Notre Dame landmark damaged in fire

By DAN McCULLOUGH

A fire swept through the Our Lady of Lourdes Grotto on the Notre Dame campus early yesterday morning, cracking the stone walls, melting the wrought iron candle racks and blackening the statue of the Virgin Mary.

No injuries were reported from the fire, although damage was "substantial," according to Glenn Terry, director of Notre Dame Security.

A cost estimate of the damage has not yet been determined.

The fire started when the candles in the Grotto overheated, according to Jack Bland, Notre Dame fire safety director. "There was a build-up of heat from all the candles lit over the weekend, by the visitors," he said.

The campus was filled with visitors, many of whom entered the Notre Dame-Michigan State football game.

The Grotto apparently had more candles than usual because of the football weekend, said Anthony Sikakal, a sacristan from Sacred Heart Church. Candles were placed beneath the racks, as well as in the candle holsters.

"There were more candles than I've ever seen," he said. "That's because people had all afternoon to light them."

Bland said the fire began at 2:54 a.m. yesterday when the heat caused some candles to fuse together, forming the blaze. The fire enveloped other candles, melting the wrought iron candle racks and filling the interior of the Grotto with flames. The blaze then blew upwards, blackening the statue of the Virgin Mary and scorching the trees above the Grotto.

The structure of the Grotto, which is made up of great boulders weighing up to three tons, was apparently not seriously damaged.

Firefighters from the Notre Dame fire department responded to a tip from an anonymous caller, said Bland. The fire was extinguished with more than 500 gallons of water and with foam. Bland said the foam was needed because water would be ineffective on the hydrocarbons and wax from the candles.

The firemen put out the fire at 3:35 a.m., 37 minutes after it was reported.

Most of the damage from the fire was caused by "spawling," said Bland. Spawling occurs when stones become over heated and chip or fall off in blocks, he said.

Many of the stones that compose the outer wall of the Grotto were cracked and large chunks of stone lay on the ground in front of the wrought iron racks.

The maintenance department has already contacted a contractor to repair the damaged Grotto, according to Father Daniel Jenky, rector of Sacred Heart Church. The church is responsible for the upkeep of the Grotto. There is no timetable or cost estimate has been established yet for the repair of the structure.

Sectarian from Sacred Heart Church entered the burned-out Grotto yesterday morning to retrieve the donations from the large metal boxes beneath the worn metal of the candle racks. While they were able to take the money from one of the boxes, the other box's lock was melted and they were unable to open it, said sacristan Anthony Sikakal.

Father Edmund Joyce, executive vice president of the University, and Father William Beauchamp, executive vice president of Notre Dame, have also been contacted by the maintenance department.

Senate debates move to see Observer books

By CHRIS BEDNARSKI
Senior Staff Reporter

"It's a student newspaper and the students should have a right to see its books," said Student Body President Bill Healy, during a discussion of The Observer at last night's Student Senate meeting.

After a meeting last Tuesday, twelve student leaders had requested to see The Observer's financial statements from last year. Observer Editor-in-Chief Sarah Hamilton declined to release the statements earlier in the week.

Junior Class President Jim Domagalski, speaking at last night's senate meeting, said The Observer should open its books to students. "It's not an attempt by anyone to tell them what to do," said Domagalski. "It's a student right to see their books."

Lee Broussard, Student Activities Board manager, had called the meeting last Tuesday of student government and student media leaders to discuss The Observer.

"The leaders, citing The Observer's increase in advertising rates this year, voted to request that the student newspaper open its books and allow them to monitor its expenditure. "We pay 20 to $25,000 in advertising to The Observer each year. That's 11 percent of the students' money," Broussard said at last night's meeting. "We wonder why The Observer made an $11,000 profit last year and their rates went up."

Hamilton said last Wednesday that The Observer is already accountable to students because it operates under the University's Budget Unit Control system. "The biggest thing I see is that they want to monitor our expenditures and I think there is a risk for all students of losing an independent newspaper," Hamilton said.

The Observer currently is paying off two loans of approximately $100,000 for a new computer system and typesetter, Hamilton said last Wednesday.

She also said increased costs, including those in phone rates and newspaper, necessitated the increase in ad rates.

NAACP chapter adds minority focus

By MAE WHITEMAN

Notre Dame's newly-chartered chapter of the NAACP will attempt to answer the University's "apparent inability to recruit a respectable number of black students," according to Gary Cooper, a member of the chapter's organizational committee.

