic remain where it is, as it is."

John Eaton, historian of the Titanic Historical Society, said the site should be "protected by some international group and be kept free of all marauders."

Filming since the wreck was found Sunday was done by a video camera aboard the Argos, an unmanned subsurface developed by Ballard.

Ballard said the explorers had not seen the stern of the ship. "They believe they located it last night with sonar, "but it was in a very difficult area and we just weren't able to maneuver into it."

Bruce Springsteen fans give blood for chance to attend Indy concert

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS - Fans of Bruce Springsteen donated blood, kept telephone lines humming and didled out large wads of cash yesterday in a last-minute scramble for a chance to see the rock star's sold-out concert at the Hoosier Dome.

The New Jersey rocker, who played to two packed houses in Indianapolis' Market Square Arena in January, is scheduled to take the stage before 52,000 people at the downtown football stadium tonight.

All $17.50 tickets for the concert were sold in less than six hours on Aug. 22, but yesterday, many fans were taking advantage of every opportunity to get Springsteen tickets.

The Central Indiana Regional Blood Bank and radio station WENS used four pairs of Springsteen tickets to lure donors to a special blood drive.

Martha Sakai, WENS promotion director, said approximately 150 people donated blood in the first seven hours of the promotion, which ended last night. The previous best for a station-sponsored blood drive was 25 donors in four hours, she said.

"We had a lot of first-time donors," said Sakai. "Basically we're trying to get people in the habit of giving blood, not just for Bruce Springsteen." She said the names of donors, who had to be at least 17 years old, went into a drawing for the tickets last night.

The station set aside one pair of tickets for the promotion, and three other pairs were donated by listeners after the promotion was announced, Sakai said.

She said the promotion was timely because the regional blood bank had run out of some types of blood Wednesday night.

At other radio stations in Indianapolis, phone lines were busy as listeners tried to claim tickets.

John Wetherbee, program director for WNAP, said his station was giving away 50 pairs of tickets to listeners who called in last weekend to register for drawings. The contest had about 500 entries, five times the usual number for a similar drawing, Wetherbee said.

The station gave away 20 pairs of tickets Wednesday to listeners with the best banners welcoming Springsteen to Indianapolis, Wetherbee said.

The rock station also was encouraging its listeners to donate money or canned goods to food banks, charities that Springsteen often helps when he visits a city. One WNAP spot said, "Bruce Gave, You Should, Too," a reference to Springsteen's $25,000 donation to Gleaners Food Bank of Indianapolis in January, Wetherbee said.

Across town, FM station WFBQ continued to give away 25 pairs of tickets set aside for listeners promoting the concert. The album-rock station also announced it would play only Springsteen music during the early- evening hours before the concert today and would feature the singer-songwriter's music throughout the weekend, said promotion director Dennis Wetherbee.

"He represents such an American image that I think everybody is charged up about the concert, more than for others," Cohen said of Springsteen, whose "Born in the USA" album has been among the nation's bestsellers for more than a year.

Ticket giveaways for the concert weren't confined to Indianapolis.

Wanted: more tickets

Next Saturday 101,701 screaming fans will fill Michigan Stadium to see the Irish take on the Wolverines. Only slightly more than 200 of these people will be Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students.

The University of Michigan allotted Notre Dame 6,000 tickets to the contest. In turn, the Notre Dame administration sold approximately 75 percent of those tickets to alumni, Administrators, football staff and players received 22 percent. Three percent are offered to students.

For the majority of students left in South Bend, get comfortable. Not one of the 5,100 tickets the University was allotted for the Sept. 28 Purdue game has been designated for students. Again, almost three-quarters of the tickets are for alumni.

Students are given first priority for tickets for every home game. For this reason, it is only fair that alumni first crack at games played in their region. But fairness is not the only issue at hand. Ticket Manager Mike Bobinski has said that to insure alumni support, both financial and other kinds, they must be offered tickets.

As part of the Notre Dame family, alumni deserve the opportunity to support their alma mater through football games; however, this right should not overshadow that of tuition-paying students. A more equitable division of tickets must be reached.

