American forces step up presence in Mediterranean Sea near Libya

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The United States has ordered its two aircraft carrier battle groups in the Mediterranean Sea southward toward Libya and notified civilians air traffic officials there the carriers will be conducting flight operations over the next week.

Pentagon sources said yesterday that the moves in no way presaged any type of military attack on Libya and that all operations would be conducted in international airspace and waters.

One official added, however, that the exercise was intended to demonstrate that the United States would not be intimidated by the increased Soviet naval presence in the region, nor by Libyan leader Colonel Muammar Kadafi's decision to place his own military forces on alert and to pledge continuing support for Palestinian terrorists.

"It's asserting the right to passage in international airspace, with plenty of notice to everyone in advance of our peaceful intent," one source said.

Another source said the flight operations had been approved earlier in the week by the National Security Council "as a warning that we're not forgetting these terrorist attacks. We know what Khadafy has done and we want him to know we're prepared to respond." A White House official denied reports that the exercise was a deliberate provocation of Khadafi.

"That it is a stern message on terrorism is just wrong," the official said, speaking on condition he not be identified. "It is not designed to provoke Libya. We are not flying over the Gulf of Sidra, we are not flying over the Libyan land mass." The exercise is continuing on an earlier published report that the administration hoped to good Khadafi into attacking U.S. forces to give the United States an excuse for retaliating, dismissed the suggestion with an expletive.

"Anyone who says a thing like that doesn't know Ronald Reagan," the source said. "The point is to discourage terrorism and keep him guessing about what we might do, not give him an excuse to try it again."

The United States has accused Libya of supporting a Palestinian terrorist group suspected of mounting the Dec. 27 attack on the Rome and Vienna airports, in which 19 people died. Kadafi responded during the first week of January by putting his military forces on alert, claiming the United States was planning an invasion.

The Soviet Union, which supports Libya, responded by increasing its surveillance of the U.S. 6th Fleet and by moving two more combat ships into the Mediterranean from the Black Sea, bringing to six the number of Russian combat ships in the region.

The United States currently has 31 Navy ships in the Mediterranean, of which 20 are combat ships. The combat forces are led by two aircraft carriers - the Coral Sea and Saratoga. The Saratoga joined the Coral Sea last week.

ND faculty keep eyes to the skies for view of passing Halley's comet

By GREG TUEL

News Staff

Several Notre Dame and Saint Mary's faculty members have become interested in the international stir created by the appearance of Halley's comet, back after its 76-year hiatus from sight.

Sightings of the comet started last November and continued throughout December and January. In Miami, the comet was filmed and broadcast live throughout the world by a crew of scientists including Terry Rettig, assistant professor of physics and astronomy at Notre Dame.

Using newly developed equipment which allowed photographs to be taken at a rate of one every 1/30 of a second, the crew studied the comet for changes of short duration, Rettig said.

"There is not really anything that sets this comet apart from the rest," he said, adding that the history which surrounds the comet is more unique than the actual comet.

"It reappears every 76 years, which ties it to a lifetime. And so many interesting things have happened upon its appearance - empires have fallen, countries have fallen, and we've had wars," Rettig said.

"There was a long-standing belief that a comet might strike the earth," said Michael Crowe, professor in the graduate program of history and the philosophy of science. "In 1910, people were selling comet pills to protect others from possible infection carried by the comet. Some scientists speculated about life on the comet, and there were many theories of what it would be like," he said.

Student Saver Store to close its doors today after year of trouble

By BETH CORNWELL

Staff Reporter

The Student Saver Store sold its few remaining items yesterday and shut its doors permanently.

Originally the store was conceived as a student alternative to the bookstore, according to manager Keith Spatz. Administrative concerns about direct competition between the two stores resulted in strict restrictions on the Student Saver Store.

"The proposal (which created the store) just sat on the table for about two months. We couldn't add new items without the approval of the administration," Spatz said.

"When we wanted to open during the lunch hour, it took about four months for the administration to approve the request," he said.

The store opened at the start of the 1985 spring semester. From the very beginning, the restricted line of products and a difficult location limited business, Spatz said.

"When I got here last January, there were already problems," said Spatz. "The school supplied us for four days late in arriving because of a strike, and the beauty items hadn't even arrived when we opened."

"The location was trouble. We were on the second floor of LaFortune, but you have to go up three flights of steps to get there. No one seemed to know where we were. Of course, there wasn't any passing traffic up there. It was just one step by. Either by the time we got all the supplies in and the new hours approved, the semester was practically over anyway," he said.

The renovations of LaFortune created a new problem for the bookstore. Originally, it was thought that there would be space in the building for both the student store and Rock du Lac. But early this year the student business manager, Rob Hoover, was informed that there would be space for only one store.

"We had to decide which store's existence should be continued. So we chose to try to combine the two. "We're not being expanded to include some items with a more collegiate appeal. The new store will sell T-shirts, posters, and maybe some smaller electronics as well as records and tickets," Spatz said.

"I'm not sorry to see (the Student Saver Store) go. My own personal opinion is that it was all politically motivated. There were so many compromises made in the original proposal that it was doomed before it started. I'd much rather see the money being spent on the record store than on a business not doing well," Spatz said.

Attempts to reach administrative officials for comment were unsuccessful.

Because the record store doesn't have an agreement with the University requiring administration approval of policy changes, it has more freedom, Hoover said.

"The Cellular (the name of the new store) is not under administrative oversight. Because we won't be able to do that, we can avoid most of the problems encountered by the store," said Hoover.

Miss USA next stop for Lyons Hall beauty

Lyons Hall resident Maureen McDonnell won the crown of Miss Virginia last weekend.

McDonnell, who transferred to Notre Dame from James Madison University in Virginia after her freshman year, is the first Miss Virginia to attend school out of state. She will go on to the Miss U.S.A. Pageant to be held in Miami May 20.

The junior business major was one of 80 girls chosen from 2,500 applicants to participate in the pageant at the Omni-International Hotel. The contestants were judged upon their personality, beauty and character. Besides an evening gown presentation and swimsuit competition, there was a discussion session between the judges and participants McDonnell said was intense.

"We went into a room and were supposed to initiate conversation with them (the judges). It was a little awkward. You didn't know what to ask." McDonnell said.

When the competition got down to 15 finalists, McDonnell was part of a stage interview in which the judges asked her questions. "I did well there, I knew the questions they asked me," she said.

Prizes McDonnell won in the Miss Virginia contest include a fur, a camera, a watch, a bag and "some money." She said there are big stakes in the Miss U.S.A. Pageant.

"It's a great prize in the May contest is $200,000. The winner is also given a $10,000 appearance award, BEAUTY PAGE, page 6.