The first meeting of the chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People was held today and consisted primarily of its leaders informing the members of the organization's purposes and goals.

Cooper said the chapter hopefully would be a satisfactory answer to "Notre Dame's apparent inability to recruit a respectable number of black students and the need for the improvement of the disposition of black students."

Carlton West, the organizational committee chairman, said he hopes "to provide a forum for issues affecting Notre Dame and Saint Mary's College students on campus and beyond."

"We want to enlighten the public with any vital information we research or attain through the national chapter and provide support groups for minority students," he said.

Lester Flemons, who helped form the organizational committee, agreed with West.

"I wonder if the administrations realize or care about the minority situation," he said.

Flemons also quoted the stance behind the NAACP: "Equal justice should be done to man as man.

"Approximately 40 people attended the meeting. The low turnout, West said, was "indicative of the Notre Dame student body."

Over 40 people currently are signed up as members, but West said they hoped to enroll 300 to 400 members.

Any enrolled Notre Dame or Saint Mary's student or faculty member who agrees to comply with the principles and policies of the Association may become a member.

The organization had its beginning when West and nine fellow students approached the Indiana state president of the NAACP, who outlined how to start a chapter. All summer students worked in preparation for the beginning of the chapter.

As stated in the constitution for college chapters, the purpose and aims of the organization "shall be to improve the political, educational, social and economic status of minority groups; to eliminate racial prejudices; to keep the public aware of the adverse effects of racial discrimination; and to take all lawful action to accomplish these aims."...

The meeting ended with the introduction of Melva Martin, a student or faculty member of the Association who agrees to comply with the principles and policies of the Association.

Totaling $9 million so far, proceeds from the all-star FarmAid benefit concert are to be running short of the goal yesterday but organizers said they would be happy if the event triggered new interest in farmers' problems. By the time the 1 1/2-hour concert ended and 50 stars of country, rock and blues had left the stage early yesterday, FarmAid had raised more than $9 million. That was way below singer Willie Nelson's prediction of raising $50 million, Nelson, who organized Sunday's show, said FarmAid received about $4 million from corporate donations and ticket sales, and roughly $5 million from millionaires and million- tenners. But tabulation of the pledges was incomplete. The FarmAid money will be used to pay grants to farmers, land bankers, counseling and job training, a nationwide information hotline and a campaign to increase awareness of farm problems. - AP

Feigl named to high-level post

By PEGGY PROSSER
News Staff

As the search for a president at Saint Mary's continues, Dorothy Feigl has risen to the rank of acting vice president and dean of faculty.

Feigl replaced William Hickey, who took over the presidency after the retirement of John Duggan.

In making the announcement, Hickey said, "Dr. Feigl is one of the most highly respected members of our faculty and she brings considerable administrative experience to the position."

Feigl, who joined the Saint Mary's faculty in 1966, said she likes the new perspective her position gives her.

"I like the new view it gives me of the College," she said. "I have a better vantage point towards the achievements and problems of the school."

Feigl, who was a former chairman and professor in the department of chemistry and physics at the College, said her one regret was being unable to continue teaching.

"I miss teaching terribly," she said. "I'm at core a teacher."

During her tenure at the College, Feigl's reputation as an outstanding teacher has earned her both the Spes Unica Award for excellence in teaching and service to the College, and the Maria Pieta Award, in recognition of her skill, dedication and excellence in teaching of lower division courses.

Among her duties, Feigl chairs the Computer Utilization Committee, which oversees a new concept designed to improve word processing capabilities for students. "It gives students a much easier access to doing and redoing work," Feigl said.

Feigl also monitors the general academic progress of the College, interviews potential faculty members, and sits in on both the Education Committee and the Committee for Faculty Development.

Her title is contractually for a year, but it is expected the new president will determine its actual length.

"Feigl, who serves as spokesperson for the Presidential Search Committee, could not give any details as to the committee's progress."

During her tenure at the College, Feigl said she would like to see more tenured positions among the faculty. She also said both tenured and non-tenured professors are vital to the College, and should work together to continue the tradition of academic excellence Saint Mary's is known for.

Feigl seemed optimistic in summing up her views of the College.

"Enrollment is very strong. It's a vital school," Feigl said. "Programs are strong, the student body is well qualified."

"It's a very positive reflection of the times," she said, adding, "This school has a great deal to offer people, and we want to make sure it stays that way."