At the time when the Notre Dame mystique is being challenged on the football field and questioned in the stands, students should not be so unfairly denied the chance to show their enthusiasm for the Irish.

When the ticket office reveals its policy on away games and possibly proposes changes, as Bobinski has said it will, let's hope the administration considers more than 200 of its students.

Responses to Safranek

Dear Editor:

SafraNek's column, which appeared September 2, argued two major points. First, American protestors who persist against this country's involvement in the policy of apartheid are frankly second-rate, we are only protesting to ease our social consciences of the burden of America's history of slavery.

SafraNek grossly admits that American protestors are promoting some value, his term is "apartheid," that American protestors are two-faced because they are ignoring the oppression imposed upon the people of African, Vietname and Eastem Europe. SafraNek does not have his facts correct. He overreaches this by the other injustices enumerated by Safranek from the very people who protest the policy of apartheid.

Perhaps Safranek objects to the methods used by those in this country who oppose apartheid, but America's involvement in South Africa is largely economic, and the best idea for fighting apartheid is in a country where our presence is so pervasive are economic tools such as divestiment and boycott.

SafraNek further suggests that the moral force is taken from the argument against apartheid because our government will suffer to sit down with oppressive governments. Con-

People really win on MTV!

Just ask Kevin Herbert of Stanford Hall, the winner of MTV's "Millions for MS" Rock-Alike contest. Though the last memory most of us have of Herbert is his winning impersonation of Bruce Springsteen in the contest, his victory last spring was only the beginning of a whirlwind summer affair with the rock scene.

In addition to appearing on national television, Herbert was awarded a summer internship with MTV in New York. Herbert worked primarily in the marketing department, concentrating on promotional projects for various concerts. For example, he helped to ship tickets, buttons, T-shirts, and other paraphernalia for the Kenny Loggins concert tour to those radio stations promoting the concert for MTV. While the experience he gained was invaluable, Herbert says that "... it was the people that I worked with that made the job so great. They were really knowledgeable and taught me a great deal about the business of marketing and promotional work."

Aside from working, Herbert also performed at two of New York's most prestigious clubs, Studio 54 and the Hard Rock Cafe. While "Born in the U.S.A." remained his trademark, Herbert did manage to perfect a performance of Springsteen's "Dancing in the Dark" as well. The talented sophomore was also interviewed by "Entertainment Tonight," The New York Daily News, and The New York Post, in addition to appearing on MTV's birthday celebration, where he met such stars as Glenn Frey and Simon LeBon.

Sadly enough, Herbert was unable to meet his mentor, but MS officials are still trying to arrange a meeting between Springsteen and his youthful counterpart. Herbert is still performing though, and will be heading the Rock-Alike contest for this year. When asked if this experience would lead to any further career in singing or television, he only laughed and said, "It's a great opportunity, and I'm going to keep on performing Bruce, but it's time to give someone else a chance to be the best."

Back at Notre Dame, he still listens to Springsteen, and proudly displays his pictures of Nina Blackwood and Martha Quinn (with himself) on his bulletin board. One freshman, having looked at the photographs, failed to recognize either "VJ," but when asked who was in the picture with them, replied, "I'm no fool, I know when I see Bruce Springsteen!"

The Rock-Alike contest and Tommy Shaw concert that followed were filmed and scheduled to be aired during the Memorial Day weekend. Because of editing difficulties with Jerry Kramer Productions, however, it was delayed until late July, when MS officials decided to move the concert's premiere to the first weekend of September in order to coincide with the beginning of the MS fund-raising convention.

The Rock-Alike contest and Tommy Shaw concert will be shown at the Senior Club on Saturday, September 7, at a party open to all classes. At 10 p.m. the concert will be aired; afterwards, Herbert will give a live performance to show once again that here at Notre Dame, Bruce is "The Boss!"