Increase in liability lawsuits puts fear into hearts of many

Amy Stephan
Managing Editor

Some signs are subtle, others flash blue and gold print outside Notre Dame Stadium.

Obstetricians and surgeons leave their practices. Barbers refuse to serve drinks. And rollerbladers close their doors.

These are signs of fear. Granted, it has not yet reached epidemic proportions. Most people are not awakened by nightmares of liability lawsuits. Yet fear of lawsuits and skyrocketing insurance rates has had a tangible impact on our lives, both as Notre Dame students and as future doctors, engineers and lawyers.

A high school teacher once told me, "You can sue anybody for anything, but you won't always win." Today, more people are suing others for more things than ever before. And some of them are winning.

Engineering firms may be sued when someone is injured using equipment they design, even if that equipment is used incorrectly. Handgun manufacturers may be hauled into court for damages from a shooting. Even rock stars are vulnerable. Parents of a teenage son who committed suicide filed suit against Ozzy Osbourne last week, claiming his song lyrics influenced their son's decision to shoot himself.

Why the spread of liability suits? U.S. News and World Report traces its origin in law and society. "Next comes the decisive question whether the party sued-the defendant-negligently harmed the plaintiff. This question now centers on how much the plaintiff ought to be compensated for injuries."

Also, the spread of liability insurance has lead to the attitude that no one is hurt by law suits except insurance companies. Of course, in reality consumers pick up the bills via increased insurance rates. Not only do we pay more for insurance, but manufacturers tack increased insurance rates onto their prices. These hikes in insurance rates can have drastic effects. Ice and roller skating risks are shutting down or going without insurance because of high rates. Some towns are closing their recreation departments and swimming pools because they cannot afford to pay for insurance.

Perhaps doctors suffer most from insurance rate hikes. Some doctors leave their practices rather than pay $50,000 a year in malpractice insurance. Others are opting for early retirements, choosing not to risk involvement in lawsuit pursuit.

"To err is human, to forgive divine," said Alexander Pope in his oft-quoted "Essay on Criticism." Humans, however, are not allowed to 'err' today without threat of a lawsuit, and divine forgiveness is practiced only by those poor souls who haven't been tempted by million-dollar damage suits.

No longer are we allowed to make mistakes. Engineers cannot design machines that will never malfunction, especially if operated improperly. One cannot predict the future when manufacturing a product; if a drug approved by the FDA and manufactured by a chemical company is later found to be harmful, the company really be blamed.

Increased responsibility for man's own actions is the supposed goal of these law suits, however, these suits can sometimes force us to take responsibility for others' actions as well. Damage suits can allow us to blame someone else for mistakes that traditionally would be considered our own.

A bartender can be sued if a patron is involved in a drunk driving accident. A homeowner can be sued if someone is injured while trespassing. One woman (unsuccessfully) sued a tobacco company when her husband died of cancer.

For victims, all this is not very attractive. As victims, we can blame our own mistakes on another's supposed negligence, and perhaps pick up some pocket money in the bargain. As (potentially) insured consumers and professionals, we could suffer from higher prices, higher insurance rates and some郫 insurance companies closing their doors.

But right now, the alcohol policy may be our most tangible evidence of the fear of damage suits. But if current trends continue, many of us may someday be joining our pre-law friends in court.

Controversial Senior Fellow award to reappear this year after hiatus

By KATHY BERRY

The Senior Fellowship Award, which has been riddled with controversy in the last two years, will be resurrected this year, according to Senior Class President John Spatz.

The award is given to a member of the present Notre Dame community who has had an important influence on the senior class.

"The recipient must have affected the senior class and influenced the prospects of the class. It is necessary that the individual uphold the Notre Dame spirit, and works to augment the progression of the school and its philosophies," Spatz said.

"The individual must also uphold the Christian ideals and morals that are so evident in the Notre Dame community," he said.

Nominations will be taken sometime in April and voting will follow at a later date. The presentation will take place at the cocktail party during senior week.

Two years ago the nominating committee refused to allow Harold B. Augustine to be put on the award ballot. Augustine was the Notre Dame alumnus noted for his saying, "A wet campus is a happy campus."

"The administration probably thought the student body was making a big joke of the award and consequently withdrew Augustine's name from the ballot," said George Apt, second year Notre Dame M.B.A. student.

High school students' contribution goes toward cutting national debt

Associated Press

DELPHI, Ind. - A $100 contribution by Delphi Community High School students to help reduce the national debt has received some attention on Capitol Hill.

In a speech on the U.S. Senate floor, Senator Dan Quayle, R-Ind., commended the students for generating grassroots support for a balanced budget.

"While $100 may not go far toward erasing a $2 trillion debt, the energy, spirit and dedication and sense of civic responsibility displayed by these young Hoosiers will do much to secure the future of our nation," Quayle said today.

The students' teacher, Thomas L. Miller, said Wednesday that approximately 50 students from Carroll County wanted to become involved after studying about the federal deficit last fall.

The students, mostly seniors, organized a group called Students Against Inflated Deficit Spending, or SADS, and started a petition drive at the school. They got 313 of their 500 classmates to sign a petition urging Indiana's congressional delegation to push for the balanced budget measure.

The students also raised $100 through a raffle they applied toward reducing the federal deficit.

"The money aspect was simply to draw attention to the petitions," Miller said. "Guess it worked."
Fire in luxury Indian hotel kills 38; one American among the dead

Associated Press

NEW DELHI, India - Fire raged through a luxury hotel before dawn yesterday, killing at least 38 people, Indian officials said. One American was among the dead, and 58 people were hospitalized.

Some victims were found in their beds, and others escaped by breaking windows, tying bedsheets together and lowering themselves to the ground. Several leaped to their deaths from the 10-story Siddharth Continental Hotel, which is near the airport in the upper-class Vasant Vilhar suburb, fire officials said.

Police and fire officials said it was the worst hotel fire in the Indian capital since independence from Britain in 1947.

About half the victims were foreigners but names were not released pending notification of relatives, police said. The victims included a West German diplomat and his wife, an Argentine diplomat, a Soviet citizen and the American. CARE said Christopher Rosel, 37, of Alexandria, Va., a technical adviser stationed in Bangkok, was hospitalized in serious condition from smoke inhalation.

Police filed preliminary charges of negligence against the management of the five-star hotel, which is owned by the Siddharth Intercontinental chain of India but is not affiliated with the worldwide Intercontinental chain. A judicial inquiry was ordered into the blaze and safety measures at the hotel, which had about 190 guests. Many guests said they never heard a fire alarm and groped their way to a fire escape. Police said there was no working sprinkler system, the windows wouldn't open, and she saw no auxiliary lights marking emergency exits on the fifth floor where she stayed. She also said there was no working sprinkler system, the windows wouldn't open, and she saw no auxiliary lights marking emergency exits on the fifth floor where she stayed.