Board of Governance looks to end ND/SMC conflicts

By KIMBERLY TRENNER
News Staff

The recent conflicts between Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students, aired in an Observer sports column and in the newspaper's viewpoint section, were discussed at last night's Board of Governance meeting.

"Something should be said, some things should not go on," said Ann Marie Kollman, Saint Mary's student body president.

Kollman said she plans to write a letter with Bill Healy, Notre Dame student body president, to emphasize the need for good relations between the two schools.

The controversy regarding the price of football tickets was cited as one of the issues which should be put to rest. "I think we should feel privileged to get those tickets," said Kollman.

The general consensus among the board was that the reasons behind higher ticket costs for Saint Mary's students were sound and justified.

"If we do not want to be Notre Dame and we want to be a small school, then we should not expect to get everything the Notre Dame students get," said Eileen Hettrich, secretary of the board.

Other board members commented on the recent Beautiful Room Controversy. One of the problems with the controversy cited by the board was the context of the lack of organization.

"Many of the housekeepers did not show up for the judging," said Lori Janko, president of LeMans Hall.

The context, held yesterday, was the first of its kind.

Two clubs were also approved by the board last night. One was the Alcohol Education Council, designed to educate the community on alcoholic issues and to plan non-alcoholic social activities, and the other was the RA, a group which attempts to raise awareness of the problem of hunger.

Death toll rises in Mexico quake

Associated Press

MEXICO CITY - Rescue workers said yesterday they resumed their search for survivors of Mexico's two killer earthquakes. They said more people might be alive under the debris.

At a collapsed apartment building, a German shepherd rescue dog named Bobby sniffed and pawed at a spot in the ruins. An hour's digging freed 20-month-old Pablo Aguirre, dehydrated but otherwise uninjured, being葸ed since the quake Thursday and Friday.

Police and the attorney general's office said the death toll in Mexico City stood at 28,832 yesterday and the president's office said about 100 people were killed elsewhere in Mexico. Police said 4,180 people were missing.

The State Department said in Washing­ton that 3,461 were known dead throughout the area struck by the quakes, including five Americans. There was no immediate explanation of the discrepancy. The Department said it based its figure on information from Mexican authorities.

Mexico's federal health depart­ment said at least 11,000 people were injured by the quakes, which smashed the heart of this city of 11 million people. The number of people left homeless was estimated at 600,000.

President Reagan's wife, Nancy, came on a brief mission of inspec­tion and sympathy, bringing a U.S. government check for $1 million to help in relief efforts.

She toured the city for 3 1/2 hours, visiting survivors at refugee centers and a Red Cross hospital in the com­pany of Paloma Cordero de la Madrid, wife of President Miguel de la Madrid.

Pope John Paul II said a special Mass for the quake victims at his summer palace at Canet Gandolfo, in the Alban hills south of Rome.

Dozens of flights arrived from abroad with rescue squad, demolition experts, medicine, tem­porary shelters, food and clothing.

German Oropowit Gonzalez, coordinator of the rescue effort at the Conseil technical school, said there were hopes of finding more survivors.

"We think there are more people trapped alive inside," he said. "A dog was brought in and detected some­thing. We are going to dig another tunnel. We heard some noises, but we could not determine the loca­tion."

More than 50 specially trained dogs were sent from France, Italy, Switzerland, West Germany, and the United States.

Other rescuers found 18-month­old Jessica Alonso on Sunday. She had been buried for 80 hours next to the body of her mother, and started crying when one of her saviors picked her up.

The government solicited private and corporate donations to a na­tional rebuilding fund. The quakes are estimated to have caused billions of dollars in damage to Mexico, whose economy is in recession and laboring under a $96 billion foreign debt.

Demolition work on the esti­mated 450 damaged buildings con­tinued, but cautiously because of hope that more survivors might be found.

A principle concern is the pos­sible outbreak of disease because of the decaying bodies and severe shortage of potable water.

City officials said hundreds of bodies still unclaimed in temporary morgues would be buried or cremated to reduce the risk of disease.

Dogs were old Seguro Social baseball park, bodies were stacked in white plastic bags awaiting identification.

should open its books, but added, "They didn't increase their rates to make more money. They are just trying to be more efficient."

Karen Ingwersen, Judicial Coun­cil coordinator, said The Observer should not be required to open its books. Like Colson, she also said that student newspaper isn't trying to make more money.

"They have a lot of debts right now," she said. "The only way they can cover it is by raising advertising rates."