Father Hesburgh is one of the few people I know who could paint line. "The really tragic thing is not being a saint," without sounding preachy. "When, he says, that old-fashioned phrase of his, "I think the guy's a saint," sometimes seems suddenly re-defined as a kind of goodness that has a lot of class. He makes you aware of great walking on the earth. In touch with the secrets of God. Because they were humble enough to walk on their knees, you thought they were puny like everyone else. Hearing him, it seems okay to want to be a saint, it seems revivable to give the center of your soul to Christ, because belonging to Him is a status symbol qualifying you as a winner. Father Hesburgh's list is not just the official catalogue of the canonized. He may be talking about anyone, great or humble: a migrant worker or a German chancellor. He lets you see that you don't have to go around looking like Mother Teresa to be on an effective wavelength with the will of God. Father Hesburgh is in touch with a lot of people. Some of them sell newspapers in the Beirut airport. Others are freedom fighters in an army of liberation. Others plant grapes under his office window. When, in praise, Hesburgh, says about a secretary, "The woman is a saint," sanctity sounds very classy, like something it would be a mistake to miss out on.

Saints, as I hear the word applied, are good, hard-working, self-sacrificing people, deeply in love and truth-faithful doctors, honest lawyers, parents who break their necks for their families. The saints in the technical sense - those with shrines in the churches, to whom novenas are made - often sound like freaks who missed out on the fun of being alive. That's probably because when their stories were told, the details got exaggerated. I want to think well of them, but it doesn't matter, because I'm not their judge. However, they are not the saints I have foremost in my mind when I say it is a shame we are not all becoming saints. It's a pity that we are not taking a long look at life, separating the truths from the lies; and doing it as lovers wishing to serve the world without being deceived by its illusions.

"It's a pity that we are not taking a long look at life, separating the truths from the lies; and doing it as lovers wishing to serve the world without being deceived by its illusions."

Only a tedious preacher would have the nerve to tell a campus full of bright, ambitious students that it would be a mistake not to become a saint. Who then should I tell? A convert full of nuts? They already know it. The Catholics going to Mass on Sunday morning. I've got news for you: many of them know it too. Some of them are among the saints with a small "s," breathing the graces that defeat the darkness, the heartbeats of a stilled Church. Before you laugh at them, look at the faces, and see your grandparents. The country is tired too. Young people could give it the strength of eagle's wings to lift it over the swamps of indifference.

Comparing generations is a waste of time. When they were young, they were fighting World War II. My father grew up during World War I. My father is a politician, and had some Korean, and your uncle or brother in Vietnam. Are we better off now than we were ten, 20, or 40 years ago, because we are living in paxeficiency? Sufficent for the age is the evil thereof. Now, however, I read in the papers that the sickies are corrupting the children. Our cities are like the great trees you are along the roadside, drowned by the great, gray nests of web that the moths have built in the branches so that they can eat the leaves. Only fire and the annihilation of limbs will make the trees healthy again. Evil has been building its nests among us for a long time. You don't have to be a fundamentalist to wonder if the devil is bringing us to the end of all good. God will torch the planet, if we don't do it first ourselves.

Every once in a while, an aw ard-winning youngster will stand up at a banquet or a commencement, and say: "I believe in God. I honor my father and mother by accepting the Gospel that they taught me." Then, it seems, a shudder of gratitude goes through the moral structure of the world. Wickedness is taken down a notch because wholesomeness is already feared itself. A speech is not a crusade, but a young man who is in touch with God well, despite the odds, as long as young people stand up in support of it. The young heroes of a campus are not necessarily the best attempt at a person who will keep busy with projects. I would much rather have a kid with ideals, who has the guts to say to anyone making a bad mistake to please the Lord, "You're not thinking, you know what you are doing." The rules of the kingdom of God are interior rules. You know who lives by them when you see a show of class. A show of class is not religion, it's better than religion, because religion is only a teacher pointing the way. A show of class comes from character, defined as noble oblige, which lights up the world more wonderfully than a miracle.

