Hesburgh outlines other University action taken to end apartheid

Fate of senate to be determined by student vote tomorrow

Would the disbandment of the Student Senate be a mistake? Several current members of Notre Dame student government believe the disbandment of the Student Senate would be a mistake.

"It is the only forum that can formulate student opinion on University policy," said Junior Class President Jim Domagalski.

Jim Hagan, student senator, said, "I believe getting rid of the student senate, removing what you think of its present effectiveness, would be a mistake because the students would lose any potential for a voice by the senate than by an individual student, he added.

"The administration can't just ride you out," said Domagalski. "If you have a senate that won't happen."

District 4 senator Steve Taeyaerts believes the student senate is important because it helps the student body president with his job. In a newsletter to his constituents, Taeyaerts said, "the senate is responsible for working with the student body president and cabinet to provide input into the idea generating process. By taking advantage of the highly representative composition of the senate, the student body president can constantly be in touch with what the students want, thereby legitimizing the expenditure of their money.

Taeyaerts considers, "in working together, the student body president, senate and cabinet can serve towards serving students through a combination of student representation, input and action."

Those who favor the senate believe the proposal to replace it with the Campus Life Council and Hall Presidents Council won't work. "The CLC is not designed to meet student needs," said Carie Hand.

"Members of the CLC have responsibilities outside of the CLC and they cannot devote their entire time to it," said Domagalski. "Whoever agrees that the CLC is not the answer. The argument that the CLC can do it is wrong. On paper it looks a lot better than in practice. In reality the administration and rectors cannot, by the nature of their jobs, be open to student opinion," he said.

Present student government constitution

Student Senate:
- Formulate and advance the position of the student body on student life issues
- Determine fiscal policies
- Select student body at Board of Trustees meetings

Proposed amendment

HPC:
- Advance the position of the student body on student life issues
- Approve all cabinet appointments
- Approve all SAB Steering Committee appointments
- Bring bills of impeachment
- Power to modify the constitution
- Power to have the student body president call meetings of the CLC

Other changes:
- Judicial Coordinator will select the members of the Judicial Review Board
- Ombudsman will set regulations for all elections
- CLC will choose student to represent student body to the Trustees
- Committee on the budget becomes a separate entity which will determine the fiscal policies with CLC's approval. Off-campus vote taken off committee, senior class president and student body president added

Healy: 'No need for senate'

The Notre Dame Student Senate may be voted out of existence if students approve a referendum scheduled for tomorrow. According to Student Body Vice President O'han Lawrence, the senate's elimination would decrease inefficiency in student government.

Lawrence is among a group of five student leaders who originally made the proposal to disband the senate and to distribute its powers to the Campus Life Council and Hall Presidents' Council.

Healy, "there is no need for senate to exist. It has no function."

"The senate is an extra bureaucracy" with overlapping responsibilities, according to Judicial Coordinator Karen Ingwersen, who also was a sponsor of the original proposal. She and Lawrence both said they believe by eliminating the senate, the overlap of duties currently existing between the HPC and CLC could be eliminated.

Students should vote for the amendment because it is the "best bet for returning to more effective, less bureaucratic student government," according to Boat President Bill Jenk.

"History proves the CLC and HPC can work" without a senate, he added.

According to Ingwersen, student voice has been made ineffective with the senate in existence. "The senate has a voice, the same as any organization has," Ingwersen said the senate can write letters asking for change, but they do not have the authority to make changes.

"Very important issues have come up in the senate and have died," said Pasquilla East President Catic Hand. The issue of student involvement in more quickly and the administration will be more aware of student concern with only the HPC and CLC in operation.

Unlike the senate, the CLC has the authority to look at specific issues and propose changes, according to Ingwersen. She also said that the HPC is the most representative student body in establishing a more effective student voice.

The student vote this week is a result of action taken at the Nov. 12 HPC meeting in which presidents' approved the proposal by just over the two-thirds majority needed.

In commenting on the extra duties HPC and CLC will assume should the proposal be approved by voting students, Ingwersen said "not many new responsibilities will be added." Lawrence said he believes student government leaders' roles will be more defined without the senate overlap. "CLC and HPC will continue to perform the duties they have been performing," he said.

Both Jenk and Hand said it is obvious student government is ineffective. Jenk added the proposal is a "better alternative to what we have now," Ingwersen said, "No new body is being created. We are trying to have more efficient use of what we have (currently)."

Medical and scientific gains shape, yet fail to control, the role of fate

With his great nose forging his way, Cyrano de Bergerac swaggered across the stage as the title character in Edmond Rostand's romantic adventure. Cyrano is the dashing swordsman, clever and passionate poet, fear­less leader of the Gascogne and a French hero.