In other senate business, the senate also considered a resolution by Senator Chris Aboud that would establish an $8,000 contingency fund for the senate.

The funds would come from an approximate $10,000 in student ac­tivities fees that have become available from an underestimation by the University of the number of students who would enroll this year and thus pay the fee.

"Student government budgeted for $245,000 but now has $256,000 in its account," said Student Body Treasurer Eric Parzianello.

Dottagallai said he would like the extra money distributed to classes.

"To have a contingency fund set up when others need the money is a bad idea," he said.

John Spatz, senior class president, agreed with Dottagallai. "We rep­resent three-quarters of the stu­dent body."

We get a nearly $5,000 at the beginning of the year," Spatz said. "Right now, our economic state isn't the best."

The resolution was tabled until next week to give Aboud time to submit the proposal in writing.

Tapes not admissible in Belushi death case

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES - Most of a taped interview in which Cathy Evelyn Smith purportedly admits killing John Belushi was ruled inadmissible as evidence yesterday by a judge who nonetheless allowed three of her statements to be used.

Municipal Judge James Nelson, ruling in Smith's preliminary hearing, also said two National Enquirer reporters need not testify.

Nelson, who was found guilty of using drugs to Belushi, was present in court Wednesday.

"They're going to make us crazy. They're going to make us squirm," she said, describing defensive efforts to "giggle" and "laugh" under oath, which would prohibit federal funds from being used to pay her attorneys.

The Civil Rights Restoration Act of 1980 would restore the civil rights enforcement provisions of the 1964 and other such legislation as prompted the White House to ask the federal government, and strengthen related federal regulations through the force of law.

Vernon Walters, the United Nations ambassador to the United Nations, made a secret 5, 1984 trip to gain the release of the Rev. Benjamin Weir, an American held captive in Lebanon for 16 months, NBC news sources reported yesterday.

Walters met with Yasser's President Hafez Assad for four hours, NBC said in the report, which cited no sources. "It also did not state when Lebanese kidnappers released Walters met with Assad.

Irene Payne, a press spokeswoman at the U.S. mission to the United Nations, had no comment on the report and said Walters and, dean go no further than he had at his news conference Thursday, when he explained why he was not at the Sept. 17 opening of the U.N. General Assembly.

NOW head urges rights passage

INDIANAPOLIS - Eleanor Smeal, president of the National Organization for Women, warned last night that "gagging is getting to be OK again." and urged strong measures to push for passage of the Civil Rights Restoration Act.

Smeal, who on Sept. 1 continued her third term as NOW president, said that under the Constitution, those convicted of civil rights violations would not force them back into being "cheap labor for the secret agent."

"The right wing ... is cutting in on 1950's"

Smeal said a predominantly female audience of about 150 people on the campus of Indiana University-Purdue University at Indianapolis.

"We're going to make us crawl. They're going to make us squirm," she said, describing defensive efforts to "giggle" and "laugh" under oath, which would prohibit federal funds from being used to pay her attorneys.

"They are trying to make us scream, but none of them can scream that loudly. Just to think that all that time, we were just a half-hour away from them."

The students apparently lagged behind on a trail and may have gone off on one of the many trails that just confuse the searchers. They join up again later, said Jack Brady, superintendent of the school in the ridiculously hilly town of Lourdes. "Of course those trails don't just stop off in the wilderness," he said.

More than 60 volunteers, state police, and National Guard troops searched the 10,215-acre wilderness for the students.

The students tore up their shredded clothes to use as kindling to keep warm when overnight temperatures dropped into the low 50s, she said.

"When it got too cold up high, they moved into a small hollow, where it was warmer," she said. "They shared some of those little peanut butter cups to eat, but the first thing they asked for were and how they were out of the hot food."

School Principal Dan Haught said yesterday, former Boy Scout, also found berries for the students to eat.

"They did real well," Haught said. "They stuck together ... They were a real team. We're proud of them."

The students were tired and cold when they were finally found Thursday afternoon, Haught said.

"Call 239-7793. And ask for tape 38 or 'Coping With Stress'."
In the opening mass this past Sunday Provost Timothy O’Mara, while discussing the Catholic University, considered the "limitations of freedom." According to O’Mara, the "limitations of freedom" should be as broad as possible. It is upon this premise that a Viewpoint column is written. The editorial column, like M.I.T.'s conscience, must be free to convey any reasoned opinion.