I don't know where character comes from, it's neither genetic, partly grace, partly common sense ripening into wisdom. Even if there were no God, it would serve you like the voice of God urging the little person not to betray the Church helps build character, as it supports the necessary evil of a good home. Character is only the street name for something lovely that gives us our identity as children of God, like candles shining in the darkness. Father Hesburgh, mentioning the saints he has met, is saying, I think that you can't have a "humble" saint, you can't become a good child of if our patriotism is ambiguous.

Saint Mary's tennis team set for '85 season with familiar face at helm

By CHRISTINE FORTIN
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's tennis team opens its fall season this weekend with a young squad, a new coach, and an enthusiastic outlook. The Belles' new coach, Debbie Laverie, however, is not a new face around campus - she is a 1985 Saint Mary's graduate.

Laverie played singles and doubles in the number one position for the Belles all four years and was elected MVP each year. She was named captain and SMC Athlete of the Year her junior and senior years. In addition, Laverie finished off her collegiate tennis career ranked ninth in the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics.

The Belles' 10-member team consists of two juniors, one sophomore, and seven freshmen. There are no seniors on the team and only one returning varsity player - Kim Drahoto. The team members in their respective singles positions are: No. 1 Anne Dinnbert, No. 2 Shaun Boyd, No. 3 Kim Drahoto, No. 4 Valerie Falbo, No. 5 Bridget Hertog, and No. 6 Sheila Campbell or Charlie Staska. Katie O'Brien, Anne Piacentino, and Jenny Rodre are the remaining team members who are not holding positions to play this weekend.

"Although the team needs college teammates practicing experience," says Laverie, "the girls enthusiasm is very positive aspect. Everyone is working hard and practicing together as a team.

The Belles face a tough schedule this fall to prepare themselves for the district tournament which will determine who will qualify for Nationals in the spring. Saint Mary's is an NAIA team.

Laverie is happy to be starting off the season with strong competition, though. "But we've always beaten them in the past. If we keep our confidence, we'll do well."

The Evansville match will begin at 3 p.m. Saturday and the Belles will meet Marquette at 1 p.m. Sunday.

Replay of call enranges Yankee Stadium umps

"I don't expect to deprive the fans the pleasure of watching replays, but there is a directive in the American League that states replays should be shown with discretion. I plan on talking to Dr. Brown (American League President Bobby Brown) tomorrow morning. I told Billy to knock it off and he said it's in the hands of George (Yankees owner Steinbrenner)."

"I don't know about any league directive. I do not expect to get fined, but I expect a strong letter. What goes on around here is my business, we'll do well."

"Hey, I admire good umpiring, but let me stand up and admit when they make a mistake. I admire umpires who admit they blew a call like that umpire did in the Boston series (in a 10-inning, 5-4 New York victory over Boston Aug. 16). Home plate umpire Drew Coble admitted he missed a call on a fourth ball to Willie Randolph for a walk that forced in the winning run."

"I don't know about any league directive. I do not expect to get fined, but I expect a strong letter. What goes on around here is my responsibility, not the people who run the scoreboard."
Hudson confident about quarterback situation

By ERIC SCHEUERMANN
Sports Writer

With only a little more than a week left before the Notre Dame football team's opener at Michigan, many people have their eyes on the team's quarterback situation.

After Steve Beuerlein completed over 60 percent of his passes last year for 1,920 yards, the quarterback position seemed to be the spot that was least in doubt heading into the 1985 season.

Beuerlein's shoulder operation during the off-season, however, raised some question marks as to whether he would be back position seemed to be the spot.

“Steve is ready to go as our starter,” says Irish quarterback coach Ron Hudson. “He’s been very much up to par. He’s been doing everything we expect.

“As far as the injury is concerned, we really won’t know how he is until he’s been hit, but he’s working hard. I think he’s ready.”

In yesterday’s scrimmage at the stadium, Beuerlein looked to be very ready in every way. While completing eight of his passes for 111 yards and one touchdown, he threw the ball very well, appearing stronger than last year. In addition, he took a few hard hits while scrambling, showing no signs of pain.

With another year of experience behind him calling the signals, things look very good indeed for the Irish leader heading into the opener.