Although "Cyrano de Bergerac" is billed as a "passionate tale of romance and adventure," the play also demonstrates the grip with which fate holds man.

Obviously Cyrano has no control over the size of the nose with which he was born. Yet, it is his grotesque facial appendage that hinders Cyrano from announcing his love for Roxanne.

Through the course of the play Cyrano battles 100 men to defend a friend, duels a master swordsman and leads the Gascogne in war against the Spanish. But in the end it is the villainous fate that kills the hero. Near the close of the second act, as Cyrano strolls through an alley, an iron bar falls loose from a balcony and strikes him on the head. Eventually he dies from the concussion.

Three centuries later, people no longer are doomed to Cyrano's nasal misfortune. Plastic surgery represents relief. But man's technological, medical and scientific advances are not restricted to the area of corrective surgery. In so many aspects of life, man's progress has enabled him to take a better grasp on the reins of his world.

A look at the front page of yesterday's New York Times, however, shows fate still is a very strong presence.

The Nevada del Ruiz volcano in Colombia erupted last week. Now more than 21,000 people are dead in that country. Two months earlier, an earthquake killed 5,000 in Mexico. Scientists blame these disasters on the geological descent of the Pacific Ocean floor under the American continent, something man cannot prevent.

Despite millions of dollars and years of research, diseases such as cancer and AIDS remain real and incurable realities. Neither scientists nor doctors have been able to conquer these afflictions.

On another frontier of the news, people and nations seem to be yanking more forcefully than ever at the reins of their destinies and those of others.

The Sunday Times reported the release of Mathilda Gasela from a South African prison after 101 days of detainment. The Bosha government has placed thousands in prisons under South Africa's proclaimed state of emergency. South Africa's story is one of people choosing to oppress, injure and murder other human beings.

Geneva summit holds the promise for a U.S.-Soviet 'turning point'

By MARY BERGER
Staff Reporter

"It could mark a turning point be- tween a period that has seen increas- ingly antagonistic relations and a new period of improving relations," said Notre Dame Government and International Studies Professor George Brinkley of this week's United States-Soviet Union summit.

Brinkley, the director of the Uni- versity's Program of Soviet and East European Studies, said he feels "if the summit goes smoothly, it is even conceivable that relations that between the super powers could, in a few years, become as good as they were in 1975."

It is necessary to keep in mind that "destabilization of the sources of conflict but can make them less threatening."

Arms control, bilateral, regional issues, regional relations, and human rights are the four main issues which will be debated in Geneva tomorrow and Wednesday.

Gilbert Loescher, an assistant professor in the Government, Foreign Affairs and International Studies Department, commented on the role of the human rights issue. "Arresting control will most likely be the central issue," he said, "but there are enough inter- ested groups pushing the President to raise the human rights issue that he will."

"It would be wrong of the United States not to speak out," Loescher said but added, "as long as they are able to criticize the violations in the right-wing regimes they are asso- ciated with."

Brinkley said some agreements, such as the terms of a new cultural and educational exchange treaty, have evidently already been reached. He added that other relatively easy agreements concern- ing things like airline landing rights and embassy facilities will probably be announced.

If there are any 'compromises' on arms issues, they will probably be in the form of new limitations and results will not be seen until the armed forces are either completely new or restructured," Brinkley said.

Brinkley said he feels this historic summit is similar to negotiations abstinence between the American and the Soviets may eventually lead to a new arms limita- tion treaty, significantly reducing missiles and warheads, but that depends on whether and how the ABM issue is resolved. It is also possible that none of these things will result from the summit be- cause they want primarily to impress each ot- her and the world." He continued, "But if this propaganda competition evolves into a contest to see who can emerge looking better as a peacemaker, then some positive could come out. "While the Soviet Union will not be very accommodating to the emigration of Soviet Jews and human rights "without the means of prospect of gaining something as a result."

He said he feels the emigration issue is an "important, powerful issue in American minds," but that it "must be included to improve rela- tions with the past, when relations between the Soviet Union and the United States were good, many Jews were allowed to. When relations were bad, though, few were able to leave."

Brinkley agreed with Loescher. "How bad or how good our relations can be depends largely on each side's perception of what can be gained or lost," he said.

Brinkley said he also believes that neither regime is preparing to give up basic military or political positions either. "So, ac- cording to Brinkley, the range of negotions is relatively narrow. "The Cold War," he said, "appears to be as strong as ever." The United States and Soviet leaders are "prepared to give up military and political positions but not as much as they might want."

"In the United States, arms negotiations get new instruc- tions," Brinkley said.

A company with deep ties to South Africa's non-white communities, we feel a special obligation to par- ticipate actively in the dismantling of apartheid."