Bill Krais

Save the Whales

A Viewpoint column is written by someone who maintains very strong convictions on a certain topic, so strong in fact that they feel compelled to publicize their opinion. The writer is making himself vulnerable to all forms of criticism, personal and professional. The columnist is willing to face attacks levied upon him because he wants to be known and人民服务, all for a principle.

The Viewpoint writer, generally speaking, does not write a column just to see his name in print, as many would suppose. The column is a self-expression which serves the public by generating controversy and dialogue. It is a writer's dream to hear his column being discussed at lunch, instead of last Saturday's football game. But it is a writer's nightmare to hear his article misconstrued and distorted, to hear people insert points and ideas into the column for which the column was never intended.

Above all, it is essential to remember that discussions in an editorial column have a symbiotic relationship between the writer and the reader. The writer has an obligation to the reader, for he or she must present a substantial argument, defending all biases and considering most objections (for he or she is bound to consider all of them). The reader, on the other hand, must consider the article analytically, objectively, and with great care in his or her intentions. One of these parties fails in their responsibilities, a communication gap is created and misunderstanding flourishes.

There are then good Viewpoint writers and bad Viewpoint writers. The good ones realize that theirs is just one of many opinions. They are aware of many truths, many right answers. They accept the good columnist's one opinion but never assert that it is gospel. Good Viewpoint writers are human beings with reasoned opinions, not all-knowing sages.

The bad writers, on the other hand, insist upon having an unyielding insight into the truth. The bad writer implicitly proclaims to be omniscient; they can tell us what is right and what is wrong. Certainly readers are obliged to the bad Viewpoint columnist, for he or she has provided the reader with an invaluable service. The bad writer is the first person to answer all those hard questions put forth by Socrates over 2500 years ago. They leave no room for discourse or debate. After all, it is the bad writer's duty to argue that which is undeniable true.

Just as there are good writers and bad writers, there are good Viewpoint and bad Viewpoint readers. A good reader acknowledges that the Viewpoint column is limited by space, it is essential to recognize this restriction. Viewpoint writers are forced into generalizations which often cannot be explained. A reader who is unaware of this fact inserts their own assumptions and conclusions into an article. They assume that because the writer failed to consider every aspect of a certain issue as a result of space limitations he or she is ignorant. This presumption of ignorance is unfair to the writer and easily made by the careless reader.

The reader should realize that often the writer is not an absolute authority on the topic under consideration, nor does he or she have to be. The writer should not be blamed for not having spent a lifetime in deliberation on the specific topic. The writer is not required to have read every publication, listened to every speech, or seen every documentary in order to reach a reasonable conclusion.

I must say she lost me altogether when she launched her defense of official Roman Catholic teaching on birth control. Producing Passion Paul II as an example would have been enlightening. The Pope's teaching would not have been questioned. If one reads the Pope's teaching, one would make the following: "...we cannot leave the freedom of God to women. In men the intellect has a certain supremacy over the heart, which is why we have entrusted responsibility for the Gospel as idea to them. Women have a great role to play in the church and in Catholicism; however, the Gospel idea as primary a male sphere."

The question is from 'The Pope to My Father' by Paul II. Decoded, he is saying women are sexual minorities. Surely Smith is familiar with the conclusions of the Papal commission on birth control which met in the summer of 1968. The commission unanimously, the commission recommended the annulment of the Church's ban on artificial birth control. Those recommendations were not implemented had to do with Church politics. A conservative faction led by Cardinal Lamy, in charge of the Pontifical Council for Justice, who is unaware of this fact inserted the Church's ban on artificial birth control.

The reader has a responsibility to the writer, particularly if the reader intends to become a respondent. The reader may not exploit the entire article based upon one sentence or fragment; a response should answer the writer's intent, not certain convenient discrepancies. If the reader becomes a respondent, he or she must accept that he or she has the responsibility to have read with absolute care and that he or she is all too certain that the writer is unaware of this fact. For example, if the article considers as its topic birth control, the reader should not, when responding, dismiss birth control and consider abortion for the sake of convenience; after all, the article was not written about abortion but about birth control. When readers respond without considering the original argument, they are then using the original Viewpoint column at an unjustified forum for their own opinions.

The ideal Viewpoint addresses an issue as fully as possible while creating some sort of controversy.
Jarvik-7 adds stress to families

Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Wives of artificial heart patients experience more pressure and strain than the recipients themselves, a member of Louisville's Jarvik-7 team said.

Dr. Allan M. Lansing, medical director of Humana Heart Institute International at Humana Hospital Audubon, pointed to the illnesses suffered by Mary Schroeder, of Jasper, Ind., as an example.