She told the Associated Press she heard no fire alarm, the hotel lights were out, and there were no auxiliary lights marking emergency exits on the fifth floor where she stayed. She also said there was no auxiliary lights marking emergency exits on the fifth floor where she stayed.

She also said there was no auxiliary lights marking emergency exits on the fifth floor where she stayed.

“IT was only by the grace of God we got out alive,” said Jane Rosser, an official for the U.S. relief agency CARE, who is based in Bangkok, Thailand. “If I had awakened minutes later in that hotel without lights, I wouldn’t be here.”

She said she bled a half-dozen people into a room, smashed open a window and got them to tie bedsheets together. They lowered themselves about 30 feet and dropped onto a balcony, then gaped their way to a fire escape.

“I knew that when I opened the door and gulped the smoke I would be dead if I didn’t act. I must have done what I had seen in the movies,” Rosser, a native of Newton, Mass., said.

ND concerned about nearing Philippine election

ND professor, librarian assess current situation

By JOE MARKEY

The upcoming Philippine presidential election, drawing worldwide attention because of the challenge it poses to the Marcos regime, also has drawn considerable notice on the Notre Dame campus.

The plight of the Philippine people as a result of Marcos' allegedly repressive reign should be noticed, and solutions found, according to Delores Tantoco, native of the Philippines and librarian at Notre Dame Memorial Library.

"There are thousands of Filipinos who are suffering. Many retired people are not getting their pensions and some who worked in government offices are being suspended for false accusations," she said.

Marcos has been accused of human rights violations and other violations of international law for a number of years. According to Professor Peter Moody, director of Asian Studies at Notre Dame. "I think the assassination of opposition candidate Benigno Aquino two years ago as he returned from exile was a rallying point for opposition against the government," Moody said.

When the Aquino assassination case was brought to court, witnesses testified that they saw members of the Philippine Army commit the assassination, explained Moody.

This resulted in the trial of Philippine General Ver and 25 other Philippine soldiers. Marcos acquitted all these men. The Philippine people went against the president and the courts on account of the acquittal, Moody said.

"It also encourages Filipinos and others to write appeals to appropriate officials about their concern for democratic processes in the Philippines, she said."

Hesburgh to celebrate special Mass for peaceful Philippine elections

By JOE MARKEY

Peaceful and fair elections in the Philippines will be the intention of a special Mass to be celebrated Monday at 5:15 p.m. in Sacred Heart Church.

"We all want honest, fair and peaceful elections in the Philippines," said Delores Tantoco, chief organizer of the Mass. Tantoco is a native of the Philippines and librarian at Notre Dame Memorial Library.

Father Theodore Hesburgh, University president, will celebrate the Mass and give the homily.

Ceremonies during the Mass will include a blessing of the American, Philippine, Indiana, Notre Dame, Papal and Diocesan flags and a blessing of the 'free election' candles.

The controversial elections, pitting incumbent President Ferdinand Marcos against Corazon Aquino are scheduled to take place on February 7. Tantoco emphasized that Monday's Mass will be non-partisan. "We are all working for peace and not celebrating a partisan mass," she said.

At the Mass, a special collection will be taken for the National Citizens Movement for Free Elections (NAMFREL), a non-partisan citizens group committed to the restoration of democratic institutions in the Philippines.

Tantoco is active in NAMFREL in the Michiana region. Locally the movement is concerned with conducting public information programs on economic and socio-political developments in the Philippines, according to Tantoco.

It also encourages Filipinos and others to write appeals to appropriate officials about their concern for democratic processes in the Philippines, she said.

First National Bank of Omaha is an innovative, aggressive leader among financial institutions in Nebraska. Established in 1863, today we offer a wider range of services to people and businesses across the country than any other financial institution in the area.

We'll be on campus interviewing Tuesday, February 18, 1986, and we'd like to introduce ourselves before that date. Our representatives will be available Monday, January 27, 1986, to talk to you about First National Bank of Omaha and the opportunities available with a strong and growing regional banking power. We look forward to meeting you!
Chanting spectators encourage Purdue Nude Olympics athletes

Associated Press

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. - Thousands of spectators chanting anti-administration slogans lined up early Wednesday morning to watch as more than 100 Purdue University students threw caution to the wind to join in the recently banned annual "Nude Olympics" race.

Two students were arrested and several were disciplined for a facsimile action ranging from protest to explosion, campus officials said later in the day.

Extreme cold temperatures during last year's run around Gary Quad prompted Purdue President Steven Beering to ban the event this year. This time, however, the temperature was a relatively mild 38 degrees.

At least 20 plainclothes campus police officers attempted to stop the nude runners, but police only netted two arrests.

Police Chief John Woods was the only known casualty, according to campus officials.

Detective William Burns, a spokesman for the Gary Police Department, said the mobile home was engulfed in flames when firefighters arrived at the scene and that officials did not know immediately what had caused the blaze.

"There had been no activity seen around the trailer for the last few days," Burns said. "No one actually knew there was anyone inside. They (the firefighters) were just trying to fight the fire." Burns identified the victims as Brian Spriggs, 24, and her four children: Charles, 3; Kenneth Jr., 2; Brandy, a girl; and a boy.

It was the second major mobile home fire in the state within eight days. On Jan. 15 four children died in a similar blaze in Lomava in southern Indiana.

"This was a fairly dim comet, best viewed in the Southern Hemisphere," Ernst said.

Because of the less-than-ideal conditions and the few opportunities to view it, many people have actually been able to see Halley's comet, he said.

A group of physicists discussed the comet and a computer program that mapped its trajectory, said Joseph Bellina, assistant professor of physics at James Madison's. "But as it turned out, none of them had actually seen the comet," Bellina said.

The chances of viewing the comet again this year are slim, according to the experts. The comet will reappear in late February, but it will be only viewable just prior to sunrise, sometime predawn.

To see Halley's comet before the light of the sun prevents it, "you must be high enough to see very low in the Southern-hemisphere horizon, about one half-hour before sunrise," he said. Also, the viewer must wait for the two-week period between new and full moon, and hope for a clear morning, Ernst said.

Letters to a Lonely God

O n Monday night television, on a program in honor of Martin Luther King's birthday, a small army of black performers paid tribute to the great civil rights leader. As each one finished, he or she declared with pride: "I am part of his dream." "Dreaming of them halting demonstrators on the streets of Americans the humiliations imposed behavior uncivilized, cruel and hatred, fear, and the slavery to Father Robert Luther King's birthday, a small army the great civil rights leader. As each repeated set me to thinking: with pride:

These are the 14th and 15th episodes in The Observer's serial publication of the Notre Dame football story, "The Gipper's Ghost." With the return of Stanford and Notre Dame to the Notre Dame campus had renewed its legendary spirit as the game against No. 4 Miami loomed ahead.