The purpose of the emphasis on educational scholarships is to build future leadership among blacks in South Africa because the greatest problem of apartheid won't go away," said Hesburgh. He said he feels that education is a key to ending apartheid in South Africa in a well-educated black population. By offering university scholarships to African Blacks, something that they are not allowed in their native country, America's universities are trying to help educate "Africans in South Africa, a group of both business and academic leaders, who have set up 400 scholarships for South African students to study in the United States. "We have some of those stu- dents here at Notre Dame and will get more," he said.

Hesburgh continued, "There is a rule of black South Africans under Benjamin Tatum and they pick the students who are offered scholarships. Significantly, all but one of these students have gone to South Africa, but one has gone back to South Africa."

On his own, Hesburgh is bringing a promising young lawyer to the U.S. to study at the new Civil Rights Center. He hopes in studying how the United States solved its 'apartheid problem, he can return to his country and help alleviate its apartheid problem."

Hagan also said he believes the CIC and HPC are not the answer. "The CIC, because of its makeup, necessarily can't do this job and the HPC doesn't have the proper structure to carry this out," he said.

"The students will have no chance of getting their views, espe- cially those on sensitive issues across, if the CIC becomes the voice of the students," Hagan said.

Culom also said he believes the CIC and HPC would be a "com- mon enemy to all students."

"The CIC provides an excellent assembly of individuals that can, address the HPC doesn't have the proper structure of the HPC does not provide the mechanisms to address tenant sensitive issues," he said.

Tayyaroglu, in his newsletter also said he believes the HPC could not do the job. By "spreading themselves too thin, half presidents will be forced to neglect either campus or dorm issues, thus the effectiveness which marks the HPC in its present form."

"It's silly to get rid of the senate. It's giving up something and it's not making something better," said Hagan.
University food stand ‘taking business away’

By MARK DILLON
Senior Staff Reporter

A concession stand, run by University Food Services, is competing with Notre Dame student organizations in fundraising during home football weekends.

The Food Services’ stand is located between Dillon Hall and the South Dining Hall each football Saturday. It has been in operation for the last five years.

University Food Services Director Bill Hickey gave reasons for the stand. He said, “My organization has a responsibility to Notre Dame students, alumni, and visitors to provide them with a food service.”

He added, “The outdoor concession stand is an extension of this service and is meant to handle the overflow from the Oak Room.”

Student run concession stands are located throughout the campus. However, funding concessions are assigned each year by Student Activities. Special fees, on the assignment process were not available because of Student Activities Director Jim Neal declined comment on the story until conferring with Hickey.

Club sports, each of the four classes, student organizations, and other student groups all receive an opportunity to run a concession stand to raise funds, but this is not guaranteed. However, those groups that are guaranteed one stand each season.

The Food Services concession has raised several complaints from some of these groups. Lee Broussard, student activities board director said, “I’m against it. They are taking business away from the student clubs, organizations and charities. I don’t think it’s justified.”

Judith Windhorst, president of Badin Hall, brought her complaint to last Tuesday night’s Hall Presidents’ Council. Windhorst said, “I wanted to bring up the issue concerning the competition by University Food Services because of complaints I had gotten from the girls who ran our concession stand.”

She added, “We’re trying to raise money so we petition for space and get one shot regardless of the weather. They are out every week and they don’t have to compete for space.”

Windhorst said, “During our concession during the Navy game our girls were out in the lousy weather before and after the game because of the organization backing the Food Services’ stand they could provide a tent for their people.”

She added, “The Knights of Columbus and Notre Dame have a responsibility to handle the outdoor concession stand. Although John Rodgers, chairman of the steak sales admitted they were having no problems with the competition he did voice a complaint. He said, "I don’t think they should do it. They are better organized. It is the one time we can make money.”

Student Body President Bill Healy said, “There have been complaints. Students don’t have the resources that University Food Services do.”

In response Bill Hickey said, “I was a member of the Knights of Columbus I know their (Knights of Columbus) volume and I know it hasn’t hurt.” He also said, “My organization has a duty to this University to provide a service that students can go to and profit go back to the general fund of the University.”

In response to complaints about the competition Hickey said, “Our organization might actually hurt us. I’ve heard some students advising against our concession in their sales pitches because they’re dining hall hamburbers.”

Hickey also said, “I’ve seen the crowds and I don’t think we are hurting anyone’s business. We provide a dynamic service to this University and I think we do a good job. The outdoor concession stand is just part of our service.”

Both Healy and Windhorst agreed with this. Healy said, “Anytime Mr. Hickey can help the students he has. He is a reasonable man. If it hurts he’ll change it.”

Windhorst said, “Mr. Hickey and his organization do a lot of good. He shouldn’t be deluged with angry letters in the Observer like he was with the Oak Room sign. I brought up the complaint at HPC so that it would be dealt with through proper channels.”

Healy said he planned to discuss the issue with Hickey this week.