Mrs. Schroeder, wife of William Schroeder, who has lived longer than any other human with a mechanical pump, was hospitalized last week after fainting spells. Doctors initially said the problem was caused by high blood pressure, but Lansing said he believes it was caused by exhaustion.

Mary Schroeder, 54, has gone home to Jasper, and Lansing wants her to rest until before returning to Louisville to be with Schroeder.

Lansing said he is concerned about the quality of life of artificial heart patients and their families.

“We have made progress. There is hope for the future, but it is early,” he said.

Lansing said he is convinced each of the three men who received implants in Louisville — Schroeder, Murray Hayden and Jack C. Baruch — lived longer with the treatment than they otherwise would have. Baruch had died 10 days after his surgery.

“Do they live better?” Lansing asked. “I’m not sure.”

Quality of life is almost impossible to define and can't be measured because it varies from individual to individual, he said.

For artificial heart patients, “it depends on one thing: it depends on happiness,” Lansing said.

“Is the individual happy … compared to what (his condition) was before, compared to what it would be without this treatment?”

Jarvik-7 recipients are under strain every day, including having to worry about whether the comm-

Summer Camp - Army style

Keith Harrison Jr.

Waking up at 4 a.m. to clean barracks may not seem like a great way to spend part of summer vacation, but that is exactly what Notre Dame students Eric Miller and Michelle Ritchie did this year.

Miller and Ritchie were two of 22 Notre Dame Army ROTC cadets who participated in Army special schools during the summer.

Miller, who was Notre Dame's representative at Air Assault School, said he called "warfare - Apocalypse Now" to himself during his 17 days at Fort Campbell, Ky.

"You are where you fly in with helicopters, land troops and take the enemy by surprise," Miller said.

"It was kind of glamorized in the final scene of "Apocalypse Now" but that is the basic idea. The training was similar to the way done by the Army's 101st Airborne division, which is the only air division in the world."

"It is also probably the one division that misses them most."

Ritchie spent three weeks at Airborne School in Fort Benning, Ga., where she and 19 other Notre Dame Army ROTC cadets learned the "proper way to jump from airplanes and use parachutes."

"We spent a lot of time learning the proper way to land, because if you're not positioned correctly you can easily break your legs or ankles," Ritchie said.

Miller, meanwhile, spent his week learning the proper way to land at the library.

"In the beginning the most difficult part was the training we had to do, since it was all learning, dry- memorization of a lot of different numbers and procedures," Miller said.

A close second in level of difficulty was the last day of school, he said.

"We had to go on a 10-mile march — which ended up being a run," Miller said. "There were two hills we had to go up during the march one named agony and one named misery."

“They were very, very big. I was amazed," Miller said.

In between the academics and the war on agony and misery, Miller also learned how to hook up loads to helicopters and how to repel from heights of 90 feet, he said.

For Ritchie, the first day was the toughest.

"The first day was just a couple hours of verbal abuse," she said. "You do about a million push-ups, the sergeants are really picky and they're always yelling in your face. They do that to weed out the people who won't make it."

After the first day, however, things became more bearable, Ritchie said. She later learned to jump from towers of 34 and 250 feet, as well as the proper way to jump from a plane.

"You do so much practice that after a while, the proper procedures become second nature," she said.

"We jumped from planes five times, including one night jump," Miller said.

"When the time came for the first jump, we were so well trained that I really wasn't scared," she said.

"Airborne School was a very good experience for me," Ritchie said. "There was a lot of work involved, but that toughened you up as a soldier."

Miller agreed. "It was really tough, but it was valuable training," Miller said. "And some parts of it were fun, also."

Both Miller and Ritchie agreed, however, that the tryouts for the schools were not fun. Although participation in the schools is voluntary, the number of spots available was limited. Thus, Miller and Ritchie had to wake up at 4:30 a.m. three days a week for six weeks last spring to work out with approximately 50 other Notre Dame Army ROTC cadets interested in the schools.

"We had to do things like run the stairs of Notre Dame Stadium," Ritchie said. "It was tough training, they tried to psych you out."

"They try to get you used to the rigors of being yelled at so you are prepared for the first day of Airborne School," she added.

"We did a lot of push-ups," Miller said. "For the most part, the tryouts were more physical than the school itself."

"But the killer was that we still had academics to worry about," Miller said. "Every day after waking up early and going to that workload we still had tests and classes to think about," he said.