Kelly's promise

"The Fighting Irish of Notre Dame . . . your Fighting Irish . . . plan to win every game the rest of the season. Your Fighting Irish will win a major bowl game. Your Fighting Irish will finish this season ranked among the top 10 teams in the nation."

"The Golden Dome blazed in bright sunlight beamed in glistening, brilliant blue sky. Perfect weather for a football weekend."

The oldest buildings were actually derived from the Indiana earth; rich marl deposits in St. Mary's Lake had yielded enough raw materials to allow the University to produce its own bricks and mortar. Sand, stone, and recreational vehicles streamed from the exit ramps of the Indiana Toll Road. Uniformed South Bend police and Indiana state troopers kept traffic flowing smoothly as the sons and daughters of Notre Dame returned for a weekend visit.

On campus, various student groups commented on the sight of the many young blacks in handbags being led to jail. The cities are very hard on black kids brought up in fifth and poverty. "A mind is a terrible thing to waste." Yet even after King, the waste goes on.

Please, there is now some hope. The black messiah died nearly 20 years ago. Harlem, I would guess, is as ugly as ever. Kids who should have become lawyers, doctors, and teachers have become Social Security agents. They're dead from violence and drugs before they reach 16. Blacks blame whites, like the president, for not helping them. They're mad at black officers for not helping themselves. Who is to blame? When the children are dying, why bother to ask who is to blame. The question should be "Who can help?"

Dreams don't come like movies, in color, or in black and white. Dreams: they are worthy of humanity, come as visions of flesh and blood. All of this, as Americans, are asked to be parents to a generation with racial diversities, a rainbow coalition of colors and nappets. Every child in danger is my responsibility. Who is that child, shown stabbed to death by a maniac, pictured in the paper? It's my precious lamb. The death is the beginning of my nightmare.

People in every generation have to dream after him, as Christians, we are candidates. If we don't dream the dream, and work to make it come true, we are doomed to relive the black messiah story, rework America as the Promised Land.

It was almost too much for the win-starved Notre Dame student body. The band, recognizing a good cue when it heard one, instantly played the Victims March.

The band was "led" by a student named Kelly. He had not only said it, he sounded like it meant it.

In addition, Collins, O'Connor and Lee took charge and started for the ... who should have become lawyers... 12. Who is to blame? When the children are dying, why bother to ask who is to blame. The question should be "Who can help?"

Dreams don't come like movies, in color, or in black and white. Dreams: they are worthy of humanity, come as visions of flesh and blood. All of this, as Americans, are asked to be parents to a generation with racial diversities, a rainbow coalition of colors and nappets. Every child in danger is my responsibility. Who is that child, shown stabbed to death by a maniac, pictured in the paper? It's my precious lamb. The death is the beginning of my nightmare.

People in every generation have to dream after him, as Christians, we are candidates. If we don't dream the dream, and work to make it come true, we are doomed to relive the black messiah story, rework America as the Promised Land.

here, there and back

I've always been a strong believer in the idea that you go to college for two reasons: to get an education and to learn. The education I received at Notre Dame, and continue to receive in law school, is one of the finest anywhere. More importantly, the things I've learned here - things that were not taught to me in any classroom - have changed who I am and who I will be.

I'd like to think that I'm smarter now and that I've learned the most critical lessons outside of school.

As a student, I was so wrapped up in my studies and other student-type activities that I often forgot there were other people out there besides Donors, alumni, professors, sports opponents and SMU chicks. But this year I have more interaction with "real people" and I've frequently reminded that not everything I do has to revolve around Notre Dame.

Lately, I've been able to get involved with something that has no connection with school whatsoever. I'm helping to coach a high school football team in South Bend and I'm having the time of my life doing it. First of all, it makes me feel the way I did when I used to play. I've missed that feeling very much but now it makes me look forward to going out to the field every Friday.

More importantly, I can actually see these kids learning the things I've tried to teach them. One of the nicest things that happened to me this year was when the mother of one of my players came up to me and told me she could see that her son had improved since I had worked with him. That's the kind of reward I can't get from studying.

There's nothing like a good rumor (or a bad one, for that matter).

I've never had more fun at Notre Dame than the short time between when Gerry Faust resigned and when Lou Holtz was named new Notre Dame. I've heard hundreds of rumors in my years here, but never have the rumors flown as freely as this past fall.

The problem with a rumor is that it is only good until the next one comes along. Fortunately, many people (including the local press) are aware of this. If we had judged rumors based on which ones sounded the most believable, Dick Vermeil would now be head coach and would be living comfortably in a newly carpeted house somewhere in Knollwood. The way to deal with rumors is to uncover as many as you possibly can and believe the last one you've heard until the truth finally comes out.

Above all else, keep everything in perspective.

This is another lesson that was particularly hard for me to learn. Even though I've been taught as freely as this past fall.

Lakes are final rest for church statues

Ever wonder where a religious statue goes when it dies? It doesn't go to heaven. At Notre Dame it is more than likely that, when a religious statue becomes old and worn, it goes to the bottom of St. Joseph's or St. Mary's Lake.

According to Father Daniel R. Jenky, rector of Sacred Heart Church, the Sacred Heart community has been using the lakes to dispose of broken and worn statues since the 19th century. "It's a well-known fact in the Sacred Heart community that there are a lot of things at the bottom of the lakes," Jenky said.

When holy objects are disposed of they must be burned, buried or submerged in water. "We wouldn't just toss out something that's been used for worship or in church," Jenky said. The objects are made unusable and "reverently disposed of" as a means of showing respect for them.

All flammable objects, such as vestments and altar linens, are burned. "A couple times a year we have a huge bonfire," Jenky said. Objects that can't be burned are thrown into one of the two lakes. "We do it at times when nobody is around," Jenky said. He described the process as reverent, although not ceremonious.

The disposal of the statues is usually performed by the sacristans, or by maintenance workers if the statue is larger. Occasionally an object is too large for maintenance. The one-ton statue of Jesus and Mary which was recently removed from the Grotto after sustaining damage in the September fire last semester is currently sitting in storage until maintenance figures out how it should be disposed. "We don't have the equipment to handle a statue of that size," Donald Dedrick, director of the Physical Plant, said.

The statues that are disposed of are usually broken. "We don't throw out much," said Jenky. "Nothing of historic or artistic value is thrown out."

Nothing of value is cast away, that is, except for the gold crown lying at the bottom of St. Mary's Lake. It seems that in the early 1920s the crown, which an early issue of Scholastic magazine describes as "a crown of solid gold, studded with precious stones and inlaid with pearls," was dumped into St. Mary's Lake.