Former associate Justice Goldberg reviews legal and political opinions

By PEGGY PROSSER
Staff Reporter

“We all set goals for ourselves. We set impossible goals, and don’t feel depressed because you don’t become a Supreme Court Justice or President.”

Arthur Goldberg, a former associate Justice of the Supreme Court began his lecture last night by explaining the extent of his own success, and attributing it to “mere luck.”

Under the topic “A Jew in the International Public Eye, A Personal Perspective,” Goldberg addressed key issues, such as discrimination and quota systems, based on his own experiences in political life.

He began his lecture by addressing the topic of peace, describing the United States and Russia as “two great powers capable of mass destruction.”

Expressing his dislike for President Reagan, Goldberg said he would like to see the current negotiations between the United States and Russia give way to a superpower of peace.

He added, “Anything we can do to minimize them (the negotiations) would be worthwhile.”

Goldberg recognized the presence of conflict in the Arab states, but reminded the audience that peace in the Middle East and in the world should not be built up too soon.

Along with serving as general counsel to several international labor unions, Goldberg was the principle architect of the AFL-CIO merger. This merger served to strengthen labor unions by eliminating fighting over representation.

Following this, Goldberg was appointed Secretary of Labor under John F. Kennedy.

In his speech, Goldberg was quick to praise Kennedy for his acute mind and unfailing dedication to the American people.

Kennedy later appointed Goldberg to associate Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court. Goldberg discussed this by giving examples of the exaggerated view Americans have of the Court.

Justice Arthur Goldberg

“The Supreme Court cannot make all peace, cannot make or cure unemployment, cannot balance the budget and cannot give us the education system we deserve.”

“Basically, what they do give us is the right to practice our own religion.”

In 1965, President Johnson appointed Justice Goldberg to the United States ambassadorship to the United Nations. Although the Supreme Court is a life appointment, Goldberg gave up his seat on the bench for this opportunity. Dean David Link of the Notre Dame Law School described Goldberg as a “significant figure in many developments in this country,” and praised Johnson for choosing Goldberg as “the right man for the job.”

As an international diplomat, Goldberg played a significant role in the drafting of U.N. Resolution 242, the foundation for peace in the much-troubled middle east.

As a former lawyer, Goldberg praised the law schools for teaching the mainstream of law and their success at teaching the law.

Along with his lecture, Goldberg fielded questions from the audience. When asked his view on religion, Goldberg stated, “We are not a Jewish nation. We are not a Jewish under the Constitution of the United States, everybody has the right to practice their own religion.”

Goldberg described religious discrimination in industry and politics, citing examples of steel companies that were not open to Jews or Catholics, and the use of a quota system on the Supreme Court.

He criticized Reagan for his unbalanced representation of religions in his cabinet, then questioned whether or not a quota system should exist.

In recognition for his numerous achievements, Goldberg was awarded the Presidential Medal of Freedom in 1978, the highest award an American can receive, and has earned more than twenty-five honorary Doctor of Law degrees from universities throughout the world.

Students slight women with low attendance

I attended the Notre Dame women's volleyball game against Saint Francis on Oct. 30 and was somewhat disappointed with the performance of the team. I thought they played an excellent game and created this observer with a stunning comeback in the final game of the match. The score was 2-1 in favor of the student support of the game. What I should say is the lack of student support.

Eric M. Bergamo

across the eighth dimension

I asked Chuck Freeby, who was handing out programs to the sparse audience, if the attendance was always small. "Unfortunately," was the answer. That statement could well describe the general attitude of the student body towards women's athletics.

Notre Dame prides itself on having "the greatest student body" in attendance at sporting events. There are sellout crowds for every home football and basketball game. But when the women are playing, "the greatest student body" has something more important to do.

When the men are playing, we'll drop everything to go. When the women are in action, we find numerous excuses not to go.

The volleyball team, along with the women's basketball team, play extremely hard schedules against national opponents. They also play their games in front of extremely small crowds. Would not be satisfying to them if they could play their games in front of the same large crowds as the men.

The only time substantial amounts of students attend the games is when someone such as myself is sponsoring a promotion before the game, or when the men play after the women are finished. That is unfair to the women who make numerous sacrifices to play for Notre Dame.

One reason for this lack of support may be that we believe women's athletics is not as exciting as the men's. If you had been at the women's volleyball game, you would have seen that such a view is false. The women provided a thrill-a-minute during the game. When they went to a number of women's basketball games last year, I found the action to be on par with that in the men's games.

Using the claim that women's sports are "not as good as the men's" is a sign that one does not know what he is talking about.

From a high school where women's athletics is now bigger than the men's. In the past two years, the Mynderse Academy women have won three sectional titles, have gone to the state semifinals in soccer, and have advanced to the state finals in basketball. People still follow the Mynderse football team, but the main question that rolls around is, "How's the girl's soccer team going to do?"