"Why did we do it?"

"It's good training, and it will help my career," Miller said. "Air Assault School is also kind of tough to get into later on in your career," he added.

"I wanted to push myself and see if I could do it," Ritchie said. "It also distinguishes me among my peers, and it's an honor." Ritchie also had another motivation.

"My father completed Airborne School 25 years ago," she said. "So I'm kind of a second-generation trooper."

Dickerson returns; Rams beat Seahawks

Associated Press

SEATTLE — Eric Dickerson returned to National Football League play with a splash last night, rushing for three touchdowns as the Los Angeles Rams stopped the Seattle Seahawks, 31-17.

Dickerson, the two-time NFL rushing champion back for his third pro season after a 47-day contract holdout, scored on runs of one, two and 19 yards while gaining 150 yards on 31 carries to help the Rams improve their record to 5-0. The Seahawks dropped to 2-1.

The Rams exploded for two touchdowns on a 19-yard pass from quarterback Dieter Brock to Bobby Bucknell and Dickerson's two-yard run in the first 2:25 of the second half after a 7-7 halftime deadlock.

The Rams took the second-half kickoff and moved 80 yards in five plays, with Brock finding Duckworth in the left corner of the end zone for a 100-yard, 1-46 gone in the second half.

Seattle's Randall Morris fumbled the kickoff and Mark Jersey recovered the ball on the Seattle 2-yard line. Dickerson scored on the next play for a 21-7 Los Angeles lead.

The Seahawks came back within 21-17 on a 28-yard field goal by Norm Johnson and a 5-yard scoring pass from Dave Krieg to rookie Danny Greene. But the Rams then went 80 yards in six plays to put the game out of reach.

Dickerson opened the drive with a 40-yard run and finished it with a 15-yard run with 3:33 left.

The Rams' final touchdown came on the 55th Seattle turnover of the season on Johnnie Johnson's 27-yard return of an intercepted Krieg pass with 1:65 to go. The Rams pressured Krieg throughout and sacked him seven times, including three by defensive end Doug Reed, for 61 yards.

Reserve quarterback Gale Gilbert threw 37 yards to Daryl Turner for the final Seattle touchdown with 28 seconds to play.

enough, as the Irish were defeated for the first time.

Notre Dame came back strong the next day, however, as the Irish met Iowa in the final match of the tournament. In another day that was filled with tight matches, the Irish won, 5-3.

Panther, Colligan and Schmidt were winners in singles play and the pairs of Colligan and O'Brien and Bill and Billig were victorious to finish the challenging.

Yesterday, the Irish got an unexpected day off because their match against Butler was cancelled because of the rain. Despite the uncooperative weather, Head Coach Michelle Gillman's spirits were not dampened. Overall, she was pleased with the weekend performance and worked the Irish got the valuable experience in tough matches that they need.

“The Irish had a lot of strong matches,” she said. “The loss to Illinois was disappointing because it was so close, just a matter of a few games. We played well, though, all week. We really dug in when we needed to.”

Notre Dame field hockey team posts victory over Lake Forest

By RICK RIEBROCK
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame field hockey team dominated an overmatched Lake Forest team in a 4-1 victory on Carrier Field. Irish Head Coach Jill Lindfors said she was pleased with her team's performance.

"We played a very controlled game today with some good ball-play," she said. "I'm glad we didn't revert to our positivity we had after the Michigan game, he came down when we were losing and I hurt us in the future against tougher opposition." She pointed out.

The Irish now are 3-2 on the season. They will play host to Illinois State on Thursday at 5 p.m. on Carrier Field before facing Ohio State and Purdue in West Lafayette this weekend.

Women's tennis team splits matches: Illinois hands Irish their first loss

By JOHN COYLE
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame women's tennis team, which had been rolling along ever so smoothly so far in this young season, finally came upon some rough going Tuesday over the weekend.

The Irish, who had not lost a set in 15 individual matches before Friday, suffered a setback Friday against Illinois in a morning match, where the Belles grabbed first place in the state and established county team which grabbed first place in the state and established county.