The crown was given to Notre Dame in 1866 as a gift from the Empress Eugenie, wife of Napoleon III, emperor of France. It was originally put on display in the church.

Eventually the crown was removed and it passed into obscurity for several years. In 1886 two crowns were stolen from the church and it was feared that the Eugenie crown was among them. In time, however, the crown turned up at St. Michael's Laundry, where it apparently had been sent for safekeeping after the theft of the other two crowns.

Years passed, and the crown was placed in the attic of Holy Cross seminary. The crown was then forgotten for several years.

The crown later reappeared as a prop for the annual Christmas play at the seminary. By then, the seminarians had no idea of the crown's value. The crown continued to be used as a prop in Washington Hall and local South Bend plays.

Over the years the condition of the crown declined until finally it was dropped and shattered. Eventually the crown was thrown out and subsequently was dumped into St. Mary's Lake. The mistake was not discovered by the University until several years later.

The exact value of the crown is not known. The exact location of the crown is also unknown, although a Scholastic magazine dating from the early 1950s states, "it is thought to be along the shore of St. Mary's Lake near the Old College," since that area was used for dumping during the University's early days.

Somewhere in the mud of St. Mary's Lake, the crown still sits. Scuba diving, anyone?
Burge leads 'A Chorus Line'

Associated Press

These days Gregg Burge is dancing in double time. On Broadway, he earns cheers nightly in "Song and Dance," the Andrew Lloyd Webber musical starring Bernadette Peters. On film, he leaps across the screen and steals it in the movie version of "A Chorus Line."

At the age of 27, Burge may be the best dancer now on Broadway. He's a performer known for his exuberance, a quality that shows in every step he takes. "I really do enjoy dancing, on top of the fact that it is my career," says Burge, sitting in his spartan dressing room at the Royale Theater where "Song and Dance" is currently playing. "That's where the energy comes from."

"Song and Dance" tells the story of an English girl, played by Miss Peters, who looks for love in New York and Los Angeles. The first act is all song, the second all dance, and that's where Burge shines. He plays what he describes as a "guardian angel" who looks after the musical's hero, Joe, a nice guy from Nebraska who comes to New York and falls in love with Miss Peters.

The dances in the musical were choreographed by Peter Martins, who along with Jerome Robbins co-directs the New York City Ballet. Martins required that all the dancers in "Song and Dance" have strong classical training.

"He had auditioned a lot of them, but many of the Broadway dancers didn't meet his level of technique which is classic ballet," Burge says. Broadway dancing is not classical ballet, and in order to successfully blend the two in "Song and Dance," Martins relied on Burge's expertise in musical theater. It is an expertise honed during long runs in such musical hits as "The Wiz," in which he played the Scarecrow for three years, and "Sophisticated Ladies," the Duke Ellington tribute that had him tapping on stage with Gregory Hines.

"Peter didn't have any experience tap dancing," Burge says. "He knew that in order for the show to be as successful as possible, he would have to take contributions not just from myself but from everybody connected with the show."

Burge choreographed two numbers in the show: a big dance number with a Wall Street setting and a tap duet for Joe and himself. The work earned him the title "co-choreographer" for the production.

It was Burge who had to teach the classically trained dancers to tap, a job that he says was not very hard because he gave himself the most difficult tap steps. "Top dancing is like being a drummer except you use your feet instead of drumsticks," he says. "Rhythm is very important."

Burge has been tapping for 20 years. He decided he wanted to be an entertainer after watching Sammy Davis Jr. on the "Ed Sullivan Show." His parents - his father worked for the Transit Authority, his mother was a housewife - were supportive.

There were endless dance classes and then four years at the High School of Performing Arts. But Burge earned his keep. He appeared as a regular on public television's "The Electric Company" and made dozens of commercials. It was while attending the Juilliard School, where he received a bachelor's degree, that Burge appeared in "The Wiz."

Now there's a Gregg Burge Dance Studio in Merrick, N.Y., which he directs.

Now with the movie version of "A Chorus Line," people outside of New York are getting a chance to see Burge in action. In the film, which was directed by Sir Richard Attenborough and choreographed by Jeffrey Hornaday, Burge played the role of Roger and worked as assistant choreographer, a position distinctly different from his job on "Song and Dance."

Do you want to dance?
I would love it, but only if I could dance like any one of the people dancing in Richard Attenborough's "A Chorus Line." If you thought you saw great dancing in summer flocks like "Flashdance" and "Footloose," you ain't seen nothing yet. There is simply no way to describe the perfection and flow of movement that these artists show. Impossible, incredible, amazing: it's all there.

Movie review
A Chorus Line
(out of four)

But wait, there's more. Maybe you don't like "dance" movies. Maybe dancing bores you. Never fear. Not only can every person in this movie dance circles around anyone else I've ever seen before, but they can also sing. Yes, even Audrey Landers, the beautiful blonde from the "Dallas" series, can sing. Miracles still come true.

But you know the score, the musical score, that is. The Broadway musical by the same name was so popular a few years ago that everyone has heard the title song, "A Chorus Line." It was written by the well known composer Marvin Hamlisch. The lyrics are such memorable songs as "Dance 10, Looks 3" were written in collaboration with Edward Kleban. The best part about the score is that if you liked it on stage, you'll probably love it in the movie.

The only star in the film who doesn't at least do a little soft-shoe is Michael Douglas. He puts in a powerful if stern performance as Zach, the director/choreographer of the show. His sadistic streak becomes immediately evident to the dancers auditioning for the part, but it is not until his ex-lover Cassie (Alyson Reed) returns to the theater for another try in "A Chorus Line."

The pressure of auditions becomes extreme, and Larry (Terrence Mann) must persuade Cassie (Alyson Reed) to return to the theater for another try in "A Chorus Line."

The Scoop

• The Student Activities Board hosts "Witness" tonight and tomorrow night in the Engineering Auditorium. Harrison Ford stars as John Book, a tough Philadelphia cop whose only witness to a brutal murder was directed by American John Ford.

• The department of communication and theater presents the film "The Brother From Another Planet" tonight in the Annenberg Auditorium. This science-fiction comedy features an extraterrestrial in the form of a human who lands in New York Harbor and winds up in Harlem. It is a hell of a thriller. Tickets to the 7 and 9:30 p.m. showings are $6.

• Beginning the Indiana University at South Bend spring film series is "Tream," Barbara Stertand's story about a courageous young woman who disguises herself as a man to enter a field of study denied to her. Admission to the 8 p.m. show in the Little Theater of Northside Hall on the IUSB campus is $1.75.