Another development during fall practice was the decision on a backup to Beuerlein. After spring practice, sophomores Terry Andrysiak and Tom Byrne were neck-and-neck in the battle for the number-two spot.

But despite suffering an injury to a finger on his left (non-throwing) hand, the 6-1, 181-pound Andrysiak has emerged as the backup this fall.

“Terry Andrysiak is our number-two man,” says Hudson. “His finger is in a cast, but he’s going to get a smaller one so that he can handle the snap better.

Back up Beuerlein on the White squad yesterday, Andrysiak filled in admirably, completing all four of his passes for 25 yards and one touchdown.

“He’s doing very well, and he’s learning very fast,” continues Hudson. “We’re pleased both with the way he’s throwing the ball and with how he runs. The back-up back looks more solid now.

Meanwhile, 6-4, 197-pound freshman Steve Belles is giving Byrne a battle for the number-three spot on the team’s quarterback situation.

blocker and an important cog in the team's attack. There are juniors Medlie Merchant and Karen Sapp, a duo of proven veterans. Lambert calls Merchant, a talented server, the most improved player on the team. Sapp is a sure bet to log playing time because she is such a threat at the net. Also in the wings is sophmore Kathy Baker, a steady competitor last year as a freshman.

"Everyone has come back this year as a better athlete and as an improved player," Lambert says. "Everyone is more knowledgeable and more skilled. And that makes us a better team."

The first test of the team's mettle comes tonight as the Irish make their 1985 debut against Kentucky. The Lady Kats walloped the Irish in three straight lopsided games.

A stopper is important on any team, whether it's a late inning baseball relief pitcher or a tri-captain on the Notre Dame soccer team, plays the defensive position of stopper, and should play a key role in Irish soccer fortunes this year.

"I'm sort of defense-oriented," says Mutschler, "and what the stopper has to do is mark the center-forward, who is usually the best scorer for the other team.

Irish coach Dennis Grace feels his star fills all the necessary qualifications to be a successful defensive stopper.

"There are certain qualities you look for when you look for a stopper back," says Grace, "tenacity, strength, a never-say-die attitude, a very, very high work rate, and a great deal of concentration. Jack plugs right into that description very well.

"His work ethic is excellent, he had stopped across his forehead," continues Grace. "He could play other positions, there's no doubt in my mind, but I don't think he could play other positions as well as he plays the stopper position.

Although Mutschler is recovering from a minor shin bruise he suffered in the George Mason game, he should be ready for the Panthers and Tulsa in the Quacy Tournament. Grace feels this contest will be another tough battle since the Panthers had a good recruiting year to complement an already experienced squad. To further concern Grace are the facts that the Irish have never before defeated the Panthers and that this opponent seems determined to regain its status as a perennial top-20 contender.

"They are a balanced offensive and defensive team," says Grace. "I don't think they'll be techni­cally good, as opposed to the Virginia and George Mason (who handled the Irish losses on the recent East coast trip), but they'll be very well-coached and I'm sure they'll come out playing hard.

"We're going to be real battles," says the senior standout, "All these

Mutschler has all the tools for stopper position

Midwest teams are pretty evenly-matched.

It is Grace's hope, though, that Mutschler's work on both ends of the field will be the difference. For although the talented player's reliable defensive play has made him vital to the Irish squad, the senior captain has also been working much on his offensive game this year.

"He doesn't see as much of the (offensive) game as we would like right now, but he's improving on it," admits Grace. "Before the season is out he'll be adding a great deal to our offense, without letting his defensive responsibilities fall off at all. He gives opponents fits with his speed, with his quickness, and he's played well against some of the best players in the country.

"He does such a good job at what he does that we have to have him play," continues Grace. "The gravy would be if he can give us the offensive thrust and the offensive contributions."

Mutschler echoes Grace's evaluation of his contribution to the team.

"Probably my weakness would be moving up and getting into the offense," he agrees. "(Coach Grace) has worked with me a lot to get me more involved with the offense and make me more aware of the offensive scheme of things.