The women's soccer team won the first of those three sectional titles in my senior year. The support of the girls team during the season was amazing. More than 100 people regularly attended the home games. I found it hard to concentrate on football practice (as did the rest of my teammates) when the girls played.

One game, against perennially tough Victor, went into overtime. The football team would not start practice until the game, which Mynderse won, was over. My classmates and I lugged our game jerseys and warm-up clothes back to school, arriving home playing away from home. That student support was important to the girls.

This season, the Mynderse girl's soccer team ended the season 23-1, the lone loss coming in the state Class B championship game that was ranked 16th in the state. They won the sectional and regional finals to become the first team from Mynderse to be invited to a state final. The girls received police escorts into town after these two victories. And who is to say women's athletics is not exciting?

It is sad to see this lackadaisical attitude toward women's athletics here at Notre Dame. Notre Dame has been blessed with some outstanding recruiting that has brought in some fine women athletes to this University. This is starting to pay off. The women's volleyball team played against tough opponents every year and improves at the same time.

The women's basketball team won the North Star Conference last year.

It is time to provide these teams with the same enthusiastic support we give to the men. Only when we have a "seven man" in women's volleyball and a "sixth man" for women's basketball can we claim to be "the greatest student body."

There were only 81 in attendance at the volleyball game that I went to last Wednesday. If we, as a student body, were to attend at least one or two games a season, it would be a show of support of Notre Dame women's athletes. They have worked hard for what they have accomplished.

It is now time we acknowledge their commitment. The support that has been long time in coming.

The new pool in the Rolf Aquatic Center was christened by the students Friday night at the Non-Varsity Athletics' all-nighter. The event was held to celebrate the completion of this new addition to the ACC and to raise money for the St. Joseph's County Special Olympics Organization.

The evening was a rare opportunity for students to use and enjoy all the facilities in the ACC. Although student attendance was not as large as was hoped, the event was successful in raising several hundred dollars for charity and in providing an excellent time for the students who attended.

For those students who elected not to go, you missed out on a great opportunity to try the new Aquatic Center. It is an impressive addition to the ACC, and who knows how often it will be made available to the students for their recreational use? Students also enjoyed shooting hoops on the same court where their favorite college team challenges its opponents. There was so much to do that it was difficult to decide between ice skating, basketball, swimming, racquetball, and many other sports.

Because attendance was low, the event was cut short at 2 a.m. Nonetheless, the students who were there really enjoyed themselves. The indoor soccer, nerf football, and basketball went especially well. The water sports also seemed to be popular. Freshman Kevin O'Later said that "the nerf football was really successful, without a doubt. I think the whole event was a great idea, but I think that they picked a poor date - a lot of people went away for the weekend or went to their hall's dance."

Sally Derengoski, assistant director of NVA, admitted mild disappointment over the low attendance but emphasized that she was delighted that those students who did participate had such a good time. It was especially heartwarming to see the interchange between the students and the special athletes who were present. She added that the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's community has a long tradition of involvement with Logan Center, a center for the mentally and physically handicapped. Senior Shannon Marks' tournament basketball team "Cool Breeze" played a team comprised of athletes from the center. He said that "a lot of good kids came over from the center, and a lot of volunteers showed up to support them."

It was a close game, and everybody had a fun time. He also noted that he thought the event was "a really good idea. Too bad more people didn't come out to support the cause."

In general, the event was considered a successful venture. Money was raised for a worthy cause, student had a good time, and the special athletes left a lasting impression on those who attended. Derengoski would like to see the all-nighter become an annual event. She feels that "given this opportunity to have a good time and to contribute to a good cause, we would hope that in the future the kids who had a good time tonight would pass on the word... Let it grow."

Some scenes from the NVA all-nighter: whether it was taking a soaring dive into the new swimming pool, scoring in a game of H2O hoops, or just plain sitting on the ice, many students found the event to be a great way to relax.

The Observer/Stephen Blaha
When it comes to rock 'n' roll heroes, I think I could safely say that John Cougar Mellencamp is one of my few heroes. His songs are not only musically enjoyable, but they also carry a message that resonates with many people.

The concert was held at the ACC, and Mellencamp provided a great performance. He played every big song that he's famous for—"Jack and Diane," "Lonely O' Night," "Crumblin' Down," "Hurts So Good," "Authority Song," "Pink Houses," and yes, even "I Need a Lover." During "Lonely O' Night," Mellencamp showed he's still a regular guy by jumping down into the audience and singing with them. (And was that a Notre Dame cap he returned with?)