The Celebrants for Mass at Sacred Heart Church this weekend will be: Father Patrick Gaffney at 5 p.m. (Saturday night vigil). Father George Winkler at 9 a.m. Father Peter Bocca at 10:30 a.m. and 12:15 p.m.

The schedule for confessions in Sacred Heart Church is: Monday through Saturday at 11:15 a.m. Monday through Friday at 5 p.m. Monday through Thursday at 7 p.m. Saturday only 4 to 5 p.m. in the Crypt.

The rosary will be held Sundays at 7:15 p.m. in the Lady Chapel. The rosary is said daily at 6:45 p.m. at the Grotto.

Macri's decor perfect for enjoyable dining

If Notre Dame ever made the movies and the director requested a setting for an off-campus restaurant scene, Macri's Deli would be the obvious choice. With picnic tables and booths which are wooden and slightly marred (just so) and walls lined with jerseys, banners and, near the bar, a collection of baseball caps - what more needs to be said?

Restaurant Macri's Deli

Macri's is a delicatessen, and much more. A big-screen television and various video games provide for a constant hum of activity, an ambiance perfect for cheering on the Fighting Irish on any other favorites. A room adjacent to the main TV room, designed in an outdoorsy motif, is a tranquil change of pace.

Of course, the menu is excellent, as the appetizers alone are a must. Selections vary from a crock of onion soup to pizza bread. Their quality tempts one to forget about the rest of the meal.

Befitting Macri's collegiate style, all of their entrees are served in a wicker basket, nestled with potato chips and a hot pepper. The "Create Your Own" section of the menu offers the deli standbys, fixed to perfection. "House Specialties" are Macri's own unique renditions of the basic sandwiches, including the "Old Chicago" (Jake and Elwood's favorite), "Beef and Company," which claims to weigh a pound, and the "B.R.T." - a bacon, roast beef, and turkey breast sandwich with melted cheese on an Italian roll. "You won't be disappointed," says the menu, and you won't.

Even if you feel that you can't eat another bite, a look at the dessert display will change your mind. The house specialty is cheesecake, with changing varieties daily. A typical day offers raspberry, pumpkin, turtle and chocolate-chip pies, and such standbys as cannolis, eclairs and apple pie are also available.

Macri's is not a bar, but wine and beer, including imports, are served.

For reference, Macri's has carry-out and also offers catering services. For tailgaters or otherwise, three- and six-foot submarine sandwiches can be ordered.

Macri's is easy to find. Take Douglas Rd. to Grape Road and make a left. Turn right into the shopping mall across from University Park and look for the neon sign.

Dear Editor:

I am the jogger. I returned to campus via Notre Dame Avenue and finished my exercise by running past the lakes. The sidewalks and trails inside the main circle and east gates offer safe running, but my concern lies in the road and shoulder conditions from the east gate to the Student Union. My concern is simple: I was struck by a car while I ran down Juniper Street. Fortunately, I was not injured; however, I was angered. Why had I been struck?

There are three reasons. First, I ran on the wrong side of the road. Second, the poor shoulder conditions on Notre Dame Avenue forced me to run along the white stripe. Third, the driver of the car did not see me. The worst part was the driver was going too fast. The police report states that the driver was going over the speed limit until the car struck me. I was startled by the noise. I went down instantly. The police report states that the driver was going over the speed limit at the time of the incident.

I hope all joggers who share my concern will take this opportunity to voice their opinion on this issue. With enough support in the form of letters, the Notre Dame administration will take action to correct this hazardous condition.

I tell you, I love those Bears. I just love them. They are the best. I watch them on the television. I even watch them on paper. You have to like that McAlmon kid; he really gets the job done. And you know what? He has fun doing it. You have to like those headbands he wears, making fun of authority. Yes, sir, he is a great guy. And how about those shadles? He looks great in those shadles, let me tell you. And how about that hardass at the beginning of the season? You have to love it this guy is a nut.

Chicago can learn from Notre Dame's tradition

Dear Editor:

I write this letter to congratulate Amy Steph- ban for her letter in the same issue of The Observer, which correctly identified the traits of the Bears fan in niche in which we respect Notre Dame fan everywhere. She perfectly writes with the ideals of Notre Dame tradition. She is the only rational answer to this question that disturbs me very much.

What do you mean, the Bears do not limit themselves to Chicago? Chicago is the apex of the non-athlete should be recognized for their ideals. Our "Campus Comments" intended to offend, awaken, and keep Notre Dame pure and safe for all time. Some excellent examples from Amy's letter:

- "The guys with the minuteman on the helmet..." Figurative language is often used to simplify a complex issue. Here, "The guys with the minuteman on the helmet..." is used to simplify the concept of Notre Dame tradition. The minuteman is a symbol of Notre Dame tradition, representing a sense of discipline, honor, and commitment to the principles of the university.
- "...to make the shoulder unsafe. As for the bubble inevitably pops..." This phrase is a metaphor, comparing the Notre Dame tradition to a bubble that will inevitably burst. It suggests that Notre Dame tradition is fragile and easily broken.
- "...the driver of the car did not see me. The police report states that the driver was going over the speed limit until the car struck me. I was startled by the noise. I went down instantly. The police report states that the driver was going over the speed limit at the time of the incident."

So, who is the coach of this new team, anyway? Raymond Berry? You say the guy who won the College Football Bowl Game was okay. I was his coach. And the Raiders! And the Lithuanians! In the case of the Bears, the coaches must be pulling my leg.

What do you mean, the Raiders got beat? You must be kidding. You are not going to tell me that the Jets are going to the Superbowl, are you? Our Marino kid is tough. Beat the Bears once already. Boy, I guess that is going to be game of the season. You know, the Jets are going to play the Bears, huh?

McMahon’s alleged rude remarks create huge uproar in New Orleans

Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS - Having already argued with his own team over acupuncture, played Pied Piper on Bourbon Street and mooned a decorum, Jim McMahon found himself in trouble yesterday for something he didn’t do - insult New Orleans women.

For once, at least, he apparently was an innocent victim.

In a fitting coda to the sidehew week before Sunday’s Super Bowl between the Chicago Bears and New England Patriots, McMahon, the irreverent Chicago quarterback, was the subject of a broadcast report - later retracted - quoting him as calling New Orleans women “shut.”

But the retraction didn’t halt an anti-McMahon demonstration outside the Bears’ hotel, bomb threats to his hotel switchboard, and some threatening calls that got through to McMahon’s room.

It had been the only incident involving McMahon, it would have been sensation enough in Super Bowl week, which is normally no more than a series of staged media events.

But it came following three days in which McMahon, whose rebellious personality had already made him a lighting rod for attention:

- upgraded his team’s management for refusing to allow an acupuncturist to fly here to treat bruised buttocks. The Bears released, the acupuncturist flew in Wednesday, and McMahon said yesterday he felt 100 percent better after three treatments.