"Chosen captain by his teammates during the summer, Mutschler tries to use his steady style of play as a tool in his role as captain. "I try to be a good role model on the field as well as off," he admits. "I'm not the rib-rub, aggressive, overzealous type. I try to go up to freshmen and give them a pat on the back instead of screaming to get them motivated.

In Grace's opinion, Mutschler fulfills his duties in this respect with the same success that he performs on the field.

"He just wants to go out there and do his job and make sure everybody else does theirs," says Grace. "He's doing a very good job as captain right now."

Still another goal of Mutschler's, this fall, is to improve the "team concept."

"I want the team to work as a cohesive unit," he says. "One of the goals as captain is to get the freshmen and lowerclassmen to feel like they're being contributing, and to make sure they fit in and adjust well.

This is a big thing I've really concentrated on.

'We've got five or six freshmen who see playing time," he adds. "We just need time to gel."

Mutschler hopes that this can occur rapidly, though since the challenges of the Notre Dame soccer schedule are many and great.

"It's really exciting because it's not hard to get up for a game anymore," says the veteran Mutschler. "In the past we've had patsy teams. This year we're just loaded with powerhouse teams, and it's really good to challenge yourself each game. It's not hard to get up mentally to play against the best teams.

"We can't expect to win them all with the schedule we have, though," he continues. "(Our goal) is just to improve with each game."

Grace, meanwhile, is excited about the future of his star player and leader, and along with it, the chances for his team.

"I'm hoping that we can show the people that we deserve to have an opportunity to play against the better teams in the country," says Grace. "We're pretty much on schedule where we want to be. A lot will be told Saturday. We'll find out what we learned against Virginia and George Mason."

Tonight at 7:30 the fighting Irish return to the排地 at the capital of women's volleyball. And they open their season in grand fashion. On the court the Irish will play their first match of the year against the Ohio State Buckeyes. It will be the conclusion of the first Southern in the National Conference. The Buckeyes hope to bring home a win to avenge their loss to the Irish earlier this year. The match will also feature the return of former Irish star Josie Maternowski, who had been out with an injury. The game will be played in the Joyce Center, with a capacity of 7,000 people.

The Irish are out to make a statement this year, and they are looking forward to the challenge. They are a young team, but they have the potential to be one of the best in the conference. The team is led by senior setter Joanne Hagan, who will be looking to lead the Irish to victory. She is a key player on the team, and her leadership will be crucial to their success.

The Irish have a tough schedule ahead of them, and they will be tested early on. But they are looking forward to the challenge and are ready to prove themselves.

Celebrities invade town for golf tournament

Paul Hornung, Hank Stram, Rollie Massimino and Joe Garagiola will be in South Bend this weekend as part of the Notre Dame men's basketball team. The team is playing in the NCAA Tournament, and齐nervalis has approached the team about being a part of the tournament.

"Without a doubt, he's our leader," says Hornung. "He's the most versatile person on the team and defense and passing are her strongest suits." This year she will move from the setter position to outside hitter, where it is hoped that she'll have another banner season, a season that the one that garnered her all-NSC honors in the realm of women's volleyball. The transition into a bigger scene and the girls hope to come to be known. Probably the strongest team in the league will be Purdue, Western Michigan, Oregon, and Arizona St. To add to this a trip over fall break to the "capital of volleyball excitement," California, where the Irish will play three matches. Also appearing are Ohio State, Oklahoma, Hawaii, and UCLA.

"Our goals for the season are high, of course," says Hornung. "But we are tempered with realism. We are not a very strong team here. We'll be starring one senior, three sophomores, and two freshmen." Two members of last year's team are gone. Lost to graduation are last season's captains, the inspirational Jamie Appenzeller and Mary Jo Hagan. But Lamborn had plenty of talent left. Her list of returners is senior Mary McLaughlin, the spiritual backbone of the team. Success will revolve around her play.

A fresh batch of recruits has brought to the Irish a new talent. Height was on the shopping list and the order has been filled. There's bright prospect of six-foot freshmen Mary Shea and Mary Kay Waller, both of whom were expected to start at the middle blocker position.