"Not losing a set in four team matches looks good on paper, but it's not good for the team in the long run," coach Susan Siemer said. "We intended to play captain Sue Pintner. Western Illinois shocked us because they came out really strong in singles and doubles, and that is difficult to prepare for in the future." The Panthers suffered the loss of a set in the opening Western Illinois match but went on to beat the Bears Saturday but came back strong to win, 7-5, 8-7, 9-6. Mary Colligan topped Mary Pat Donavan, 6-4, 6-3 in the following match. It took three hours each, but Mice Stotsinger, a sophomore in goal, and the others in the top two well-played matches and the tandem of Pantera and Stotsinger were a real win in doubles, but it wasn't so clear on the astroturf. We got some nice help from Beth Bisignano to close out the Notre Dame scoring. Lake Forest could not get into the game and the Puleo shot came off several Irish shots and rolled into the goal late in the game.

Despite the scoring advantage the Irish had, Lindfors said she still was somewhat disappointed.

"I'm not satisfied with some of our opportunities," she pointed out. "That can happen in the future against tougher opposition, but we're a third team which has more opportunities," she said. "I'm glad we didn't revert to our positivity we had after the Michigan game, he came down when we were losing and I hurt us in the future against tougher opposition." She pointed out.

SMC soccer team drops to 0-5

BY ANDREA LaPRENIERE
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's soccer team dropped its season record to 0-5 last weekend, losing to both the Michigan State Women's Soccer Club and the Quincy College female's soccer team.

The Belles were defeated, 3-1, by Michigan State Friday at Angela Field.

Sophomore Beth Hallinan scored the only goal for Saint Mary's on a penalty kick, following a play which teammate Mary Anne Peri set up.

Quincy College beat the Belles, 2-1, in the team's second game of the weekend Sunday at Angela Field. Senator Sue Schleier scored for the Belles and was assisted by goal captain Maureen Murphy on the play.

Saint Mary's Head Coach John Akers said he was satisfied with the Belles' weekend performance despite the losses.

"Both in the Michigan State and Quincy games I felt we played better as a team than we've been playing," Akers said. "I really respect the players for that, having now had five losses. The attitude of the team is great."

Akers is encouraged by the improvement the players demonstrated at the Quincy game.

"Katy Boldt did very well in goal again," Akers said, "and when she had to replace Patty Huff, she suffered an injury," he said. "Both Beth Hallinan and Mary Colligan have taken on midfield responsibilities. That's an extra load for two of a better team in the midfield area.

"Gloria Breiten also had a good game and when she went out of the position," he said.

They left to travel to West Lafayette, Saturday to compete against Purdue in a game scheduled for 10 a.m.

Wells expects to run with Miller, Brown and Francisco

BY JOE MURPHY
Sports Writer

They were born to run. The "Fast Four," Brandi Wells, Alvin Miller, Tim Brown and Harwatha Francisco, are among the quickest football players in the nation. The foursome intends to display its combined speed by running together on the Notre Dame track relay team this year.

"We've talked about it and the four of us would be very impressive together. But that's only if the four of us stay healthy," says strong safety Monteclair High School. Brown, captain of his high school track team, has been a top long jumper and 400-meters runner.

For Wells, track competition has been a family tradition.

"I have one sister, and she runs track. My father ran track and played football in college. I ran track last year for Notre Dame, I placed second in one event and fourth in another, but I tore a muscle in my foot and was out six weeks."

Wells captured the New Jersey state 100 meters title while attending Monclair High School. He earned four monograms as a sprinter in track, captained the team in his senior year, was selected to all-state team and established county records in the 100 and 200 meters.

The strong safety also ran on a nationally ranked indoor mile relay team which grabbed first place in the 1984 Vitalis Olympic Invitational.

Despite his impressive list of accomplishments in track, Wells says he wanted to play football in college.

"Football has more opportunities than track," says Wells. "To finish today, if you don't have speed, you can't play in the big time. I came to Notre Dame to play football."

"I always thought I would go to Notre Dame to play football," he says. "I didn't want to decide, is the only place I wanted to go. I called Coach Faust and he came up with football." He says the coach decided to get his guy to move back, I can block the corner on defense and take care of the running back. Akers said his number-one priority is to do well, and he's glad to be playing.

"I have the ability. Now, I need the opportunity," says the sophomore.

"Last year was hard. It took a lot of adjusting. I really grew up in New York City. Although I like the student atmosphere here, too.

"Freshman year was kind of a disappointment for me. It's easy to be down when I was losing and I wasn't playing," says Wells. "During the Navy game, Wells injured his left knee and underwent surgery on his right knee earlier in his career.

In his junior year, Jackson caught 28 passes for 563 yards and four touchdowns. Heisler said Jackson could apply for eligibility if he returns for the 1986 season.