- mooned a helicopter flying over the team’s practice field in suburban Metairie. “I just wanted to show them where it burns,” he said.

- got into an altercation with a photographer who tried to snap his picture at a restaurant. “Where I’m on my own time, I don’t want people shoving cameras in my face,” he said.

-led an impromptu parade Wednesday night down Bourbon Street in the city’s famed French Quarter as he headed back to meet an 11:30 p.m. curfew.

“You people may think I’m crazy,” he said at one point. “I think I’m mad because I don’t give a damn.”

The latest incident was set off at the end of the 10 p.m. newscast Wednesday on WDSU-TV, the NBC affiliate here, by the station’s sportscaster, Buddy Diliberto.

“Jim McMahon apparently, on a radio interview with WLS, the Chicago radio station, really ripped New Orleans,” Diliberto said. “He ripped the people, he ripped the ladies, he ripped a lot of things.

“Basically, I misunderstood,” he said most of the ladies he ran into were shut. He said most of the people he ran into were stupid. And things like that. And they said he really took off.”

Yesterday, McMahon denied saying that. WLS said it had not interviewed McMahon this week, and both Diliberto and Bob McAnaney, the station’s vice president and general manager, publicly apologized.

“I sincerely apologize for the problems caused by these unverified statements,” Diliberto said on the air. “I wish Jim McMahon and the Bears well in the Super Bowl Sunday and hope the remainder of the week is devoted to preparations for the game without disruptions caused by my comments last night.”

Meanwhile, two dozen women, surrounded by roughly 20 times as many reporters, picketed outside the Hilton Hotel, where the Bears were staying.

One woman, who identified herself as Yetta Bolotte, carried a sign that said: “Only a true Patriot would recognize a New Orleans lady.”

“I’m bearing now that he didn’t say it and it’s all a big rumor,” Bolotte said. “He did say it, yes, I’m angry and he ought to get down on his knees and apologize.”

That wasn’t all.

McMahon, who was partying in Pat O’Brien’s bar just off Bourbon Street at the time of Diliberto’s broadcast, said he heard about it when he woke up in the morning.

He also said he had received several abusive phone calls in his room.

“There was a message from a lady saying, ‘Who in the hell do you think you are calling the women in New Orleans sluts?’” McMahon said.

New Orleans police, meanwhile, said the switchboard at the hotel received three calls threatening McMahon’s life and one bomb threat.

The hotel wasn’t evacuated and no bomb was found, but police spokesman John Marie said security had been increased around the Bears in general and McMahon in particular.

Wilson hopes for barks

Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS - “No, no, it’s not an ‘Arf or a ‘Woof,’ it’s more like a ‘Whaaarf,’” said linebacker Otis Wilson of the Chicago Bears.

“Whaaarf” is what Wilson hopes to hear Sunday when the Bears take on the New England Patriots.

“I hope everybody will be doing it Sunday,” Wilson said. “The players, the fans, everybody. We’re like a bunch of junkyard dogs, you know.”

The barking began in Dallas at midseason when the Bears whelped the Cowboys 44-0.

“Me and Dave Duerson started it,” Wilson said. “They (the Cowboys) started dogging us so we started barking at them. Pretty soon everybody was barking. Then when we got home the following week for the Atlanta game, the fans got into the act.”

Wilson will hear more than barking dogs if he and the heavily-favored Chicago Bears lose on Sunday.

“Does Wilson plan on kicking some of his teammates if they don’t join in on the barking?”

“Hell, no, they might kick me back.”

THE KING IS BACK!
Eason merely wants to do his job Sunday

Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS - Tony Eason doesn't wear flamboyant headbands or movie-star dark glasses. He doesn't make waves by flying in an acnepuncture to treat a painful posterior to his club's posterior.

And he doesn't make headlines.

Reporters flock to Chicago Bears' quarterback Jim McMahon for outrageous remarks. They are frustrated by New England Patriots quarterback Tony Eason, who speaks painlessly but in a low voice.

"Despite his quiet nature, Tony's got leadership qualities," said Patriots' quarterback coach Len Stefek. "People like him because of his personality.

The focus in the buildup to the Super Bowl has been on the unconventional McMahon. But when the Bears and Patriots meet in Sunday's NFC championship game, the other quarterback will have a lot to say about the outcome.

Typically, Eason rejects the idea that he has the burden to carry the team.

"I'm not looking at it that I have to be the guy anymore than anyone else," he said.

If the Patriots win and Eason is "the guy," he likely would find himself in another uncomfortable situation, answering questions in front of hundreds of reporters.

"Do I have to?" Eason said when asked if he'd find himself in another uncomfortable situation.

"I was told to speak from a platform into a microphone after the Patriots' AFC championship victory over the Miami Dolphins Jan. 12.

A native of California, Eason does little to dispel that state's laid-back image.

"He is an extremely dedicated football man who puts a lot of thought into it," New England coach Raymond Berry said of Eason.

"Eason is seemingly unaffected by Super Bowl hype and hoopla. He has been known to joke when quoting McMahon. But I can stress enough how valuable it is for our program to have leadership qualities," he said.

"People don't want to think about the club's curfew. We don't spend much time either thinking about the club's curfew.

"I'm not here to see how late I can stay out," he said. "We're here to get a job done."

Part of building for the future includes the addition of Auriol to the squad this season if they hope to stay sharp and both were trained by McMahon (Peabody, Mass.) and Kristin Weeks (Antonio, Tex.) and Cindy Weeks (San Antonio, Tex.) and Cindy Weeks (San Antonio, Tex.). Their experience and leadership is important for the squad this season if they hope to finish higher in the nationals.

Along with Sullivan, the nucleus of the team will be composed of senior Janet Sullivan (Conway, N.H.) and juniors Antonio, Tex.) and Cindy Weeks (San Antonio, Tex.). Their experience and leadership is important for the squad this season if they hope to finish higher in the nationals.

Two freshmen with excellent credentials are expected to bolster the women's roster in '86. Janice Hynes (Peabody, Mass.) and Kristin Krakielek (Portland, Ore.) both entered Notre Dame with junior Olympian status and both were trained by Auriol.

Hynes started at the tournament, competing on an impressive 11-2 record.

entry against their zone was from her wog position."

"We looked to penetrate the gaps (from the wing) because a zone can't not shift fast enough," said Ebben.

Once again, Trena Keys led all scorers with 22 points and seven rebounds, while Sandy Botham grabbed 11 rebounds and had 13 points.

While not being able to stop Notre Dame's transition game, Loyola had trouble on both boards. What resulted was many fouls against them in the paint, and the Irish converted for 26 points at the free throw line.