You should have been there. Mellencamp said he wanted to mention the plight of the farmers just once. "No, I'm not in love with the past, but I am in love with what's going to happen in the future." He added that money can't help a problem the size of the farmer, but people and protest can, and then he encouraged everybody to write a letter to his or her senator about the farmers. He didn't mention exactly what the letters should address, but it was still a nice effort to keep his audience aware of those troubles.

Mellencamp recently has been showing a more sincere and believable side, beginning with his 1983 release Uh-Huh and extending to this year's Scarecrow. His recent material is also better, as evidenced by the fact that he played only five songs from albums earlier than Uh-Huh. In playing one of his earlier hits written with his old girlfriend, though, Mellencamp almost broke down and cried, showing that some of his old songs still pack an emotional punch for him.

The highlights of the concert were "Play Guitar," where guitarist Larry Crane plunged deep into the audience and lifted the crowd to giddy heights, "Rain on the Scarecrow," Mellencamp's haunting tale of the foreclosure of small family farms, and "Pink Houses," which may be his finest composition to date. He whispered this baby into shape in concert; turning it into a terrific anthem.

Mellencamp closed out the show with a series of songs from the '80s and '90s. He featured two Joe South songs, "Walk a Mile in My Shoes" and "Flush," in incredibly powerful versions. You knew the music that Mellencamp grew up on. Then came Smokey Robinson and the Miracles' song, "Mickey's Monkey," in which the two backup singers came to center stage and did the Monkey with Mellencamp. The band brought the crowd to its feet with "Money Honey," "Nobody But Me," and a great version of "Proud Mary," Clearwater. "Revival's" classic tune about life on the river.

With that, Mellencamp and his band left the stage, but the crowd wanted more. So the band came back and did a beautiful version of their first hit, "American Fool." The lights were turned on the crowd, as well as the band, and everyone was singing and dancing. Mellencamp brought a lucky lass onstage, and they danced and sang together. It was a pleasant ending to a pleasant concert.

John Cougar Mellencamp has showed that he is still growing and maturing as an artist. I think he is sincere, even considering his awful past as "Johnny Cougar." He can keep making albums, and as far as his last two, I think he will then have deserved the right to use his real name again. Way to go, John Mellencamp.

Malpractice suits - for the good of whom?

KAREN DAVYE

Malpractice is a word that can strike fear into the hearts of physicians and it is one of the fastest growing problems faced by the medical profession today. According to the American Medical Association, the number of medical malpractice suits filed has reached epidemic proportions. Whether this upsurge in the popularity of malpractice is the fault of doctors for making more mistakes or the result of increased public awareness and greed is unclear, but both sides are suffering the consequences.

Dr. Harvey A. Bender, director of the Regional Genetics Center and a professor of genetics at Notre Dame, feels that the threat of malpractice remains clear, but both sides are suffering the consequences of yet. He believes that the number of suits filed will continue to increase for at least several years. Both views are supported by a sufficient amount of evidence, but the outcome remains uncertain. The situation does seem desperate enough that action by either the American Medical Association or the federal government definitely could be considered as an option.

In hearing all this information, it becomes clear that the medical malpractice system has been subjected to continual abuse, but what remains unclear is who is suffering. Obviously, the malpractice system was designed to protect patients against negligence on the part of the physician. The stringent laws and stiff penalties were originally intended to serve as an incentive for doctors to give the best care possible, but in recent years the situation seems to have changed. Today, patients seem to be taking advantage of the very laws designed to protect them. The roles have shifted and the patients are now the aggressors.

Fear should not be as high on a doctor's list of considerations as it appears to be. Steps should be taken for the protection of the doctor's rights, while still guarding against negligence and unsubstantiated medical care.

two years the Fighting Irish were Penn State's second touchdown, capping a 10-yard drive. Tim Brown's fumble on the ensuing kickoff gave the Lions a three-pointer to close out the first-half scoring, as Manca nailed his third field goal of the day from 50 yards out.

A 2:50 halftime score had many spectators heading for the exits, but Faust felt that the wide receivers would work to his team's advantage. "We felt we still had an opportunity to continue our performance," Faust said when asked about his feelings in second-half action. "We had to show anybody could happen and I felt the team felt that way too.

But what did happen was more of the same, as the Lions, like the weather, kept pouring in on the second half. Biersten threw his second interception on Notre Dame's first possession of the half and bow remained it the Irish. From there it took the Lions eight plays to add their third touchdown, a one-yard run by Shawyer. The Lions were aided on the drive by the first of three second-half Irish personal fouls.

Biersten's third interception helped set up a 52-yard field goal midway through the third quarter, and a blocked Dan Sorensen punt gave the Lions the field position for Manca's fifth three-pointer, from 34 yards out. But Manca gave the home team a script 36-10 lead late in the third quarter.

Notre Dame finally got on the board with a 53-yard left to play, when reserve quarterback Terry Andriyaska at the helm for Notre Dame's only scoring drive, but that appearance did nothing to change the current Irish quarterback situation. "It doesn't think either one of our quarterbacks played well," Faust ("Theo's" (Shawyer) did play well, and I think the difference was the difference in the game.

Lions

forced Notre Dame into six fumbles, of which the Lions recovered four, while also intercepting three Beaver passes.

Penn State turned these crucial turnovers into 14 unanswered points, continuously gaining excellent field position on the basis of Irish miscues.

"The defense definitely did the job for us," said Paterno. "They played very well. They have been consistently good all year.

"We didn't make it really cost us," said Irish head coach Gerry Faust. "They gave us some excellent field position and in a game like this with the field in terrible shape, that will cost you.

"We played errorless football. We didn't. They did what you have to do on a day like this.

The Lions only outgained the Irish by 72 yards on the day, and actually gained less yardage - 54 yards to 41 yards for Notre Dame. But the strong and opportunistic defense always seemed to be leading the way, set-ing the offense up for more points while keeping the Irish far from the endzone with big plays.

"The defense is doing well, and we're getting better and better each game," said Penn State linebackers coach Dick Anderson. "We've been able to find where everybody else is and that's the key. Coaches go over everybody, and you think you know what the guy next to you is doing.

Men's, women's basketball teams hold Blue-Gold games

By PHIL WOLF
Sports Writer

Notre Dame men's basketball fans got their first look at the Irish last night, and local charities made $3,753, as the Irish played their annual intrasquad scrimmage in the 4th Annual and Convocation Center.

Marathon Oil Company sponsored the scrimmage, which followed the Notre Dame women's intrasquad game. The proceeds from the 2,541 spectators will be split by Logan Center and the Neighborhood Study Help Program in South Bend.

The Irish played for 20 minutes under game conditions and 10 additional minutes with a running clock. After the first period, the Gold team led the Blue, 65-42. The score was reset for the second period, in which the Gold team scored 27 points to the Blue's 18.

Sophomore guard David Rivers led all scorers with 15 points for the gold team in the first period and first eight for the Blue in the second.

Gary Voe, who played the entire game in a blue jersey, led all scorers for his squad with 23 points, and he led all rebounders with 11.

Blue teammate Joseph Price added 14 points.

Six players scored in double figures for the gold team; the Blue had six.

Juniors Mike Basford and Towner, sophomores Mark Stevenson and Dave Rivers, and freshmen Mark Kuhns and Barron, poured in 23 points between them in the first half to help the Blue gain the lead by 16 points over the gold team at halftime.

In the second half, however, it was the Gold's turn to pour it on the Blue with the help of Stevenson, who scored 27 points to the Blue's 18.

Junior standout Rivers was one of the teams' leading scorers, and he led all scorers with 16 points. Rivers' performance marked the first time he scored in double figures for the Gold team in the scrimmage.

In overtime, each team was given four downs from the 10-yard line in which to get into the lead. The score tied up at 56 in the final minute of the game.

Rivers shines; charity profits

By MARTY BURNS

It may have looked like just another informal practice session last night at the ACC when the Notre Dame women's basketball team staged its 1985 charity intrasquad scrimmage. But to Irish head coach Mary Distasiliano, who found herself thrown into a national contender after last year's successful 20-8 season, there was more to it than just the eye of the casual observer.

The game, which featured two 10-minute halves and which allowed for several abrupt jersey switches from Blue to Gold, gave the Irish coach a chance to see not only the reaction of the new players, but also to test the depth on the roster. Although the Notre Dame women had enough areas of needed repairs to keep her occupied until the season opener at Purdue Nov. 30, there were also enough pleasant surprises to give Irish fans high hopes for the upcoming season.

"I think tonight we showed tonight is that we have depth," said Distasiliano. "We also showed you a lot of scoring balance. But I also saw that we have a lot to work on. I'm glad tonight was only the scrimmage and not the first game."

If it had been the first game of the season, most likely that would have gone with what the players that constituted the Blue team. This squad, featuring guards Mary Gavin and Lynn Ebben with center Sandy Botham and forwards Tessa Keys and Heidi Bunek, of St. Francis' second, actually had as few members of several teams changed sides.

A key figure for the Gold, meanwhile, was junior forward Diondra Toney, who poured in 22 points and in the final minutes under game situations but also enough to keep her occupied until the season opener at Purdue Nov. 30, where there were also enough pleasant surprises to give Irish fans high hopes for the upcoming season.

"I think tonight was a good night for the freshmen, and we can benefit."

Irish finish twelfth in cross country meet

By MIKE SZYMANSKI
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame men's cross country team fell short of its season-long goal of qualifying for the NCAA Division I nationals when they placed 12th out of 25 teams at the district meet at Indiana University Saturday. There were at least a few bright spots in the season finale.