Up next for Notre Dame is North Star rival Depaul on Sunday. Depaul enters the ACC with a 12-2 record. Eason and his teammates will try to avenge the Chicago Bears in the Super Bowl on Sunday. Eason is featured in the story at right.

"We talked about that, and we're going to try to do that," said Ebben.

"We want to prove to ourselves that we can win the same pressure," said Ebben.

"After the Boston loss, we regrouped and familiarized ourselves with the common team goal, to win the ACC. "We are at home - hopefully they will not have that much luck," Tipoff against Depaul is scheduled for 3:15 p.m.

IRISH ITEMS - Last night's victory came amid 'Big Gulp Fever' among the 190 thirsty Irish fans, as the local 7-11 Store offered free coupons for the drink upon the successful completion of 11 cartwheels by Courtney Patnaude, 11-year old daughter of Assistant Trainer Diane Patnaude, truly a magic-ful feat.

Men's interhall basketball league action starts to heat up after break

By TERRY LYNCH
Sports Writer

Just as with real college basketball, the men's interhall basketball schedule picks up a good deal of intensity once January rolls around. However, it is a fact that the true champions of such a grueling sport are measured by their desire to win every game, regardless of whether those games are scheduled a week before finals or one week after break has ended. This is a story about some of those very games.

With the third round of the regular season slated for last night, a few teams have shown signs of weariness in their respective leagues. In the ACC League, Montessori seems to have its high gear in defense while going up defeated in their first two contests. In its second contest before the holidays, the Manor pounded the Carroll Vertins with an unbelievable score of 81-14.

Jumping out to a 20-0 lead, the Manor scored all but 1 point in the scoring against a five-man Carroll team that obviously didn't know when it had bargained for. John Buscher all scorers in the game with 18 points. The Vertins will fall to 0-2 in the ACC for a good match with the loss.

Keruing, with Montessori in the ACC is the Alumni I squad, whose victory by forfeit over Off-Campus Slugs, 76-0, was to be expected. In other fast-paced ACC action, Dil's defeated A.C. in a close 60-44 game over a tenacious Gigle II team, evening its record at 1-1. Frank Ezzo, Dil's captain, put on an offensive show that left him with 22 points on the evening.

Rounding out the ACC second round action was the Off-Campus Rams put away Flanner II, 63-53, in a game that featured two exciting teams that have scored in double figures. Almost Figgyman and Doug Foreman chipped in 15 and 10 points each in the losing cause. Both teams recorded their records at 1-1.

The Big Ten League, for one thing, has been experiencing a developing development as the mystery teams will have a second game, and both teams have put a good deal of energy into the first place. This was good news to the remaining seven teams in the league, some of whom do not appear to have had a lot of respect for the other teams.

Pantelleria had considerably more trouble in its second game of the season, fending off a valiant effort by a surprisingly tough Holy Cross team, 66-50.

Holy Cross' Steve Belles led the Holy's offense and all scorers with 15 points, while Chris Nanni paced the Screaming Owls with 12 points on some clutch late-game play.

"Nobody was pleased with the way we played, but Holy Cross was much better than I thought," said Roton captain John Chute. "Steve Belles is a really good player. The Owls were without their rebounding game, namely Rick Dillieronds."

In other Big Ten play, Fisher beat Howard, 53-49, in a tight contest that saw the Rams hold the team in the game with some hot first half defense. Mayor Howard came out in a right zone to start the game, but made adjustments at the half to accommodate the Rams. Mayor Holz, Fisher took advantage of this and opened up a second half lead that was secured at the end of the game on the foul last action, the Off-Campus Rams put away Flanner II, 63-53, in a game that featured two exciting teams that have scored in double figures. Almost Figgyman and Doug Foreman chipped in 15 and 10 points each in the losing cause. Both teams recorded their records at 1-1.

"Everyone played really well, and no one really surprising game where five of the six Bombers who played score in double figures," commented Fisher captain Chris Pangborn. "Skip helped in stretching it in 15 and 10 points apiece."

In the only other Big Ten contest, Pangborn defeated Abloom II, 57-46.

In the Big Ten League, Keenan and Flanner I have jumped out to quick 3-0 starts. Flanner's 69-64 win over St. Ed's on Tuesday night, Flanner's dominating presence. Wex starter and Flanner's again keyed the Flanner victory, pouring in 14 points to lead the team.

"We played really well as a team," said Flanner captain Eric Krasnerberger. "St. Ed's gave us trouble early by mixing up their defenses, but we did a good job in picking up on it when they did." Kenneal, which before the break survived a second half slowdown to beat the Off-Campus Slugs, 57-51, and the Rams 56-53 after a strong performance by the Rams' 56-51 game.

"The game was very physical after the break to beat Off-Campus Slugs, 78-51, another physical effort at the hands of St. Ed's. Grandma Baldus led all scorers with 16 points for Keenan. Keenan's Rick Riha, serving as an interim captain, has averaged 20 points per game, 10 of his players and a press to tire the Rams' traps forced a bunch of turnovers toward the end of the game, and that really only pushed the ball in the first half."

In the remaining Big Ten games, Grace defeated St. Ed's, 62-50, Zahm defeated Cavanagh, 57-56, Grace defeated Alumni II, 52-49, and Sanford defeated Cavanagh, 49-40.

Test for us Sunday. They're a Final Four team, if not a national championship team. We'll see how good we are. I just hope they don't beat us this time by 20 points again.

Most Notre Dame fans will remember Smith as the Tar Heel player who sunk his final seconds left North Carolina in with over the Irish last year. That game still stands as a sore point for Notre Dame.

Harrison Ford is John Book.

A big city cop. A small country boy. They have nothing in common...but a murder.
One of the biggest names in college basketball is Notre Dame's men's basketball team. After a season where they finished second in the Big East Conference, the team is expected to make a deep run in the NCAA Tournament. Head coach Mike Brey has led the team to a 22-8 record, and with players like senior center John Mooney and freshman forward Juwan Durham, the Irish have the talent to make a deep run.

The team faces a toughest test on Saturday when they travel to Raleigh to take on the North Carolina Tar Heels. The Tar Heels are ranked No. 1 in the country and have been dominating in recent games, winning their last three by an average margin of 20 points.

"It's a big game for us," said Brey. "We have to make sure we're ready for this challenge, and that means playing our best basketball from the beginning to the end."

The Irish are confident in their ability to compete with the Tar Heels, and are looking to notch another Top 5 victory. With a win, the team would move into the Top 5 in the rankings and set themselves up for a deep run in March Madness.

"We have the talent and chemistry to do it," said Mooney. "We have been working hard to prepare for this game, and we are ready to give our best performance."