One of those positive notes was the performance of freshman sensation Ron Markowski who at 50th place was the top Irish finisher.

"Ron has helped us all season and will be a very good one," said Irish coach Joe Piana.

Following Markowski were Tom Warth, Craig Maxfield and Tim Diamond. John Magill finished in 72nd place to round out the scoring in a fairly tight pack finish.

"We were not aggresive at the start," said Piana. "The weather was extremely wet and muddy, and in the history of Division I nationals when they lead In Mike Ditka will be a very good place was the top Irish finisher.

Bears rout Cowboys

Dallas 31, Kansas City 3; Los Angeles 14, New Orleans 38-0.

The undefeated Chicago Bears clinched the National Football League's Western Division title and shutout loss since they lost their first game of the season last year.

Ken O'Brien threw for five touchdowns and Eric Dickerson ran for another 100 yards in his fourth straight game.

The Denver Broncos one game ahead of the Raiders and over two in the AFC west, while Pittsburg took over the lead in the AFC central.

The Bears led 24-0 at halftime, despite playing without No. 1 quarterback Jim McMahon who is out with tendinitis in his shoulder. Steve Fuller went the distance at quarterback again for Chicago.

The Chicago defense, meanwhile, handled the Cowboys like they had first shutout loss since they lost 38-6 to St. Louis in 1970.

Jets 62, Bucs 28

Ken O'Brien threw for five touchdowns down the stretch to Mickey Shuler, and the Jets set a team scoring record by routing Tampa Bay.

The Bucs led 14-0 in the first quarter, but by the time the first half had ended, the Jets had set another team record by scoring 41 points. O'Brien completed 23 of 30 attempts for 367 yards.

All of Shuler's TD receptions came in the second quarter. O'Brien also hit Wesley Walker for one touchdown, and his final scoring pass of the day came on a 78-yard play with rookie Al Toon in the third period.

The Jets, 8-3, lost rushing leader Freeman McNeil to a minor leg injury late in the first quarter. The Bucs are 1-10.

Falcons 30, Rams 14

Gerald Riggs ran for 125 yards and three touchdowns as Atlanta raced to a 23-0 lead after three quarters, handing the Rams their third loss in four weeks. The Falcons, 2-9, held Los Angeles scoreless until the fourth quarter, when Dieter Brock threw for one touchdown and Eric Dickerson ran for another. The Rams are 3-8 in the NFC West.

Offensive linemen Shawn Hefner (52) and Chuck Lanza (51) doubleteam a Penn State defender in the mud to yesterday's 36-6 loss to Penn State. Game details appear on page 10.

Bears rout Cowboys

Associated Press

The underdog Chicago Bears clinched the National Football Conference's Central Division yesterday in dramatic fashion when they defeated the Dallas Cowboys 14-0 with three three-touchdown interceptions by Richard Dent and Mike Richardson to hand the Dallas Cowboys their first loss of the season.

The Bears led 24-0 at halftime, despite playing without No. 1 quarterback Jim McMahon who is out with tendinitis in his shoulder. Steve Fuller went the distance at quarterback again for Chicago.

Lions overcome weather; ND bowl hopes dimmed

By BARRY BURKE

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. - Allen Pinkett called it "Murphy's Law rena­nced." All things considered, that's a fairly accurate descrip­tion of the fate that Notre Dame suffered Saturday afternoon in a game that was Penn State's Beaver Stadium, losing 56-6 before an ex­stimated 84,000 fans in a national television audience.

The Lions running back Jimmie Smith ran for 159 yards rushing in his previous three games against them, to only 61 yards on 12 carries. Only once did he break into the secondary on a run from scrimmage.

"We had to weather the storm," explained head coach Pat Patero after the game. "We've had some difficult weather before, but this was a real tough one. We knew it was going to be a difficult game. We knew they were going to make it hard on us. We tried to do our best and get this victory."

"The Lions took over the ball and the momentum at that point, en­gaging in 11-7, 47-yard drive that culminated in a 1-20-yard touchdown pass to Rich Beuerlein that was the winning margin at 38-6."

"The Lions are a tough team, they're a good team, and they're going to be tough to beat," said Patero. "They're a team that doesn't make mistakes, and they capitalize on the mistakes of their opponents. They take what they get and today we gave them a lot."

"I think football is a great game because you have to beat the other guy, the elements, and yourself," said Patero. "We didn't do it today."

"I thought we were a little off our game today, but we were still in the game. We had some opportunities, but we didn't take advantage of them. We had some chances to make big plays, but we didn't do it."

"I think we've got a lot of work to do. We have to improve our defense. We have to improve our offense. We have to improve our special teams. We have to improve in all areas."
